THE PREFACE.

AS the Authors design was to take a careful, and exact survey of Man in the various changes of his State, from Integrity, Innocence, and an answerable blissful Condition, to Sin, and Misery, and from this at last restor'd, and rais'd by Grace to more Glory than he had lost: He accordingly hath shew'd you this Creature fair, and beautiful in Holiness, as he first came out of Gods Hands, and flourishing in all the Joys, and Glories of his Innocence. And He now opens to your sight the ruins of this once noble structure, which would be too sad and melancholy a prospect for any of us to look upon, if we did not at the same time see our Glorious Redeemer raising out of these miserable ruins a Building stronger, and when he once shall have finish'd the Great Work, fairer than the first.

In the discourse of the Creatures, and the Condition of their State by Creation, Vol. II. Of his Works.

We have here one Object, which may move us with the deepest shame and sorrow, when we behold what vile wretched Creatures Sin has made us, and how basely alter'd from what we once were. We have another object, which may stir us to the highest exultation of Joy, when we see our Saviour Travailing in the greatness of his Strength, mighty to save, and to save us so effectually, that it is impossible for us to relapse into our first bewail'd misery, to restore us so perfectly

Isa. 63. 1.

Eph. 5. 27. our now deformed, and polluted Souls, without Spot or wrinkle, without any remaining blemish of our first Defilements, any mark of our Deformity, or scars of our Wounds. If as fallen, we are dejected in our Spirits, and asham'd to look up, the sight of Christ the Original and Cause of greater Happiness, Glory, and excellence to us than our Father forfeited in Paradice; raiseth us to new Life and Hopes. As we should bewail our depraved wretched Natures, we should also take Joy, and delight when we see them by Christ recovering fresh Comeliness and Beauty, nay it is our Duty, and we have all Reason to rejoyce more in our Salvation, than to Sorrow in our Misery: To Triumph more in the Strength and Power of Christ the second Adam, than to be cast down in Thoughts of the Weakness and Folly of the first. For the Man first stood on ground, which sunk under him, yet we are now built on a firm Foundation, unshaken, and which stands to Eternity, and from which nothing can ever make us totter or fall. Now that, as we have Mans Depravation by Nature, and his Restauration by Grace displayed to us, Mine, and Your Heart may be suitably affected with Sorrow, and Joy, to lament indeed our Sin and misery: But believing to triumph in Christ the Mediator, whoso perfectly recovers us is the Prayer of,

Your Servant in our Lord Jesus Christ.

OF the Work of the Holy Ghost, the third Person in our Salvation.

DISCOURSE. I. A general, and brief Scheme of the whole of that Work committed to him in bringing us to Salvation in an enumeration of all particulars, and the Glory due to him for it.

DISCOURSE II. Of the gift of the Holy Ghost to us. How he is at first given to the Elect, when called, and his Indwelling within us for ever.

DISCOURSE III. How the Work of Regeneration, or the first Application of Salvation to us, is in a peculiar manner Attributed to the Holy Ghost.

DISCOURSE IV. That there are two States, and Conditions God carries the Elect through. 1. The State of Nature. 2. The State of Grace, and how the new birth is the Transitus, the passage between these two States, from which the necessity of Regeneration is Demonstrated.

DISCOURSE V. That God for Holy and Glorious ends permits the generality of his Elect, that live to riper years, to abide some time in that Estate of Nature, and then renews, and turns them.

DISCOURSE VI. The necessity of Regeneration demonstrated by Arguments, drawn from the nature of Reconciliation with God. That all which God, and Christ have done towards their Reconciliation to us, will not benefit us, unless we be Reconciled to God. And this Work of Regeneration set forth, under the notion of Reconciliation unto God, and some differences of a counterfeit Work, and a saving Work discovered thereby, with an Exhortation to be reconciled to God.

DISCOURSE VII. The necessity of the new Birth, and some brief Explication of the Nature of the thing begotten in it, as the similitude of begetting again imports.

DISCOURSE VIII. The Eminency of mercy, and Grace discover'd in this Work, comparatively with other VVorks wrought in us.

DISCOURSE IX. The Divine Power put forth by God in a saving VVork of Regeneration.

DISCOURSE X. Of the new Creature, or the thing Begotten in us by the Spirit. That besides his Indwelling in us, and his Acting of our Spirits, there are permanent or abiding Principles in-wrought in the Soul: That is, Spiritual Habiliments, or dispositions so to Act.

DISCOURSE XI. The nature, or kind of the thing begotten in us, as it is set forth under the Notion of Spirit. That which is born of the Spirit is Spirit. John 3. 6.

DISCOURSE XII. That this new Creature is a change of the Heart.

DISCOURSE XIII. That it is a a different, and higher principle than Natural Conscience in its greatest Elevation of Light.

DISCOURSE XIV. That this new Creature is peculiar only to the Elect, and is a thing specifically different from the common VVork of the spirit in Temporaries.

DISCOURSE XV. The virtual cause of the Regeneration is the Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

DISCOURSE XVI. Of the three parts of Regeneration, and the new Creature, 1. Humiliation for Sin, and the necessity thereof, in order to faith. 2. Faith in Christ for Justification. 3. Turning from sin unto God.

DISCOURSE XVII. The nature and way of Conversion, Illustrated from an Instance of what it was in Job's times, Job 33. And in the instance of Paul's Conversion.

DISCOURSE XVIII. One eminent Disposition of a Man, born again instanced in, viz. to desire and endeavour to convert others to God.

DISCOURSE XIX. The distinguishing Character of this new Creature, or of a Man born again, is for a Man to make God his chiefest Good, and Gods Glory his utmost end.

Of the Acts, and Object of justifying Faith.

DISCOURSE I. That the infinite mercies in Gods Nature, as proclaim'd, in Scripture are the Object of Faith. On Exod. 34. 6, 7.

DISCOURSE II. Of Jesus Christ, as the great Object of Faith. On John 6. 44.

DISCOURSE III. That Absolute Declarations of God, and Christ, and of the Free-Grace of God, and absolute promises of Salvation, are the proper object of that act of Application of Faith, which Divines call Faith of Recumbence, or Adherence.

DISCOURSE IV. Of the Acts of Faith, that Faith is not a Personal assurance of a Mans Salvation.

DISCOURSE V. That justifying Faith is not a meer assent to the Truths of the Gospel, or assurance of the Object, or a general assent to the Truth of the promises, but an application of them is necessary.

DISCOURSE VI. Of the Souls applying it self to the free-grace of God for Salvation.

DISCOURSE VII. Of Faiths dependence on electing Love, and grace for salvation.

DISCOURSE VIII. Directions unto the Faith of such as want assurance how to take in, and make use of Gods eternal electing Love in believing with comfort.

DISCOURSE IX. The particular acts of justifying Faith, consider'd both in the Understanding, and VVill.

DISCOURSE X. Of the errours which Men run into in the way of believing.

DISCOURSE XI. The removal of discouragements which hinder Faith.

DISCOURSE. XII. Of Faith of assurance.

DISCOURSE XIII. Of acting Faith in Prayer. On James 1. 6.

DISCOURSE XIV. The difficulty of the VVork of Faith.

DISCOURSE XV. The great power of God, manifested in working Faith.

DIS-

DISCOURSE XVI. What endeavours we are to put forth toward believing. On Heb. 4. 11.

DISCOURSE XVII. Of the excellency of Faith, and the general influence which it hath on all our Graces.

DISCOURSE XVIII. That the reason why God hath chosen Faith to be the Grace, by which we are saved, is because it gives all the Honour to God, and Christ.

Of Holyness of Life, or Evangelical Obedience.

DISCOURSE I. Of Holiness working in the Heart of a Christians, and expressing it self in the whole conversation of his Life. On Phil. 1. 9, 10, 11.

THE CONTENTS OF THIS TREATISE.

BOOK I.

Of an Unregenerate Man's Guiltiness before God, from the Imputation of Adam's first Transgression to every Person of his Posterity.

Chap. 1. The general Design, and Division of the Discourse.

Chap. 2. The Text explained. That all Men are in a State of Sin. That it's worth our Enquiry to know how Sin, which thus involves all Men in it, came into the World. That Sin had its Entrance by Adam's first Transgression. How Adam being created Holy, was capable of Sinning.

Chap. 3. How Sin is derived from Adam to all Mankind. What Sin it is which is propagated by the first Man to Posterity. Whether Original Sin consists only in a Corruption of Nature, or also the Guilt of Adam's first Sin imputed to us. The Imputation of that Sin proved. Adam, a publick Person, representing us. By what Law he came to be so. The Justice and Equity of God's imputing the first Sin of Adam to us all.

Chap. 4. How great every Man's Sinfulness is in having the Guilt of Adam's first Transgression imputed to him. How far we are guilty of his Sin. What the Aggravations of Adam's first Sin were. Whether they also, as well as the Sin, are charged upon us.

Chap. 5. The practical Improvements which we should make of these Truths, delivered That we should charge our selves with the Guilt of Adam's first Sin, and be humbled in the sense of our Guilt of it, as well as for the Sins which we actually commit our selves. That since our first Father fail'd in the Trust committed to him, we should not put Confidence in any Creature, though most noble and excellent. From Adam's Example, who thus betrayed the Trust placed in him, we should be awaken'd to be more watchful, and more faithful to any Trust reposed in us for our selves, and Posterity. If the State from which Adam fell, was a State of Holiness, then no Man should be ashamed of being converted and regenerated, since it is but a returning to that Primitive Condition again. Since Adam obtain'd Mercy after having so highly and hainously sinned, the greatest Sinners should be encouraged to hope, and to come to God for Mercy.

BOOK II.

An unregenerate Man's Guiltiness before God, in respect of that Corruption of Nature, with which all Mankind is infected, and the whole Nature of every Man is polluted and depraved. P. 95.

Chap. 1. The words of the Text explained. An Ennumeration of the several Errors concerning Original Sin. Pelagius denied that there was any such thing. Pighius, and some of the Schoolmen, though they acknowledge some Guilt to accrue to us from Adam's first Sin, yet deny any Corruption of Nature to be derived from it. The Papists make it wholly to consist in the want of Original Righteousness, excluding Concupiscence from being any part, and consequently deny what they call the Motus primi, to be sins.

John 3. 6.

Sins. Others ſay that this Corruption hath not infected all the Faculties of the Soul. To refute theſe Errors, ſeveral Propoſitions aſſerted and proved. 1. That to every Man born into the World, there is more derived than the Guilt of Adam's firſt Sin. That there is a Corruption inherent in his Nature. That this Corruption is the predominant Principle of all his Actions. That Man's Nature is thus totally corrupted, demonſtrated.

Chap. 2. What are the Reaſons or Cauſes of the Corruption of Man's Nature. That Adam's Nature was preſently depravʼd by the commiſſion of his firſt Sin. That if Adam's firſt Act of Sin had an Influence to corrupt his Nature, it hath the ſame Influence to deprave Ours, we being guilty of the firſt Sin, as well as Adam himſelf was. How Man's Soul, which proceeds not from the Parents, but is created by God, comes to be corrupted by Sin.

Chap. 3. This Corruption of Nature is not only a Miſery and a Puniſhment, but a Sin, which renders us guilty in the Sight of God, proved to be ſo by Scriptures: As alſo becauſe our corrupt Nature is contrary to God's Holineſs, and his Law; proved to be ſin alſo from the Effects of it.

Chap. 4. An inclination and proneneſs to all Sin is in every Man's Nature. What are the Cauſes which make every Man's Nature inclinʼd to all Sins. The Impreſſion of Adam's Sin on all equally. The Mind of Man having loſt the ſight of its true Happineſs, wanders, and ſeeks its Happineſs in a thouſand falſe ſhapes. If all Men have all Luſts in them, what is the Reaſon that ſome Men are ſo far from being inclinʼd to ſome kinds of Sin, that they have ſome contrariety in their Temper to them. And how it is, that a Man who hath all Luſts in his Nature, is inclinʼd to one Sin more than another. The Reaſon why Men equally corrupt in their Natures, are not equally wicked in their Lives. Why all Men do not commit the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

Chap. 5. That ſince there is ſo great a Corruption in our Natures, we ſhould be very earneſt to have it purged out. What is the Way and Means by which we may be purified. If this Corruption be not a Miſery, but a Sin, we muſt not think it enough to make ſad Complaints of it, but we muſt in a more ſpecial manner humble our ſelves for it in the Sight of God. Since all kinds of Sin are in our Nature, we ſhould watch and pray that we fall not into Temptation. All that are enlightned by the Goſpel, ſhould take care that they do not ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

Chap. 6. A general Diviſion of the Corruption of Man's Nature into the ſeveral Parts of it, a Privation of all Goodneſs, and an Inclination to all Evil. That there is in Man fallen, an Emptineſs of all that is good, proved: And that all the Faculties of his Soul are void of that Righteouſneſs which ought to be in them.

Chap. 7. The Objections anſwered, which are made againſt the Doctrine. 1. That thoſe excellent Qualities, and Endowments of Mind, which are in Men Unregenerate, evidence that their Natures are not deſtitute of all Good. 2. That there are in the natural Conſciences of Men, Principles of Good directing them, and in their Wills ſome inclining Diſpoſitions to what the Law of God Commands; and therefore that Man's Nature is not utterly empty of all Goodneſs. In anſwer to the firſt, That though there is a natural Goodneſs in ſuch Endowments, yet being ſeated in the corrupt Nature of Man, they are tainted and infected by it, which ſpoils all that Goodneſs which otherwiſe is in them. In anſwer to the ſecond Objection, That the Light of natural Conſcience hath not the ſame real Goodneſs as the Law hath, but is only a Picture and Shadow of it: That thoſe Principles of Morality and Honeſty in the Conſcience, do not reſult from Nature, but are owing to a higher Cauſe: That God for the preſerving of Order in the World, hath inſtill'd them into man: And that this is a common Benefit of his Mediation.

Chap. 8. The ſecond Part of Original Corruption, Enmity unto God, and to all that is good. We became Enemies to God, violating all Obligations which were upon us, to love and ſerve him. This Enmity is in our Natures and Hearts, and ſhewn alſo in outward Acts of Hoſtility.

Chap. 9. Some Conſiderations propounded, which do more evidence how great the Enmity of Man's Nature is againſt God. That it is uninterruptedly continued. That it is implacable. That it is an Univerſal Hatred againſt God, and all that hath any relation to him. We ſhould try our State, by examining our ſelves, whether we continue Enemies to God or not. What are the Signs by which it may be known.

The CONTENTS.

BOOK III.

The Corruption of Man's Whole Nature, and of all the Faculties of his Soul, by Sin; and first of the Depravation of the Understanding, which is full of Darkness, and blinded, so that it cannot apprehend Spiritual Things in a due Spiritual Manner. P. 115.

Chap. 1. The Words of the Text explained. That all the Faculties of the Soul, even the Mind, are wholly corrupted; proved from the Expressions concerning it in Scripture, and from the equal extent both of Sin and Grace.

Chap. 2. Arguments to prove that not only the inferiour Powers of the Soul, but the supream, the Understanding and Mind, are corrupted. That the Mind it self is called Flesh as well as the other. Arguments from Reason further to evince it.

Chap. 3. The Difference between the natural Defects in Mens Minds, caused by the Fall and Sin, and those which are spiritual Defects. That mens natural Imperfections in Understanding and Reason, would have been much greater, if they were not healed by the common Goodness of God to Men. Yet notwithstanding, how deficient Men are in the Knowledge of civil and natural things, and therefore they must be much more so as to such which are spiritual.

Chap. 4. What are the spiritual Wants and Defilements in Mens Understandings, which can be healed only by true Regeneration. They cannot have a spiritual Discerning of spiritual Things. This proved from Scripture, which expresseth, not only that such things are hid from them, that they have something over their eyes which hinders the sight, but that there is Darkness in the Eye of the Mind it self.

Chap. 5. The Reasons why an Unregenerate Man cannot spiritually discern spiritual Things, because there is so great a disproportion between the Object and the Faculty; because an Ability to know such things, was part of the Image of God in Adam, which being lost utterly by Sin, cannot be restored, but by a renewing of the Mind it self in Regeneration.

Chap. 6. An Objection propounded, If Unregenerate Men know nothing of spiritual things, how is it then that the Scripture speaks of their knowing them, and sinning against the Light of them? The Answer to it: That they know nothing as they ought to know it: That it is but a false Knowledge: That it may be said, that seeing they do not see; and understanding, they do not understand; they are yet ignorant, in comparison of that clear Knowledge which the Regenerate have.

Chap. 7. The Difference between the Knowledge that an Unregenerate Man hath of spiritual Things, & the Knowledge of one Regenerate. That it doth not consist only in Degrees, or in the addition of a greater measure of Knowledge to one than to the other; nor in that Knowledge of the one is speculative, but of the other practical. Tho this is some part, yet it is not the whole of the Difference. Reasons assigned for it.

Chap. 8. That there is a vast difference between the Knowledge of a Man Unregenerate, and that which a holy Soul hath of Spiritual things. It is demonstrated, and the Causes of it assigned.

Chap. 9. The uses of the Doctrine. We by this see how Malignant an evil sin is, which infects the whole man, & how great a work Regeneration is, which cures and Restores a Soul so totally deprav'd, that it deeply concerns us to search into our Hearts, that we may know the evil which is in us.

Chap. 10. That the Errour of the Papists is by this Doctrine evinced, who place Sin only in the Lower Faculties of the Soul. That we should be sensible of the Defects of our Minds, and if we have any Natural Endowments of Soul, we must praise, and thank God alone for them. We who have the Discoveries of the Gospel, and a Spiritual Light to discern the things of it, should much more bless God.

BOOK IV.

Of that Corruption, which is in the Practical Judgments of Unregnerate Men. P. 166.

Chap. 1. The Nature of Practical Knowledge explained. The different Judgments which men Unregenerate, and Regenerate, have of Spiritual things.

Chap. 2. How far men Unregenerate apprehend, and judg the Goodness of Spiritual things. How far it all comes short of the Knowledge and Judgment which a holy Soul hath of them.

Chap. 3. That men Unregenerate are utterly destitute of that Wisdom, and Holy skill to do Good, which men Regenerate have. Wherein this Wisdom, or Holy Art consists; prov'd that Ungodly men want it.

The CONTENTS.

Chap. 4. That wicked Men wanting this true Wisdom are Fools. This demonstrated by considering the Nature of Wisdom, of all the parts of which Ungodly Men are prov'd to be destitute.

Chap. 5. In what particulars the Folly of Unregenerate Men consists. That they are uncapable of considering of things.

Chap. 6. That another Particular wherein their folly is manifest is in their false Judgments. They deceive themselves in the estimate they make of things, and actions.

Chap. 7. Their Folly also appears in the Ill Choice which they make of things.

Chap. 8. Their folly is also evident from the event, and issue of all their actions.

Chap. 9. The Uses of the preceding Doctrine, That all men should examine themselves, whether the signs of this folly are not in them, and consider the misery, and danger of such a condition. How we are to become Wise.

BOOK V.

The Corruptions of Reason. P. 199.

Chap. 1. That Reason in man being corrupted by sin, useth its strength, and force to advise and contrive the satisfaction of his Lusts, whence it is that Reason which should have acted for God, now acts for Sin, and Lusts.

Chap. 2. How Reason affords all assistance to the encouragement of Sin. By what principles it is here acted, and what Motives it useth.

Chap. 3. That Mans Reason which should direct him in his actions, is deprav'd, and therefore misguides him.

Chap. 4. That the Reason whereof man so much boasts is so corrupt and false, that the first Principles of Religion, are not really believ'd by him. The demonstrations of it.

Chap. 5. What are the principles of Godliness which a wicked man believes not.

Chap. 6. Some objections answered. In what sense it may be affirmed that all wicked men are Atheists. That wicked men are wanting in giving a bear assent to the first Principles, and fundamental truths of Religion, as well as they are defective in the application of them to themselves.

Chap. 7. That the truth of Faith assenting unto the first general principles of Religion, which wicked men want, hath a great influence on practical Godliness, where they are sincerely and heartily believed.

Chap. 8. The Uses. We should employ all our Wit and Reason for God. What need we have that Christ should be made Wisdom to us. How useful rational Gifts are in the Church. We should not wonder at the springing up of Heresies. We should not harbour nor give them entertainment.

BOOK VI.

The Vanity of Thoughts: Being an instance of the abounding sinfulness in one faculty of the Soul, the Cogitative: Whereby the sinfulness in the rest may be estimated. P. 239.

Chap. 1. The Text opened. The Subject set out; viz. the sinfulness of the thoughts in the Imaginative, or Musing Power of the Soul. That Thoughts are sins. Jer.

Chap. 2. The sinfulness of thoughts. 1. Negatively. In relation unto thinking of what is good.

Chap. 3. The positive Part of this sinfulness laid open in four particulars.

Chap. 4. A Fifth, and more Eminent Particular, in which the positive sinfulness of Thoughts is seen: Speculative acting over sins in thoughts: In many instances the great Vanity and Sinfulness thereof.

Chap. 5. The Uses. That we ought to be humbled for the sinfulness in Thoughts. Motives thereof. Their Hainousness. Their Number.

BOOK VII.

The Corruption, and Defilements of Conscience. P. 261.

Tit. 1. 15.

Chap. 1. That Conscience is false in the performance of its Office. It Indulgeth some sins, tho' it be severe against others. It tells a man but part of his duty. It is very scrupulous of observing its own Traditions, while it neglects the Institutions of God. It urgeth only Carnal Motives. It invents Arguments to justifie a Sin.

Chap. 2. That Conscience is corrupt in respect of that false peace, which it speaks to a man, when there is indeed no peace to him, it sooths a man always with thoughts of peace, without first giving him any trouble of Mind. It speaks peace not from Christs Blood, and Righteousness, but from its own Righteousness and good Works.

Chap. 3. That a natural mans Conscience is very corrupt, and plays false in the resistance which it makes against sin, what conflicts between the light of Conscience, and lusts, Unregenerate men may have. The difference of this from the conflict in a Godly

The CONTENTS.

Godly mans heart against sin, set out as to the causes of the Combat, the Quarrel it self, and the Issue of the Fight.

Chap. 4. What is come both to the strivings of natural Conscience against Sin, and the conflict of Grace against it in a Regenerate Man. To find out the true difference between them, we must consider the Cause and Ground of the Quarrel, and the Weapons with which it is manag'd.

Chap. 5. What great difference there is between that regret to sin which Unregenerate men have under convictions of natural Conscience; and that unwillingness to sin which is in a godly man.

BOOK VIII.

Of the Inclinations and Lusts which are in the Will and Affections, after Things Fleshly and Sinful. P. 297.

Chap. 1. The Words of the Text explained. That to compleat the Description of our natural Sinfulness, the Positive Part, which consists in Lusts, is to be considered, as well as the Privative, which is the want of all that's good.

Chap. 2. This Positive Part of the Sinfulness of Nature is not the very Substance of the Soul, as Flaccus Illyricus asserted; but the corrupt Lusts of it. These Lusts or Desires in Man, in his Original Frame were right, wherein consisted their Rectitude. That we should examine our selves, whether this be restored in us or not.

Chap. 3. How our inclinations and Desires lost that Rectitude, with which at first they were created. Wherein the sinfulness of our Lusts consists. That all our Inclinations and Desires are not only averted from God, but turn'd to all Things besides him, and carried out after them, as our chiefest Good. That we make our selves, and pleasing our selves, our utmost End. That we delight in things contrary to God, in things that are evil. That we should take notice of the Vileness and Baseness of our Natures in all this.

Chap. 4. What are the Aggravations of our sinful Lusts: They make us fit and ready for any sin; they are eager, greedy and insatiate.

Chap. 5. An Enquiry into the Grounds and Causes of this hainous Inordinacy in our Lusts.

Chap. 6. That there is no necessity of asserting Original Sin to be a positive Quality in our Souls, since the Privation of Righteousness is enough to infect the Soul with all that is evil.

Chap. 7. He who would truly know the Corruption of his Nature, must search into the Lusts of his Heart. How great a Curse it is for any Man to be given up to his Lusts. We should be very careful that we are not in any degree indulgent to our Lusts. Arguments to move us, drawn from the Inordinacy, hainous sinfulness, and Deceitfulness of all our Lusts.

BOOK IX.

Wisdom in the hidden Part, or practical Wisdom concerning Original Sin, founded on David's Example and Practice, Psalm 51. 6. That this sin is Matter of Repentance as well as our actual sins, and how we are to be humbled for it, and to repent of it. P. 341.

Chap. 1. The Errors of the Papists, denying Original Sin to be the Object of Repentance. The Opinions of Bonaventure, Estius, Suarez and Bellarmine, propos'd and refuted.

Chap. 2. The Exposition of the Text proved: That David expresseth Humiliation and Repentance for his Original sin, and that he humbles himself in the sense of his Guilt by the Imputation of Adam's first sin, and of the Sinfulness of his own Nature.

Chap. 3. A Discussion premised, By what Principles in a converted Man's Heart, he comes to be convicted of the Guilt of Adam's Fact, and how far the Conscience may be and is made sensible of it in true Converts.

Chap. 4. What are the Acts of Repentance which we are to exercise, concerning our Guilt of Adam's first Sin. We are to judge our selves Guilty, and to condemn our selves for it. We should also bewail the Misery of that Condition into which it hath brought us. And we must also acknowledge our own share in the Guilt of it, with the greatest sorrow and grief.

Chap. 5. All these Acts of Repentance are mingled with Faith in Christ, and have a Tendency to excite and increase it. That the sense of his Sin hath, more than any other, an Influence to move us to Christ, since hereby we are convinc'd of our Weakness and Mutability, as Creatures, as well as of our Guilt, as sinners, that so we may seek a Remedy in Christ for both.

Chap. 6. That Act of Repentance, which is a turning from sin unto God, is to be exercised about this our Original sin, and in what manner.

Chap. 7. The Sorrow and Repentance which we should have for Original sin, more amplified from the Effects which godly sorrow wrought in the Corinthians.

Chap.

The CONTENTS.

Chap. 8. What Sorrow and Repentance we ſhould have for the other Part of Original Sin, viz. the Corruption which is inherent in our Natures. We muſt conſider it as the Cauſe of the greateſt and moſt hainous Sins which we commit, and which give us the higheſt occaſion of mourning. That every Act of ſin is of ſo much the deeper Guilt, as the Corruption of our Nature doth more vent it ſelf in it. That the Corruption of Nature doth ſet us farther off from God, than any actual Sin whatever. That this is more near and intimate to thy Soul than all thy actual Tranſgreſſions.

Chap 9. That there is more Guilt in the ſin of our Nature, than in all our actual Tranſgreſſions put together.

Chap. 10. We are to be humbled for this ſin, as the Original of all our ſins, as that which tempts us and draws us to ſin more than the Devil doth. It produceth ſuch ſins in us, unto which the Enticements of Senſe, and Satan's Temptations, could not extend any Influence. This ſin of our Nature is always fruitful to bring forth Evil inceſſantly. To humble our ſelves for it, we are to conſider, that our evil Nature might have produced more Evil than it hath done, and that it hath that ſinfulneſs in it, which will be productive of all our ſins to come.

BOOK X. P. 393.

That this State of Guilt and Natural Corruption, is the Condition of all Men Unregenerate, though they make an external Profeſſion of Chriſtianity. A Diſcovery of the ſeveral ſorts of ſuch Men, both the Ignorant, and the Prophane, and the Civil and Formal Chriſtian: And an Anſwer to all thoſe Pleas by which they excuſe, juſtify, or flatter themſelves.

2. Cor. 10. 4. 5. Chap. 1. As the Strength of a Kingdom conſiſts in having Places of Defence, or Forts built to keep out an Enemy from conquering it; ſo the ſtrength of the Kingdom of Sin in Unregenerate Men conſiſts in thoſe Arguments, with which they defend their Minds and Hearts againſt all the Forces which are brought out of the Word to convince them of the Miſery of their Condition.

Chap. 2. The great Hindrance of the Work of Converſion is the Pleas whereby Men juſtify themſelves in an Unregenerate State. How quick-witted Men are to invent ſuch carnal Reaſonings. Whence it is that they are ſo. How obſtinately they adhere to ſuch ſinful Pleadings for themſelves, and the Cauſes of being ſo. That theſe Reaſonings are various in Men, according to their different Underſtanding, Temper or State. That they are in ſome ſtrong, in others more weak.

Chap. 3. What are the general Heads of Arguments from which Men draw Reaſons for the ſafety and welfare of their State, though they continue in their Natural Condition. The Pleas which the Ignorant and Prophane make for themſelves conſider'd, and anſwer'd.

Chap. 4. The Pleas which Men who have only Morality make for themſelves. They urge, that they do not live in vicious Courſes; That they refrain from great and notorious Sins; That they are honeſt; That they have ſome Knowledge of the Truths of the Chriſtian Religion, as well as make a Profeſſion of it. What are the Reaſons that Men are ſo ready to account any Moral Righteouſneſs which they have, to be Grace.

Chap. 5. That all this mere Morality in corrupt Nature falls ſhort of Grace, prov'd from the Inſtances of thoſe brave Spirits among the Heathen, in whom thoſe Vertues ſhin'd, and yet they had nothing of the Grace of God in them: Prov'd alſo from the Jews, who made their boaſt of the Law, and its Righteouſneſs, and who yet, as inveterate Enemies, oppos'd the Grace of the Goſpel.

Chap. 6. What are the Principles from whence all this Vertue and Moral Actions in Unregenerate Men do proceed. Natural Conſcience, a common Work of the Spirit in Reſtraining Grace. Natural Wiſdom, a Principle of Modeſty, and the fear of Shame. Good Education, a common Knowledge of the Principles of Religion by the Word preached, whereby a Natural Devotion is ſtirred in Men.

Chap. 7. That the Moral Righteouſneſs of Unregenerate Men proceeds from the forementioned Principles, evinc'd; becauſe they are moſt ſtrict about their Duty to their Neighbour, but neglect what they owe unto God. That they abſtain from ſuch ſins, to which by their Natural Diſpoſition they are not inclin'd; which is eaſy for them to do, whilſt they indulge themſelves in other Sins. That they are more ſtrict againſt thoſe ſins which are forbidden and puniſhed by Humane Laws, and more zealous for thoſe Duties which they enjoyn.

Chap. 8. That theſe moral Actions want the Eſſentials of Goodneſs. That they are defective in the manner of their Performance, and not directed to their right End. That they alſo are done without Faith in Chriſt.

That an Unregenerate Man is highly guilty, by reason of the numberless Account of actual Sins which he daily commits. P. 441.

Eccles. 7. 23 — 29.

Chap. 1. The Exposition of the Words.

Chap. 2. That the infinite Number of his Sins is here the Issue or product of his seeking to find out the Account (which was the Fourth Head propounded) Some Difficulties previously solved, for the clearing that this is the Scope. The Elegancy of his expressing that this Account was Numberless, by saying, Behold [this I find, &c. but I find not.]

Chap. 3. A larger Confirmation of this Interpretation given, and a fuller Exposition of the Words, by shewing that the Matter of this Account was of his own personal Wickedness, as a Penitent; and not only that one particular Sin, but of his whole Life past and present.

Chap. 4. That it was the Multitude of Sins was in his Eye, that made him to say, I find not.

Chap. 5. The Exposition of Verse 29. and that the Multitude of Sinnings is the Center of Solomon's Discourse; Lo, (or behold) this only have I found, that God made Man upright, but They have sought out many Inventions, &c. Shewing in general what this Verse contains; 1. In the latter Clause, a Summary Repetition of what is in the former Verses. 2. In the whole of it, a Demonstration of Man's Corruption: And wherein that Demonstration lies.

Chap. 6. The chief Remark out of this Verse, as to the Confirmation of our Subject, is,——That the Multitude of Sinnings is the ultimate Centre of Solomon's Discourse, and the main Conclusion which the Demonstration in special falls upon; and that, as rehearsed, out of the foregoing Verses: And wherein that Demonstration lies.

Chap. 7. An Objection by way of Query, How Solomon himself, and his Account of his own Sins, in Verse 27, can be supposed intended and included in his saying They have sought out? &c. Resolved. The final Conclusion of all, confirming the whole Subject.

Chap. 8. Two Corollaries and Monitories drawn out, touching the Subject in hand. 1st. That the Account of every Man's actual Sin is infinite and numberless, as well as Solomon's. 2dly, That for every Man to know, and be convinc'd of the Innumerableness of his Sins, is a Matter of greatest Weight and Moment.

Chap. 9. That the Judgment of their Sinfulness at the Great Day, as also often in this Life before that Day, hath the style of an Account given it in Scriptures. That the Scriptures do reduce this Account unto two Heads: The Hainousness, and the Multitude of Sins.

Chap. 10. The main Subject of this Treatise, viz. That the Scriptures set the Value and Balance of the Account of Mens Sinfulness upon the Multitude of their Sinnings.—The Demonstrations of it; first from the Judgments both of God and of Christ, either as they are Judges in condemning Men, or Pardoners in forgiving.

Chap. 11. A second Demonstration taken from the Judgments of Saints, of themselves in their Confessions: Both, 1. At their first Conversions; 2. In after-humblings upon great occasions.

Chap. 12. The Sense of this main Assertion further stated: Or how it is to be understood, that God puts the Value or chief Balance of the Account of Mens sinfulness upon the Multitude of their sins.—Some Reasons, which put all together, make a full Demonstration of it.

Chap. 3. The Passage in Rom. 9. 22. explicated, only so far as concerns the Execution. Several Particulars in the VVords that shew the Power of God's VVrath to be the inflicting Cause, and immediately inflicting this Punishment. An Explication of a fourth Scripture, Rom. 2. 8, 9. added, for the Confirmation of all.

Chap. 4. That this immediate VVrath of God is in Scripture set forth unto us under the Similitude of Fire, and fiery Indignation. The Examples of Persons devoured by Fire in the Old Testament, Shaddows of this punishment by the immediate VVrath of God. This the Fire wherein the Devil and his Angels are tormented.

Chap. 5. A second sort of Proofs. Demonmonstrations from Instances both of wicked men and holy Men, who have felt in this Life Impressions of God's immediate VVrath: And that such Impressions are Evidences of what, in the Fulness, is in Hell.

Chap. 6. A Third sort of Proof from Reasons. 1. God's Justice. 2. Avenging VVrath, otherwise not satisfied. A Demonstration added.

Chap. 7. A fourth sort of additional Confirmations, drawn from the Harmonies that are between it and other Divine Truths.

Chap. 8. The dreadfulness of this Punishment argued from all and each of the Particulars treated of in the former Chapters. That it is a falling into the Hands of God immediately: that it is the Destruction of the Soul: that it is for the Glory of God, and the manifestation of his Power: that it is Satisfaction of God's Justice and avenging VVrath. The Dreadfulness of it argued also from those Instances of good and bad Men, their having suffered these kinds of Terrors in this Life. And lastly, that it is a falling into the Hands of the Living God.

Chap. 9. The Inferences and Uses of the Doctrine. If God punisheth Sins, he is not the Author of it. Let us be firmly perswaded of the reality of this VVrath to come. Let us adore and fear the Greatness of God, and be moved to turn to him. Let us consider what it is to Die, and what the State of the other VVorld is. Let Believers learn highly to value that Salvation which Christ obtains for them. P. 605 — 620.

Chap. 1.

AN Unregenerate Man's Guiltineſs BEFORE GOD In Reſpect of SIN and PUNISHMENT.

BOOK I.

Of an Unregenerate Man's Guiltineſs before God, from the Imputation of Adam's firſt Tranſgreſſion to every Perſon of his Poſterity.

CHAP. I.

The general Deſign, and Diviſion of the Diſcourſe.

WE have ſeen the State of Pure Nature, as to the Holineſs and Happineſs thereof, by the Law of God. I come now unto Man's fallen and loſt Condition in a State of Sin and Wrath, which is the Condition of all by Nature, and whilſt in the State of Nature.

In the Diſcourſe of the Creatures, and the Condition of their State by Creation, in Vol. II. of his Works.

My Method ſhall be this.

I. To handle the Sinfulneſs of all Men by Nature, in reſpect of their Birth-Sin, (which from Auguſtin we have uſed to call Original Sin) both in the Guilt and Corruption thereof.

II. To treat of it as it is a State, or an abiding Condition, and therein to diſcover the ſeveral Sorts of Men remaining unregenerate in the Church, and of a common Profeſſion of Chriſt; viz. 1. Of Ignorant Perſons. 2. Prophane. 3. Civil and Formal Chriſtians. And to detect the Deceits and falſe Pleas which each of theſe have, why they think themſelves happy if they ſhould die therein. That which I intend therein, is a Conviction of all theſe Sorts of Perſons, (that are the Generality of the Church) that they are ſtill in the State of Nature, and without true Regeneration will eternally periſh.

III. The third is the Sinfulneſs of Sin, and the Aggravations of it, as in ſinning againſt Mercies, againſt Knowledg, &c. together with the Fearfulneſs of that Puniſhment, which is due unto Man for the leaſt Sin in that Eſtate.

BOOK I.

I. As to the firſt, my Method is;

Firſt, To ſhew the firſt Entrance of Sin upon all Men by Adam's firſt Sin, that is, the firſt Imputation of that Act to all Men; and how far the Guilt of that Act is charged on us, and how far it was perſonal and proper only to him.

Secondly, To lay open that Corruption of Nature, which hath defiled all our Natures. Concerning which; 1. How it flows from the Guilt of that firſt Act. 2. That it is truly and properly a Sin. Then 3. The great abounding Sinfulneſs thereof. And 4. The parts thereof in general, as that it is, Firſt, A total Privation and Emptineſs of all that is truly good.

Secondly, Poſitive Inclinations to all Evils, which conſiſt in two things.

1. In Lufts, and therein of the Nature of Luſts, their Inordinacy, their Sinfulneſs and Deceitfulneſs.

2. In an inbred Enmity and Oppoſition unto God, and whatever is holy and good, (which I make the third particular Branch of original Corruption.)

This in general.

II. More particularly, I lay open this Corruption, as it is in the whole Man, and in every Faculty.

Firſt, The Underſtanding in Blindneſs, Unbelief, practical falſe Reaſonings and Deceits, &c.

Secondly, The thinking Power, the Vanity of Thoughts.

Thirdly, The Defilement in the Conſcience.

Fourthly, The Subjection and Bondage of the Will and Affections unto Luſts; then the Varieties of theſe Luſts, and of thoſe Maſter-Luſts which are in the Hearts of ſeveral Men.

CHAP. II.

The Text explained. That all Men are in a State of Sin. That it's worth our Enquiry to know how Sin, which thus involves all Men in it, came into the World. That Sin had its Entrance by Adam's firſt Tranſgreſſion. How Adam being created Holy, was capable of Sinning.

ROM. V. 12, 13, 14.

Wherefore as by one Man Sin entred into the World, and Death by Sin; and ſo Death paſſed upon all Men, in whom all have ſinned.

For until the Law, Sin was in the World: but Sin is not imputed when there is no Law.

Nevertheleſs, Death reigned from Adam to Moſes, even over them that had not ſinned after the Similitude of Adam's Tranſgreſſion, who is the Figure of him that was to come.

YOU read the Story of Adam's Fall, in the third of Geneſis; and here you have, how it concerned his whole Poſterity, and that illuſtrated by the Antitype of Adam, Jeſus Chriſt, and his conveying Righteouſneſs unto his; of which Chriſt, God intended Adam to be the Type; and in this alſo they are parallel, (as in other reſpects) that [illegible] as the Story of Chriſt's Birth, Circumciſion, Obedience and Sufferings, are but barely and nakedly nakedly related in the three first Evangelists, whereas the Intent, Efficacy and Benefit from thence accruing to us, was reserved to be set forth by the Apostles in their Epistles; so it falls out in this: Moses tells the History of Adam's Fall; and Paul explains the Mystery and Consequence thereof. Chap. 2.

That Sin hath not only entred in upon the World of Mankind, but hath universally overflown it for Sin, not a Man excepted, is evident in that Speech, All have sinned; upon which he says, Death followed: Yea, this is that which the Apostle hath been approving at large all this while in the former part of the Epistle, Chap. 1, 2, 3. So then (as concluding, he says) we have proved, that both Jew and Gentile (which two then shared the World between them) are under Sin, all and every one of them; Not one Righteous, no not one, Chap. 3. ver. 10. And what need we say any more of it, (says he) it being such an irrefragable Truth, as every Mouth must be stopp'd and become (in his own Acknowledgment) guilty before God? ver. 19. And it might be proved by Induction of all Men of all Ages, and will be at the latter day, when the Story of all the World shall be ripp'd up. There is no Man in whom shineth but the Light of Nature, that either casts his Eye into his own Bosom, or looks out upon the Sons of Men, but must acknowledg as much.

Neither is it any new thing lately befaln the World, but it is the antient Brine it hath lain soak'd in, steep'd in, these six Thousand Years almost. The whole World lay in Wickedness, in John's time, 1 John 5. 19. There was not by Nature any Man righteous, no not one. In David's time, when God look'd down from Heaven; Psal. 14. 2, 3. The Lord looked down from Heaven upon the Children of Men, to see if there were any that did understand and seek God. They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy: there is none that doth good, no not one. Solomon says, Eccles. 7. 27, 28, 29. Behold, this have I found (saith the Preacher) counting one by one to find out the account: Which yet my Soul seeketh, but I find not: one Man among a thousand have I found, but a Woman among all those have I not found. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made Man upright; but they have sought out many Inventions. That he viewed Men and Women one by one; And lo, this I found, (says he) that they are all corrupted: And therefore at ver. 20. he says, For there is not a just Man upon Earth, that doth Good and sinneth not. See also his Speech in his Prayer; 2 Chron. 6. 36. If they sin against thee, (for there is no Man which sinneth not) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them over before their Enemies, and they carry them away Captives unto a Land far off, or near. If you think the Infant times (called the golden innocent Age of the World) was free, see what an account the Text gives you; ver. 13. Sin was in the World from Adam the first Man to Moses; take the account shorter, from Adam to the Flood. God, whose all-seeing Eye runs through the whole Earth, views every Man, yea (every Thought in Man) brings in this Bill and Account, having viewed them one by one: Gen. 6. 5, 12. All Flesh have corrupted their way upon Earth: Yea, and that so as from the first Imagination or Act the Mind puts forth to the last; All and every Figment of the Heart is corrupt.

To give you one Evidence which the Text suggests of this universal Guilt and Sinfulness of all Men; Death reigned from Adam to Moses (or else (that which is equivalent to Death) a Change as in Enoch.) It speaks of a mighty Monarch here [Death] the most universal and most lasting Monarchy that ever was: It reigns, says the Text, its Scepter hath subdued and brought under all the Sons of Men; Death hath passed upon all Men. Other Monarchs never subdued all; some Out-laws and Nations were not overcome; here not a Man but falls under it: Other Monarchies cease and determine; this hath lasted in all Ages, from Adam to Moses; so the Text says, and Experience shews ever since: Take the Experience of the present Age; not a Man alive was seven-score or eight-score Years ago: nay it comes into your Houses, tears your Children from your Dugs, and kills them before your Faces, and you cannot resist it. Millions come into the World, and but salute their Friends, and then go weeping out again, so says the Text; that Children who actually never sinned as Adam did (for that is the meaning of not sinning after the Similitude of Adam's Transgression) do die as well as others. Now if you ask Death as they asked Chriſt, *Mat.*21. 23. By what Authority he doth theſe things? By what Title he reigns over all, even over Children? The Text ſhews his Commiſſion, and gives this as the ground of it, (which we are now a demonſtrating, therefore by this effect) That all have ſinned; and tells us, that Death entred into the World by Sin, being the Wages of it, Rom. 6. 23. and the Child of it, James 1. 15. Then when Luſt hath conceived, it bringeth forth Sin; and Sin when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth Death. And to the Elect it is ordained, through the Grace of God, to be his Meſſenger to fetch Sin out of the World, as Sin was a means to bring it in.

2. Doubtleſs it is a matter worth the knowing, and our moſt diligent Enquiry, How this Deluge of Sin and Death entred in upon all the World, what was the firſt Gap, the firſt Breach made, that let it in? This univerſal Flood that covers the Face of the Earth, which could never yet be drained and caſt out? Yea, and what ſhould be the Spring that ſhould feed it all this while continually in all the Thoughts that iſſue from every Man's Heart, ſo as it ſhould never be dry?

The great Scholars of the World have ſpent their Wits often in the ſearch of the Original of Trifles. Whole Volumes are written of the Original of other things. But Solomon, the wiſeſt Man that ever was, thought this very Point, (namely, How all Men came thus univerſally corrupt,) a Point of deepeſt Wiſdom, Uſe and Profitableneſs, Eccleſ. 7. 25. I applied my Heart, ſays he, to know and to ſearch, to ſeek out Wiſdom, and the Reaſon of things; and above all elſe, as appears in the next words, to know Wickedneſs and Folly, and to find the Cauſe of it; for that the former Words ſhew is his meaning: for he ſays in the next Verſes, That he took a Survey of all the World of Mankind; Women firſt, with whom he was too much acquainted; and then Men alſo: and obſerved their Diſpoſitions, ver. 27. And this I found, ſays he, God made Man (originally) righteous; but now they are all corrupt, and have found out many Inventions.

And indeed it is our Priviledg and Advantage, who enjoy God's Word, to know the Original of this univerſal Confuſion in Man's Nature, and of the Miſery all are expoſed unto, which the wiſeſt Men among the Heathen, who though they fill'd the World with Complaints about it, as Plato in the ſecond Book of his Commonwealth complains, That Men by their Natures are evil, and cannot be brought to good. And ‖ Tully, as he is cited by Auguſtin in his fourth Book againſt Julian, "That Man is brought forth into the World, in "Body and Soul expoſed to all Miſeries, prone to Evil, and in whom that "Divine Spark of Goodneſs of Wit and Morality is oppreſſed and extinguiſhed. Yet they could never dive into the bottom of this univerſal Diſeaſe and Miſchief. They found that all Men were poiſoned, but how it came there, they none of them did know or could imagine, or would ever have found out, but run to falſe Counſel, attributing it to Deſtiny and Fate, or ſome evil Planet, its having a malign Influence into Man's Nature; or to an evil Angel that attended upon every Man. All which how ſhort is it of the Truth!

And together with this Secret now made common to us, the Knowledg of it is moſt profitable, yea and neceſſary for us, and is one of the main Principles, yea the firſt which is committed to the Church to be known and believed; and therefore was the firſt thing which, next to the Creation of the World and Man, God manifeſted in the firſt Book that ever he wrote.

The firſt Query will be, How all Men come generally, and univerſally, and continually thus unrighteous, and thereupon expoſed to Death?

The Text reſolves us, ſaying, That by one Man Sin did enter into the World, and ſo Death paſſed upon all. If we had never heard of this ſame one Man before, we would all be inquiſitive who it ſhould be? The fourteenth Verſe tells us it was Adam. You have all heard of him, who in 1 Cor. 15. 45. is called the firſt Man Adam; the firſt Man that ever was in the World: for how could Sin by him enter upon all, if he had not been before all? Some Men otherwiſe would have been free, if any had been before him. And the reſt of the Verſes from the 14*th* to the 20*th*, do generally inform us that he committed a Tranſgreſſion, ver. 14. an Offence, ver. 15, 17, 18. that he ſinned, ver. 16. that he diſo- diſobeyed, ver. 19. and by that Tranſgreſſion, Offence, Sin, Diſobedience, (call it what you will) it comes to paſs that all other Men are made Sinners, ver. 19. And that the Guilt of that Sin came upon all Men to Condemnation. Chap. 2.

If you ask, how it came to paſs that this Man ſhould ſin, God having created him righteous? As Solomon, Eccleſ. 7. 29. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made Man upright; but they have ſought out many Inventions; and as you read of him in the firſt and ſecond of Geneſis, That he was created in the Image of God?

Firſt, I confeſs I had rather, upon the experience of mine own Frailty, fall down before the great God, and acknowledg mine own Slipperyneſs and Changeableneſs, as I am a Creature, if left to mine own Will; and that when ſo left, I am obnoxious to Sin, over and above and beyond what Corruption hath yet ſwayed me to, than diſpute this Point out with God or Men: for though I came not into the World holy, and endowed with created Inclinations and Diſpoſitions contrary unto Sin, as Adam did; yet in the courſe of my Life, I have full often found mine own Will hath of and from it ſelf caſt the Ballance, and given forth a Command for many a ſinful Act, not merely out of that ſinful Bias and Inclination it hath to commit Sin, but over and above out of that mere Mutability and Fickleneſs which is in my Will to caſt it ſelf to Evil: and when Inclinations and Aſſiſtances unto the contrary have been ſufficient to preſerve me from ſo ſinning, yet mine own Will hath determined it ſelf to an outward act of Evil; ſo as I could and might reſolve the Act done into that Uncertainty and Aptneſs to change and fall, even (as I am a Creature) to fall into that, which is a ſtep into that Nothing we were firſt created out of, namely Sin: ſo that beyond what the Bias or Poiſe which Corruption ſways Man unto, it appears that in many paſſages of a Man's Life a Vertibility of Will hath been the cauſe of Sin, which is then ſeen, when ſtrong Motions and Impreſſions have been to the contrary, as well as Impulſes of Sin and Wickedneſs, (ſo as the Man could not but ſay he had power not to have done it:) from whence a Man may diſcern what he himſelf was like to have done, if he had been in Adam's State and Caſe.

Secondly, That alſo of James, That it is God's Prerogative alone (and no Perſon's elſe but he who is God withal, or one Perſon with God) not to be capable of being tempted to Evil, ſo as to be prevailed with by it; James 1. 13. Let no Man ſay when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with Evil, neither tempteth he any Man: to be without variableneſs or ſhadow of turning, ver. 17. proves my Aſſertion. It is further evidenced by this, that the greateſt and holieſt Creature that could be made by God, if but a mere Creature, and having no other but that providential Aſſiſtance due by the Law of the Creation, was not only capable to reel and fall, but was ſlippery and might eaſily totter and fall, and ſo break it ſelf as a Glaſs without a bottom.

Neither could this be laid upon God, that he upheld him not; becauſe to have been invincibly kept and preſerved by God, was above the due that, as Creator, God was any way obliged unto; and muſt have proceeded from a Principle of an higher kind, namely his Free-Grace, and was inconſiſtent with his Covenant of Works: So as God in letting him fall, did therein no more but only not aſſiſt him by ſuch a ſupernatural Aid as was above the Law of Creation, and unto which God therefore was no way bound; and it was but to leave the Creature, to ſhew what as a Creature it might will to do, and ſo that it was mutable. Which Prerogative of God's ſo to do, who ſhall deny unto him, or put the contrary upon him, as meet to be expected from him, when it was a pure act of ſupernatural Grace to have done otherwiſe? The wiſeſt of Men, Solomon, having ſought into the nature and original of Wickedneſs and Madneſs, lays all at Man's door: God made Man righteous, but they found or ſought out many Inventions, Eccleſ. 7. 29.

Neither is it to be conceived that Man's Heart was expoſed to Satan to infuſe Sin, as a piece of fair Paper lies expoſed to an external Hand to caſt a blot or ſtain of Ink upon it at his pleaſure. No, it muſt be an act of a Man's own Will, without the conſent of which the Devil cannot now in our corrupt Eſtate, force any Man to ſinning, much leſs then when he had no matter in Adam to work upon.

BOOK I.

The which Mutability God (when Adam was at the beſt and prime of his Condition) gave him an extraordinary Monitory and Warning of: Yea, and that which was to be as a Sacrament thereof unto him, God ſingled forth of the Garden (he was plac'd in) two Trees, the Tree of Life, which was ordained to ſeal his conſtant Eſtate of Life and Happineſs, if he would perſiſt in Obedience: The Tree of Knowledg of Good and Evil, to ſignify that he was mutable from Good to Evil; and of this laſt Tree God forbad him to eat, and that if he did, he died; Gen. 2. 17. But of the Tree of the Knowledg of good and evil, thou ſhalt not eat of it: for in the day thou eateſt thereof, thou ſhalt ſurely die. And that therefore he muſt look to himſelf, for this was his Covenant, and the eſſential terms of it, and therefore ſealed up by theſe two Sacraments. Now the Word Diſobedience here in the Text, points us to his Sin, as it is alſo charged upon him by God, Gen. 3. 17. Becauſe thou haſt hearkened to the Voice of thy Wife, and haſt eaten of the Tree whereof I commanded thee not to eat; which ſhews wherein lay the very Sin. Adam had an expreſs Commandment from God, and the Light of it, together with the Principles of the Law, written in his Heart, was in his Underſtanding and Judgment ready to have guided him if he would uſe and ask Counſel thereof, and attend thereto, upon all Temptations to the contrary. Neither was it poſſible that if he would have had Recourſe to thoſe Principles, and conſulted with them, that he ſhould have erred, or that his Will ſhould have inclined to ſuch an Act, expreſly contrary to God's Law, if he had continued fully to conſider what was at hand ready to his View; for neither could Error befal his Underſtanding, if he would uſe the Light he had in that Eſtate, (for then his Underſtanding muſt be ſaid to have been created by God, not able to judg of what was good in every Action) neither could Man's Will then but fixedly cleave to that which the Underſtanding did think good; only he not being taken up into the ſeeing of God Face to Face, and ſo to have his Underſtanding poſſeſſed with ſuch a Sight of God and his Will, ſo fill'd and fixed with the Poſſeſſion of him thereby, as he might not caſt an Eye to look and conſider whether there might not be ſome further Good as to himſelf, than he was yet poſſeſs'd of in that Condition; and then this being ſuggeſted to him by Satan that there was, he turned a ſudden ſquint Eye aſide, as Lot's Wife did hers backwards: And thus the Scripture expreſſeth his Sin, by a not hearkning or attending to the Light of the Law, and the Voice of it in his Judgment, but an hearkning to the Voice of his Wife. It was not a conſulting with the Command, or not ſuffering it to ſpeak, or not cleaving fixedly to the Advice thereof; but his Will would have his Underſtanding gad and wander with a Glance, to ſee if there might not be ſome thing in what Satan ſuggeſted: and this very raſh incogitant Squint was his firſt Slip from God; ſo as after it when God's Law came upon him, and was conſidered by him, yet this Sin having firſt entred, thereupon followed a doubting of the Truth of what God had ſaid, a Jealouſy that God kept him from eating of that Tree out of Envy, leſt they ſhould be as God; and ſo hoping to mend his Condition another way, than by obeying God, and to be free of the Service of God, which by God's Law he was (if he would have Happineſs from God) to be ſubject unto; he rather choſe to ſet up for himſelf, and ſeek his Fortune, (as we ſay) and ſo to be abſolutely free as God is. And thus thinking he had found out a new trick to be happy, without and beyond what that Condition would afford which God had ſet him in, he fell into Sin and Miſery; and that this was the Sin of his Fall, is part of Solomon's meaning, when he ſaith, They ſought out new Inventions; and having once left God, he doth now nothing elſe but ſeek a new way to be happy; but being a Beggar of himſelf, finds he cannot himſelf ſupport himſelf, and therefore is forc'd for Happineſs and Comfort to go to every Creature to ſupply him, and ſo is plunged into the worſt of Servitudes, whilſt he promiſed himſelf Liberty; even to be a Servant to every Creature: This for that one Man's Sin.

CHAP.

Chap. 3.

CHAP. III.

How Sin is derived from Adam to all Mankind. What Sin it is which is propagated by the first Man to his Posterity. Whether original Sin consists only in a Corruption of Nature, or also in the Guilt of Adam's first Sin imputed to us. The Imputation of that Sin proved. Adam, a publick Person, representing us. By what Law he came to be so. The Justice and Equity of God's imputing the first Sin of Adam to us all.

NOW there are but two ways to pass Sin to another: the one is by way of Example, as Jeroboam is said to have caused Israel to sin; and as Evah caused Adam: or else, participatione culpæ, by partaking of the Sin of another. Now by the first way this Sin is not derived; for besides that, Adam being dead 4600 Years ago, the force of this Example reacheth not to us, nor to the multitudes of Ages past. That this was the way of deriving it, is not intended in the Text, for then not Adam the first Man, but Evah and the Devil, should have been assigned as those by whose Offence Sin entred into the World, in that they were the first in the Transgression; and also because then Children, (as the 14*th* Verse of the 5*th* Chapter of the Romans affirms) should not be guilty, as yet that Verse affirms they are, in that they die. Now God exerciseth no Punishment where there is no Fault; also the Apostle intends a Comparison of Adam with Christ, that Sin comes by Adam, as Righteousness by Christ; now Christ conveys not Righteousness to all by Example, for many Persons saved by him, lived afore him, as all under the Old Testament, as likewise Infants: This indeed, as is likely, was the way by which the most of the Angels fell, whom Satan as a Head drew into the Faction with him; and those whom his Example prevailed not with, did stand and do still, which no Man doth, but all have sinned.

Now concerning the second way how we should come to be Partakers of Adam's Sin: The Scriptures elsewhere tell us, it was by Propagation natural, or Generation; as David, Psal. 51. 5. Behold, I was shapen in Iniquity; and in Sin did my Mother conceive me. I will not earnestly contend that this way is directly expressed in this Text, which yet Augustine pressed from the word entring into the World, as a Lues or Contagion, and so passing and piercing through, or invading the whole World as it were by stealth; but this may justly be argued for it from the Text, that even Infant-Children are affirmed here to die upon the account of that first Sin's Entrance, who sinned not after the Similitude of Adam's Transgression, that is, personally, which shews this to be the way of conveying this Sin, for to them there can be no other; and why else were such Children circumcised, and now baptized, both being Sacraments of Remission of Sin and Sanctification; Coloss. 2. 11, 12, 13. In whom also ye are circumcised with the Circumcision made without Hands, in putting off the Body of the Sins of the Flesh, by the Circumcision of Christ: Buried with him in Baptism, wherein also you are risen with him through the Faith of the Operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead. And you being dead in your Sins, and the Circumcision of your Flesh, hath he quickned together with him, having forgiven you all Trespasses. And indeed this to be the way, other Scriptures plainly affirm, not only that Instance of David (though enough, for what could David have done before his Conception, that he should be conceived in Sin? and there is the same Case of all) but Christ plainly affirms it, John 3. 6. Whatsoever is born of the Flesh, is Flesh; that is, what is born of fleshly Generation; the first

Birth

BOOK I.

Birth (for he oppoſeth it to the ſecond Birth) is Fleſh, that is, ſinful: For Fleſh he oppoſeth to that Grace, which in the ſecond Birth the Spirit works, called Spirit there: And ſo Paul, Epheſ. 2. 3. We are all the Children of Wrath by Nature. [By Nature] is there in part meant the natural courſe of propagating our Nature, namely, Generation; and Conception, and Propagation natural: and ſo Ariſtotle uſeth the word φύσις.

Now if we be the Children of Wrath by virtue of our natural Birth, then firſt Children of Sin thereby; for God is not angry with us but for Sin. And hence it is that becauſe natural Conception by that ordinary Law of Generation, is the way of conveying Sin; that therefore all Men, all and every one are corrupted; for to be ſure all are born as from him, he being the firſt Man, and having committed that Sin e're he begat any. And why was it that Chriſt, though the Son of Adam, Luke 3. 38. as having the Matter of his Body from him, yet was without Sin, and born an holy One? How came he to be free and exempted, but becauſe he was conceived not by natural Propagation from a Man, but by the over-ſhadowing of the moſt High? Luke 1. 35. And the Angel anſwered and ſaid unto her, The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the Power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee: therefore alſo that holy Thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God. So that this remains the only means why Men are ſinful, that they are propagated from Adam after the natural manner of all Fleſh: The Ground whereof you have hereafter.

The third Queſtion and Demand will be, What Sin it is that is propagated and entred upon the World, and of which all Men, as ſoon as they are made Men by Conception or Birth, are guilty by that one Man's Offence?

To make way for the Anſwer of which, we muſt know that all Sins are reduced unto two Branches. 1. That which conſiſts in the guilt of ſome act of Sin done and perpetrated. Or, 2. an inherent Corruption in the Heart contracted by that Guilt. Now it is certain, that whether every Man had had this original Sin or not, that yet upon any act of ſinning committed by any Man, there doth and ſhould have entred in that Man a depravation of Nature: for by ſinning a Man is made the Servant of Iniquity unto Iniquity, Rom. 6. 19. I ſpeak after the manner of Men, becauſe of the Infirmity of your Fleſh: for as ye have yielded your Members Servants to Uncleanneſs and to Iniquity, unto Iniquity; even ſo now yield your Members Servants to Righteouſneſs, unto Holineſs. Which comes to paſs not upon that miſtaken Ground that an Habit follows upon Acts in a Philoſophical way; for then it muſt be that many reiterated Acts produce ſuch an Inclination, and ſo not any one act of Sin: But Depravation followeth by way of Curſe and Forfeiture, even of the Spirit of all inherent Holineſs, becauſe Man's having of it did hold of a Covenant of Works, of which more hereafter. Now therefore according unto this Adam ſinning, there were two things befel him. 1. An everlaſting guilt of that Act committed, binding him over to Death. 2. A Forfeiture of the Holy Ghoſt in him, and ſo of the Image of God in Holineſs, and ſo by conſequence the contrary Depravation of his Nature. Now Adam having contracted by his firſt Sin both theſe to himſelf, if the queſtion be, which of theſe two, or whether not both of theſe are the Sin that entred, and is propagated by Birth to all Men?

The Anſwer is, Both of them.

Firſt, The Guilt of that very act of Diſobedience, which was lately ſpoken of, ſo as we all are accounted guilty of it as he, and as truly as if we had had a hand in it: and that (beſides what is to follow) appears plainly out of Rom. 5. 12. For firſt, it is ſaid, that All have ſinned: Secondly, the 16*th* and 18*th* Verſes clear it, for they ſay, That by the Offence of that Man, Judgment (that is, the Guilt of that Offence, whereby they were judged guilty as well as he) came on them all to condemn them. Now God could not condemn them for that Act, unleſs he did in Juſtice judg them guilty of it. And whereas it is ſaid here, they ſinned, the very Text viewed and compared, cleareth its own Intendment. A Perſon may be ſaid to have ſinned, or to have done a thing, two ways. 1. When one actually and perſonally doth it himſelf; and ſo we did not ſin that Sin, but Adam only: for in ver. 14. 'tis ſaid of Infants, that they ſinned, not after the ſimilitude of his Tranſgreſſion; that is, in their own Perſons. Yet, 2.

one may be said to have sinned in an other. And as the Text gives that part of the Distinction, That they sinned, not personally as Adam did; so it appositely sets out this other ἐφ' ᾧ, in whom all have sinned, speaking of Adam; for that may be when one actually himself doth it not; as what a whole Body doth, a Member of the same Body may be said to do: And so the word here [they sinned] is to be understood, that is, they are to be accounted Sinners, as the word is in 1 Kings 1. 21. —That I and my Son Solomon shall be counted Offenders, (Heb. Sinners) upon what ground you shall hear afterwards; and besides, I must speak presently to this very Point again. Chap. 3.

The second thing conveyed, is, a Corruption of Nature, which is a Sin that is inherent, remaining and residing in us, and conveyed to us from him, as a Leprosy is from the Parent to the Child, so as it may be said to be in them. Of this Job speaks, chap. 15. 14. What is Man, that he should be clean? and he that is born of a Woman, that he should be righteous? And in the 16*th* Verse of that Chapter, he calls Man filthy and abominable, drinking in Sin as Water. In which place you see, that first, there is a want of Righteousness, which once he was made in; secondly, a contrary Uncleanness or proneness to Sin; and therefore he calls him filthy or greedy of sinning: And thirdly, this is conveyed by his natural Propagation by Man and Woman; for it is inserted, that is born of a Woman. So that now you are to conceive thus of it; That Adam committing that Act of Disobedience, his Nature was thereby first in himself for ever defiled by it. We often see that one Blow or Fall strikes a Man's Members out of Joint, so as of themselves they ever remain so; and so did that Fall of his, though but one act of Sin. If therefore we also be proved guilty of that Act in him, then by the like reason also must that Nature we received from him by natural Propagation, be tainted with Sin, as his was by virtue of that Act: so as it must first be supposed that we are guilty of that Act, as the ground and reason why our Nature is thus infected; that being a Consequent thereof, and in part a Punishment of it; and so as indeed it could not have been inflicted on our Natures as a Sin, unless we be first found guilty of that act of Sin it self.

Now because this is questioned by some Divines, I shall come next to speak unto this great and main Proposal, namely,

Whether Original Sin doth consist only in a Corruption and Defilement of Nature, and want of that first created Righteousness? Or, whether not also in the Guilt of that first act of Sin and Disobedience of Adam's, by way of Imputation derived down unto us, and that as the Ground of that Corruption propagated?

That the Corruption conveyed is the whole of Original Sin, and not at all the Guilt of that first Disobedience as imputed to us, is maintained by some; but usually (if not generally) by such, as withal deny the Imputation of Christ's Righteousness also. And indeed the occasion why they have denied the Imputation of Adam's Sin, hath been for the sake of their other Opinion, That we are not justified by Christ's Righteousness as imputed, but only for Christ's sake, and for his Righteousness. For they see that if they should hold the Imputation of Adam's first actual Disobedience, that then they might as well assent unto the Imputation of Christ's Righteousness and Obedience, Adam being Christ's Type.

The Point therefore to be proved now, is not, That the Corruption is conveyed, but that the Guilt of the act of his first Sin is also derived down to us: I shall endeavour it out of this Scripture in Rom. 5. 12, 13, &c. (Of the conveyance of the Corruption it self I shall after speak.)

Now the Proof of this is made up of these Particulars laid together.

1. Let the general Order of the Apostle's Discourse in this Epistle about Man's Sinfulness be considered. In the two first Chapters he had shewn, how in respect of actual Sins, and a State of Wrath; first, the Gentiles, chap. 1. secondly, the Jews, chap. 2. are all involv'd: And then, chap. 3. he speaks of both together, Jew and Gentile, laying open that inbred and general Corruption of Nature; concluding that all are unrighteous, and fallen short of the Glory of God. Now then in this fifth Chapter he proceeds to shew the Source and Spring of this

BOOK I.

this Corruption, viz. Adam's firſt Sin; By one Man Sin entred into the World. So then having fully treated of the Corruption afore, he here orderly next treats of the Conſequence of the Guilt of the Act, which is the ground of that Corruption.

2. The Sin of that one Man which he treats of in this Chapter was, the Act of Sinning, and not ſo much the Corruption of Nature in him, which alſo befel himſelf, for he termeth it a Tranſgreſſion, ver. 14. an Offence, ver. 15, 16, 17. and ſays, that he ſinned, ver. 16. and a Diſobedience, ver. 19. and ver. 17. termeth it, That one Offence.

3. When he ſays, Sin entred into the World by that one Man; he by Sin means one and the ſame Sin, which by him as the Author was firſt brought into the World, the Guilt whereof accrued to himſelf as the Perpetrator of it, and to his Poſterity; ſo as in that Word, Sin entred into the World, himſelf firſt is to be underſtood as one of, yea the Head of this World of Mankind which Sin entred upon: and he ſpeaks of the firſt Entrance of Sin; therefore of that Sin which was firſt began in himſelf, and that is evidently the Guilt of the Act here ſpoken of; and therefore the ſame Sin or Guilt is to be underſtood, which is ſaid that it goes on and is derived to the reſt of Mankind. And if otherwiſe it be underſtood, then whilſt Adam's Sin is ſpoken of, and that as begun in him, one kind of Sin, namely the Guilt of the Act; but when the Sin of the reſt of Mankind, then another kind of Sin, viz. the Corruption of Nature ſhould be variouſly intended, which is not uniform to the Apoſtle's Scope.

4. He thereupon ſays, that Death paſſed upon all, this Sin having firſt entred upon all, that is, Death as the Effect and Puniſhment of that Act of Sin thus ſpoken of, and the Connection of theſe two Sayings is with an Emphaſis, and ſo Death paſſed; every Word is emphatical to this purpoſe: 1. Paſt, as a Sentence upon a Crime foregoing. And therefore 2. he adds ἐφ' ᾧ πάντες; and ſo which Words are cauſal, or aſſigning a reaſon why Death and the Sentence of Death paſs'd upon all, even becauſe Sin, and that Sin of Adam had entred firſt upon all; and [redacted] as Death ſeized on Adam for the Act which he did, ſo ſtill likewiſe the ſame Sentence on us all for the ſame Act: Now we find that unto that Act of Diſobedience it was that Death was threatned; Gen. 2. 17. That Day thou eateſt, thou ſhalt die. And [redacted] as it is one and the ſame Death, that ſeizeth on both Adam and us; ſo the Guilt of one and the ſame Sin entred on both.

5. And to that end he might be underſtood both to hold forth that Sin of his to have been the Cauſe of Death; and alſo how Sin, and what Sin it was he intended, in ſaying it entred upon the World by that Man; he further indigitates it and repeats it; in that (ſaith he) [in whom all have ſinned]: And this fully reſolves us.

For Firſt, If no more had been ſaid of all Men, than that they ſinned, ἥμαρτον, it imports an Act of Sinning; he ſays not, made ſinful, but have ſinned; therefore his Intention is to ſpeak them, guilty of that Act of his firſt Sin, of which he manifeſtly ſpeaks of afore and after. And further, ſeeing that many of them whom Death reigned over, were Infant Children as well as others, (for Experience ſheweth Death reigneth over them alſo) and they are part of this World, which Sin is ſaid to have entred into, and that they are not guilty of any Act of their own in themſelves, therefore guilty they muſt be ſuppoſed of that Act, (if of any at all) viz. the firſt Sin and Diſobedience of Adam; (which he, you ſee, is diſcourſing of) nor of any other can they be ſuppoſed guilty in common together with all Men elſe; ſo then put but [all] and [have ſinned] together, it muſt be the Guilt of his firſt Sin that is intended; and then the manner of involving Children in that Guilt can be no otherwiſe than by Imputation; for of perſonal Sin in themſelves they are not guilty.

6. Further to clear this, take the Words that follow; ver. 14. Death reigned (ſaith he) even over them that ſinned not after the Similitude of Adam's Tranſgreſſion.

1*ſt*. That Reigning attributed unto Death upon Sin's Entrance, hath, as Pareus obſerveth upon the Words, a Reſpect to thoſe violent prerogative extraordinary nary Judgments which were (long before Moses) executed, as the Flood on the old World, and on Sodom and Gomorrah, &c. In which Children and Infants were involved as well as those of riper Years. Chap. 3.

And then 2dly. Those other Words, even over them that sinned not after the Similitude of Adam's Transgression, is a designing (by a Periphrasis) Infant Children, and their Case and Condition, as those that Death reigneth over, as well as others, though they had never actually or personally sinned (or in like manner) as Adam had done. Now besides other Considerations, if only inherent Corruption were the Sin that had been intended, upon which it is that Death hath pass'd on all; and as that wherein Infants, as well as those of riper Years are in common and alike involved; then the Apostle had put no Difference between Adam and them: For concerning that Sin it might be said of Infants, that they have inherent Corruption in their Persons, after the Similitude that Adam had it in his Person; for it is expresly said of it, Gen. 5. 3. that Adam begat a Son in his own Image or Likeness. And those (with whom in this Point I have now to do) all grant that same Corruption to have been the Punishment of that first Act of Adam's, as well in Adam himself as in us; and so in all these respects bearing the very Similitude of that sinful Corruption that was in Adam; but it is not so in respect of the Guilt of that first Act; we are not Sinners in respect thereof, after the Similitude of Adam's Transgression therein. So then having first said, that all had sinned, and yet of some of that all, namely Infants, that they sinned not after the Similitude of Adam's Transgression; it is an Explication or Correction, that they are to be understood to have sinned, not in their own Persons as Adam did, but that only by way of Imputation it is yet reckoned to them, which is the only way whereby it can be imagined they should be said to have sinned therein.

And 7. After he had thus connected these two, the first Man's Sin and Death, as Cause and Effect; he plainly sends us to that first Curse directed against that very Fact, That Day thou eatest (which was the first Sin) thou shalt die the Death: And this the Scope of his ensuing Argumentation clearly shews, that his meaning is, that Death (then threatned) had, according to the Tenor of that threatning, upon that Man's first Sin seized on all the World: His Words that follow are these; ver. 13, 14. For until the Law, Sin was in the World; but Sin is not imputed where there is no Law. Nevertheless, Death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the Similitude of Adam's Transgression, who is the Figure of him that was to come. He lays his Foundation of arguing thus; Children and all Men die, and Death is but for some Sin, and all Sin must have some Law it is committed against; now what Law should that be, says he? He removes any kind of Sins forbidden in Moses's Law, or contained therein, to have been the cause of that Death of Mankind, yea, of Children, and yet it must be a Sin against some Law that was in the World, which must be the Cause of that Death; for Sin is not imputed where there is no Law: Now what Law is it (that was no part of Moses's Law, nor contained therein) against which all, even Children should be supposed to have sinned, and by Virtue of which Death should pass upon them and all, but that which was given to Adam over and above any other Command that is in Moses's Law, which so expresly threatneth Death in it. That Law which he first sinned against, namely, in eating the forbidden Fruit, and therefore it must be the Sin against that Law which brought in Death upon the World; in which Law or Command this Curse was in terminis, and expresly annexed, That Day thou eatest, thou shalt die. It is certain then that it must be by Virtue of this Law that Children die, or by none, for they died when Moses's Law was not yet given: So then, when you read that even Children died afore Moses, as well as others; you know what Curse and what Law to attribute it unto, even to the first Law, and that first Curse given to Adam, That day thou eatest, thou shalt die.

Faius the Geneva Preacher, together with Calvin, in his Comment on these Words, resolves the Apostle's Argument thus. Si est transgressio in Infantibus, est legis alicujus transgressio; non est transgressio legis actualia prohibentis, ergo est transgressio legis alterius. Lex autem illa nulla alia est præter eam quæ violata est ab Adamo, QUA scilicet prohibitus est Adamus Eden de fructu. Faius in locum.

8. If it prove that the Words, ver. 12. are to be read thus, In whom all have sinned: then the matter is plain, that the Guilt of that his first Act, is the Sin conveyed by Imputation, and that we sinned in him. But those that are opposite to this great Truth, catch hold of this, that the Words should be read, In that all have sinned, and not in whom; and so our Translators were pleased to read, although in the Margent they also vary it, and say in whom, as knowing that this latter might stand as well as the former. Now yet,

1*st*. If it be in that all have sinned, as taking ἐφ ᾧ [in that] as a causal Particle, yet still it implies that all have sinned, and were guilty of an act of sinning, as was argued.

2*dly*. Know that Pelagius was the first who brought up that other Interpretation, In that, or for that all have sinned. But Augustin, and all the Fathers, but Theodoret, say, in whom, as meaning Adam, spoken of in the words before.

3*dly*. The Apostle's Speech seems an Hyperbaton; for whereas the Apostle in the beginning of the Verse had said, As by one Man Sin entred, and then should in the next Sentence have repeated those words [by one Man,] and so have gone on to have said, That thus or so Death passed on all Men by that one Man; he omits the insertion of it there, because of making a repetition; yet so as in this his Close he emphatically brings it in, and with more advantage, in adding this as the reason or ground thereof, in whom all have sinned: and so that ἐφ ᾧ comes in fully referring to that one Man, and to that his Sin; as by whom, he had said, Sin entred into the World, and Death with it, as the reason of both.

Su Cornelius à Lapide in loc.

Then 4*thly*, compare this Sense given, but with that Speech 1 Cor. 15. 22. In Adam all die. This Place, Rom. 5. 12. In whom all have sinned, and they are parallel: for as he plainly there affirms, that in Adam, as a common Person, all did die; the same he affirms here of his Sin, the cause of Death, in whom all sinned. If therefore in the one place we are said to die in him, as the consequent of that first Sin, (and actually in him we did not die, when he died, for we are alive long after him) then much more it may be judged, that the Apostle intended to say here, that we sinned in him then, when with the same breath he is proving, that Death entred upon all Men upon the entrance of his first Sin: so that the one Place doth interpret the other: And although this here is put last in order of Sentences, In whom all have sinned, yet it is supposed first in order of Causation thus, In whom all having sinned, Death hath by that passed on all; that is, All died in him, because they all sinned in him: For the Law given him had said, That day thou eatest, thou shalt die: For these words there (in Adam all die) do refer evidently to that Curse in Gen. 2. 17. (That day thou eatest, thou shalt die the Death) even that very same Curse and Law, which in the seventh Consideration I shewed Paul pointed us unto. And if it were, that by that Law it came to pass they then died in Adam, then they must be considered in Adam when that was spoken unto him; and so this must have been by the Apostle's Application and Interpretation of it, God's Intention, that when he said, Thou shalt die, that he included all Mankind as considered in him, when he spake it of and unto him.

To conclude this, consider but this further parallel of these two Places, 1 Cor. 15. and this Rom. 5.

See the Discourse of the Creatures, and the Condition of their State by Creation, chap 8, & 9. in Vol. II. of his Works.

1. Adam is in both held forth as Christ's Type, as I have in another Discourse proved; so in the Romans expressly, ver. 14. Nevertheless, Death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's Transgression, who is the Figure of him that was to come: and as expressly, 1 Cor. 15. 45. And so it is written, The first Man Adam was made a living Soul, the last Adam was made a quickning Spirit.

And 2. Adam and Christ are held forth as publick Persons in both; first, in that 1 Cor. 15. 45. where he is therefore called the first Man, not in respect of Existence but Representation: For in what respect is Christ there called the second Man, and Adam the first Man, but in the same sense that Christ is termed the second? For they are set together as Type and Antitype: Otherwise Cain was in order the first after Adam. So then it is spoken in respect of his representing all Mankind; and so it is of Adam here in this Rom. 5. for all along the Emphasis is put upon this one Man, ver. 19. it is said, by the Sin of one Man, not one Sin: and ver. 12. By one Man Sin entred. I ask, seeing Eve sinned, and sinned first, was first in the Transgression, why was it not her Sin? Yea, and she was a Root of Propagation as well as Adam; why by that one Man Adam, and not Eve? No reason can be given, but because Adam was the publick

Person

Chap. 3.

Perſon that repreſented us, and not ſhe: So alſo why are not other Parents as well? ſo why not Adam afterwards, but only in his firſt Sin committed? Yet let me add this; that Chriſt and Adam are made publick Perſons in a differing Reſpect in theſe two places: In 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48. in reſpect of Qualifications; Such as is the firſt Man earthy, ſuch are they that are earthy of him. But here in the Romans in Reſpect of Acts, or what the one and the other did: and therefore the Sin of this one Man is made the Sin of all in him; as the Obedience of the other is made the Righteouſneſs of all in him: As the one for Juſtification of Life, ſo the other for Condemnation of Death; In whom all have ſinned, and in whom all died. And indeed it is the Law of all Nations, that the Acts of a publick Perſon are accounted theirs whom they perſonate: The Heads of the People of Iſrael ſacrificed for a Murder in the Name of a Nation: The Females were circumciſed in the Males.

Laſtly, The Scope of Paul in this Chapter, is to ſet Chriſt out by the Illuſtration of Adam his Type, in reſpect of his conveying the Righteouſneſs of Juſtification; ſo ver. 16, 17, 18. expreſly; And not as it was by one that ſinned, ſo is the Gift: for the Judgment was by one to Condemnation; but the free Gift is of many Offences unto Juſtification. For if by one Man's Offence, Death reigned by one, much more they which receive abundance of Grace and of the Gift of Righteouſneſs, ſhall reign in Life by one, Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore as by the Offence of one, Judgment came upon all Men to Condemnation: even ſo by the Righteouſneſs of one, the free Gift came upon all Men unto Juſtification of Life. And his conveying Sanctification to us, is made a new and diſtinct Buſineſs from this, which upon occaſion of this he enters upon Chap. 6. ver. 15, to 20. and this we argue againſt the Papiſts. Now therefore if Adam's Type, in reſpect of conveying Sin, be brought to ſet out Chriſt's juſtifying of us by his Righteouſneſs, then the Imputation or charging of Adam's Diſobedience, and ſo the Guilt of the Act muſt be intended, or it had not ſerved Paul's purpoſe; for if Paul ſhould have intended how Adam conveyed the Sin of Corruption of Nature to us, to ſet forth how Chriſt conveys Righteouſneſs to juſtify us; it would have been foreign to his Deſign, for theſe are things heterogeneal, and of differing Nature, and no way parallel: But the Apoſtle's Words in Rom. 5. 19. are expreſs, that in one and the ſame parallel Reſpect it is, that we are made Sinners in Adam, and Righteous in Chriſt; For as by one Man's Diſobedience many were made Sinners, ſo by the Obedience of one ſhall many be made Righteous: And the Word κατεςαθησαν, and κατασαθησονται, made Righteous, and made Sinners, there uſed, is a word noting an Act of forinſical or outward Authority, applied therefore to the conſtituting of Elders; Acts 6. 3. Wherefore, Brethren, look you out among you ſeven Men of honeſt Report, full of the Holy Ghoſt, and Wiſdom, whom ye may appoint over this Buſineſs, καταςησωμεν, the word is; and ſo Titus 1. 3. But hath in due time manifeſted his Word through Preaching, which is committed unto me according to the Commandment of God our Saviour. Καταγην is the Word there too; and ſo the Juſtification of us by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs is an Act of Power; as when a King makes a Man a Noble-Man by Patent, conſtituting him ſuch: And thus it is that Adam's Sin makes us by Nature's Letters Patents, ſinful, even by deriving down the Guilt of that Act, which in Rom. 5. 16. is thus expreſſed, The Judgment was by one to Condemnation: That the Judgment or Sentence charging the Crime, the Guilt of the Fact upon us, redounds to our Condemnation. And ſo much for this great Point.

The next Query may be, How and by what Law Adam came to be a publick Perſon, repreſenting us? for it will be objected, That there only it holds, that the Act of a publick Perſon is reckoned or imputed, when he is choſen by the Conſent of thoſe to whom it is imputed, which Adam was not by any of us. To which I anſwer;

Firſt, Adam being, as was ſaid, Chriſt's Type, I might ask, How came Chriſt to be a publick Perſon? and who choſe him to be ſo? To be ſure he was not choſen by any of us Believers; and yet 'tis ſaid, that Sin is not imputed to us, becauſe Chriſt was made Sin for us: By God's Choice, and his own Undertaking; 2 Cor. 5. 21. Chriſt was appointed by God; and that by Virtue of a Covenant made with him for all Believers, that what he did, ſhould be theirs;

Iſa.

Book I. Isa. 49. from ver. 1, to 8. Listen, O Isles, unto me, and hearken ye People from far, the Lord hath called me from the Womb, from the Bowels of my Mother hath he made mention of my Name. And he hath made my Mouth like a sharp Sword, in the Shadow of his Hand hath he hid me, and made me a polished Shaft: in his Quiver hath he hid me, and said unto me, Thou art my Servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified. Then I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my Strength for nought, and in vain, yet surely my Judgment is with the Lord, and my Work with my God. And now, saith the Lord that formed me from the Womb to be his Servant, to bring Jacob again to him, Though Israel be not gathered, yet shall I be glorious in the Eyes of the Lord, and my God shall be my Strength. And he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my Servant, to raise up the Tribes of Jacob, and to restore the Preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a Light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my Salvation unto the end of the Earth. Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel, and his holy One, to him whom Man despiseth, to him whom the Nation abhorreth, to a Servant of Rulers, Kings shall see and arise, Princes also shall worship, because of the Lord, that is faithful, and the holy One of Israel, and he shall chuse thee. Why may it not satisfy us then, that by the like reason God should choose Adam, being the first that was created, as perfect as ever any after could have been, as the first Man, the chief? and so God made as good a choice in it, as Men could have done for themselves: And further, who being to be the Father of all the rest, had the Law of Nature, as well as that of Love and Conscience (which Parents have generally towards their Childrens Good as to their own) to poise and oblige him unto Faithfulness, to whom God gave a Law, which did concern and bind his Posterity in him, as well as himself; and this Covenant was expressly told him and made with him: 1. That he should be able to multiply and fill the Earth; Gen. 1. 28. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the Earth, and subdue it, and have Dominion over the Fish of the Sea, and over the Fowls of the Air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the Earth. And 2. That standing obedient, he should convey the same blessed Estate to that his Seed; and therefore that same which God speaks, Gen. 1. 26. Let us make Man according to our Image, is expounded by Solomon, Eccles. 7. 29. of all Men in him; God made Man righteous, but they, &c. He speaks generally of all, in the one and in the other. And therefore also, Gen. 1. 28. he bids him multiply, and have Dominion over all; that is, his Seed, as well as he should have the same Priviledg. Yet so 3. As that if he disobeyed God, his Seed should die as well as he: So that [That Day thou eatest thou shalt die] was understood by him, and spoken to him, as representing all; for 1 Cor. 15. 22. it is so opened as the primitive Intent of it, in 1 Cor. 15. 22. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. All (are said there) to die in him, which could not have been unless they had first all lived in him.

But Secondly, To clear this the more; there are three ways by which it may be conceived or understood, that he was made a publick Person.

1. By the absolute Prerogative of God, resolving it wholly into his own secret Ordination and Appointment of him so to be. Thus some. But this cuts the Knot indeed, but unties it not: And I dare not wholly put it on that account. The Covenant with Adam, both for himself and us, was the Covenant of Nature, as I have shewn: And it were hard to say, that in such a Covenant he should use his Prerogative alone; and in some Respects, this was higher (if we suppose it such) than that with Christ, with whom he dealt distinctly, fully making known to him all things that concern'd that Covenant, which he also voluntarily undertook for to his Father, as in that place cited in Isaiah, and also here appears.

2. A second way therefore is when it is by a Covenant, and that so as though God's Will to have it so, that he should represent us, was the main Foundation it should be resolved into, yet so as withal, God should plainly utter this, and declare it aforehand to him, as he did to Christ, in that Place of Isaiah, I will give thee for a Covenant to the Gentiles, &c. Now there is no such Record of this, more than what hath been mentioned in the former Answer, now extant I know of, whereby God declared, he would constitute him such, or laid it

explicitely upon him, otherwise than in those Particulars which yet I confess by just and like reason do infer it; so as I would not wholly put it upon that account neither; for we read not of God's saying this to him in distinct Words, nor of his accepting or undertaking so to be, namely, a publick Person, that if he sinned, his Posterity should sin in him. Therefore,

Chap. 3.

3. I should think it to be mix'd of the two latter; both that God made him or appointed him to be a publick Person, as 1 Cor. 15. 45. (see my Expolition on those Words) yet not so out of mere Will, but that it also had for its Foundation so natural and so necessary a ground, as it was rather a natural than a voluntary thing. And necessary it was he should be so appointed, if the Law of Nature were attainted. And to assert this, I am inducted among other grounds, by that which in handling the State of Adam in Innocency, I then pursued. That his Covenant was a natural Covenant, and such as according to the Law of his Creation was due and requisite, and founded upon, and consonant to the Principles of Nature, and therefore I judg this Law concerning the Propagation of Man's Nature to his Posterity to be such, and that God did not put forth his Prerogative in giving forth this alone; but that it being a part of his Covenant by the Law of Nature, it was therefore so well known to him by the Light and Law of Nature, that he needed not have it given him by word of Mouth; though in those forementioned Charters, common to him and his Posterity, of having Dominion over the Creatures, and begetting in his Likeness or Kind, it was sufficiently held forth; and so as that threatning was to be understood in the same manner by him, That day thou eatest thou shalt die; wherein all Mankind are not only meant, but expressed by the same Law that they are in those Words, Subdue the Earth, Gen. 1. 28. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the Earth, and subdue it, and have Dominion over the Fish of the Sea, and over the Fowls of the Air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the Earth: which are spoken to Adam immediately, and yet meant of his Posterity. And it is certain, that in respect of conveying all that which was good, he was a common Person; as in that of conveying a Lordship over the Creatures, a Covenant of Life to them, &c. and by the same reason he was a common Person to convey Sin too. And truly those Words, that we are said to be Children of Wrath by Nature, I understand not only (though so too) by Birth, but even to extend to this sense, by the Law of Nature: See my Expolition on those Words.

In the Discourse of the Creatures, Chap. 8, 9. in Vol. II. of his Works.

Ibid.

In Comment on Ephes. Part 2.

Now the natural necessity upon which this Designation of him to be a publick Person was made, is this; God had, as Author of Nature, made this the Law of Nature, That Man should beget in his own Image or Likeness; look what it should prove to be either through his standing or falling afore he puts this Nature out of his Hands; and this Law is in their kind common to Beasts: So then in this first Man the whole Nature of Man being repolited as a common Receptacle or Cistern of it, from whence it was to flow to others; therefore what befals this Nature in him by any Action of his, that Nature is so to be propagated from him. God's Ordinance in the Law of Nature being, that all should be made of one Blood, which could not have been said of any other Man than of him, (no not of Noah, because of the Mixture of Marriages afore with the Posterity of Cain.) And thus also Man's Condition differed from that of the Angels, of whom each stood as single Persons by themselves, being all and each of them created by God, immediately, as even Adam the first Man himself was: But all Men universally by the Law of Nature were to receive their Nature from him in his Likeness, that is, if he stood and obeyed, then the Image of Holiness had been conveyed as it was at first created. If he fell by Sin, then seeing he should thereby corrupt that Nature, and that that Corruption of Nature was also to be his Sin in Relation to, and as the Consequent of that Act of Sin that caused it; therefore if the Law of Nature were ever fulfilled so as to convey his own Image as lawful, (suppose he should sin) so as it should be reckoned Sin in his Children, as it was in himself, this could not take place, but they must be guilty of that Act that caused it, so far as it cast it, as well as himself. If indeed any way could have been supposed how he might have have been bereft of that Holineſs he was created in, without a precedaneous act of ſinning as the Cauſe; Then indeed we might have ſaid, that privation of Holineſs ſhould not have been reckoned Sin either to himſelf nor his Poſterity in that caſe. This Corruption of Nature, or want of original Righteouſneſs, in ſuch caſe would not have been, nor could not have been accounted a Sin, (a Puniſhment it might) but it comes only to be a Sin, as it referreth to, and is connected with the guilt of an act of Sin that cauſed that Corruption of Nature: If therefore that Corruption became truly and properly a Sin in them as well as in him, (and elſe it hath not the Formale of his Image) he muſt neceſſarily be conſtituted a publick Perſon, repreſenting them even in reſpect of that act of Sin, which ſhould thus firſt infect and pollute their Nature in him; or elſe the Law of Nature will not in this reſpect have its due effect: For that which makes it a Sin, is not the want of it ſimply, but as relating to a forfeiture and loſing of it by ſome Act thoſe are firſt guilty of who loſe it. Hence therefore (I repeat the force of my Reaſon again) if he will convey this Image acquired by his Sin as ſinful, there muſt be a Guilt of that act of his Sin, which was the cauſe of it; and therefore he muſt be a publick Perſon in that firſt act of Sin; ſo as without this, as the Caſe ſtood, the Law of Nature could not have had its courſe. See more of this in my Sermons on Epheſ. 2. 3. Children of Wrath by Nature.

Two Objections clog this.

1. Aſſertion. Why ſhould not for the ſame reaſon his actual Righteouſneſs be conveyed?

I anſwer, There is a differing Reaſon: for his Acts of Righteouſneſs they were only Means of preſerving Holineſs in him, as Cauſes without which he ſhould elſe loſe it, (for Omiſſion would have loſt it as well as Commiſſion) yet he had it not given him at firſt from Acts of Righteouſneſs, but by Creation and free Donation. But this ſinful Image, conſidered as ſinful, was to come in wholly and merely from a ſinful Act, as the ſole efficient or meritorious Cauſe of it; and that was it alone could bereave him of it, and which alone could make the want of that Righteouſneſs to be Sin.

2. The ſecond Objection is, Why was not Adam in others of his Sins (which alſo corrupted his Nature) a publick Perſon, to convey the guilt of them with that Corruption, as well as this firſt; ſeeing the Law of Nature is to beget in his Image? Yea, why are not other Parents publick Perſons alſo, ſeeing this Law to beget in their Likeneſs is theirs as well as Adam's?

Anſw. 1. It was the firſt act of Sin in Adam that firſt caſt his Condition, that is, himſelf and all his Poſterity, into that utter privation of all Righteouſneſs, which was equally (for the Subſtance of it, if I may uſe ſuch an expreſſion of Sin) to be communicated to all Mankind. And as in the being of Man it is in the integral ſubſtantial Image, not the gradual, that the Law of Nature ſeizeth on, as to beget an intire whole Man, not of ſuch a Stature, &c. ſo it is in Corruption the integral Body of Sin, the integral Subſtance of that Corruption, which is equally to be derived to all, was at firſt caſt and cauſed by that firſt act of his, and therefore upon that he ceaſeth to be a publick Perſon; for there was wrought in him thereby an utter privation of all Righteouſneſs. It was a Privation total and integral, that had all Sin in it: and therefore though he by other Acts might afterwards corrupt himſelf more by degrees, yet the Law of Nature for begetting in his Likeneſs extends not to degrees in any kind, but Integralitas, a wholeneſs of Parts; as to beget a whole Man, a Soul that hath all Faculties, a Body that hath all Members; but the degrees of Abilities or Stature, that is not in the common Law of Nature: for elſe Seth ſhould have been more corrupted than Cain, and the latter Children of a wicked Man than the elder; and that is a ſtrong Argument that it is not by mere Propagation, but as conveying with it the guilt of the firſt Sin.

And 2. for other Parents; they, though are means to derive down this Image from him, yet they are not publick Perſons; nor was it neceſſary, for the Condition of all Adam's Acts being caſt by that firſt Act, and a total entire privation of all Righteouſneſs, as the common Standard of all Mens original Sinfulneſs, being caſt by Adam and his firſt act of ſinning, there needed not ſuch con-constituting other Parents as publick Persons, but only as bare Instruments by Generation (which is but the Channel of it) to convey it down? For the full scope and extent of the Law of Nature to convey the whole Image of Sin, for the substantial and integral parts of it, was by his Sin enough attained; and therefore himself ordained upon it to be a publick Person; and other Parents are never put into that Office: And the scope of the Law of Nature is not to convey more or less degrees of sinning, according to the degrees of Corruption in the Parents that beget, as it is not to beget Children as great or wise as themselves.

The next thing to be spoken unto, is the Justice and Equity of the Imputation of this first act of Sin unto us by God.

The difference of this our first Parent, and that of other Parents, why he, and not they, were singled out to represent us, and stand for us, having spoken to, even now in an answer to an Objection, and also afore; and so supposing the justness of that Difference, I shall now come to the clearing of the Justness of this Imputation of his first Sin to us, and the Corruption of it.

Now for this general Ground which the Text holds out, that he was that one Man, as hath been shown, as no Father else is said to be. There are several ways by which a Multitude are reckoned as one Man, as included in one other Man that stands for them.

First, One that is Head of many; and Adam was the first Head and Father of Mankind. Now the Elders and first Heads of any Tribe did still appear as publick Persons in the stead of the rest: as our Knights in Parliament do for a Shire, and for Kingdoms or Nations; only they are chosen by the Multitude they represent. But by the Law of Nature, the first had that Priviledg by Nature, and so all the rest of that Tribe were looked at as one Man, in that Man that represented them. And this holds good to this day in Nations, namely, that some one represents a Multitude, and stands for a whole Corporation in matters of greatest Moment: what such an one acteth, they are said to enact. This is Aristotle's Maxim, Quod facit Princeps Civitatis, id totа facit Civitas. Now in this sense all Mankind were (upon the Principles we have given) but as one Man in this one Man: and therefore the Scripture puts it upon this first Man Adam, as from whom we receive the Image which was in him, and by him left in our Nature: 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48, 49. The first Man is of the Earth, earthy: the second Man is the Lord from Heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have born the Image of the earthy, we shall also bear the Image of the heavenly. And he was also thereto ordained and made by God in his first Creation to represent us: and so what this the Head did, is reckoned to us the Parts and Members of him. His Will was Voluntas totius generis humani; his Will was the Will of us all; as the Will of the Head or Chief is of the whole Corporation. The Scripture declareth him the first Man, to have all Men in him; why else is Christ termed the last Man? And so all sinned in him, as in that one Man. And this justly derives the second.

Secondly, We were all as one Men in him, tanquam in origine: so the Buds or Branches are one with the Root, and receive their tincture or kind from it; and also may be reckoned to be in it long before they sprout forth. Rebeka having two Sons in her Womb, is said to have two Nations, which were to spring out of each of them, as the respective Roots of them; Gen. 25. 23. And the Lord said unto her, Two Nations are in thy Womb, and two manner of People shall be separated from thy Bowels. This is spoken of them long afore these Nations came forth out from them. And Adam was the Root of all the World, and had the whole of Man's Nature in him, tanquam in origine; and was as all other things; even as Plants to bring forth in their kinds, so he in his kind. We were all made of one Blood, Acts 17. 26. And hath made of one Blood all Nations of Men, for to dwell on all the face of the Earth. And if that Blood were tainted in him, the Law of Nature and Nations justifies this Attainder. And the Apostle Paul makes use of a Law of Nature, in the Case of God's Election by Grace, to say, If the Root be holy, so are the Branches, Rom. 11. 16.

BOOK I.

In the Discourse of Election, Book. 5. cap. 7. in Vol. II. of his Works.

(God having in his Ordinations of Grace often taken in the Rules and ordinary Laws of Nature, as I have elſe-where ſhewn) this Maxim muſt needs juſtly hold much more here. If the Root be ſinful and corrupted, ſo are the Branches; and therefore it is, Gen. 5. 3. remarkably ſaid of Adam, when faln, He begat a Son in his own Likeneſs; and ſo 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48, 49. he calls Adam the Earthy Man, of whom are all earthy Men; and as he is, (ſays he) ſuch are they for Qualities as well as for Subſtance; and by that common Law is that which the Apoſtle there adds, We have born the Image of the earthy Man; which though ſpoken in reſpect of the Subſtance of Fleſh and Blood, yet when faln, it holds good by the ſame common Law to both Subſtance of our Nature and Qualities of our Nature; and becauſe that Generation is the means by which we ſpring out of this Root, therefore this is the means of Propagation: And therefore though Adam's Nature perſonally was afterwards ſanctified, and ſo are many of his Sons, that beget Children, as Abraham, &c. yet all are ſtill begotten in Adam's ſinful Image, becauſe a Man begets not his like in Perſon, but in the common Nature; and the common Nature of Man, whilſt betruſted as in common for us in him and with him, having been in him corrupted therefore, though in his own Perſon, his Nature was afterward ſanctified again, and in others alſo; yet Men beget their like in Corruption of Nature; as a Grain caſt into the Ground without, Chaff, comes up without Chaff, for that it is the common Nature of it ſo do ſo; and a Man circumciſed, begets a Son with Uncircumciſion, becauſe it is according to the common Nature of all to be born ſo; ſo it is here.

I further add, Thirdly, Suppoſe that a King ſhould raiſe up a Man out of nothing, to a great and noble Condition, which he alſo gave him not for his own Perſon only, but for his Seed for ever; might he not make this Covenant with him, that if he ever turn'd Traytor, he ſhould forfeit all for himſelf, and his Poſterity likewiſe to be made Slaves? And would not this Law juſtly take hold of them, though they were not born then? Yes, God will juſtify his Proceedings by this Courſe in the World generally in all Kingdoms, which ſhews it is the Law of Nature, and there is a Juſtice in it, for the Law makes the Blood of a Noble-man a Traytor, tainted till reſtored; 'tis all the World over, 'twas ſo in other Ages alſo; therefore alſo Eſther a godly Woman, made it a Requeſt that not Haman only, who was advanced by the King, but that his Sons alſo ſhould be hang'd, and they were ſo, Eſth. 9. 12, 13, 14.

Fourthly, It is an equal Rule, that by the ſame Law, by Virtue of which one may come to receive Good freely; he ſhould upon the ſame terms receive the contrary evil deſervedly, upon offending; as Job ſaid, Shall we receive Good from God and not Evil? Job. 2. 10. ſo ſay I; Shouldeſt thou have received the Fruit of Adam's Obedience, in having an holy Image conveyed to thee, if thou hadſt ſtood; and ſhouldſt thou not receive the contrary, if he fell through the Guilt of his Sin? If God had made the Law only to have received Evil upon his offending, who could have found fault? Much leſs when he put him into an Eſtate which would have proved ſo happy for us if he had not offended?

Again, Fifthly, It was equal, for 'twas indeed the beſt way; for elſe all Men ſhould have ſtood on their own Bottom, and after never ſo long ſtanding, have been ſubject to have faln; and ſo by the Pole every Man might have faln off from God; whereas this is put upon one Man's Obedience, who was as good as any of them.

Sixthly, If this Courſe yet ſeem Severity, then conſider the Goodneſs of God making uſe of the ſame Rule for the Salvation of Multitudes of Mankind, in ordaining Chriſt in our Nature, a ſecond Adam in like manner ſuſtaining the Perſons of Multitudes of Mankind, undertaking to be a common Perſon, repreſenting them to effect a common Salvation, as Jude terms it for them, Jude 3. that whereas all of Mankind, if they had their Eſtate to caſt in their own Hands, would certainly Man by Man have periſhed; God according to the ſame Law, whereby Man was thus even by the Law of Nature caſt and condemned, by the very ſame Law and the Equity of it ſav'd us in our Mediator; who was made Sin, that knew no Sin, that we might be made the Righteouſneſs of God in him; without which all Mankind would have periſhed as Sodom and Gomorrah. But in this very way by Grace comes a mighty Remnant of them (take them first and last) to be saved by imputed Righteousness; so as God hath turn'd Justice into Mercy; By Grace we are saved this very way. Chap. 4.

Add to these, Seventhly, That if all the Creatures then upon the Earth, and the Earth it self, was accursed for Man's sake, as it is, Gen. 3. 17.—Cursed is the Ground for thy sake: in Sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the Days of thy Life: and Rom. 8. 20. For the Creature was made subject to Vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope: And if these Creatures were not willingly subject to Vanity; and if not only the Creatures then alive, but ever after to this day were thus accursed for Man's sake: Then much more justly is this Sin, and the Guilt and heavy Punishment of it derived to his Posterity, that came out of his Loins, that have a nearer Relation to him than those Creatures had.

And Lastly, If Heb. 7. 9, 10. Paul says he might truly say, that Levi and all his Posterity paid Tithes in Abraham, for that he was yet in the Loins of his Father, when Melchisedech met him; then may all Adam's Posterity be as truly said to have committed Sin in Adam, for that yet they were in his Loins, when he did eat the forbidden Fruit.

CHAP. IV.

How great every Man's Sinfulness is in having the Guilt of Adam's first Transgression imputed to him. How far we are all guilty of his Sin. What the Aggravations of Adam's first Sin were. Whether they also, as well as the Sin, are charged upon us.

ROM. V. 19, 20.

For as by one Man's Disobedience many were made Sinners: so by the Obedience of one, shall many be made righteous. Moreover, the Law entred, that the Offence might abound. But where Sin abounded, Grace did much more abound.

BEfore I come to what I mean to speak of out of these Verses, I will briefly recapitulate what I delivered out of ver. 12. concerning the Derivation of the Guilt of Adam's first Sin, and that Corruption of Nature following thereupon.

1. I shewed you that the Conduit-Pipe, or means and way of conveying both these, was only this, coming from him by natural Generation; for to this Condition the conveying of Sin is limited, for otherwise Christ who came from Adam, was his Son, had his matter from him, should have Sin propagated to him, as well as we. Yet,

2. Understand this so, as though it be the Conduit-Pipe, and Means and Condition to carry to all from him, yet not sufficient Ground, or full Reason alone why it should; for then, why should not other Parents, from whom we are thus naturally generated, as well as from him, convey their Sin also, which God hath said should not be? Ezek. 18, 20. The Soul that sinneth, it shall die: the Son shall not bear the Iniquity of the Father, neither shall the Father bear the Iniquity of the Son, the Righteousness of the Righteous shall be upon him, and the Wickedness of the Wicked shall be upon him.

BOOK I.

Therefore 3. There is some further ground of this, which holds peculiarly in Adam, not in them, which is a Covenant struck with him, he being the first Man, the common Cistern, or rather Spring of humane Nature: such a like Covenant, (in respect of being a common Head and Fountain of Derivation) as was made with Christ for those that should come of him by a second Birth; the fifteenth Verse telling us, Adam was therein a Type of Christ. By virtue of which Covenant,

4. We were all one in him, (as also Christ's Members are in him) and that two ways, which in other Parents holds not.

(1.) Representative: As the Tribes in the Heads of them; or as one Burgess in Parliament represents all the Borough; so did Adam all Men, as Christ also all his Members; therefore stiled in 1 Cor. 15. 47. the one, the first; the other, the second Man: God looking upon all as severally represented in these two, as if there had been no more Men in the World: As Christ was the Head of his Body, and they one Man in him; so were all as one Man in Adam, the Type of Christ therein.

(2.) We were one in him, tanquam in primâ origine & radice; in the same sense that two whole Nations are said to be in Jacob and Esau whilst in the Womb, Gen. 25. 23. Even as the Root and the Branches make one Tree; so he the Root, we the Branches, one Man; as Christ also is, John 15. 1. Rom. 6. 5.

By virtue of which Union, thus made by Covenant, and that founded in Nature,

5. It comes to pass, that most justly, and by the right of all kind of Law, ordinarily in force with Men, and the Law of Nature, both the Guilt of his Sin, and the Corruption of his Nature should be derived unto us.

(1.) The Guilt of his Disobedience, by virtue of the first ways of our being one with him, is derived. For it is a Law in force with us, and in all Nations, that what a Person representing doth, the Persons represented are likewise said to do. It is also the Law of Nations and Nature, that if the Head doth plot, or the Tongue speak Treason, the whole Man is truly said to do it also. And,

(2.) The Corruption of his Nature is derived by virtue of the latter way of our being one with him, and that even by the general Law of Nature: For every Root brings forth according to its kind; so Adam in his Image; Gen. 5. 3.

Only 6. This Covenant comes to be examined, whether justly struck and imposed or no? And for that I answered:

(1.) That God out of his Soveraignty might make it, and impose it without Injustice, especially Man being innocent; when as God imposed the like in the case of sinful Achan, upon the whole Nation of the Jews; Achan's Sin becoming the Sin of the whole Camp; Josh. 7. 1. But the Children of Israel committed a Trespass in the accursed thing: for Achan the Son of Carmi, the Son of Zabdi, the Son of Zerah, of the Tribe of Judah, took of the accursed thing: and the Anger of the Lord was kindled against the Children of Israel. And this was by virtue of a Covenant made with every one for them all, Josh. 6. 18. And you in any wise keep your selves from the accursed thing, lest ye make your selves accursed when ye take of the accursed thing, and make the Camp of Israel a Curse, and trouble it.

(2.) Yet here is a further Equity: for it is an equal condition, that if we should have received Good from him if he obeyed, we should receive Evil also if he disobeyed, especially when all the Good it self was given by God himself the Maker of this Covenant, and the Obedience he required was due in it self. If a King should raise a Favourite out of nothing, give him all his Honours for himself upon condition of Obedience, yet so, as if he rebelled, not only he, but his House should perish, he dealt not only equally in this, but bountifully both with him and his.

And yet (3.) There was a farther Conveniency in it, and a good Provision made; for better it was that all our Estates should be ventured into a Father's Hands, the most perfect Man that ever was to come, he himself being a Ventuturer also; and so after a while of Obedience, (viz. after he had put our Nature once out of his hands, as is probable) then all to be confirmed in Grace, than for every Man to be left to himself, and after many years Obedience left to a possibility of falling away by the least Error and Swerving. Chap. 4.

7. And lastly, If you think much that your selves did not choose him that should thus stand for you. I answer you, 1. That God made as good a choice as you could have done, took the best and perfectest of Men. And 2. I ask, Who chose Jesus Christ to be a Covenant for his People? Why might not God choose in the one as well as the other? And if you yet think it harsh, that another's Sin should thus be put upon you. I answer you, God offers the Righteousness of another to be imputed to you, which you never performed; and lest all Men should perish, hath ordained Christ to be in like manner a common Person for Multitudes of Mankind, and Adam was his Type herein.

You see how Adam's Sin becomes all ours: We cannot deny the Debt we inherit from him; God hath a Bond, a Covenant to shew for it at the latter Day.

It is fit now we search what the Debt is, how much it comes to, how far we are liable to pay it. Now the abounding greatness this Sum swells to, the Apostle intimates in this 20*th* Verse, and shews us the Arithmetick we must use to cast it up by, the Law; which God taught Man to this end, and brought this new Art into the World, that Man might by the Rules thereof see the greatness and multitude of his Sins: The Law enters, that the Offence might abound. Now in that he says the Offence, (τὸ παράπτωμα, that Offence) though he means generally the sinfulness of Man, yet especially as by the coherence seems evidently to me, he points at that first Sin of Adam, which he had spoken so often of in the 15*th*, 16*th*, 17*th*, 18*th*, 19*th* Verses, under the same name. And having shewed how by that Offence, and by that one only, which seems, and hath seemed to many so small a matter, that God should condemn all the World for eating of an Apple, as one of the Popes blasphemously said. To prevent this, and to shew the end of the Law also, he brings in these Words in this Sense, if we did but know what an abundingly heinous and evil Sin, even the least is, and in particular what an abounding Offence that was, we would not think so. Now that Men might see it, and acknowledg, and be humbled under it, therefore God sent the Law into the World, not to make Sin to abound the more in it self, but to discover the abounding sinfulness of it, and of that particular Offence as well as of others: as a Glass that discovers spots and Deformities, in it self causeth none.

I design to shew what an abounding Sin that one Offence of Adam was, whereof we are all guilty.

In the Enquiry now into old Adam's Debt, three Questions are to be discussed.

1. Whether only that Offence be imputed, and no more, and why? for we would be charged with as few as we can; the guilt of the least Circumstance in a Sin being more than ever we shall be able to pay.

2. How far we are guilty of it, whether of all Aggravations considerable in it?

3. How great the Guilt of it was, as it extends to us? It abounds, the Text says. And this latter is the main thing in the Text; the former makes but way for it.

For the first: We are guilty only of that first Disobedience in eating of the forbidden Fruit, and not of his other Sins afterwards committed, though never so great or many. For still in ver. 15, 16, &c. it is called the Offence, the Disobedience; and in ver. 16. it is expressly said, That Judgment came by one to Condemnation, but the free Gift is of many Offences to Justification: where by one he means not one Man, but one Offence, as the opposition, many Offences, in the next words shew: His Scope being to shew the abounding of the Gift of Grace through and above Adam's Sin: He compares not Persons only, but Things conveyed: But one Offence God lays to our charge, no more; but in Christ, abundance of Righteousness for many Sins: But the guilt of one Sin is conveyed by Adam; but through Christ there is a Justification of us from multitude of Offen-

Offences. And so in ver. 17. also; For if by one Man's Offence, Death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of Grace and of the Gift of Righteousness, shall reign in Life by one, Jesus Christ. And there is this Demonstration to confirm it; for he could convey Sin for no longer time, than he stood a publick Person, and when that Office and Relation was laid down, then he became a private Person again, and then sinned for himself alone. Now when the second Covenant and Promise of the second Adam was published, which was presently after the Fall, then it is evident he was put out of Office, for otherwise his Faith in the Promise must have been imputed also to his Seed; now God says, Hab. 2. 4. The Just shall live by Faith.

And withal, mark the reason why he remained no longer a publick Person, after the first Sin accomplished: For the end of his being appointed thus a publick Person for us, was but to cast our Condition either into an Estate of Sin or Righteousness; for our Estate was laid as it were at the stake in him, and he was to cast the Dice, as I may so say, either for the winning or losing of all; and though indeed to have won all, many righteous Throws were required, it may be, yet one bad Throw lost the Game as well as twenty, cast it which way it should go; and therefore God look'd at no more, the Covenant then ended. And if Men think that unequal, being to cast but one bad Throw, so to lose all; we must consider this too, that he had an Inclination to what was Good, none to Evil, only a Possibility, or, potentia remota. And to give another Similitude; As he was made the Fountain of natural Life for us, 1 Cor. 15. 45, &c. so also of our spiritual: Now for him to have conveyed natural Life to us, it was necessary he should not live one or two days, but perform the continued Actions of Life, even till he should beget a Seed; for had his natural Life been extinguished before by one Death, we had all died in him; one Death would have been enough: So for the conveying our spiritual Life, and preserving and continuing the Life of Grace to us, it was necessary he should go on in all the Actions of Righteousness and Obedience; but one sinful deadly Blow of Sin, was enough to extinguish all, and so cause us to be born dead in Sin, as we all are; so that it is clear, that though he should have stood longer as a publick Person if he had continued Righteous, yet this ceased upon the first Sin.

To the second Question, How far we are guilty of it? I answer, That tho the Guilt of the whole Act be imputed to us, and we accounted Sinners by it, as truly guilty of the whole Act as he, yet not with so much Guiltiness as doth arise to him himself, and his Share who was the Actor. Something there is that doth redound to Adam's Person there in more than to us. For,

1. There is a personal Guiltiness, in that he did the Fact, which is more than barely to have it imputed, and to be accounted to have done it; though we be as truly guilty of the whole Act, yet the manner lessens the Blame: There in ver. 14. speaking of Children, who die only for the imputed Guilt of that Sin, and Corruption of Nature inherent, he speaks as diminutively of their Guilt in Comparison of his; For, says he, Death reigned over those who sinned not after the Similitude of Adam's Transgression, though as truly guilty as he; for they died, yet not like to him, which is a Diminution and a lessening as it were; as if he had said, Though they actually and personally did it not, or any other Sin, sinned not like to him, yet they died. For Example; To clear this by the second Adam, of whom this was a Type, though we have his whole Righteousness, active and passive, as truly accounted ours as it is his; yet it is said to be his with this peculiar Prerogative, that it is personally his, as Light is the Sun's, the Stars but borrow it; so as in all things he retains a Preeminence; Col. 1. 18. And he is the Head of the Body, the Church; who is the beginning, the first born from the Dead, that in all things he might have the Preeminence.

2. There is this Difference, as in the manner which makes it, as hath been said, a deeper Guiltiness in him, so in this peculiar Aggravation, that he may be said to be guilty of the Overthrow of the whole World by it, and this is peculiarly his; for none of us, though we be truly guilty of the Act, yet not of this Circumstance, can be said to be the Overthrowers of the World, as he might.

might. This also may be cleared from the former Instance of the second Adam: for though a Believer hath all Christ's Righteousness communicated to him, and enjoys the Fruits of it, yet this Glory he gives to none, that they should be Saviours of the World, that is his alone. Chap. 4.

That Distinction in Logick, concerning the Genus, communicating its whole Nature to the Species, illustrates both these to Scholars; for it is truly said, that tota natura generis communicatur singulis speciei, but not natura generica; it makes not the Species a Genus as it self.

Now the third thing follows, namely, what a great Sin that first Sin was, as the Guilt of it is extended to us, that so we may be humbled under it.

In all great Sins there are two things to be considered:

First, The Substance,
Secondly, The Circumstance, } of the Act.

First, For the Substance of the Act, it hath inwards and outwards, an inside and an outside: There was an outward Act committed, and inward Acts as the Principles of it.

The outward Act seems small, As it hath usually been said, it was but the eating of an Apple, stealing of a little Fruit. Yet consider,

1. The Smallness of the matter or thing forbidden, often aggravates the Offence. To dare to offend the great God in a small matter, is not a small Disobedience: I may allude in this to the Speech of Naaman's Servant to him, 2 Kings 5. 13. And his Servants came near and spake unto him, and said, My Father, if the Prophet had bid thee to do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? how much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash and be clean? So in this case; If God had forbidden doing some great thing, should he be obeyed? how much more when he forbids so small a thing? Cogita (says Augustine) quanta fuit iniquitas in peccando, cum tanta facilitas non peccandi. He gave them leave to eat of all the Trees in the Garden, forbad them but that one, even by Eve's Confession, Gen. 3. 2, 3. And the Woman said unto the Serpent, We may eat of the Fruit of the Trees of the Garden: But of the Fruit of the Tree, which is in the midst of the Garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. Thus Nathan aggravated David's Sin, 2 Sam. 12. 3, 4. But the poor Man had nothing save one little Ewe-Lamb which he had bought and nourished up: and it grew up together with him, and with his Children, it did eat of his own Meat, and drank of his own Cup, and lay in his Bosom, and was unto him as a Daughter. And there came a Traveller unto the rich Man, and he spared to take of his own Flock, and of his own Herd, to dress for the wayfaring Man that was come unto him, but took the poor Man's Lamb, and dressed it for the Man that was come to him. He had many Lambs of his own Flock, and yet took that one of anothers. Adam had Fruit enough, yet these would not content him, but he must be tasting forbidden Fruit.

2. Sin is to be measured by the Law that is given; for Sin being in the Nature of it, transgressio legis, the more urgent or greater the Law is, the greater the Transgression: Now that some Laws are greater than others, Christ implies, when he saith, Matth. 23. 23. Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees Hypocrites; for ye pay Tithe of Mint, and Anniſe, and Cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the Law, Judgment, Mercy, and Faith: these ought you to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

Now of all Laws, this was the greatest given to Adam.

1*st*. It being given only as a Trial and Testimony of his Obedience in all the rest; called therefore, Symbolicum Praeceptum, as being a Profession of his Subjection to God in all the rest; such as is doing Homage by a Vassal to the Lord of the Soil, which though it consists in some petty small Rite or Acknowledgment, the Neglect of which (though the least of all to perform) or denying to do it, is the Loss of what they hold of him, as being the Breach and highest kind of more than other Acts, and greater neglect in other things.

2*dly*. The more expreſly the Will of the Law-giver is manifeſted in a Law, the greater the Enforcement and Obligation is to that Law. Now God's Will was more expreſly manifeſt in that than any other written in his Heart.

1. His Will was more in it, in that there was no reaſon for it, but the Will of the Law-giver only; ſtetit pro ratione voluntas. Other Laws Adam might ſee a Reaſon for; of this none but God's Will, trying his Obedience.

2. More expreſly; for none elſe were delivered viva voce, but this, as being an eſpecial charge above all the reſt. Other Inſtructions he had only written in his Heart, but this was given by Mouth as an eſpecial Charge.

3. None elſe ſo expreſly threatned with Death but it; yea, that other Law had its Sanction in that Threatning given to this. So God's Will appeared to be more in it, becauſe back'd with ſo ſevere a Threatning, a ſign he was more earneſt in it.

Secondly, Let us look to the inſide of Adam's Sin. Now though the Laws of Men examine not the inwards of an Action, as not in Murder, not how much or little Malice or Cruelty was in the fact, ſo it be proved by Circumſtances it was in any degree wilful Murder: but the Law of God looks moſt hereto. And ſo a Sin which for the outward act is ſmall, may in regard of the inwards of it be a great one. As that act of the Man gathering Sticks on the Sabbath-day, a ſmall thing in appearance, to get a few Sticks to make a Fire; but he doing it in contempt to Moſes, ſo as to put Moſes into a ſtrait, ſince if for ſo ſmall a thing he executed or inflicted any Puniſhment, he would have been thought a cruel Governour by all the People: but on the other ſide, if he ſhould paſs it by, he opened a way to have the Sabbath broken; ſo as it was done in high contempt both of God and Moſes: and this God took notice of eſpecially. And it is in Sins as in Duties; a Man then performs Duties beſt, when God is moſt ſanctified in his heart: If you would know when you pray beſt, it is then when you ſanctify God in your Hearts moſt, with moſt ſanctified Apprehenſions of him, his Greatneſs, Goodneſs, Allſufficiency, working a ſenſe of what it is to offend him: ſo a Man then ſins moſt, when he diſhonours God moſt in his Heart.

Now then for the Inwards of this Action, the ſinful Acts of his Mind in it, they were principally ill Opinions of God, which were the Principles of it, which provoke moſt, and diſhonour moſt. 1*ſt*. Ill Opinions of a Perſon provoke moſt: For we ſee Men then moſt provoked, when they ſee they are meanly or badly thought of: this incites, and inflames, and blows Anger up to its height; and Men are angry at ill Words given them by other Men, but ſo far as they are expreſſions of their evil Opinions of them in their Hearts. 2*dly*. And ill Opinions of a Perſon diſhonour moſt; for all true Honour lies in Opinion: ſo much greater is the Honour, as the Opinion is greater. Honos therefore is ſaid to be in honorante; and ſo on the contrary it is as to Diſhonour. And God is therefore then diſhonoured moſt, when we have diſhonourable Thoughts of him. Now they were low and mean Under-conceits of God, that firſt crept into Adam's Heart, and are neceſſarily to be ſuppoſed to have been the foundation of this Sin in his Heart.

1. He undervalued the Lord in his Heart, ceaſing to think him any longer to be the chiefeſt Good. He would never have done it, had he not thought he could better his Condition without God, and better his Condition by that means, by the virtue of an Apple, whereby he ſhould come better to know what was good and evil, than by keeping God's Command, which is only true Wiſdom; and ſo he thought to be as Gods therein. The Text expreſly affirms this was the main Motive, and is ſet down therefore firſt, which the Woman had, Gen. 3. 6. She thought it to be deſired to make one wiſe, which but that the Scripture affirms, a Man would ſcarcely have imagined, much leſs believed of our firſt Parents: for no wiſe Man now would think an Apple to have, or that it could have any Virtue in it, ſuch as to make a Man wiſe, to better the Temper of his Body: One might imagine it to have a Virtue, but it was extra ſphæram, the capacity of ſuch a Creature to give Wiſdom to the Mind. Beſides, they might eaſily think, that if it had any ſuch Virtue in it, God had put it in, and then that all Wisdom comes from him alone, as James says, chap. 1. 5, 17. If any of you lack Wisdom, let him ask of God, &c. And besides, (which aggravates their Sin) they had already tasted of the Goodness and Excellency of God, having had some Communion with him. Now then, to leave a certain infinite Good now enjoyed, for so uncertain, so unlikely an one; this aggravates his Sin above what is in our own Sins now in our natural Condition; for alas, we never knew, or at least never tasted better; therefore no wonder if we go after the Creatures: but he knew and had tasted. And this aggravates in like manner a regenerate Man's Sin, because he hath had Communion with God; and then to forsake him, and go after the Creature, how sinful is it! Chap. 4.

2. Another ill Opinion they had of God, was, that God was not faithful and true. God had said, Ye shall die the Death: the Devil had said, No; and to hear a Creature affirm this confidently, and to be, and exult, and fall to reason the case; they thought there might be something in it, and this staggered their Faith. Now to conceive thus of God, of all other was the worst, foulest, and most dishonourable Conceit: For is God such an one, that he should lie, (saith Samuel, 1 Sam. 15. 29.) or as a Man, to repent? Nay even Men, who are all themselves but a Lie, and deceitful, yet value their Truth and Faithfulness as their greatest Jewel; and though they acknowledg want of Excellency other ways, yet they will say, they are true, &c. Therefore to call God's Truth into question, was worse than undervaluing his other Excellencies. Yea, Men that are prophane, will wipe off the disgrace of a Lie given them with their dearest Blood. And then add to this, their believing the Devil, contradicting the Lord merely by his own Authority, so as his Word should sway more than God's. This was greater than the Prophet's Sin in believing the old Prophet, (for which yet God slew him by a Lion, 1 Kings 13.) for the old Prophet pretended he had a contrary Revelation himself, having the reputation of a Prophet, as well as himself; he opposed not his bare Word and Authority to God's, as the Devil in this, but pretended a new Commission, bearing date since, from God himself.

3. There were Jealousies engendred in their Hearts, of unworthy designs and ends, that God had in prohibiting them; for so the Devil suggested, God knows that in the day ye eat thereof, your Eyes shall be opened, and you shall be as Gods: As if he should have said, God knowing what virtue there is in the Apple, hath purposely forbidden it, because he would not have you be so happy: Which believed, must needs engender these Thoughts; That God loved them not so well as they imagined, for he prevented their Preferment, and so far hated his Creature, in not only not willing it, but keeping it from that Good it was capable of: Which must needs engender hatred of God in their Hearts again; or that perhaps they should imagine he envied their Happiness, which must argue that they thought that God feared to be equalled or matched by them, if they should know as much as he, and be as God in the knowledg of Good and Evil. All which Thoughts, or any one of them to entertain of God, what more dishonourable? Whilst they seek to be as Gods, they would make God as base as the Devil, for Malice and Envy are his two Sins.

4. He sinned against the Soveraignty of God: For what was the thing that hooked him in? it was, to be as Gods; nothing else could have moved them; and so they thought to be independent of God no longer under him; and though they should sin against him, that they should yet be able to make their Party good with him. These to have been the Thoughts that drew on the Sin, is argued from the Temptation which suggested these things, and did engender them, and in the issue prevailed.

BOOK I.

CHAP. V.

The practical Improvements which we should make of these Truths, delivered. That we should charge our selves with the Guilt of Adam's first Sin, and be humbled in the sense of our Guilt of it, as well as for the Sins which we actually commit our selves. That since our first Father fail'd in the Trust committed to him, we should not put Confidence in any Creature, though most noble and excellent. From Adam's Example, who thus betrayed the Trust placed in him, we should be awaken'd to be more watchful, and more faithful to any Trust reposed in us for our selves, and Posterity. If the State from which Adam fell, was a State of Holiness, then no Man should be ashamed of being converted and regenerated, since it is but a returning to that Primitive Condition again. Since Adam obtain'd Mercy after having so highly and hainously sinned, the greatest Sinners should be encouraged to hope, and to come to God for Mercy.

THE first Use you ought to make of this, is, to take upon you the guilt of the first Act so far as you have heard it belonged unto you, that so you may be humbled before God for your share of Guilt in it. And indeed till the guilt of Adam's Sin be acknowledged as truly as any of your own, and your Hearts rest satisfied in it, you will not be humbled before God, but will have something to plead; for still it will be said, how came I thus? who made me thus? And therefore the Apostle endeavouring to humble Men in this Epistle to the Romans, convinceth them in the first and second Chapters, of evil Works; then in the third Chapter, of the Evil of their Natures; then of the first entrance of Sin by Adam's Sin, in the fifth Chapter; the Ignorance of which made the Gentiles complain of Nature, that is, the God of Nature, for bringing Man into the World prone to Evil, void of Good. And this likewise makes many People think God made no Creatures to destroy them, and on that false Principle hope to be saved: both these being alike ignorant, how that this World of Mankind was once righteous, as it fell out of God's Hands; and that God looking on you now can say, They are not as I made them. As therefore a Potter breaks a Vessel that hath Poison put into it by another, though it be his own Vessel; so God justly destroys his own Creature, when corrupted by the Devil: Let him therefore be justified, and the Creature condemned; which cannot be but by the acknowledgment of this: for if we go from Works to Nature, it will be asked, How came my Nature thus? I answer, by the guilt of this Sin. So David in acknowledging his Sin, Psal. 51. 4, 5. Against thee, thee only have I sinned, and done this Evil in thy sight: that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest. Behold, I was shapen in Iniquity, and in Sin did my Mother conceive me. He hath recourse to this, and professedly to this end, that God might be justified. It is the Speech of a godly Divine, That the first Step to the heavenly Paradise, is to see and acknowledg that which cast us out of the earthly; and that striking one of the last Stroaks, is humbling the Creature.

Now for this let me give you two Directions.

Chap. 5.

1. If you cannot see reason for it, bring Faith with you to believe it; for by Faith we believe the World was made of nothing, which yet we see, Heb. 11. 3. By Faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent Sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained Witness that he was Righteous, God testifying of his Gifts: and by it he being dead, yet speaketh. Why then we are to believe by the same Reason that God made Man righteous, and that he fell, andwe all in him; for Faith is the Evidence of things not seen. And as one said on his Death-bed, in acknowledging his Sin, The oldest Man alive, that we use to bring to know Landmarks, knows not of this: So we may say of Adam's Sin committed so many Ages past. Now to help your Faith, resolve all into the Wisdom, Holiness, and Justice of God, who therefore must needs make Man holy, and justly impute his Fall to all his Posterity: And if his Wisdom cannot clear it at the latter Day, when this very thing shall be scann'd the first of any thing; if God cannot make his Party good against all the World in this, and stop all their Mouths, so as you shall not be able to plead Not guilty; he must shut up his Books, and go no further. Custom indeed will not carry it, unless the Entrance was just; though it doth so with Tyrants, but God is none. And as in the believing Christ's Righteousness to be ours, Believers use to have Recourse to inherent Righteousness, which is the Fruit of it, to help their Faith; so have you to help in this, viz. as to that Unrighteousness of Nature you found in you from the Beginning, think some or other cast Poison in at the beginning, and that you are guilty of some Sin or other, whereof this is the Fruit.

2. Let not the Commonness hinder your sensible acknowledgment of it: Men think, because all are guilty, it concerns them little: Indeed if the Debt were so common as divided amongst you, then it might be slighted, (if the least part of the Guilt of a Sin might be) but the whole resides upon every Man, as if none else were guilty of it but he: Adam communicating his Sin, as genus communicat totam naturam cuilibet speciei, that is, as a general Nature communicates the whole of its Nature to all the kinds which are under it.

Use 2. Did Adam, who, as he was created and fell out of God's Hands, was the most compleatly accomplished Man with all Habiliments of Wisdom and Righteousness that ever was, insomuch as God chose him, and thought him fully fit to be the sole Burgess, Head, and Root of all Mankind; yet did he (I say) thus perfect, so foully miscarry and overthrow himself and us, and that for so small a Trifle, two Toys, an Apple and a Woman? Then hence learn, not to put Confidence any more in Men, or any thing in Man, be it never so excellent. For my part, would I ever have chosen a Man (go through the Bead-Roll of them) since Men were upon the Face of the Earth, (Christ only excepted, that was more than Man) to whom I would betrust my Life, my Goods, my Portion in Eternity, and into whose Hands I would have put all the Good I look for in this World or World to come, it should have been none but Adam; but by woful and lamentable Experience we all find it, that he when he had the Lives and Riches of all Mankind ventured in him, yea and himself, the greatest Venturer of all the rest; a Man judg'd able to have performed what was committed to him, to have steered and brought in safe this great Cargo into the Haven of Life and Happiness; yet he, even he, deceived us all, foully and foolishly split himself upon a Rock he might have avoided, and cast away himself and all. Hereafter trust not in any Creature, much less in Man, but trust only in the Lord, who is Jehovah, and changeth not, for all the good you look for to you and yours. 'Tis a Meditation David hath, Psal. 62. 7, 8, 9. In God is my Salvation, and my Glory: the Rock of my Strength, and my Refuge is in God. Trust in him at all times, ye People, pour out your Heart before him: God is a Refuge for us. Surely Men of low Degree are Vanity, and Men of high Degree are a Lie: to be laid in the Ballance, they are altogether lighter than Vanity. At ver. 9. he concludes, that all Men high and low are vain; Men of low Degree, which for their Multitude and Number might be relied on, are yet Vanity: Men of high Degree, who have the Government of States committed to their Charge and Trust for their Wisdom and Authority, ty, yet they are a Lie, deceitful if leaned on. Remember Adam deceived you all: Lay then all Men in one Ballance, and Vanity in the other; they are overswayed even by Trifles, often moved this way and that way, as our first Parents with an Apple: Therefore, saith David, ver. 7. In God is my Salvation, the Rock of my Strength and my Refuge is in God: Truſt to none but to him, to him only, ver. 6. And truſt in him at all times, ver. 8. Whatſoever your Princes be, your great Men, your Parliaments, all which, as Adam, are betruſted with your Lives and Liberties, and the Goſpel; be they never ſo wiſe, never ſo holy, leave them not to themſelves with theſe, no more than you would let out a brittle Bark to Sea, that had all your Lives and Goods in her, and leave her to her ſelf, to be carried whither every Billow and Wind would toſs her; but go to God to be the Pilot, pour out your Hearts before him; God is a Refuge for us, ver. 8. Deſire him to have an Hand upon the Stern, to guide the Hearts of Princes; ſay not, they are wiſe and Venturers themſelves; remember Adam, ſo was he; yet how miſcarried he, when left to himſelf! O ſee what need there is to pray for publick Perſons, or any to whom publick Good is betruſted. As you are not to truſt them, ſo not to truſt to your ſelves, your own Graces, your Hearts, go not in your own Strength, Jer. 17. 5. Thus ſaith the Lord, Curſed be the Man that truſteth in Man, and maketh Fleſh his Arm, and whoſe Heart departeth from the Lord. Tremble to put your ſelves upon the Occaſions of Evil: Are you ſtronger than Adam, who had no Inclination to Evil, nothing but the contrary, and yet miſcarried, held not out the firſt brunt? Thus Nehemiah argues in the Caſe of marrying ſtrange Wives, when he would diſſwade the Jews from it, as being Occaſions of Evil, Nehem. 13. 26. Did not Solomon King of Iſrael ſin by theſe things? yet among many Nations was there no King like him, who was beloved of his God, and God made him King over all Iſrael: nevertheleſs, even him did outlandiſh Women cauſe to ſin. Did not Solomon King of Iſrael ſin by theſe things? a Man ſo wiſe, and one who was beloved of his God, nevertheleſs, even him did outlandiſh Women cauſe to ſin: Are you more holy than he? I add more, Did not Adam tranſgreſs, whom God made King over all the World, and thought him fit to betruſt all you had with? yea he, even he, tranſgreſſed. See Eliphaz his Collection, Job 15. 15. Behold, he putteth no Truſt in his Saints; yea, the Heavens are not clean in his Sight. God puts no Truſt in his Saints, his Angels whom he created righteous, deceived him; ſo did Man: How much leſs Confidence is there to be put in vain Man, which drinketh Iniquity like Water? Job 15. 16. How much more abominable and filthy is Man, which drinketh Iniquity like Water? Truſt your own Hearts no more than you would do the veriеſt Thief or Adulterer in the World.

BOOK I.

Theſe was preached at St. Andrews in Cambridge, 1626. when a Parliament was called.

Uſe 3. Did Adam, being betruſted with all our Inheritances, thus foully and fearfully by one ſinful Act overthrow the World? Then learn we, whenſoever we are betruſted with any thing which concerns the good of Succeſſion and Poſterity, (as Adam's was) to be more faithful, more wary by this his Example. How doth all the World rue that one Act of his? Had God lengthened his Days through all Generations, what Curſes think we, would he have had thrown at him by his Offspring, made miſerable by him, ſtill as he rode through? There is none here but will ſay; Were I to be in his Caſe, I would never undo my ſelf and them as he did. Why, my Brethren, let me tell you, you that live in this Kingdom have many things, yea as great things committed to your Truſt for the Good of your Poſterity, as he had for his: If you ask me what? I anſwer, Beſides many outward Liberties and Priviledges, the glorious Goſpel; this Book which is all the Evidence you and yours have to ſhew for that glorious Inheritance in Heaven, and the only means to attain it, which is ſo rich a Casket as it contains the Revenues of Chriſt's Blood: This, as to the Jews of old, is committed unto you as yet; Rom. 3. 1, 2. What Advantage then hath the Jew? or what Profit is there of Circumciſion? Much every way; chiefly, becauſe that unto them were committed the Oracles of God: To them were committed the Oracles of God, committed as a matter of Truſt to be tranſmitted to Poſterity; for whilſt Men walk in any meaſure anſwerable unto the Light of it, they are not only converted by it, but they whet it on their own and their Childrens Hearts, as Deut. 11. 18, 19, 21. Therefore shall ye lay up these my Words in your Heart, and in your Soul, and bind them for a Sign upon your Hand, that they may be as Frontlets between your Eyes. And ye shall teach them your Children, speaking of them, when thou sittest in thine House, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. That your Days may be multiplied, and the Days of your Children, in the Land which the Lord sware unto your Fathers to give them, as the Days of Heaven upon the Earth. And as for God's part, see what a Covenant he makes with them, that truly turn in Jacob, Isa. 59. 20. And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from Transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord. As for me, for my part, says he, This I will make good, if Men turn in Jacob. The Gospel, my Brethren, is as good as your Free-hold for you and yours; and God will not take it from you, till you basely sell it, and carry your selves unworthy of it: what else doth that place import, Prov. 23. 23. Buy the Truth, and sell it not? God takes it away from no People, or no Man, till he sell it, as Esau did his Birthright, or as Adam did his primitive Condition for an Apple, till they lay it to pledg for base Lusts: Why else doth he exhort them to buy, and sell it not? see this in that Example of the Jews, Acts 13. 46. Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the Word of God should first have been spoken to you; but seeing ye put it from you, and judg your selves unworthy of everlasting Life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. The Jews having been the Pillar of the Truth of God, that had kept it and preserved it for many Ages, when the Gospel came to be preach'd, and more Grace and Truth discovered, new Mines digg'd up, which never saw Light before; see what Paul and Barnabas say, Acts 13. 46. It was necessary, (mark it) necessary the Word of God should first have been spoken to you: Necessary that it should have been first spoken to them, in regard of Covenant; but say they, seeing ye put it from you, and judg your selves unworthy of everlasting Life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles, and so their Seed are left in Darkness unto this day. God put them out of his Will, and put the Gentiles in, and hath given them all: God doth as a good Chapman doth with his old Customers, they shall have the first Offer of it; but if they refuse, and by their Contempt of it, shew themselves unworthy of it, he goes to some other Market that will give more than they. Consider also that one place, Rom. 11. 20, 22. Well, because of Unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by Faith: Be not high minded, but fear. Behold therefore the Goodness and Severity of God: on them which fell, Severity; but towards thee, Goodness, if thou continue in his Goodness; otherwise thou shalt be cut off: Because of Unbelief, they are broken off. Mark, If thou continue. My Brethren, let me speak freely to you: The Truth hath been purchased for you, and transmitted to you at a dear rate; it cost Christ his Blood at first, and it hath cost your Fore-fathers something: In Queen Mary's Days they bought it with their deareſt Blood; since it hath cost many a Preacher his best Blood, spent, though not spilt for it; it cost many a Prayer; it cost many a converted Soul amongst us all their Sins; it hath cost God himself much Patience, the Riches of his Forbearance (notwithstanding our Unworthiness) spent in great Deliverances; and thus you have it yet for you and yours. Murtherers! will you undo your Children, will you sell it away from you by Unbelief, by remaining still in your Sins? by corrupting the Doctrine of the Church, bringing in this more corrupt Tenet, than that of Popery and Arminianism; sell it away as Spendthrifts do their Lands, now a piece and then a piece; run so far behind hand by unworthy walking in it, till it fall mortgaged, and then you and yours be undone? Do, Cut-Throats, do, and let your Childrens Blood, that shall be starv'd for want of Bread, lie upon your Heads.

Chap. 5.

Use 4. Was the State of Man, as he fell out of God's Hands, an Estate of Holiness and Righteousness? Then to turn from Sin and become a Saint again, is not a thing Men should be ashamed of, or mocked for, for 'twas your primitive and first Condition, that which you were all created in; 'tis but a returning to that which all once were in Adam, and which we ought to be in still; and Men are damned because they are not found to be so. Remember, Holiness is older than Sin: God made Man righteous, but they ſought out many Inventions, Eccleſ. 7. 29. Sins are but new Inventions, and new Faſhions, which though univerſally receiv'd, and ſo have obtained; yet Grace and Holineſs is the ancient Faſhion and Apparel our Forefather was arrayed with, which till he loſt, he never met with Shame: and though he was naked, he never knew what it was to be miſerable. In Coloſſ. 3. 10. the Apoſtle uſeth this Motive, and in a manner this Reſemblance; Put on the new Man, which is created in Knowledg, after the Image of him that created him. He calls it indeed a new Man to be put on, in compariſon of this ſinful Habit, and old Rags of Sin we are now apparell'd with.

Uſe 5. Are all born into the World Sinners, and Enemies to God? You ſee then that the Devil's Kingdom is aforehand provided for the maintaining of it; his Faction is ſure to be encreaſed, his Army to have freſh Supplies in every Age; every one born into the World, is enroll'd into his Band, and at firſt fight under his Colours. But Chriſt hath none but who turn from the World, and ſeparate from it. You then that are for Chriſt, and the advancement of his Kingdom, had need beſtir your ſelves for the encreaſing of his Kingdom, ſeeing all muſt be won off out of the Companies which are in the Devil's Empire. Suppoſe, that whereas there is in this Kingdom a ſtrict Law, that Jeſuits ſhould not come into the Land; there were a Statute, that none elſe but ſuch as are Jeſuited ſhould come over, were not this Church in danger? Now ſo is the caſe here; Every Man that cometh into this World, is for the Devil: how then ſhould we endeavour to continue a Seed to God of his Friends Children? otherwiſe the World will naturally be overgrown with Tares.

Uſe 6. You have heard what a fearful hideous Sin this firſt Sin was, on our Father Adam's and Evah's part, who were the perſonal Actors of it, and by which they overthrew all the World, which (as I then ſaid) was a peculiar Guilt reſiding in their Perſons. And if it was the aggravation of Jeroboam's Sin, and ſtuck by him as a Brand, that he made all Iſrael to ſin, 1 Kings 14. 16. then muſt it much more hold in Adam's Sin, and lie heavy on them, as thoſe that made all the World to ſin. We would all be ready to think now, that for theſe two, of all Men elſe, there ſhould nothing remain, but a certain looking for of Vengeance, and fiery Indignation to devour them; nothing but Damnation could certainly be the end of them, ſo abounding was their Offence.

But yet, my Brethren, behold and wonder, God offered theſe Two Mercy and Pardon; yea, and when there was none to be a Meſſenger, and an Ambaſſador to bring them the News of it, rather than they ſhould want it, God came himſelf to tell them the News of it, and to preach the Goſpel to them; Gen. 3. 8, 9. And they heard the Voice of the Lord God walking in the Garden in the cool of the Day, and Adam and his Wife hid themſelves from the Preſence of the Lord God, amongſt the Trees of the Garden. And the Lord God called unto Adam, and ſaid unto him, Where art thou? He calls them out when they ran away from him; he took the pains to examine them punctually, and all the Partakers in it; was content to put up an Affront given him by Adam to his Face, that the Woman that he gave him, had enſnared him: for ſo far was he from asking Mercy, as he obliquely, and afar off chargeth God with his Fall: Yet when their Conſcience was for all their ſhifting fill'd with Terror for their Sin, ver. 10. and he ſtood trembling by, and could not but look every minute when God ſhould fly upon them in Wrath, yet then God lets drop a word of Promiſe of a ſecond Adam, of whom he was a Type, that ſhould deſtroy the Kingdom of Sin, and curſed Works of the Devil, ver. 15. And I will put Enmity between thee and the Woman, and between thy Seed and her Seed: it ſhall bruiſe thy Head, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his Heel. Yea, and undoubtedly they laid hold upon it by Faith, and were ſaved notwithſtanding this Sin, which hath abounded ſo in Sinfulneſs: Of the Woman it is expreſly ſaid, that God put Enmity between her and the Devil, ſuch as between wicked Men, and Chriſt, and his Saints. And therefore ſhe (who yet was firſt in the Tranſgreſſion, and is put in the greateſt blame, 1 Tim. 2. 14.) was ſaved, and pluck'd out of the Kingdom of

Satan;

Satan; and so likewise Adam: For God preaching the Gospel himself to them both, having first prepared them for Mercy, by examining their Sin; surely this his first Sermon was not in vain, himself being the Preacher. And a Church was to be called from the beginning of the World, and God's Worship set up, and Kingdom erected in Mens Hearts, through the preaching of Man's Fall, and the Promise of a Mediator; which none but these two knew, and of which therefore it must be supposed that Adam, as a Priest and Prophet, instructed his Children in, as appears from Gen. 4. 3, 4. The first news we hear of his two Children, is their Offerings to God, and God's accepting Abel's: so as they were instructed both in the knowledg of the true God, and of the second Covenant, and Christ revealed therein, of whom Sacrifice was a Figure. And in that Cain a wicked Man was brought to it as well as Abel, it argues it was the force of his Education, and his Parents Authority and Instruction brought him to it; yea, and when Abel was dead, the Punishment God inflicted on Cain, argues this, for it was an external Excommunication, and casting him out of the Church, which was a real sign to him of God's casting him from his Favour and Kingdom, which fill'd his Heart with Terror, as it doth excommunicated Persons often: I say, he was excommunicated out of the Church, which could be no other than Adam's Family; for so the 16th Verse of chap. 4. evidently implies; for it is said, Cain went out from the Presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the Land of Nod. And the opposition shews that he went from a Communion wherein God manifested his Presence, to another Place where he did not. And the Face and Presence of God is taken in Scripture for the Society of the Church, where his Ordinances are received, Psal. 42. 1, 2. As the Hart panteth after the Water-brooks, so panteth my Soul after thee, O God. My Soul thirsteth for God, for the living God: when shall I come and appear before God? Now there was no Family in the World but Adam's, of which he was the Head and Guide.

Chap. 5.

Considering then with this the Greatness of their Sin, what Use shall we make of all that hath been spoken, but even to admire at the Greatness and Goodness of God's Grace; which is the next thing this Scripture in Rom. 5. 19, 20. suggests, Where Sin hath abounded, Grace did much more abound. From the beginning of the World to this Hour, there is not the like Instance of the Greatness and Freeness of God's Grace: For if you would go rifle the Heap of humane Offences committed from the first to the last, search God's Debt-book wherein all Mens Sins are registred, you shall find none like to this, the Sin against the Holy Ghost excepted; it being (besides other Aggravations) the Mother-sin of all Sins, as truly as Evah was the Mother of all the Living, as Adam calls her, Gen. 3. 20. And Adam called his Wive's name Eve, because she was the Mother of all living. For, as Lust conceived, brings forth Sin; so this Sin thus conceived, brought forth the Mother of all Lust: causa causæ est causa causati. And yet behold, Mercy and Pardon offered by God to these two for this Sin, and that unsought for by them. Kings use to hang up the general Ringleader in a Rebellion, even when they offer Pardon to all the rest, as an Example of their Justice and Terror to them all. So one would have thought that though God might have after published his extent of saving others of Mankind through Christ, to the rest of Men his Seed, as being but brought in by Adam to the Guilt of this Rebellion; that yet neither he nor Eve should ever have had the least hope of it: but behold, God instead of making them an Example of his Justice that way, hath made them (as he did Paul) a Pattern of the Riches of his Grace, to toll in the rest of the Rebels, be their Sins never so great.

That which discourageth many a poor Soul from laying hold of Mercy, and to put off the Promise of Grace, as not made to them, is the guilt of some great and hideous Sin, which if they themselves had never so and so committed, they would and do think that then they might have had Mercy. 'Twas the case of Cain, the next Man to Adam, who notwithstanding this Instance of his Father before him, yet when he had murdered his Brother, he thought, Gen. 4. 13. his Sin greater than could be forgiven, for so Interpreters acknowledg it it may be read; and thus the Greek and Chaldee Paraphrase translate it. And yet compare but Cain's Sin with theirs; Cain murdered but one Man, his Brother, and but his Body was murdered by him, his Soul he could not kill: but Adam and Evah murdered all Men, who were their own Children, and murdered not their Bodies only, but their Souls; these being born dead in Trespasses and Sins from their Guilt, and the Children of Wrath by reason of that Offence; Ephes. 2. 1, 2, 3. And you hath he quickned who were dead in Trespasses and Sins, wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this World, according to the Prince of the Power of the Air, the Spirit that now worketh in the Children of Disobedience: Among whom also we all had our Conversation in times past, in the Lusts of our Flesh, fulfilling the Desires of the Flesh, and of the Mind; and were by Nature the Children of Wrath, even as others.

And tell me now, What can there be in any of thy Sins, whosoever thou art, that was not in this of our first Parents, who yet found Mercy at God's Hands? If thou sayest, thou hast not offended one of the little ones only, (Commandments I mean) but against the great things of the Law; Adam did so in this, the Law of the forbidden Tree being the greatest Commandment, (as I formerly shewed) that God gave to Man: yea, and his Sin was more also, as some Divines shew, even against all the Commandments. If thou replies again, that thou hast sinned against a great deal of Light, (which Ingredient aggravates Sin the most of any thing,) our first Parents had the Light of the Law recollected wholly and fully, gathered together in them, as all Light was in the Body of the Sun. For Adam was the great and common Taper God set up for us to light our Candles at. And the Mind of Man is thus called, Prov. 20. 27. He had also strength enough to have withstood it, had he used it, which we want often when we have Light enough. And evident it is, that Evah did distinctly consider the Law given to the contrary; for before she ate, she her self repeated the Commandment, with the Penalty annexed, to the Serpent, Gen. 3. 2, 3. She did it therefore wittingly, and not out of Ignorance; as Paul excuseth his great Sins against the great things of the Law, 1 Tim. 1. 13. I was a Persecutor, and a Blasphemer, but I did it ignorantly; so did not she. The weak Light of Nature, not joined with strength to do what it enjoins, makes the Gentiles Sins so much more sinful, Rom. 1. throughout: And therefore so much more Light, so much more Sin; then how doth their Light aggravate this of theirs? for Disobedience against Light is more than Witchcraft.

If thou say, Thou hast fallen into thy Sin, since thou hast tasted of the good Word of God, and hast been affected with it, and the Ways of God, which is a higher aggravation of a Sin than the former, as Peter makes it, 2 Pet. 2. 21, It had been better not to have known the Way of Righteousness, than after they have known it, to turn from the holy Commandment delivered unto them. He speaks of a tasting and affecting Knowledg there. Consider, our first Parents was more; for they had enjoyed certainly sweeter Communion and Fellowship with God then, being created perfect in his Image, and more near and intimate, than thou hast done: and therefore as David takes it hainously, and much more hainously, an Injury done him from a familiar Friend, Psal. 55. 12. Had he been my Enemy, &c. but thou my Friend that had took sweet Counsel together: So might God much more resent it of Adam, who had tasted of his Goodness, knew what Comfort and Happiness was to be had in him, and yet did forsake him. If thou thinkest thou hast turned the Grace of God into Wantonness, he did much more.

If thou sayest, Thou hast sinned against abundance of Kindness and Mercy received from God; and yet that immediately after that some great Favour received, thou hast fallen into some great Sin: So did he, and much more; for God had obliged him to him by all the highest Ties of Friendship. God had made Adam his Darling and especial Favourite, at his first Creation; had raised him out of nothing but a little before, out of the same Dust the rest of the Creatures (which sprang forth of the Earth) were taken out of; breathed into him an immortal Soul, reasonable, which they want; set him next himself, over them all in his Throne; Have dominion, says he, and subdue them, Gen. 1. 28. So as God might say to him as he did to David, 2 Sam. 12. 7, 8. Thus

ſaith the Lord God of Iſrael, I anointed thee King over Iſrael, and I delivered thee out of the Hand of Saul. And I gave thee thy Maſter's Houſe, and thy Maſter's Wives into thy Boſome, and gave thee the Houſe of Iſrael, and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee ſuch and ſuch things. So God might have ſaid to Adam; Did I not anoint thee King, gave thee a large Dominion, and would have done much more alſo? Wherefore haſt thou deſpiſed the Commandment of the Lord, in doing Evil in his Sight? If thou ſayeſt, thou haſt in thy Sin made others ſin, and to fall with thee, and haſt carried others into the ſame Rebellion, which is a great Aggravation, as appears in Jeroboam's Caſe, the great Aggravation of whoſe Sin was, that he made others to ſin, 1 Kings 14. 16. Why, the Sin of Adam was much more, for he made Men to ſin, not only by his Example, but he derived Sin down to them; and he did what in him lay to condemn all the World; and thouſands are gone to Hell for his Sin, which ſinned not ſo much as after the Similitude of his Tranſgreſſion, Rom. 5. 14. Chap. 5.

Wilt thou ſay, Laſtly, thou didſt ſin willingly and wilfully? which is a great Aggravation of Sin alſo; for as the more God's Will is expreſſed againſt a Sin, the greater it is; ſo the more our Wills are expreſs'd in it, and for it, the greater the Sin is too; inſomuch as many make it eſſential to Sin, that it be voluntary, and therefore ſo much the more Sin, by how much more voluntary. Conſider that this Sin of Adam's was moſt free, moſt voluntary, for the Devil and his Wife were but external means, could not have neceſſitated him to it; and the Devil could not have neceſſitated them unto it; and ſo much the more free it muſt needs be, by how much he had no Sin within to incline and ſway his Will to it, no Principle for Satan to work on, as we all now have; ſo that as Paul, being a regenerate Man, complains to the leſſening of his Sin, Rom. 7. 17. It is not I, but Sin that dwelleth in me: Adam on the contrary might truly ſay, It was not Sin dwelling in me moved me to it, but mine own Will only.

And yet thou ſeeſt, that immediately after the commiſſion of this great Sin, God offered him Mercy; and ſo he doth thee, if thou wilt lay hold on it, and turn to God, as indeed he did. Learn this, and remember it; that as you muſt not think you ſhall be received to Mercy the ſooner for the Smallneſs of your Sins, ſo neither be denied it the more for the Greatneſs of them: They are not ſimply your Sins, though aggravated with all theſe Circumſtances, that keep you from Mercy, but your Impenitency, Hardneſs of Heart, going on preſumptuouſly, and ſaying in your Hearts, as they in the beginning of the next Chapter, Rom. 6. 1. We may continue in Sin, for Grace will abound. And let me now turn my Speech and Work upon your Hearts, ſince the mere Guilt of your former Sins ſhall not hinder you from believing, and repenting even after Adam's Example. Let me expoſtulate the matter with your Impenitence and Unbelief, and aggravate it by the Conſideration of his Example: You have gone on many Years in Hardneſs of Heart, and a Courſe of Rebellion, but ſo did not he: he immediately, after he had entred into that rebellious courſe, upon a Proclamation of Pardon, relented and came in, and laid his Weapons down. You have had thouſands of precious Promiſes of Mercy (he had but one) to win your Hearts; Proclamation of Pardon after Proclamation, that he that runs, may read and underſtand them; but ſo had not he. God let fall but one Promiſe, and that an obſcure one too; yet, as Benhadad's Servants, 1 Kings 20. 33. watch'd when any Word ſhould fall from Ahab, that ſhould give them Intimation of the leaſt of his Inclination to pardon, they greedily catch'd at it; even ſo did he. Adam and Evah having but one Promiſe, and hearing it but once, yet believed and repented, though they had no other of Mankind before them that gave them Example or Hope that Sinners ſhould be received. Now great is the force of Examples, which as they illuſtrate Rules, ſo they confirm Precepts; non minùs docent, quam præcepta: Therefore former Examples help to draw in the Heart, as well as Promiſes, as in Paul's Converſion: But now you have not only the Example of your firſt Parents Faith, but Millions of Examples of as great Sinners as your ſelves, hung out by God, as Patterns and Flags of Mercy to toll you in: Neither need you to go to fetch them from former Ages; you have ſome walking in Book I. your Streets, who have been as great Sinners as you, who yet have obtained Mercy.

If you object and say, God himself preached to Adam, but so he doth not to me. I answer you, as Peter doth, 2 Pet. 1. 19. speaking of the Scriptures and Salvation offered in them; though says he at ver. 17. ye heard not God's Voice from Heaven, which we heard, yet we have as sure a Word of Prophesy; you have his Hand for it; and you that will not believe when Moses, the Prophets, and Apostles, and Ministers, call you to Repentance, would not, if Christ should come down and preach to you.

What shall I say more to you? If you will not lay hold on Mercy thus offered, notwithstanding your Sins, and repent as Adam did, you shall be damned, and so was not he; yea, and with a greater Condemnation than he should have been condemned withal, because your Means are greater.

Chap. 1.

AN Unregenerate Man's Guiltiness BEFORE GOD In Respect of SIN and PUNISHMENT.

BOOK II.

An unregenerate Man's Guiltiness before God, in respect of that Corruption of Nature, with which all Mankind is infected, and the whole Nature of every Man is polluted and depraved.

John 3. 6. That which is born of the Flesh, is Flesh.

CHAP. I.

The Words of the Text explained. An Enumeration of the several Errors concerning Original Sin. Pelagius denied that there was any such thing. Pighius, and some of the Schoolmen, though they acknowledg some Guilt to accrue to us from Adam's first Sin, yet deny any Corruption of Nature to be derived from it. The Papists make it wholly to consist in the want of original Righteousness, excluding Concupiscence from being any part, and consequently deny what they call the Motus primi, to be Sins. Others say that this Corruption hath not infected all the Faculties of the Soul. To refute these Errors, several Propositions asserted and proved. 1. That to every Man born into the World, there is more derived than the Guilt of Adam's first Sin. That there is a Corruption inherent in his Nature. That this Corruption is the predominant Principle of all his Actions. That Man's Nature is thus totally corrupted, demonstrated.

MY Scope in chusing this Text, is to proceed in discovering the abounding Sinfulness of Man by Nature, whereof already I have shewn you out of Rom. 5. 12. the Spring and Source at which Sin first entred upon all Mankind, by one Man, and one Offence; by Adam our first Father, whose first Sinfulness we, as his Heirs, appointed by a just and necessary Covenant, do inherit, as we should have done his Righteousness; the Particulars of whose Debts, and the immense Vastness of them, I have begun

BOOK II. to ſearch into, out of the 20*th* Verſe of the ſame Chapter, and ſhewing the abounding Sinfulneſs of that ſinful Act and Offence, whereof I proved we were all guilty, which was the Spring and Flood-gate, at which Sin entred.

The next thing which in Order I am come to, is to ſound that abounding Gulf, bottomleſs Sea, and Lake of that Corruption and Sinfulneſs of Nature within all our Hearts, (the miſerable Veſſels and Ciſterns of it) this firſt Act of Sin, as the original Spring and Source through the Channel and Conduit-Pipe of natural Generation empties it ſelf into, and determines in.

For as I intimated before, and this Scripture will more fully inform us, we are arreſted not only as guilty of that firſt curſed Act which he perſonally performed, and ſo in regard of it are termed Sinners, and expoſed liable to God's Wrath; but alſo as guilty of an univerſal, total, ſinful Defilement, ſpread over all Faculties of Soul and Body, containing in it a Privation or Want of all Good, and an Inclination to all Evil, (which our Saviour Chriſt here, and the Scripture elſewhere calls Fleſh) which is traduced unto us by Birth and fleſhly Generation, [That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh] and which infects all Mankind, even all that is ſaid to be born of Fleſh, all that is in Man; That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh.

And that this is Chriſt's meaning here, appeareth by the Coherence of the Words; for his Scope is to convince Nicodemus of the Neceſſity of Regeneration, whereby a Man is to be made, and all in Man, Spirit or a ſpiritual Man, as the Word Spirit may be interpreted; 1 Cor. 2, 15. But he that is ſpiritual, judgeth all things, yet he himſelf is judged of no Man: and a Man is thus made ſpiritual by the Work of the Holy Ghoſt; That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit: and he convinceth him by this reaſon, becauſe all that is born in Man by the firſt Birth, is nothing but Fleſh, that is, a thing contrary (as the Oppoſition to Spirit ſhews) to that which the Holy Ghoſt works. It is a mere Lump and Maſs of Sin inhering and ſticking in Man's Nature, as you ſhall hear afterwards, when I come to open what this Fleſh is.

Before I do that, let me preſent to your View a Link and Chain of the contrary Errors about Original Sin, with the Doctrines and Deductions I ſhall make hence, which will evidently refute thoſe Errors, as being diametrically oppoſed unto them.

All which Errors have not been ſo much in going too far, or in making too great a matter of it, but diminiſhing and extenuating it rather; thereby to make way for the extenuating withal more or leſs, according as this is extenuated, even of the ſuperabounding Grace of Chriſt; for as long as that ſtands true, that is ſaid, Rom. 5. 20. That the more Man's Sinfulneſs abounds, the more God's Grace ſuperabounds; Grace being but the Remedy or Medicine of Sin; ſo long it will be charged on thoſe that extenuate and leſſen Man's natural Sinfulneſs, that ſo far as they do extenuate it, they extenuate and make void, and take from the Grace of Chriſt: for he that leſſens the Diſeaſe, diſparageth the Virtue of the Medicine.

View but the Errors in their ſeveral Degrees of detracting from it, beginning at the loweſt Step or Stair.

Firſt; Pelagius at one Stroke, daſheth out all the Debt, and ſays that we ſtand bound to God for nothing, by reaſon of it: He denies any Communication of the Guilt of Adam's Fact, or Corruption of Nature thence traduced; and ſays, that all the harm Adam did, was to bring in a bad Example, which we all follow, and in no other ſenſe did Sin enter upon the World. Suitable to which Conceit of Man's Sinfulneſs, is that of Socinus, concerning Chriſt's Righteouſneſs and Grace through him, that all that Chriſt did, was to give a good Example, and to ſhew the way to Heaven.

Secondly; Pighius, and ſome few of the Schoolmen, they further acknowledg Guilt and binding over all to Death, by reaſon of being guilty of the firſt ſinful Act indeed, but Corruption of Nature thence traduced, they acknowledg not. That look as the Papiſts do acknowledg Sanctification, or inherent Righ-

Thirdly; Some other more ſecret Entrenchments upon the boundleſs Limits of God's Grace, acknowledg indeed a true and real Imputation of the Guilt of Adam's Sin, yea, and alſo a want of original Righteouſneſs, a Corruption alſo and Diſeaſe of Nature inherently derived, which is here called Fleſh; yet they circumciſe the Sinfulneſs of it, as you ſhall hear afterwards.

Fourthly; The Papiſts, though they further acknowledg in this Point more than thoſe others, viz. that that Corruption which is thus in us, is a Sin; yet half the Debt they ſtrike out of the Account, for making it only to conſiſt in the want of original Righteouſneſs; they cut off the groſſeſt and greateſt part of it, denying Concupiſcence to be a part of it.

Fifthly; Both they and others do exclude ſome of the Faculties of the Soul from being infected with it, making fewer Debtors in Man obliged to Death by reaſon of it, than indeed there are: So to maintain their Detraction from the ſanctifying Grace of Chriſt in Converſion in this, as in the former they did from the juſtifying Grace of Chriſt.

Againſt all which, in my following Diſcourſe, I ſhall (God aſſiſting) oppoſe and make good theſe ſeveral Propoſitions, diametrically oppoſite.

Againſt the firſt, that which hath been delivered out of Rom. 5. 12. may ſuffice.

Againſt the other, out of this Text, and other Scriptures compared with it, take theſe enſuing Concluſions.

I. That there is ſomething inherently derived to us by Birth, called here Fleſh, which is more than ſimply the Guilt of Adam's ſinful Act committed by him.

II. Which I will prove to be a Corruption of our Nature, which put together with the former, contradicteth Pighius his Error.

III. That it is properly a Sin, which contradicts the third Error.

And in ſhewing the great Sinfulneſs of it, that it is,

IV. More than a want of Righteouſneſs, and alſo a poſitive Inclination to all Evil, which is againſt the fourth Error.

V. That alſo it is ſeated in each particular Faculty of Soul and Body; That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh: There is not one thing in Man but is infected with it, which is oppoſite to the laſt Error.

Firſt, The firſt is that by Birth; there is more derived than the Guilt of Adam's Sin, ſomething elſe that ſticks in our Natures: for it is here ſaid, That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh: And for the meaning of the Words, when he ſays, of Fleſh, he means, of Man after a fleſhly manner; but by the latter, is Fleſh, he means not Fleſh and Blood, the Subſtance of Man, but inherent Corruption. For as in the next words, That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit. Spirit, which is the thing begotten, and differs from the Spirit which is the Begetter, and notes out the new Creature of Holineſs wrought in the Soul, and inherent there; and therefore is called the Seed of God remaining in him, 1 John 3. 9. So likewiſe Fleſh notes out inherent Corruption, which is derived by Generation: which alſo is evident from Gal. 5. 17. For the Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the Fleſh; and theſe are contrary the one to the other. Fleſh and Spirit there are put as two inherent Qualities, conveyed by theſe two ſeveral Births, and ſo are there oppoſed: I ſay, inherent Qualities, ſticking in Man's Nature; for the Fleſh is ſaid to have Works or Fruits, in Gal. 5. 19. Now the Works of the Fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, Adultery, Fornication, &c. Whence it appears, that this Fleſh is a rooted thing in Man's Nature,

BOOK II. whence Operations flow, as Buds from a Root, which though they be tranſient, yet the Root ſticks in the Earth; and ſo it is as to this Fleſh in Man's Heart.

Secondly, The Scope of Chriſt ſhews it; for it is to ſhew what need, yea neceſſity, there is of Regeneration, which is nothing elſe but a working of new ſpiritual Diſpoſitions in the whole Man, called here Spirit, without which no Man ſhall enter into Heaven; for ſays Chriſt, That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh; whereby therefore he muſt needs mean the clean contrary to the Spirit of Holineſs, which is to be wrought in the Soul. Now then, if only a Guilt from Adam was derived, and no Corruption inherent in the Soul, we ſhould need only Juſtification, which is properly a doing away of the guilt of Sin: but Chriſt ſays there is a Work of Regeneration alſo required, which is a renewing the Nature of Man, making it of Fleſh, Spirit: Regeneration being a Work upon the Soul, therefore Fleſh notes out a Corruption ſticking in the Soul.

Thirdly, The manner of the Predication here uſed, ſhews it: for Fleſh is predicated of Man (as he is firſt born) in the abſtract, which if it noted out only the act of Adam's Sin, could not be.

So that the firſt Doctrine I propound in theſe Terms, which I will ſeverally explain, is this;

That in every Man's Nature, that is born into the World, there is a Maſs of Corruption that inheres or ſticks in him, which is the Principle of all his Actions, whence they proceed; yea, which is in ſome ſenſe the Nature of Man, as being the predominant Quality, which is in all, and guides all.

And this is directly contrary to the Error of thoſe, that ſay Adam's Sin is only conveyed. This I will particularly explain.

1*ſt*. I ſay it is Corruption, for ſo this which is called here Fleſh, is called in Epheſ. 4. 22. the old Man, which is corrupt, &c. Now then, Corruption muſt needs be of ſomething, which was good before, and even ſo it is: God made Man righteous, now he is depraved and defiled, his Nature is corrupted, and inſtead of being a living Body, he is now become as a dead Body, that hath in it nothing but Corruption and Putrefaction. I firſt call it Corruption, becauſe it is a diſtinct thing to prove it to be a Sin, which I will ſhew afterwards, againſt ſuch as deny Concupiſcence to be a Sin.

2*dly*. It is a Corruption, which I ſay ſticks or cleaves to a Man's Nature, for ſo it is ſaid to do expreſly, to dwell in a Man, Rom. 7. 17, 18. Now then, it is no more I that do it, but Sin that dwelleth in me. For I know, that in me (that is, in my Fleſh) dwelleth no good thing; for to will is preſent with me, but how to perform that which is good, I find not. So a Man hath not only Acts of Sin which are tranſient, which but come from him and ſo away, but he hath a Root and Spring of Sin dwelling and reſiding in him, and not only adjacent to him, but inhabitant in him: It is not παρεμπεμενον, παρεμπιπτει, but ἡ ἐνοικουσα ἁμαρτια, peccatum habitans: and not only ſo, but encompaſſing about, and ſo to be reſiſted on all hands: Heb. 12. 1. Wherefore ſeeing we alſo are compaſſed about with ſo great a Cloud of Witneſſes, let us lay aſide every weight, and the Sin which doth ſo eaſily beſet us. It is εὐπερίστατον ἁμαρτίαν, peccatum facile circumſtans. Now all this implies more than Acts.

3*dly*. It is a Corruption which is the Principle, predominant of all his Actions, whence all his Works proceed; as appears from Gal. 5. 19. Now the Works of the Fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, Adultery, Fornication, &c. The Fleſh is ſaid to have Works and Fruits, as being a Root in Man's Nature, and ſo it is called, Deut. 29. 18. —Leſt there ſhould be among you a Root that beareth Gall and Wormwood. Heb. 12. 15. —Leſt any Root of Bitterneſs ſpringing up, trouble you, and thereby many be defiled. A Root it is which brings forth Gall and Wormwood, that is, bitter Fruits of Sin; and which is therefore ſaid to be an energetical thing, which works in our Members, and brings forth Fruit to Death, Rom. 7. 5. For when we were in the Fleſh, the motions of Sins which were by the Law, did work in our Members, to bring forth Fruit unto Death. Bitter Fruits, Jer. 2. 19. Thine own Wickedneſs ſhall correct thee, and thy Back-ſlidings ſhall reprove thee: know therefore and ſee, that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God, &c. Grapes of Gall, and Cluſters that are bitter, Deut. 32. 32. For their Vine is of the Vine of Sodom, and of the Fields of Gomorrah: their Grapes are Grapes of Gall, their Cluſters are bitter.

4*thly.* I ſay, there is a Bundle or Maſs of this Corruption, and therefore it is called a Body that hath multitude of Members. Coloſſ. 2. 11. In whom alſo ye are circumciſed with the Circumciſion made without Hands, in putting off the Body of the Sins of the Fleſh, by the Circumciſion of Chriſt. It is a Body of the Sins of the Fleſh, of abounding Dimenſions, a Body that hath Inwards and Outwards, groſs and more ſenſible Diſpoſitions to fleſhly Luſts, that war in the Members, and alſo ſecret Entrails of Atheiſm, contempt of God, diſtruſt and hatred of God, not diſcernable to a Man, till God's Spirit doth cut this Anatomy up. And ſo alſo Solomon ſays of it, That there is a bundle of Folly in the Heart of a Child, till the Rod fetch it out, Prov. 22. 15. There is a pack or bundle wrapped up in his Heart, a pack of rotten and corrupt Wares which ſticketh there; for the Rod, through God's Spirit's working, is ſaid to fetch it out; and this in the Heart of a Child, even before the Pack be opened, and all the Wares be brought to Light by actual Sins; for they are ſaid to be bound up there till then: and therefore Auguſtin ſays, Imbecillitas membrorum Infantium innocens eſt, non animus Infantium; yea, and this in the very conception, therefore David ſays, Pſal. 51. 5. Behold, I was ſhapen in Iniquity; and in Sin did my Mother conceive me; he means more than barely a Guilt of Adam's Sin, for he ſays, he was conceived in Sin, which notes out more than Adam's one Sin, ſpoken of in Rom. 5. 18. And that he means Sin ſticking to his inward Parts, appears by the next words, Thou requireſt Truth in the inward Parts; as if he had ſaid, I have not only committed this ſinful Act of Adultery, but there is even in my inward Parts Sin ſticking from my very Conception; whereas thou requireſt, O Lord, ſays he, in the inward Parts, Truth: and David's Scope is to confeſs the Spring from whence that his great Act of Sin ſprung, even from the Sin wherein he was conceived.

See Auguſt. Op.

5*thly.* This Corruption is, as it were, the very Nature of Man, and therefore is predicated in the Abſtract, and implies more than an ordinary Quality, even ſuch an one as doth explain what the very Nature and Definition of Man is; for it is not ſaid to be fleſhly, but Fleſh, as if it was a thing that doth ingredi eſſentiam & definitionem: as if Divinity had found out another and a further Definition of Man that Philoſophy falls ſhort of. Philoſophers define Man to be animal rationale; Chriſt defines him to be Fleſh, that is, Sin and Corruption, contrary to Grace, this being his very Nature; as Divinity conſiders him now as fallen: And in that it is made the Definition of Man's Nature, as it were in the Abſtract, it argues it is a thing inherent in us. But to enlarge a little on this Notion.

1. Definitions are taken from things which are inſita Naturâ, bred in Nature; none but eſſential Properties are Ingredients in Definitions.

And 2. Definitions are taken from the moſt predominant Qualities, where the Eſſence is unknown: So Fleſh or ſinful Corruption being a more predominant Principle in Man's Nature than Reaſon it ſelf, for it doth not only guide all, and even Reaſon it ſelf, (as Reaſon doth all in a Man by way of Influence) but which is more, it reſides in all of a Man, which Reaſon doth not: It is as it were another Form in Man's Nature, tota in toto; therefore ſays he, That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh. It cleaves to all the Faculties, as the Seat and Subject of it; whereas Reaſon hath a Seat by it ſelf in the Soul, diſtinct from other Faculties, though it rules them.

Yea, and 3. which is more, This Corruption it is ſo eſſential and predominant, and ſo univerſally diffuſed and ſeated in the whole Man, that there is a mutual Predication, as it were, between Man and it, and both in the Abſtract. And as here you ſee Man's Nature, and all that is in it, is called Fleſh; ſo Epheſ. 4. 22. this Corruption is called the Man, Put off the old Man, that is, not the Subſtance of Man's Nature, becauſe then Chriſt had not aſſumed the ſame Nature with us; and beſides, can a Man run away from himſelf, or put off himſelf as he doth his Clothes? No: therefore by the old Man is meant the Corruption that we have from Adam, called therefore old, and the old Man, becauſe it is ſeated in, and guides, and is the Nature of the whole Man, for ſo it follows, which is corrupt, &c. It is alſo a Corruption you ſee this old Man is, which is born by the firſt Birth, and therefore alſo a thing ſticking in a Man, elſe why is it ſaid to be put off, as being res adjacens, and hanging about him? Therefore alſo, 1 Cor. 3. 3. to be carnal, and to be a Man, is made the ſame thing, Are ye not carnal and fleſhly, and walk as Men? that is, according to your Kind and Nature, and thoſe carnal Properties that ſtick in you; not that this Corruption is the Subſtance of Man, for then Chriſt being without Sin, ſhould be ἄνθρωπος; ſo that this firſt Deduction is every way clear out of the Text.

Now that Man's Nature is become thus corrupt, and turned Fleſh, and a bundle of Folly and Corruption, and that it is their Nature.

I will give you firſt, ſome Demonſtrations of it; ſecondly, Reaſons.

I. The firſt Demonſtration is taken,

1. From Experience taken from all Mankind.

Firſt; All Men ſin from their Youth, the firſt Act that diſcovers Reaſon in a Child, hath Sin alſo mingled with it. Take any Child and obſerve him, and watch him when the firſt Springings forth and Dawnings of Reaſon begin to appear, and they are corrupt: they expreſs Reaſon only in Sinning, as in Readineſs to pleaſe themſelves by doing harm to others, or excuſing themſelves by Lying, and in Pride of Apparel; and alſo their natural Inclination to Revenge is ſeen, becauſe they are often quieted, by ſeeing the thing beaten that hath offended them; hence the Poet of the Child, Iram colligit, & ponit temerè.

And this the Scripture, upon God's general Obſervation, tells, Gen. 8. 21. That they are evil from their Youth; from the firſt Thought to the laſt: which argues it is Nature in them; if the Tree be known by the Fruit, much more by the firſt Fruits.

Secondly; All Men ſin continually; not only their firſt Actions are ſuch, but all are continually ſuch, which ſhews it is Nature, for quod convenit, ſemper eſt naturale; and this God upon the like Experience ſays, Gen. 6. 5. That their Thoughts were evil continually.

Thirdly; It is thus, not with a few, but with all Men, not one excepted, which argues it to be a Nature alſo, for quod convenit omni, eſt naturale; and ſo Gen. 6. 12. it is ſaid, that all Fleſh hath corrupted their ways.

Fourthly; They do all this of their own Accord, as the Devil is ſaid to ſin of his own; they ſlide into theſe Actions ſine impulſore, without Example or Precept: therefore Solomon, the wiſe Searcher into the Cauſe of things, found the Original of all Iniquity to be this, that they of their own accord, ſought out many Inventions, Eccleſ. 7. 29. So likewiſe in the Proverbs, A Child left to himſelf, puts his Mother to ſhame, Prov. 29. 15. You need not teach him to ſin, but only leave him to himſelf, and he will ſoon ſhame his Mother. Now things that are not natural, muſt have Teachers, and practiſe before we can learn them; as take a Man that did never ſwim in his Life, and he muſt be taught to ſwim before he can do it, though there is in Man ſome remote Power to it by Nature, yet Uſe muſt be added; but take a Beaſt, or take a little Whelp, and throw him into the Water, and he will ſwim preſently, becauſe Nature hath taught him: even ſo 'tis in the Soul to any thing which is more than Nature, it muſt have a Teacher.

Fifthly; And not only thus left to themſelves, do they run into Evil, but the pondus & impetus Naturæ, can hardly be reſtrained by the beſt means that Art or Education can afford: That which cannot be reſtrained, is natural; Naturam expellas furca, licet uſque recurrit; if it be bred in the Bone, it will never be got out of the Fleſh: Since you ſee alſo that Sin is natural, for it cannot be expelled, all good means of Education, Admonition, &c. will not keep your Children from Sinning: Though you ſhould bray a Fool in a Morter, yet he would would be a Fool ſtill. Indeed Solomon ſaith, The Rod of Correction will drive it out; but it is not in the means themſelves, but in the Bleſſing of God upon them, and ſanctifying them to that end; all which ſhews that it is natural, even as the natural Spring which is the Fountain of all theſe corrupt Actions. Chap. 1.

2. This is confirmed alſo by Teſtimonies, that Man by Nature is corrupt.

1*ſt*. By the Teſtimonies of the Gentiles themſelves, who knew this out of Obſervation and Experience, and yet they wanted the Light of the Law and Goſpel, to tell them, that whatſoever is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh.

So Eſop compared Nature to a Garden, that is mater vitiis, virtutibus noverca: and Plato, lib. 2. de Rep. Homines naturâ malos eſſe & adduci, non poſſe, ut juſtitiam colant. See Plat. Op.

2*dly*. All the World do ſuppoſe ſo much, for there are ſeveral Offices in the World, that imply ſo much by general Appointment: for to what end are Magiſtrates appointed in all Kingdoms and in all Ages, if there had not been this Corruption of Nature to be bridled and reſtrained?

Again, upon this Suppoſition, that Nature is corrupt, all Nations made their Laws, which were not only to reſtrain the Corruptions then in act and raging, but to be left as Legacies to Poſterity, as Remedies and Medicines; which they would not have done, had they not conceived the Nature that they propagated unto them, to be hereditarily corrupted; Medicina ſupponit morbum, Phyſick was not found out before Diſeaſes; Multitudo Legum & Medicorum ægrotam arguit Rempublicam, & immenſa illa volumina legum, quid niſi publica corruptionis tabulæ?

If you ſhould come into a Town, and ſee many Phyſicians there, you would preſently conclude that it were a diſeaſed place, or elſe what ſhould ſo many Phyſicians do there? So if you ſee ſo many Laws and Offices to ſuppreſs Sin and Corruption, this argues, ægrotam eſſe Rempublicam, that the Government is ſickly. And in that they were made and appointed for after-times, it muſt needs ſhew, that they did preſuppoſe it ſhould be ſo to the end of the World.

Again, the calling of the Miniſtry doth argue, that Men are corrupt, and that they will be ſo to the end of the World, in that Chriſt hath ordained Miniſters to the end of the World. Now the calling of the Miniſtry is for no other end, but to watch over Mens Souls, to exhort them, &c. and by all means to keep them from Sin, and to beget Men to God by the immortal Seed of the Word, which argues that Men are corrupt, for in Heaven there ſhall need no Preaching.

3*dly*. The Law of God given to us by God, ſheweth us no leſs, for the Law is not given to a righteous Man, 1 Tim. 1. 9. for Man being righteous at firſt, was a Law to himſelf, he had no Law written, but only the Law written in his Heart, and therefore the Laws given to us are Tabulæ noſtræ corruptionis, Tables and Inſigns of our Corruption; and in that alſo the Law is given negatively, as that, Thou ſhalt have none other Gods but me; Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf any graven Image; Thou ſhalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain, &c. This ſhews that Man's Nature falls croſs with the Law, and is oppoſite to it, for every Negative is founded upon an Affirmative; therefore becauſe Man's Nature is turned croſs to God's Law, therefore the Law is turned croſs to it; and the Lord ſaith, Thou ſhalt not do this or that, which argues that Man's Nature is wholly corrupt, and ſo apt to do contrary to that which the Law commands.

4*thly*. The Goſpel alſo tells us as much. For, 1. Chriſt was made like to us in all Infirmities but Sin, Heb. 4. 15. For we have not an high Prieſt, which cannot be touched with the Feeling of our Infirmities: but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without Sin, (ſpeaking of his humane Nature.) 2. The Goſpel offers Chriſt to you, not only to juſtify, but alſo to ſanctify you; and therefore it is ſaid, 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us Wiſdom, and Righteouſneſs, and Sanctification, and Redemption. From whence is plainly inferred, that all Men by Nature are corrupt; for if the Goſpel reveal Chriſt, not only to convey a bleſſed Righteouſneſs, whereby we may appear holy and righteous before the Lord, but alſo an inherent Righteouſneſs to ſanctify our Nature, then the firſt Adam brought upon us, not only the Guilt of his Sin, but alſo the Corruption of our Nature, and there is this Reaſon for it, becauſe as it is, Rom. 5. 13. the firſt Adam was a Type of him that was to come; ſo that if the ſecond Adam brought Righteouſneſs imputed and inherent, then the firſt Adam brought not only Guilt, but the Corruption of Nature alſo.

Again, in that Chriſt is made unto us Sanctification, it argues thus much; for if there were no Corruption, what needed Sanctification? and what need Infants, that cannot commit actual Sin, to be ſaid to be ſanctified from the Womb, as ſome are? what need it, I ſay, if there had been no Defilement?

Again, the Remedy muſt be proportioned to the Diſeaſe; and if only Adam's Sin were conveyed to us, then our Juſtification only were ſufficient: but there muſt be Sanctification alſo, and therefore there is a Defilement of Nature alſo; and therefore the Sacraments of Circumciſion and Baptiſm were ordained even for Infants; and Baptiſm is called, a waſhing away of the Filth of the Fleſh, in reſpect of this natural Corruption, 1 Pet. 3. 21. All which argues that all Men by Nature are wholly corrupt.

Therefore we are hence to take notice, that we are all, as we came into the World, corrupt, and our Nature is defiled. What is Grace then? it is not only an Imputation of the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, but as you look to be ſaved by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, ſo you muſt look alſo to get inherent Righteouſneſs from Chriſt, for every Remedy muſt be proportioned to the Diſeaſe; and therefore if you look to be juſtified by Chriſt, you muſt be ſanctified alſo; and thou that lookeſt to be ſaved by thy good Works, I tell thee thou muſt have Grace within, a Root within, which the ſtony Ground wanted; thou muſt have Oil in thy Veſſels with thy Lamps, which the fooliſh Virgins had not. Therefore conſider whether thou haſt a new frame of Heart within, and art made a new Creature.

CHAP. II.

What are the Reaſons or Cauſes of the Corruption of Man's Nature. That Adam's Nature was preſently deprav'd by the commiſſion of his firſt Sin. That if Adam's firſt Act of Sin had an Influence to corrupt his Nature, it hath the ſame Influence to deprave Ours, we being guilty of the firſt Sin, as well as Adam himſelf was. How Man's Soul, which proceeds not from the Parents, but is created by God, comes to be corrupted by Sin.

NOW to ſhew you the Grounds why our Natures are thus corrupted, and not only the Guilt of Adam's Offence conveyed.

Firſt; If Adam's Nature was ſtained and corrupted with an inherent Corruption by the Act, then muſt ours alſo, if we be guilty of it as well as he, by an equal and neceſſary Covenant. The truth of this Conſequence I will prove anon. But Adam by the Commiſſion and Guilt of that firſt actual Sin, had, and that neceſſarily, his Nature thus ſtained and corrupted; which Propoſition I will firſt prove, the Truth of the other being built upon it.

1. De facto, That his Nature was thus thereby corrupted, and the Image of God extinguiſhed, it appears by what is ſpoken of him, as the Effect and immediate Conſequent following on it; and this by a ſenſible Alteration which Adam found in himſelf, for he found himſelf naked, and that not only in Body, to cover which he ſewed two Fig-tree Leaves, as Gen. 3. 7. And the Eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and they ſewed Fig-leaves together, and made themſelves Aprons. But he found himſelf naked in Soul alſo, Verſ. 10. And he ſaid, I heard thy Voice in the Garden; and I was afraid, becauſe I was naked, and I hid my ſelf. For it was ſuch a Nakedneſs as made him afraid of God's Wrath, expoſed him to it, which his bodily Nakedneſs did not; I heard thy Voice in the Garden; and I was afraid, becauſe I was naked. Now Nakedneſs is the want of ſome Garment which a Man ſhould be clothed with: Now if you would know what Garment it was he wanted, ſee Coloſſ. 3. 10. Put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledg, after the Image of him that created him. He ſpeaks here expreſly of the Image of God, wherein Man was firſt created; and likens it to a Garment, as the Phraſe putting on implieth. Now in Gen. 1. 26. it is ſaid indeed of Adam, That he was created in God's Image, clothed with it as with a Garment: and now you ſee he is ſtript of it, he is become naked, naked in Soul, and therefore afraid of God; and ſo Nakedneſs is uſed for the want of God's Image we were at firſt created in; 2 Cor. 5. 2, 3. For in this we groan, earneſtly deſiring to be clothed upon with our Houſe which is from Heaven: If ſo be that being clothed, we ſhall not be found naked. We ſhall be clothed with Glory, if we be found clothed, viz. with Grace, and not naked. Nakedneſs is taken for the want of the Image of God. Neither was Adam only naked, as ſtript of this Robe of God's Image; but, Gen. 5. 3. you ſhall find him clothed with an Image; which in oppoſition to God's (wherein at firſt he was created) is called his own twice; and in the ſame words, as in the other place, Gen. 1. 26. ſays God twice, Let us create Man according to our own Image, our Likeneſs; there in Gen. 5. 3. it is ſaid of Adam, as in oppoſition, that he begat Seth in his Image, his Likeneſs. Which Image of his therefore, is differenced from Chriſt's Image, 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48, 49. The firſt Man is of the Earth, earthy; the ſecond Man is the Lord from Heaven. As is the Earthy, ſuch are they that are Earthy; and as is the Heavenly, ſuch are they alſo that are Heavenly. And as we have born the Image of the Earthy, we ſhall alſo bear the Image of the Heavenly. Adam's Image is here diſtinguiſhed from the Image of Chriſt as a differing thing, as much differing as Earth and Heaven: Whereas otherwiſe, the Image which God created Adam in at firſt, is the ſame which we have from Chriſt, as appears by Coloſſ. 3. 10. for the New Man is called the Image which God created Man in at firſt. This you ſee, de facto, was the immediate Conſequent of the firſt Sin in him.

2. In Reaſon it could not be otherwiſe, but that that firſt Offence ſhould corrupt his Nature thus, and deprive him of God's Image; for an Act of Sin, or Tranſgreſſion of the Law, though it be a tranſient thing, yet by whomſoever it be committed, it hath a permanent Effect and Conſequent, and leaves behind it a depravation of God's Image, and an inherent Defilement and Corruption; and though it comes out from the Soul, yet it caſts Defilement into it. Mat. 15. 18, 19, 20. But thoſe things which proceed out of the Mouth, come forth from the Heart, and they defile the Man. For out of the Heart proceed evil Thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, Fornications, Thefts, Falſe-witneſs, Blaſphemies. Theſe are the things which defile a Man; but to eat with unwaſhen Hands, defileth not a Man. Thoſe evil Thoughts which come from the Heart, do defile the Man, Chriſt ſays, do leave a ſtain, a corruption, a defilement behind them. And this I take to be the evident meaning of that place, Rom. 6. 19, 20. As ye have yielded your Members Servants to Uncleanneſs, and to Iniquity, unto Iniquity; even ſo now yield your Members Servants to Righteouſneſs, unto Holineſs. The Apoſtle here brings a moſt effectual Motive why Men ſhould not ſerve Sin; for, ſays he, the more you ſerve it, the more you are brought into Bondage by it; for every Act of Service you do to it, makes your Natures more prone to it, fills them with all Iniquity, (for that is the meaning, neither can there be any other of ſerving Iniquity unto Iniquity) a new and further Stain, and Impreſſion, and Defilement being left upon the Soul by every Act, as the Fruit, Conſequent, and Effect that every ſinful Act ends in; whereas in ſerving Righteouſneſs, as the contrary, you do not only thereby do that whereof the End is eternal Life, but increaſe Holineſs ſtill in your Hearts, every Act making the Heart more Holy, and ſo every Sin the Heart more ſinful: Therefore, Verſ. 22. he ſays, the Fruit is Holineſs, beſides, the End everlaſting Life. So that Adam committing that Act of Iniquity, he did not barely commit that ſingle Act, and there to be an end, but Iniquity was the Fruit of it, Iniquity defiling, corrupting his Heart, and bringing the whole Man in Bondage into Sin, by ſtaining his Nature with a proneneſs to all Iniquity. ſo 2 Pet. 2. 19. While they promiſe themſelves Liberty, they themſelves are the Servants of Corruption; for of whom a Man is overcome, of the ſame is he brought in Bondage. This is a Rule which all Victors obſerve, that if they overcome, they bring in Bondage, clap Irons and Bolts upon a Man; ſo, ſays he there, doth Sin and Corruption; when a Man's Heart hath been overcome and foiled by one Act of it, it brings all into Bondage, caſts out that which ruled before, and chains the Heart to ſinful Practices for ever after, by evil Diſpoſitions which it engenders in it: So that Adam's Heart being overcome by that Act, his Nature was corrupted thereby, and chained to all manner of Luſts and Pleaſures.

But you will ſay, Though indeed cuſtom in Sinning may thus change Adam's Heart, expel Grace out, and defile it, as the Prophet ſays, Jer. 13. 23. that being accuſtomed to do Evil, makes the Heart defiled as the Blackmoor's Skin, ſpotted as the Leopard's: But will one Act do it?

I anſwer; Yes, One Act of Sin expels all Grace, and leaves a Proneneſs or Bondage to all Sin in the Heart.

1. Becauſe the Puniſhment of the leaſt Sin is, that a Man ſhall loſe all Grace, and that his Nature ſhall be brought into Bondage by it, as Gen. 2. 17. That day thou eateſt, thou ſhalt die the Death, all manner of Deaths; not Death Temporal only, that was not then fulfilled, nor of Eternal in Hell, for that follows upon the Temporal, but Death Spiritual, whereby the Soul is deprived of Spiritual Life, and become dead in Sin. As a Man that commits a Murder, or an Act of High-Treaſon againſt the King, hath his Goods and Life

Life taken from him; ſo Adam for that one Act of Rebellion, wherein he committed High-Treaſon againſt God, deſerved to have all Grace taken from him; as indeed he had, Rom. 3. 23. For all have ſinned, and come ſhort of the Glory of God. Chap. 2.

But, 2. this is not all: For this one Act of ſinning did not only deſerve to have Grace taken away, and to have Nature corrupted, and ſo taken away as a Puniſhment, but it did alſo, by a Phyſical Energy, expel it; not only by a penal political Conſequen ce, but by a phyſical cauſal Conſequence, even as a Stab a Man gives himſelf cauſally, ſeparates the Soul and Body, and leaves the Carcaſs a dead thing; or, as Cold in Water expels Heat in Fire.

For, (1.) it ſeparates betwixt God and a Man. Now as the Soul is the Life of the Body, ſo was God the Life of Adam's Soul; and Grace in him, was but the Light of God, as the Sun ſhining in his Heart, as the Beams of the Sun do in the Air, and as Lumen eſt Imago Lucis; ſo Grace in Adam's Heart was the Image of God. Now as whatſoever comes but between the Sun and the Air, may be ſaid truly to extinguiſh the Light in the Air, by cutting the Beams off from their Head out of which they vaniſh; ſo Sin coming between God and Adam, extinguiſhed the Light and Life of Grace in his Heart, and left it nothing but Sin and a lump of Darkneſs.

(2.) It was not only the Cauſe interpoſing, and ſo depriving him of God's Image, but expulſive, as one contrary expels another; for, contraria mutuò ſe expellunt. Now every Act of Sin is contrary to Holineſs, and it is ſaid to be enmity againſt God and his Law: Rom. 8. 7. Becauſe the carnal Mind is Enmity againſt God; for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. If Sin be contrary to God's Law, ſo by conſequence it is to his Image; for the Image of God was the Law written in Adam's Heart. And to the ſame intent it is ſaid, Rom. 7. 23. But I ſee another Law in my Members, warring againſt the Law of my Mind, and bringing me into Captivity to the Law of Sin, which is in my Members. It wars againſt the Law of the Mind, that is, the Image of the Law in the Mind; the leaſt Act of Sin doth ſo, and the Habit but by the Acts: And ſo Gal. 5. 17. For the Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the Fleſh: and theſe are contrary the one to the other; ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would; The one and the other, and their Acts, are ſaid to be contrary.

But you will ſay, One Contrary expels not another, unleſs it be ſtronger, as Chriſt ſays, The ſtrong Man yields not up the Houſe, unleſs a ſtronger than he comes.

Anſw. 'Tis true; but know, that one Act of Sin is ſtronger than all created Grace and Holineſs in it ſelf, and therefore overcoming the Heart; the Will in which Grace was, expels it. Take all other contrary Acts, and they weaken their contrary Habits, but do not expel them; but one Act of Sin not only weakens Grace, but expels it, for it is ſtronger. See the ſtrength of the Power of Sin above Grace in it ſelf, in the accuſing Power: Suppoſe Adam had lived in the State of Holineſs thouſands of Years, and ſerved God perfectly all that while, one Act of Sin would have marred all his Service, and condemned him; he had loſt all as if it had never been. Now upon the ſame Ground it hath as much power to expel Grace, and therefore it is called the old Leaven, whereof a little leavens the whole; 1 Cor. 5. 6, 7. Your glorying is not good: Know ye not that a little Leaven leaveneth the whole Lump? Purge out therefore the old Leaven, that ye may be a new Lump, as ye are unleavened. It is called the old Leaven, becauſe it was that which leavened Adam's Heart, and ours from him, expelling Grace out.

If you ask, Whence hath Sin this Power?

I anſwer, From the Law, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O Death, where is thy Sting? O Grave, where is thy Victory? From which Law Grace too in him had its ſtrength to juſtify; and which Law, whilſt Adam kept in every part, he kept Grace in his Heart: but if a Man breaks it in one, he breaks it in all, and ſo that original Conformity to the Law in a Man's Nature is expelled, and he made prone to offend in all: James 2. 10. For whoſoever ſhall keep the whole Law, and yet

NEW JERSEY COLLEGE LIBRARY

yet offend in one Point, he is guilty of all. For as Grace was held by keeping it, Grace muſt be loſt therefore by the breach.

But you will ſay, According to this, Grace in a regenerate Man's Heart would be extinguiſhed by every Act of Sin, whenas it is called the Seed that remains, 1 John 3. 9. Whoſoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin; for his Seed remaineth in him: and he cannot ſin, becauſe he is born of God.

I anſwer, There is not the ſame Caſe of Adam's Grace, and a regenerate Man's; for the Strength of Adam's Grace was only the Law, and a legal Covenant; and one Breach of it is ſtronger than all Grace given and held by that Covenant: But the Strength of a regenerate Man's Grace is the Goſpel, a new Covenant, back'd with the Strength of Chriſt, the Power of God; 2 Cor. 12. 9. And he ſaid unto me, My Grace is ſufficient for thee; for my Strength is made perfect in Weakneſs. Moſt gladly therefore will I rather glory in my Infirmities, that the Power of Chriſt may reſt upon me. Grace is therefore made ſufficient and ſtrong enough in time to overcome Sin, and all Thorns in the Fleſh, not becauſe in it ſelf it is ſtronger, but becauſe God's Power joins with Grace, which Grace is there called Weakneſs; and this Power which joins with Grace, Sin cuts us not off from the derivation of it, becauſe it cuts not off a Man from Chriſt that is the Spring and Fountain of Grace; Rom. 8. 38, 39. For I am perſwaded, that neither Death, nor Life, nor Angels, &c. ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the Love of God which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. Nothing is able to ſeparate us from the Love of God and Chriſt.

For that other Propoſition, That if Adam's Nature was thus corrupted by that Act, then muſt ours, we being guilty of it as well as he: the Conſequence ſtands upon a treble Reaſon, the one of which is a degree to the other, and either enough to prove it.

Firſt, If it were no more, than that Adam was the Perſon repreſenting all Mankind, what befel him by virtue of any thing done by him wherein he repreſented us, muſt befal all as well: now in that Act (as I formerly ſhewed) he repreſented us all. To give you an Inſtance of this; They ſay, that when the Devil appears in any Shape, repreſenting the Perſon of the Witch with whom the Covenant is made, look what either Miſchief the Devil then doth, the Witch is ſaid to do it; and look what Hurt ſeems to befal the Shape, he takes on him, cutting off a Member, &c. the ſame Miſchief he hath power to execute on the Witch her ſelf: This hath been related by the Confeſſions of Witches, and this is done by a Covenant. So now Adam being by a juſt Covenant the repreſentative Perſon of all Mankind, look what he doth, they are ſaid to do; and what Hurt he ſuſtains by any Act he repreſents us in, we ſuſtain alſo: As your Burgeſſes in Parliament-Houſe, if they will do ſuch Acts whereby the Priviledges of Subjects are infringed and loſt, they loſe not their own Rights only, but thoſe of the Countries they repreſent alſo: ſo Adam being the Repreſentative of all Mankind, had the Priviledg and great Charter by which we all hold our Grace, and he doing this Act, whereby he loſt his own, loſt ours alſo. And this Reaſon will hold; Suppoſe we had been all alive then, and never in his Loins, but had been immediately created with him, and had perſonally all ſeverally had Grace in our Hearts; yet he repreſenting us thus, and having broke the great Charter, the Law, though but in one thing, all had been void, all the rich Endowments of Grace we held by it, might and would have been taken from us.

But add to this, Secondly, That our Nature was in him, that he had all our Stock committed to him, and we to have it payed and derived to us at the Day of our Births; Then ſince he by this Act loſt all Grace, loſt all at one bad Throw, ſuppoſe in that Throw he had not repreſented us, yet his Loſs had been our Loſs: As the ſpending of a prodigal Father, or Feoffee in Truſt for ſome under Age, is the Loſs of the Children and young ones alſo, and they are undone by it; for, Nihil dare poteſt, quod in ſe non habet; Nothing can give what it hath not: We might have ſued him indeed, but recover nothing we could; for as ex nihilo nihil fit, in Philoſophy, out of nothing comes nothing; ſo where nothing is, nothing can be had in Law, but the King himſelf loſeth his Right.

Add

Add to this, Thirdly, That we were to have our Natures from him by natural Generation, concerning which God had given this eſpecial Law, That every thing ſhall bring forth according to its kind; and God had given this Power to Adam before he fell, Encreaſe and multiply; in all which Multiplication of his the Law of Nature would have taken place, Simile generat ſimile, like begets its like: As his Nature before that Act had God's Image on it, ſo we ſhould have had it conveyed by virtue of that Law; ſo now on the contrary, he having contracted a corrupt Nature deprived of Grace, and filled with Sin, we muſt have the ſame Image by the Law of Nature, though we ſuppoſe the other Conſiderations cut off; John 3. 6. That which is born of the Fleſh, muſt be Fleſh: and Gen. 5. 3. Adam begat Seth in his Image and Likeneſs, not only the Image of him for Subſtance, but for Qualities alſo, therefore both added; for, Res dicuntur ſimiles vel diſſimiles à qualitatibus, & earum privationibus; Things are called like or unlike from their Qualities, and the privations of their Qualities: And therefore, 1 Cor. 15. 48. ſuch as was the earthly Man Adam, ſuch are the earthly of him. He ſpeaks there not only of him as the Conveyer of the Guilt of the Fact, but alſo of the likeneſs of his Nature in regard of the Qualities of it, for he ſays [ſuch,] now that notes out and imports a likeneſs of Qualities: Things are denominated ſuch or ſuch from their Qualities, res tales dicuntur à qualitatibus. And to this the Scripture refers us, when it argues the Caſe even from the Law of Nature, Job 14. 4. Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one. Every Root bearing Fruit according to its kind; he ſpeaks it to this very purpoſe, that becauſe our Nature is derived to us from our Parents which are unclean, therefore ours muſt be ſo alſo. Chap. 2.

So that now join all theſe Reaſons in one, and it is a threefold Cord to pull on this Conſequence; If it were no more than that we are born of him, it were enough, eſpecially ſeeing he received that Grace as a common Stock, but moſt of all, becauſe in that act of ſinning he repreſented us; for indeed that is the main principal radical Reaſon; and therefore ſeeing that Act extinguiſhed Grace, (as I have proved) we ſtill being guilty of it, and wrapp'd and involved in the guilt of that Diſobedience aſſoon as conceived, therefore that Effect which it had in Adam, it hath now in us.

And though indeed the Scripture aſcribes it to natural Generation often, as here in John 3. 6. it is therefore Fleſh, becauſe born of the Fleſh; yet that is but the inſtrumental, accidental Cauſe of it; quod agit virtute principalis agentis, which acts by the virtue of the principal Cauſe, namely Adam's Sin, which carries in it, and conveys with it the Power of that Curſe which God gave againſt Adam, The day thou eateſt, thou dieſt; and on the Day we are born and become Sons of Adam, that Curſe ſeizeth on us, and is applied to us by natural Generation, which makes us Men. And therefore you ſhall find that it is the Guilt of that Sin which is that which corrupts all Mens Natures, and makes them ſinful to the end of the world; Rom. 5. 19. By one Man's Diſobedience many were made ſinful. By natural Generation you are made Men indeed, as by the principal Cauſe; for vis prolifica unites Soul and Body; yet 'tis the guilt of that one Offence that makes Men ſinful to the end of the World. For there he ſpeaks not only of conveying of it; for being made Sinners, ſignifies more, implies inherent Corruption: and by the Context it appears; for ver. 12, 13. ſays, not only all had ſinned, but Sin was in the World, that is, in all Mankind, as in a Subject. And then at the end of that Diſcourſe, comes in this general Concluſion, Rom. 5. 19. For as by one Man's Diſobedience, many were made Sinners; ſo by the Obedience of one, ſhall many be made righteous. So that 'tis Adam's Sin that hath an Influence into all Mens Hearts at their Births, to make them ſinful, both to be Sinners, and Sin to be in them.

Generation indeed, I ſay, is a means to convey it, becauſe Adam's Sin ſeizeth but upon us when we come to be Men; for it is ſaid to have paſſed upon all Men, Rom. 5. 12. and becauſe Generation makes Men Men, (ſo Evah, Gen. 4. 5. I have gotten a Man from the Lord) though God creates the Soul; and therefore the Man begotten is ſaid to be from the Lord in a more eſpecial manner than other Creatures, yet ſo as the Parents get the Man, homo generat hominem; minem; for there is a Power of uniting and joining Soul and Body together in ſemine, which the Parents tranſmit. Therefore the Depravation of our Nature is aſcribed to Generation, becauſe it preſents a fit Subject for Adam's Sin to work on, and to deprive of Righteouſneſs; yet ſtill ſo, as that it was the firſt of Sin extinguiſhed it in Adam, ſo it is the Guilt of it deprives us of Righteouſneſs, and it is that makes ſinful Men.

BOOK II.

But you will ſay, Though indeed thus it deprived Adam, becauſe he perſonally then committed it, and it paſſed actually from him, and ſo might have ſuch an Effect; yet being long ſince paſt, how can it have the ſame Effect? We may conceive how Cain and Iſhmael might be poiſoned by it, being nigh the Fountain.

I anſwer; By a Similitude taken from the ſecond Adam, whoſe Righteouſneſs, though long ſince paſt, and his Death paſt but once for all, as in Heb. 9. 14, 26. How much more ſhall the Blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit, offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your Conſcience from dead Works to ſerve the living God? —But now once in the end of the World, hath he appeared to put away Sin by the ſacrifice of himſelf. Yet the Power and Force of his Blood and Righteouſneſs, hath a real Influence for ever into Mens Hearts to ſanctify and regenerate: ſo alſo Adam's Sin, though long ſince committed, hath an efficacy to make Men ſinful to the end of the World.

But you will ſay, As to Chriſt's Blood and Righteouſneſs, that hath ſuch an Effect, becauſe there is an applier of the Power, the Spirit, which works in Mens Hearts by virtue of Chriſt's Death purchaſing a Right for him to work, which Spirit hath real Power in him, and is exiſting to do it; That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit, John 3.6. But what then is the Applier, is the Agent that ſo works by virtue of Adam's Sin?

I anſwer; There need none but only the Guilt of that Sin imputed, for that naturally cuts the Man off from God who is the Fountain of Grace, as the Sun is of Light, and comes as a Cloud between, ſo as Grace cannot be derived as otherwiſe it ſhould; it comes as an Impediment to hinder the glorious Influence of God's Image; as I ſhewed the Act did in Adam, ſo the Guilt of it doth the ſame thing in us: therefore it is ſaid, Rom. 3. 23. All have ſinned, and come ſhort of the Glory of God. By Glory of God is meant in general, but that Life of Glory which Sin cuts a Man off from; ſo as he cannot come to ſee the Glory of God, Sin ſeparating. And alſo the Image of God is called the Glory of the Lord, 2 Cor. 3. which Image God would make to ſhine into the Man aſſoon as he is born, but that this comes in, [he hath ſinned,] and that as a Bar keeps him ſhort of it. This then is the reaſon why we are not born in God's Image in Holineſs, All have ſinned, and come ſhort of the Glory of God: ſo that ſuppoſe the Soul was created holy, and then united, yet when it is united, this Sin ſeparates it from God, as it did Adam, and ſo it falls ſhort of his Glory, as the Air doth of Light when a Cloud comes: Or, conſider it created at the ſame inſtant when it is united, ſtill though God produceth the Soul, yet the Union making it guilty of Sin, bars that Influence of the Glory of God.

Neither is this depriving it of this Glory a Puniſhment, which God as an Agent inflicts, or hath any phyſical Influence in working, but it is a coming ſhort, as the Air doth of Light when a Cloud intercepts it; the Sun cauſeth not the Darkneſs, it would give Light, rather it cauſally doth that; ſo God works not this Privation of Original Righteouſneſs, but Adam's Sin ſtops the paſſage of it, ſo as it works it as a Cauſe, which though it exiſt not in the Act of it, yet in the Guilt before God it ever remains, and therefore hath always this Effect to bring us out of his Favour, to ſeparate us from him, and upon that Separation neceſſarily follows this want of Righteouſneſs, as Death follows on the ſeparation of Soul and Body.

But you will ſay, Original Corruption is not only the want of Righteouſneſs, but a poſitive Pravity, a vicious Diſpoſition.

I anſwer; 'Tis true, it is ſo, yet ſo as that poſitive Pravity is a conſequent of that Privation. Look as when the Soul is ſeparated from the Body, then Death follows, which is a privation of Life; and the Corruption of the Body follows follows upon that, which ſends forth noiſom Stinks, (which Chriſt's Body, though it taſted of Death, doth not, for it ſaw no Corruption, Pſal. 16. 10.) ſo in the Death of the Soul, this want of Righteouſneſs is neceſſarily accompanied with poſitive corrupt Diſpoſitions, which put forth noiſom ſtinking Vapours, actual Sins, yet ſo as the Corruption is originally inherent there as the Cauſe, and as a part of Original Sin. Chap. 2.

Laſtly, You will object, If Sin imputed, thus extinguiſheth Righteouſneſs, how came it that Chriſt that had Adam's Sin, and all the Sins of the World layed on him, yet it had not this Effect? wherein lies the difference? and yet it ſeparated him, as appears from his crying out in that manner, Mat. 27. 46. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

I anſwer:

1. You muſt diſtinguiſh between Imputation voluntarily taken, and in Obedience to God, (as Chriſt did, and therefore only underwent the Puniſhment of being made a Curſe, without Sin, to ſatisfy for Sin) and the Guilt paſſing neceſſarily as this doth, which therefore works this Effect, Rom. 5. 12. Sin paſſed upon all.

2. Though Chriſt was made by Imputation, Sin, yet ſo as he could not be ſaid to have ſinned in us; but we having ſinned once, God layed on him the Iniquity of us all; Iſa. 53. 6. All we like Sheep have gone aſtray: we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the Iniquity of us all. But Adam's Sin is therefore imputed, becauſe we were conſidered as thoſe that ſinned in him; Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore, as by one Man Sin entred into the World, and Death by Sin; and ſo Death paſſed upon all Men, for that all have ſinned. And therefore though this Imputation of Sin wrought a ſeparation of the Light of God's Countenance, the Light indeed, from Chriſt, yet not the Heat and Influence of Grace; as Metals under ground, though they are ſeparated from the Light of the Sun, yet not from its Influence.

BOOK II.

CHAP. III.

This Corruption of Nature is not only a Miſery and a Puniſhment, but a Sin, which renders us guilty in the Sight of God; proved to be ſo by Scriptures. As alſo becauſe our corrupt Nature is contrary to God's Holineſs, and his Law; proved to be Sin alſo from the Effects of it.

I Come now in the next place to ſhew further, that what is meant by Fleſh in John 3.6. is not only a Corruption, but ſuch a Corruption as properly is a Sin which God looks upon as ſinful, and which makes him therefore to hate and loath us for it.

But you will ſay, What need there any ſuch diſtinct Queſtion be made of it? Is it not a granted old Truth, a Principle every Child learns, even acknowledged by the Papiſts, before Baptiſm, that it is a Sin?

But indeed the Truth is, there is a rotten Generation of Divines, ſprung up in this Age, which do flatly deny original Corruption to be a Sin: acknowledg they do a Guilt of Adam's Sin, and a Corruption thence derived, but that Corruption they ſay, is only to be conſidered as the Puniſhment of the firſt Sin, but in it ſelf not properly a Sin; malum triſte indeed, but not malum culpæ; our Miſery, but not our Fault.

Now we will prove that it is properly a Sin, and ſo accounted by God.

Firſt; The Scriptures call it not only a Sin, but a whole Body of Sins of the Fleſh, Col. 2. 11. In whom alſo ye are circumciſed with the Circumciſion made without hands, in putting off the Body of the Sins of the Fleſh, by the Circumciſion of Chriſt. He ſpeaks there of Corruption of Nature, and he calls it a Body, that is, a Lump, a real ſubſiſtent thing, conſiſting not of one, but many ſinful Members, a Body of Sins; and he ſpeaks of this Fleſh which is ſpoken of in John 3.6. for he adds, a Body of Sins of the Fleſh, and of original Corruption too he ſpeaks, for it is that which was put off by Circumciſion and Baptiſm, Col. 2. 11, 12. In whom alſo ye are circumciſed with the Circumciſion made without hands, in putting off the Body of the Sins of the Fleſh, by the Circumciſion of Chriſt: Buried with him in Baptiſm, wherein alſo you are riſen with him through the Faith of the Operation of God, who hath raiſed him from the dead. Now both thoſe Sacraments were adminiſtred to Infants, in whom therefore this Body of Sins is.

Secondly; The Confeſſion of godly Men guided by the Spirit of God, in a ſenſe of their own Vileneſs, have acknowledged it to be ſo; we may take their Confeſſions in this Caſe for Truth, for they were from the Spirit.

St. Paul in Rom. 7. doth not only cry out of this indwelling Corruption in him as a Miſery, (though ſo he complains of it under that Expreſſion alſo, as at the laſt Verſe) but alſo cries out upon it as a Sin, Rom. 7. 17, 18. Now then, it is no more I that do it, but Sin that dwelleth in me. For I know, that in me (that is, in my Fleſh) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is preſent with me, but how to perform that which is good, I find not. And he ſpeaks of it as that which is the Cauſe of all the evil Actions he did; It is not I, (ſays he) but Sin that dwells in me; he means Corruption of Nature inherent in him. For,

1. He makes it the Root, whence actual Sins do ſpring; it is Sin that does it, ſays he. And the Fleſh is made ſuch a Root alſo, Gal. 5. 19. Now the Works of the Fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, Adultery, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, Laſciviouſneſs: for actual Sins are there called Works, Works of the Fleſh.

2. Becauſe he ſays, Sin dwelling in him; now an Act is a tranſient thing, Corruption only is that which dwells in and cleaves to the Heart.

Thirdly;

Chap. 3.

Thirdly; In the next Words he calls it expreſly Fleſh; for giving the Reaſon of this, he ſays, In my Fleſh dwells no good thing; ſo as that which he calls Sin dwelling in the former Verſe, he calls Fleſh here in this 18*th* Verſe.

Fourthly; He ſays, there was no good in him; a Privation therefore it is of all Good and Grace, and therefore a Sin; for, privatio eſt carentia entitatis debitæ ineſſe, It is a want of ſomething in the Subject, which ought to be there: If therefore this Good ought to be there (elſe it is not a Privation of it) then it is a Sin, for it ought to be there by the Law of God.

Fifthly; Obſerve that St. Paul ſpeaks this confidently, not as a Man, being ſo far out of Conceit of himſelf, as he might ſpeak worſe of himſelf, than was cauſe, but he knew what he ſaid, I know, ſays he; he lets others alone to diſpute it, he knew it to be ſo, and this by woful Experience.

Laſtly; He ſpeaks it in a proper, not a metaphorical ſenſe, for he ſpake in the Bitterneſs of Spirit, in Bitterneſs of Heart, by way of Complaint, when Men uſe to ſpeak plainly, therefore his meaning is, that is properly a Sin.

Object. Ay, but you will ſay, St. Paul ſpake this of his Nature, as now corrupted, when he was now a grown Man; but the Queſtion is of our Nature, as it comes from the Womb.

Anſw. Let us therefore ſee what David ſays in his Confeſſions; you uſe to take Mens Confeſſions on the Rack, as he was now on the Rack, and therefore likely to ſpeak plainly, Pſal. 51. 5. I was ſhapen in Iniquity, and in Sin did my Mother conceive me; and ſpeaks he this of the Guilt of Adam's Sin only, or of Corruption of Nature alſo? Sure of Corruption of Nature.

For 1. It is argued from his Scope and Deſign; for he being to humble himſelf the more for his Murder and Adultery, confeſſeth the Cauſe to be Sin, the Sea whence theſe Streams came to be original Corruption.

2. The next Words ſhew, by the Oppoſition that he ſpeaks of, inherent Corruption; for he adds, ver. 6. Behold, thou deſireſt Truth in the inward Parts; and in the hidden Part thou ſhalt make me to know Wiſdom: that is, whereas thou requireſt, that not only my Action, but that my Nature, my inward Parts, ſhould be ſincerely holy, I was conceived in Sin; and ſo my inward Parts were tainted with it from the Womb. And by Truth there he means Grace and Sincerity, as oppoſite to a corrupt Heart, as in 1 Cor. 5. 7. Purge out therefore the old Leaven, that ye may be a new Lump, as ye are unleavened: for even Chriſt our Paſſover is ſacrificed for us: Where Grace, the new Lump, is oppoſed to the old Leaven of Wickedneſs, that is, original Corruption, which is the ancient Leaven, which we have from the old Man, with which our Natures are ſowred and leavened.

3. And in the third Place, not only Confeſſion of godly Men, but the Law of God condemns it, which argues it to be a Sin. Now that which is contrary to what God requires, certainly is a Sin, that none will deny: for God's Law is juſt, and therefore the Unconformity to it is Unrighteouſneſs, but original Corruption is the contrary to what God requires; for God you ſee, requires Truth in the inward Parts; but this Corruption of Nature is the want of it, and therefore the contrary to what God requires ſhould be in our Nature, and therefore a Sin, and this is David's Reaſon whereby he proves it to be a Sin.

Yea, 2*dly*, 'tis contrary to Grace, and therefore a Sin. For,

1*ſt*. One Contrary is known by another, contraria contrariis cognoſcuntur: Now that which is here called Fleſh, is contrary to Holineſs, and therefore truly and ſimply a Sin, Gal. 5. 17. The Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, for they are contrary. By Spirit is meant Grace, and theſe are not ſo efficienter, as producing contrary Effects, but formaliter, in their very Nature and being ſo; for therefore they luſt one againſt another, ſays the Apoſtle, becauſe contrary; ut ſe res habet in operari, ita ineſſe, as things are in acting, ſo are they in their Eſſence: And is not Fleſh a Sin then?

2*dly*. If it be contrary to Holineſs and Grace, then it is contrary to the Law of God; for what is Holineſs but the Law of God written in the Heart, the real living Law? Rom. 7. 23. But I ſee another Law in my Members, warring againſt the Law of my Mind, and bringing me into Captivity to the Law of Sin, which is in my Members. It is called the Law of the Mind, contrary unto which is that original Corruption, called therefore the Law of the Members, warring againſt it: It doth not only put forth contrary Acts, but it is in it ſelf a contrary Law: and therefore it is ſaid, Rom. 8. 7. Becauſe the carnal Mind is Enmity againſt God: for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. Here the Fleſh, or carnal Mind, is ſaid to be a thing which is not ſubject to the Law of God; for why? It is a flat Law warring againſt it, and yet the Mind of Man ought to be ſubject to it, elſe the Apoſtle would not challenge it, and blame it, for not being ſubject; and this he ſpeaks of in the Nature of it, not only in the Effects of it, for he ſays, it cannot be ſubject, which implies an Oppoſition in Nature, a Contrariety there. Now certainly whatſoever is contrary to the Law, and is not ſubject to it, and yet ought to be, is ſinful, for Sin is only a Tranſgreſſion of the Law, 1 John 3. 4. Whoſoever committeth Sin, tranſgreſſeth alſo the Law; for Sin is the Tranſgreſſion of the Law. Sin is a not Subjection to the Law; yea, and whatſoever Creature ſets up a contrary Law to the Law of God, is an Enemy to God. Now this Fleſh is a contrary Law, written in the Mind, which is more than ſimply an Act of Rebellion; and therefore the Heart of Man in which this Law is written, is an Enemy to God, becauſe there is a Kingdom of Sin, and Laws of Sin, ſet up within a Man againſt God and his Law, and therefore the Apoſtle ſays in the ſame Rom. 8. 7. It is Enmity to God; and then God muſt needs be an Enemy to it, and hate it; now God hates nothing but Sin.

Object. But you will ſay, A thing that ought to be ſubject to the Law, and is not, tranſgreſſeth the Law indeed: but how will you prove it ought to be ſubject?

Anſw. 1. Why doth elſe the Apoſtle blame it for not being ſubject?

2. Why elſe doth he call it Enmity againſt God, but becauſe it ought to be ſubject, and is not? That whereas there ought to be the Law of God, ſubduing the whole Nature of Man to God, there is a contrary Law ſubjecting it to Sin. Now for one to ſet up contrary Laws to thoſe of his Prince, and ſo not to be ſubject, is greater Enmity than ſimply to commit but an Act of Rebellion.

Object. But you will ſay, Doth the Law of God require and command that my Nature ſhould be holy?

Anſw. 1. Yes, he expreſly requires it, in Levit. 11. 44, 45. Be Holy, for I am Holy, ſays God; now his Nature is ſo, therefore ought ours to be ſo too.

2. The Law of God reacheth to all that is in Man: Heb. 4. 12. For the Word of God is quick and powerful, and ſharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joints and Marrow, and is a Diſcerner of the Thoughts and Intents of the Heart. The Law of God reacheth to Soul, Spirit, and Underſtanding: ſo in 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. And the very God of Peace ſanctify you wholly: and I pray God your whole Spirit, and Soul, and Body, be preſerved blameleſs unto the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. God ſanctify you wholly, that is, he works Grace in your whole Man, and keeps your Spirit, Soul, and Body, blameleſs; mark it, if Nature be not wholly ſanctified, it is malum culpæ, a thing blame-worthy, and therefore 'tis a Sin.

Object. But you will ſay, Upon what ground doth God command our Nature to be holy?

Anſw. God having made our Nature holy at firſt, commands it ſhould be preſerved ſo, and he might well do ſo, for Grace was a Talent given to keep and to encreaſe; now in Matth. 25. 24. we find that God exacts his Talents, and requires them with Advantage, much more the ſame again, Matth. 25. 24, 25, 26, 27. Then he which had received the one Talent, came, and ſaid, Lord, I knew thee that thou art a hard Man, reaping where thou haſt not ſown, and gathering where thou haſt not ſtrewed: And I was afraid, and went and hid thy Talent in the Earth: lo, there thou haſt that is thine. His Lord anſwered and ſaid unto him, Thou wicked and ſlothful Servant, thou kneweſt that I reap where I ſowed not, and gather where I have not ſtrewed: Thou oughteſt therefore to have put my Money to the Exchangers; and then at my coming I ſhould have received mine own with Uſury. So looking on the Grace he beſtowed on thee, he may ſay, Where is the Grace I beſtowed, &c. Adam cannot deny but that he loſt it, through his own Default, and therefore that Loſs was a Sin in him; and then of us, who are acknowledged guilty of his Act; for Adam in eating the forbidden Fruit, was as one that ſhould willingly eat a poiſoned Apple, forbidden him to eat, in which caſe he committed two diſtinct Sins. Chap. 3.

1. In eating an Apple, forbidden him particularly, ſuppoſe not poiſoned. But,

2. In deſtroying himſelf alſo, knowing it would poiſon him.

Object. But they object, The Loſs of Grace was inflicted only by God, as a Puniſhment of his Fault, and therefore not a Sin; as if a Man for putting out one Eye himſelf, hath another Eye put out by the Judg; the Loſs of the latter is not his Fault that he is wholly blind.

Anſw. 1. It is falſe, that it is merely as a Puniſhment inflicted by God, as by an external Hand, as appears by the former Grounds laid. I have ſhewed you that Sin doth expel Grace after a natural manner, as one Contrary expels another; ſo as this Corruption was a natural Conſequent following the Act, as Death doth upon a Stabb, or ſtrangling a Man's ſelf; the Sin it ſelf did it, not God merely inflicting it as a Puniſhment.

2. If it were a Puniſhment, yet ſome Puniſhments are both Sins and Puniſhments.

Object. But they object, That every Sin is voluntary, but this Corruption of Nature (though indeed he committed the Act willingly) befel him not willing it.

So, I anſwer, That is was, volitum in cauſâ, will'd in its cauſe; as he that hates Wiſdom, is ſaid to love Death, he loves it in the cauſe of it, Prov. 8. 36. for ſimply of it ſelf no Man loves it, no more did Adam will this Corruption, or intended it in Sinning, but yet he willed that Sin which he knew would bring this upon him.

Laſtly; If Scripture, godly Men, Law, and all ſhould not hold Proof, the Effects would argue it to be a Sin.

See what the Apoſtle ſays of it, Gal. 5. 19. That the Works of the Fleſh are manifeſt; that is, that the Works of it are ſuch notorious Sins, as none can deny them but to be ſuch; and if the Fruits of it be ſuch, then Reaſon will tell us, though Chriſt had not told us, That the Tree is known by the Fruit, Matth. 12. 33, 34, 35. Either make the Tree good, and his Fruit good; or elſe make the Tree corrupt, and his Fruit corrupt; for the Tree is known by his Fruit. O Generation of Vipers, how can ye, being evil, ſpeak good things? for out of the abundance of the Heart the Mouth ſpeaketh. A good Man out of the good Treaſure of the Heart, bringeth forth good things; and an evil Man out of the evil Treaſure, bringeth forth evil things. This Corruption is called an evil Treaſure, out of which evil Actions are produced; and if they be evil, then the Tree is evil, and that eodem genere, in the ſame kind.

Object. But they object that of James, Luſt conceived, brings forth Sin, Jam. 1. 15. that is only called Sin (ſay they) which is brought forth by it, but it is not ſo in it ſelf.

Anſw. 1. Thence I argue the contrary, that it is a Sin, and ejuſdem naturæ, of the ſame Nature, with what is brought forth, for every thing begets in its own Likeneſs, and are ejuſdem ſpeciei, of the ſame kind; ſimile generat ſimile, like produceth like; if therefore that which is begotten, be a Sin, then the Luſt alſo.

2. That Luſt is made to be a Sin in ver. 14. in that it tempts Men to ſin; now what tempts to Sin is ſinful; therefore, ver. 13. it is denied of God, as abhorred of him, it being a Sin to tempt to evil, and it is made all one to tempt to Evil, and to be tempted to Evil.

BOOK II.

CHAP. IV.

An inclination and proneneſs to all Sin is in every Man's Nature. What are the Cauſes which make every Man's Nature inclin'd to all Sins. The Impreſſion of Adam's Sin on all equally. The Mind of Man having loſt the ſight of its true Happineſs, wanders, and ſeeks its Happineſs in a thouſand falſe Shapes. If all Men have all Luſts in them, what is the Reaſon that ſome Men are ſo far from being inclin'd to ſome kinds of Sin, that they have ſome contrariety in their Temper to them. And how it is, that a Man who hath all Luſts in his Nature, is inclin'd to one Sin more than another. The Reaſon why Men equally corrupt in their Natures, are not equally wicked in their Lives. Why all Men do not commit the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

ROM. vii. 8.

Sin taking occaſion by the Commandment, wrought in me all manner of Concupiſcence.

THE general Parts of Man's inherent Corruption, thus diſpatch'd as a Corouis to the Second Part of this Diſcourſe: There is one thing to be added more to make this compleat. Every Man is prone to all Sin, and hath all Sins in him.

As a ground for this, I have choſen this Scripture, where you have an Inſtance without exception, of one of the beſt unregenerate Men that ever was in the World, Paul, who ſaith of himſelf, that he was, as touching the Righteouſneſs of the Law, blameleſs, Phil. 3. 6. and in whom, when regenerate, the Grace of God was more ſtrongly than in any other, mortifying his Luſts and Corruptions; and yet he tells us here, That he, by woful experience found, That all Concupiſcence was wrought in him. So that whether he ſpeaks of himſelf as Regenerate or Unregenerate, either is enough to convince us, that the beſt of both have all Luſts in them: But in this Verſe he ſeems to ſpeak of his former Eſtate, and Time paſt of Unregeneracy, theſe words being an Expoſition of his meaning of thoſe words, Verſ. 5. Whilſt in the Fleſh, that is, whilſt Unregenerate; as appears by Rom. 8. 9. But ye are not in the Fleſh, but in the Spirit, if ſo be the Spirit of God dwell in you: where, being in the Fleſh, and in the Spirit, are oppoſed. And it is all one Phraſe with being in Drink, and in Love, that is, overcome of both. Whilſt in the Fleſh, ſaith he, in Rom. 7. 5. the Motions of Sins, which were by the Law, &c. which is a Marriage-Phraſe, that is, evil Luſts ſtirr'd up and begotten by the Law, as Children by Husband and Wife; he comparing the Heart to a Woman, and the Law to an Husband, Rom. 7. 2, 3, 4. For the Woman which hath an Husband, is bound by the Law to her Husband ſo long as he liveth: but if the Husband be dead, ſhe is looſed from the Law of her Husband. So then if while her Husband liveth, ſhe be married married to another Man, ſhe ſhall be called an Adultereſs; but if her Husband be dead, ſhe is free from that Law; ſo that ſhe is no Adultereſs, tho ſhe be married to another Man. Wherefore, my Brethren, ye alſo are become dead to the Law by the Body of Chriſt; that ye ſhould be married to another, even to him who is raiſed from the Dead, that we ſhould bring forth Fruit unto God. Which Law begets Motions to Sin: Which becauſe it would ſeem very harſh to lay ſuch a Baſtard-brood at the Law's Door, and ſo this Objection would ariſe, That then the Law is the Cauſe of Sin, therefore he denies it, Verſ. 7. What ſhall we ſay then? is the Law Sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known Sin, but by the Law: for I had not known Luſt, except the Law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not covet. Though he ſays withal, that it did diſcover Sin to him; But, ſaith he, Verſ. 8. Sin taking occaſion by the Commandment, wrought in me all manner of Concupiſcence: For without the Law Sin was dead. Which Diſtinction is the ſame with that which we uſe in Logick, Cauſa per ſe, & cauſa per accidens. Sin took occaſion by the Commandment, that is, the Law was but the occaſional accidental Cauſe, in the ſame ſenſe that the Sun ſhining upon a Dunghil elevates the Vapours, might be ſaid to be the Cauſe of all the ſtinking Vapours in it: The Sun is not the Cauſe, for the Vapours were there before, the Sun doth only ſtir them up, and it ſelf remains pure. Or elſe, look as Phyſick that ſtirs the Humours which lay in the Body, it puts in no New, for it is an Antidote againſt them, and would purge them out, if Nature were ſtrong. And in this ſenſe it is that the Law is ſaid to work all Concupiſcence, which yet was in the Heart afore.

The Point then which this Text affords, being thus opened, is, That All Concupiſcence is in every Man's Nature: Sin, he ſays, here, that is, Original Sin, wrought all Concupiſcence, and of that we are partakers all alike.

Even the very Heathens, the moſt Divine of them, the Stoicks, had ſome Light into the Truth. So Seneca out of them, * Omnia in omnibus vitia ſunt. And, Lib. 5. † Et cupidi omnes, & maligni omnes, & ambitioſi & impii. And they give this Reaſon, becauſe, Vitia ſunt conjuncta, they are tied of a Knot, and hang on a String; there is a concatenation of them. As in Falſhood, Uno abſurdo dato, mille ſequuntur: ſo in Practice, one Sin brings all with it, James 3. 16. For where Envying and Strife is, there is Confuſion, and every evil Work: It is his Rule, where Envying and Strife is, (he inſtanceth but in that one, yet) there is Confuſion, ἀκαταςία, all out of order; and every evil Work, that is, his Mind is apt to run into every evil Work. And the Reaſon of that Aſſertion is, becauſe that which is the Cauſe of one Sin, is the Cauſe of all, namely, Self-love; that having the higheſt Room in the Heart, is advanced into the Throne of God's Glory in the Heart; being the next Heir, when Grace was depoſed, and became Lord-Paramount in the Heart; and that putting thee upon one Sin, puts thee upon another, as occaſion is to ſatisfy it ſelf: Firſt, ſets afloat one Luſt, Pride, and then another, Envy, &c. 2 Tim. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4. Men ſhall be lovers of themſelves: And what then? It is the General, and theſe that follow are its Army; Covetous, Boaſters, Proud, Blaſphemers, diſobedient to Parents, Unthankful, Unholy, without natural Affection, Truce-breakers, falſe Accuſers, Incontinent, Fierce, deſpiſers of thoſe that are Good, Traitors, Heady, High-minded, lovers of Pleaſures more than lovers of God; having a Form of Godlineſs, but denying the Power thereof. No one Sin can be, but where Self-love is predominant; and where it is, it will put us upon any Sin, break all Bonds of Nature to Parents, diſobedient to them; as it follows, and of Friendſhip, unthankful; and of Grace too unto God, unholy, &c. And thus Self-love, as gotten within the Throne, is the ground of all Luſts; as all Affection is ſeated in Love, ſo Sin in Self-love.

* Seneca Benef. lib. 4. p. 320. Ed. Lipſii Antwerp. 1632.

† Ibid. Lib. 5. p. 338.

2. There are three Demonſtrations of the truth of it.

1. That which is univerſally contrary to every Branch of the Law of God, is univerſally prone to all Sin. Now whence is it that we oppoſe any thing, but becauſe we are deſirous of its Contrary, and look upon that as an hindrance to our Deſires? But the ſinfulneſs of Man's Nature, is in all things contrary to the Law; as the Text ſhews, that the Law wrought all Concupiſcence. So as, Tam latè quam patet Lex in prohibendo, Concupiſcentia in appetendo; Concupiſcence is of a large extent in deſiring, as the Law is in forbidding. No Duty commanded, but Man's Nature riſeth againſt it; no Law forbidding Sin, but our Nature oppoſeth it, and will not be ſubject; Rom. 8. 7. Becauſe the carnal Mind is Enmity againſt God; for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. It would be ſubject to nothing; yea, the Light of the Law is with-held in Unrighteouſneſs, becauſe it oppoſeth Man's Unrighteouſneſs, Rom. 1. 18. For the Wrath of God is revealed from Heaven againſt all Ungodlineſs, and Unrighteouſneſs of Men, who hold the Truth in Unrighteouſneſs.

2. That which is univerſally contrary to all Grace, and the Acts of it, is prone to all Sin. Now, Gal. 5. 17. it is ſaid, The Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, (viz.) in all the luſtings of it; no good Motions come, but our Natures damp it; no good Duty we perform, but our Nature lames it and deads it, and fights againſt the exerciſe of the Heart in it. Enmity to Grace is ſtill founded on proneneſs to Sin, Acts 13. 10. And ſaid, O full of all Subtilty and all Miſchief, thou Child of the Devil, thou Enemy of all Righteouſneſs, wilt thou not ceaſe to pervert the right ways of the Lord? Full of all readineſs to Evil, and an Enemy of all Righteouſneſs are joined there; and ſo in Coloſſ. 1. 21. And you that were ſometimes alienated, and Enemies in your Mind by wicked Works, yet now hath he reconciled. Enemies having their Minds ſet in evil Works; ſo that Enmity to Grace proceeds from a proneneſs to Sin.

3. There is no Sin, but one Man or other hath been by Nature enclined to it; Rom. 1. 29, 30, 31, 32. Being filled with all Unrighteouſneſs, Fornication, Wickedneſs, Covetouſneſs, Maliciouſneſs; full of Envy, Murder, Debate, Deceit, Malignity, Whiſperers, Backbiters, haters of God, Deſpiteful, Proud, Boaſters, Inventers of evil Things, diſobedient to Parents, without Underſtanding, Covenant-breakers, without natural Affection, Implacable, Unmerciful: Who knowing the Judgment of God, (that they which commit ſuch things are worthy of Death) not only do the ſame, but have pleaſure in them that do them. He ſays, The Gentiles were fill'd with all Unrighteouſneſs; filled, even as Trees with Fruit. If not every particular Man, with every one in ſome part or other of his Life. Yet there was no curſed Fruit of Unrighteouſneſs, but had appear'd in ſome one or other Man's Life among them. Now there can be no Reaſon given why any Man ſhould be naturally prone to any Sin, but the ſame Reaſon may be alledged why another Man muſt be alſo; for we have all the ſame Nature, we are all begotten in the ſame Image, Gen. 5. 3. And therefore, Prov. 27. 19. As Face anſwers to Face in Water, ſo the Heart of Man to Man; that is, as a Man looking in Water, (which was the Looking-glaſs of Elder-times) as the ſame Lineaments and Parts of the Face in Water anſwer to the real Face, ſo the Heart of Man to Man, there being the ſame Image we are all begotten in. And therefore the Word of God, which ſpeaks againſt all Sin, is reſembled to the common Looking-glaſs of Mankind, James 1. 23. that repreſents every Man's Face to him. And as the Parts of the Face in every Man are one and the ſame, ſo here in this Caſe too: and therefore you ſhall find, in Rom. 8. 9. where the Scripture ſpeaks of the general Corruption of all Mens Natures, and ſays, All are under Sin. To prove it, he quotes places where particular Corruptions of particular Men are but mentioned; as of Doeg out of Pſal. 140. 3. And what is ſpoken of the Jews, Iſa. 59. 7. which the Apoſtle brings as Inſtances to prove the common Corruption; and ſo manifeſtly implies, that the ſame Sins that are in one, are in the Nature of all, Rom. 7. 9, to 18.

Let us next proceed to the Grounds and Cauſes of it; for all Truths are more clearly repreſented, and more amiable, when we ſee them in their Cauſes, and growing on their own Stalks.

1. Adam and Chriſt are the only common Roots of all Sin and Grace, Rom. 5. from Verſ. 14, to 21. Nevertheleſs Death reigned from Adam to Moſes, even over them that had not ſinned after the ſimilitude of Adam's Tranſgreſſion, who is the Figure of him that was to come: But not as the Offence, ſo alſo is the free Gift:

For

For if through the Offence of one, many be dead; much more the Grace of God, and the Gift by Grace, which is by one Man, Jeſus Chriſt, hath abounded unto many. And not as it was by one that ſinned, ſo is the Gift: for the Judgment was by one to Condemnation; but the free Gift is of many Offences unto Juſtification. For if by one Man's Offence, Death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of Grace, and of the Gift of Righteouſneſs, ſhall reign in Life by one, Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore as by the Offence of one, Judgment came upon all Men to Condemnation: even ſo by the Righteouſneſs of one, the free Gift came upon all Men to Juſtification of Life. For as by one Man's Diſobedience, many were made Sinners: ſo by the Obedience of one, ſhall many be made righteous. Moreover, the Law entred, that the Offence might abound: But where Sin abounded, Grace did much more abound: That as Sin hath reigned unto Death, even ſo might Grace reign through Righteouſneſs unto eternal Life, by Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. And now in ver. 14. Adam the one is made the Type of the other. Therefore look as Jeſus Chriſt is the Fountain of all Grace, ſo is Adam the Fountain of all Sin: for Adam is made a Type of Chriſt in that reſpect, Rom. 5. 14. and in reſpect of conveying his Image, as Chriſt of his, 1 Cor. 15. 49. And as we have born the Image of the Earthy, we ſhall alſo bear the Image of the Heavenly. Which Maxim, as it ſhould have held of the pure State of Adam, ſo it doth of his corrupt State: And as Chriſt conveys all Grace to thoſe that are begotten of him, then if Adam be a Type of Chriſt, he muſt convey all Sin to thoſe that are of him. Now Chriſt hath all Fulneſs in him, John 1. 16. And of his Fulneſs have we all received, and Grace for Grace. And 2 Pet. 1. 3. According as his Divine Power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto Life and Godlineſs, through the knowledg of him that hath called us to Glory and Vertue. Here Chriſt is ſaid to give us all things belonging to Life and Godlineſs. Then for Adam, we in like manner receive of him Sin for Sin. And Jeſus Chriſt needed not to convey all Grace, except Adam had conveyed all Sin; for Grace is nothing but the Remedy for Sin: And if there were not ſo many Sores, there needed not ſo many Plaiſters: for every particular Grace heals but a particular Sin: The Remedy needs be no larger than the Diſeaſe. And therefore it is, that it is called a Body of Sin; Adam's Image is ſo nam'd in Col. 3. 5. Mortify therefore your Members which are upon the Earth; Fornication, Uncleanneſs, &c. Rom. 6. 6. Knowing this, that our old Man is crucified with him, that the Body of Sin might be deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve Sin. Why is it called a Body of Sin? becauſe it conſiſts of many parts, which in that place of the Coloſſians are called Members; and if any one Member were wanting, it could not be an Image entire, but imperfect.

Chap. 4.

2. If we examine the reaſon why our Nature is inclined to Sin? all is, and muſt be reſolv'd into this; That 'tis the Impreſſion of Adam's firſt Sin, that made Judas's Nature inclined to Covetouſneſs, the Diſciples to Preheminence. Now Adam's Sin hath the ſame and like Impreſſion upon all Mens Hearts, and therefore they are all prone to all theſe: For the Influence of it is not as the Influence of a voluntary, but a natural Agent, which always works ad ultimum potentiæ; and therefore conveys the ſame Image to all that it doth to any, becauſe it works to the utmoſt of its power. And indeed, there is this difference between the firſt and ſecond Adam, that Chriſt though he conveys all Grace, yet not to all alike for degrees, nor to all at a certain time, becauſe his Spirit works it as a voluntary Agent, when and how far he will; John 3. 8. The Wind bloweth where it liſteth, and thou heareſt the ſound thereof, but canſt not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: ſo is every one that is born of the Spirit. And it is communicated out of Grace as a Gift, Rom. 15. 15. —Becauſe of the Grace that is given to me of God. But with Adam's Sin it is otherwiſe, for it is ſaid to enter upon the World (Rom. 5. 12.) viâ neceſſitatis, in a way of neceſſity, as a thing which cannot be kept out, and therefore hath equal and alike Impreſſion upon all Mens Hearts.

3. If we conſider the State every Man's Soul is left in by Nature, we ſhall find that it muſt needs be prone and apt and ready for every Sin. For,

1*ſt*. It hath loſt its right way to Happineſs, and can never find it, and hath loſt alſo its true Guide, and ſo now walks in Darkneſs, and knows not whither to go, and ſo is apt and expoſed to be led any whither! Therefore Converſion is call'd turning a Sinner from the error of his Way, James 5. 20. Let him know, that he which converteth a Sinner from the error of his Way, ſhall ſave a Soul from Death, and ſhall hide a multitude of Sins. And unregenerate Men are called Darkneſs, Epheſ. 5. 8. For ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, but now are ye Light in the Lord. And of ſuch it is ſaid, John 12. 35. —That he that walks in Darkneſs, knows not whither he goes. And yet ſtill the Soul is bound for Happineſs, and is enquiring the way: Who will ſhew us any Good? Pſal. 4. 6. Therefore being thus wildred, any Luſt that promiſeth to conduct it to Happineſs, (as all do, therefore call'd deceitful Luſts, Epheſ. 4. 22.) it is content to follow, willing to take any Guide, being like a wildred Man in the dark, apt to follow any falſe Fire, and to try every Path; if finding not true Happineſs in one, it tries another. Men by Nature are become Children, as in regard of the Doctrine of Truth, ſo in regard of the Way to Happineſs; and therefore apt and ready to be carried away, and toſſed to and fro with every wind of Temptation, as the Apoſtle intimates, Epheſ. 4. 14. For this ſee alſo 2 Tim. 3. 6. ſpeaking of ſilly Women, he ſays, they are led away with divers Luſts, that is, taking any Luſt to be their Guide: And becauſe they find that this or that Luſt leads not into the right way, therefore they try another; and when they find that brings them not to their Journey's end, therefore they take another, and ſo are led by divers Luſts, and indeed by any: And ſo in Titus 3. 3. For we our ſelves alſo were ſometimes fooliſh, diſobedient, &c. You ſhall find this reaſon I give now: Men (ſaith he) are Fools, ἀνόητοι, injudicious, not able to diſcern what is the Way to Happineſs; and if they do, yet are diſobedient and will not take it; and therefore are πλανόμενοι, Wanderers, and ſo therefore apt to take any Luſt for Guides, and ſo ſerve divers Luſts and Pleaſures. Now Man having loſt the right Courſe God ſet him in, (Eccleſ. 7. 29.) ſeeks out many Inventions; and every Luſt is a new Projector, the Heart not knowing whither to go, and being deceived by every one, is ſtill fit for any new Invention that ſhall be ſuggeſted to it.

2dly. As the Underſtanding hath loſt its true Guide, ſo Mens Luſts are become boundleſs, being once turn'd out of their right Channel, namely God, and the Pleaſures in him. When Man's Deſires did all run into God, then that Channel was big enough to hold them; but now they ſeek current in other Channels of Sin, and the Creatures, which are ſtill too ſhallow, and not able to bound them. The Pleaſure of no one Sin can do it, nor all Pleaſure of Sin can put bounds to our Deſires, but they will ſtill overflow: and ſo they ſtill are ſeeking new Currents, and are prone to any Wickedneſs: as Water you know is, which of all Elements is hardlieſt kept in bounds. It is Iſaiah's Compariſon, chap. 57. 20. But the Wicked are like the troubled Sea when it cannot reſt, whoſe Waters caſt up mire and dirt. So as by reaſon of the vaſtneſs of Man's Deſires, he is ſtill apt to new things: ſo that the ſame reaſon that is given why Materia prima appetit omnes formas, why the firſt Matter deſires all Forms; namely, becauſe its Appetite can be ſatisfied with no one Form, but there is a privation and emptineſs ſtill; and therefore it ſtill ſeeks new, till it meets with the Form of the Heavens, as our Philoſophy doth inform us, (and I make but an alluſion of it) which fills and ſatiates it: By the ſame reaſon is the Soul of Man apt for the pleaſure of any Sin, becauſe ſtill none is able to fill it.

3dly. Whereas Mens Deſires are thus boundleſs, there is nothing but the Law, and Conſcience poſſeſs'd of that Law, left to keep them in compaſs, and keep them from overflowing, as a mighty Bank oppoſed againſt them. But ſo it is, that the Knowledg and Conſcience of this Law doth by accident make theſe Luſts ſwell higher, as a Dam doth a River; and Men having broke one part of the Law down, they are apt to break down another. For as it is in James 2. 10, 11. For whoſoever ſhall keep the whole Law, and yet offend in one Point, he is guilty of all. For he that ſaid, Do not commit Adultery, ſaid alſo, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no Adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a Tranſgreſſor of the Law. He that breaks the Law in one Point, is guilty of all, that is, by the ſame reaſon he will break all as one: ſo as, but that God ſays, as to the Sea, Stay thy proud Waves, ſtill Wickedneſs would in every Man's Heart and Life overflow, and fill the Earth with Violence.

But

But there are many Difficulties and Objections againſt this Truth, That Adam's Sin ſhould convey his Image alike unto all, and that all ſhould have all Concupiſcence in them. Chap. 4.

1. As that ſome Sins, ſome Men are not inclined unto; as ſome not to Drunkenneſs, yea, they have an Antipathy againſt it.
2. There are ſome Sins contrary one to another, as Prodigality and Covetouſneſs; and it is impoſſible a Man ſhould be inclined to Contraries at once.
3. There is ſome one Sin, which every Man is inclined unto more than to others, and therefore not to all alike.
4. Some Men are naturally more wicked than others.
5. Then all ſhould be prone to commit the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

For Anſwer to theſe: Though Adam's Sin hath the ſame and alike Influence into all, yet it finds not the ſame Subject to work upon: It lights not upon alike Conſtitutions either of Body or Mind, and therefore accordingly hath not like Effects: for, Quicquid recipitur, recipitur ad modum recipientis; Whatever is received, is received according to the qualification of the Receiver: For neither are the Conſtitutions of Mens Bodies nor of their Souls alike; which two are the Weapons or Inſtruments of all Sin: Rom. 6. 13. Neither yield ye your Members as Inſtruments of Unrighteouſneſs unto Sin: but yield your ſelves unto God, as thoſe that are alive from the dead; and your Members as Inſtruments of Righteouſneſs unto God. And hence it comes to paſs that ſome Men are naturally more wicked than others; and that ſome are prone to ſome Sins, that others are not prone unto, or not ſo much as others.

1. The Conſtitution of Sinners Bodies is not alike. Which ſeveral Conſtitutions are the Tinder and Fuel for Sins to work in; as Choler for Anger, Melancholy for ſettled Wrath and Repinings; Sanguine for Uncleanneſs, Exceſs and Intemperance: ſo ſome are ſtrong to Drink, others are not. But now though the Soul muſt have Inſtruments and Organs, and a Temperament of the Body to which it is confined to work by; yet becauſe the firſt and original and chief Subject of all Sin is the Soul, therefore it is ſaid, The Soul of Sinners ſhall die: And for this cauſe therefore it is now apart in Hell puniſhed for all Sins, without the Body, till the Day of Judgment, for till then the Body is not. It is the In-dweller in the Houſe, that receives Luſt in at the Windows of the Eyes, at the Wickets of the Ears, &c. Therefore every Man is radically ſtill inclined to all theſe, be the Conſtitution of his Body what it will, ſuppoſe never ſo indiſpoſed to any of theſe Sins: ſo as put that Soul into another Body, it would be as notoriouſly inclined to them, as any other Man is. As Philoſophers ſay of a Man that is born blind, that there is in him a Potentia prima, a firſt Power of Seeing in his Soul, as well as of Hearing, only the Organ or Inſtrument of Sight is defective: There wants Potentia ſecunda, a ſecond Power. So the Devil, who is the Father of all Sin, 1 John 3. 8. He that committeth Sin, is of the Devil; for the Devil ſinneth from the beginning. John 8. 44. Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the Luſts of your Father ye will do: he was a Murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the Truth, becauſe there is no Truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a Lie, he ſpeaketh of his own; for he is a Liar, and the Father of it. Yet the Devil wanting a Body, he is not inclined to Intemperance and Uncleanneſs, as Men are; and yet he delights in our commiſſion of them, witneſs his Incubi & Succubi. So old Men, whoſe Bodies are dry, yet delight in unclean Fancies, and envy the Pleaſure of Adulterers: Their Hearts go with them, and they delight in thoſe who do ſuch things: Rom. 1. 32. Who knowing the Judgment of God, (that they which commit ſuch things are worthy of Death) not only do the ſame, but have pleaſure in them that do them. Which argues the Mind is that way diſpoſed, when the Body is not.

Again, 2. The ſize of Mens Souls is not alike for the ſtrength and largeneſs of their Parts. Some Mens Underſtandings are greater, and their Affections and Stomachs larger; and hence they naturally come to be more wicked, though Original Sin be alike in all. For the more Wit there is without Grace, the more Wickedneſs is there too; and accordingly, one Devil comes to be worſe than another, as they are ſaid to be, Mat. 12. 45. Then goeth he, and taketh with himſelf ſeven other Spirits more wicked than himſelf, and they enter in and dwell there. Put the ſame quantity of Poiſon into Wine and into Water, it will work more violently, and poiſon more ſpeedily in the Wine than the Water; though the Poiſon be the ſame, yet the Spirits that ſet the Poiſon a-work are more in the Wine.

Men of lower Underſtandings are given to Luſts of Body; but Men of higher Underſtandings to Civility and Formality, and a deſire of Honour and Applauſe: and ſtill the more excellent the Creature is, the finer Food it deſires. Camelions live upon Air; and ſome Mens Luſts live upon more ſublimated Objects, out of their Wiſdom contemning baſe Luſts, and ſeeking for Excellencies in other things of an higher nature. And hence comes that great diverſity that is in Mens Lives, though Adam's Sin hath the ſame Influence upon all Mens Hearts.

3. Some Men have their Sins drawn out more than others. Thus there are many Luſts in Children, which do not ſhew themſelves whilſt they are Children, yet when they are elder they do. Some Mens Callings draw out their Sins more; and the Objects that they are converſant about, ſets their Luſts on working, which is call'd a Seaſon of Temptation, Luke 8. 13. —And theſe have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of Temptation fall away: Which is when there comes a fit Object to draw out their Heart. John 12. 4, 5, 6. Then ſaith one of his Diſciples, Judas Iſcariot, Simon's Son, which ſhould betray him, Why was not this Ointment ſold for three hundred Pence, and given to the Poor? This he ſaid, not that he cared for the Poor, but becauſe he was a Thief, and had the Bag, and bare what was put therein. The Ointment ſold for three hundred pence, was a fit Object to draw out Judas his Luſt. So Joſh. 7. 21. Achan ſaid, When I ſaw among the Spoils a goodly Babyloniſh Garment, and two hundred Shekels of Silver, and a Wedg of Gold of fifty Shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them, and behold, they are hid in the Earth in the midſt of my Tent, and the Silver under it: And that drew out his Luſt. And it is for this reaſon holy Agur prays ſo, Prov. 30. 8, 9. Remove far from me Vanity and Lies; give me neither Poverty nor Riches; feed me with Food convenient for me: Leſt I be full, and deny thee, and ſay, Who is the Lord? or leſt I be poor and ſteal, and take the Name of my God in vain. So that ſeveral Diſpoſitions are drawn out according to our ſeveral Conditions. And hence it was, that John Baptiſt (Luke 3.) inſtanceth in this Particular, Sins of their Callings; and he ſays to the Souldiers, Exact no more than your due. And the People that were covetous, to them he ſaith, He that hath two Coats, &c. The Phariſees were Oppreſſors, and ſought Honour one of another. Now becauſe poor Men have a ſhorter Teddar and Compaſs than great Men, therefore it may be they have no occaſion to have their Luſts drawn out; whereas naturally they are as proud and as ambitious as other Men, as covetous as other Men, though their Luſts do not appear for want of opportunity: for, I ſay, uſually Mens Luſts are drawn out according to their Callings.

4. God reſtrains Mens Luſts, either by Wiſdom, as is ſaid of Haman, that he reſtrained his, Eſth. 5. 10. Yea, many times one Luſt reſtrains another, Eccleſ. 4. 8. He reſtrains himſelf, (ſpeaking of a covetous Man) and bereaves his Soul of Good. One Luſt eats up another: yea, ſometimes and often God doth reſtrain by the immediate Work of his own Spirit, by the Gift of Continence: For there is a Spirit put into every Man by Nature of moral Vertues, by which the Lord reſtrains the Corruption of Nature. And though naturally Men are fill'd with all Unrighteouſneſs, and every Luſt is as an Hole to let it out; yet God oftentimes ſtops and plugs up the Holes as he pleaſeth, that they may not run out at every Hole. God doth not broach every Luſt in every Man, yet ſo as in ſome Man or other all Corruption is broached, ſome in one, and ſome in another; and in all the Barrel is no leſs full. And though there be a Sluſe to keep in the Water, though there be a leſs Stream, yet there is never the leſs Water: Even ſo, though Luſts be reſtrained, yet there is nevertheleſs Corruption within. So that God's reſtraining of Mens Luſts, is no argument to prove, that therefore they have not all Sin in them.

5. God

5. God broacheth Sin in a methodical manner, making one Sin the Punishment of another: 2 Thess. 2. 9, 10, 11, 12. Even him whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all Power, and Signs, and lying Wonders, and with all deceivableness of Unrighteousness, in them that perish; because they received not the love of the Truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong Delusion, that they should believe a Lie; That they all might be damned, who believed not the Truth, but had pleasure in Unrighteousness. Rom. 1. 21, 22, 23, 24, 28, 29, 31, 32. Because that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, but became vain in their Imaginations, and their foolish Heart was darkned. Professing themselves to be wise, they became Fools: and changed the Glory of the uncorruptible God, into an Image made like to corruptible Man, and to Birds, and four-footed Beasts, and creeping Things. Wherefore God also gave them up to Uncleanness, through the Lusts of their own Hearts, to dishonour their own Bodies between themselves: and even as they did not like to retain God in their Knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate Mind, to do those things which are not convenient: Being filled with all Unrighteousness, Fornication, Wickedness, Covetousness, Maliciousness; full of Envy, Murder, Debate, Deceit, Malignity, Whisperers, Backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, Boasters, inventers of evil Things, disobedient to Parents, without Understanding, Covenant-breakers, without natural Affection, implacable, unmerciful: Who knowing the Judgment of God, (that they which commit such things are worthy of Death) not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them. And sometimes when one Lust is let out, and a Man gives his Heart full scope in that, then it may be God lets out another to restrain that.

6. Corrupt Nature is not in every Man capable of committing the Sin against the Holy Ghost, unless there hath been some further Qualification added that makes him capable of it; as enlightning, &c. yet there is the Seed of it in every Man's Nature: but a Man never commits that Sin without having first had supernatural Light, against which he hath sinned; which Light therefore except a Man have, he is not capable of committing that Sin. For it is not bare Knowledg required to it, but Knowledg with Assent; not notum, but verum, Heb. 10. 26. For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the Knowledg of the Truth, there remaineth no more Sacrifice for Sins. Therefore Christ says to the Pharisees, John 9. 41. If ye were blind, ye should have no Sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your Sin remaineth; that is, that great Sin against the Holy Ghost, which some of them did commit.

7. Whereas it is said that one Lust is contrary to another, and therefore Men are not prone to all Sin. I answer, That though Men are not inclined unto every Sin at all times, and on all occasions, yet at several times they are drawn out to them. Oftentimes Men that have been most prodigal in their Youth, have proved most covetous in their old Age: and yet it may be said of such, that radically they are inclined to both at once. As now, take a Man that hath the Disease of an Ague upon him, or when his Fit begins, there is Heat and Cold rooted at the same time in the Disease; there is a radical Disposition to violent Heat and violent Cold, which is rooted in the nature of the Disease, but yet they cannot be let out both together, but successively, first the cold Fit, then the hot Fit. So take a Man inclined to Covetousness and Prodigality, and they cannot both break out at once. So a Man that is ambitious, sometimes he bows to the basest of Men. And 'tis often seen that by Fits these Contraries are let loose.

Lastly, Whereas it is objected, In some Men there is an Antipathy against some Sins; as Saul hated Witches, and Julian the Apostate hated Drunkards and Plays, &c. and therefore all are not inclined to all Sins. I answer; This Antipathy is not moral but physical, either because their Bodies will not bear it, or for some other Incommodity they find in it: for we see that Saul went to Witches in a strait, whereby it appears that he did not hate the Sin as it was a Sin.

CHAP.

Book II.

CHAP. V.

That since there is so great a Corruption in our Nature we should be very earnest to have it purged out. Wh is the Way and Means by which we may be purifie If this Corruption be not only a Misery, but a Sin, must not think it enough to make sad Complaints of but we must in a more special manner humble our sel for it in the Sight of God. Since all kinds of Sin are our Nature, we should watch and pray that we fall n into Temptation. All that are enlightned by the Gosp should take care that they do not sin against the Ho Ghost.

IF it be a Corruption which is inherent, sticking in and cleaving unto o Natures, a Defilement made connatural to us, as all things are we have b Birth.

Use 1. The Use may be of Exhortation to purge and cleanse our selves, an our Natures daily from it; and this concerns all, especially regenerate Me I say, to purge your selves, for if it were no more than that it is a Corrupti on and a Defilement that is in you, this naturally calls upon you to throw it out. What is there, than belongs to thee that hath any Filth in it, but you purge and cleanse daily. your Hands and outward Parts, because they contract Dirt daily, you daily wash and cleanse them; your Clothes you wear about you, that do but hang on you, you daily wash, brush, and rub them; your Houses you live in, which are not so near you as your Clothes, you sweep and garnish daily; nay, your Streets you walk in, and that you tread upon, you yet cleanse weekly; and all these because they contract a Filthiness and Defilement? Let me say to you all as our Saviour Christ doth, Luke 11. 39, 40. —Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the Cup and Platter; but your inward Part is full of Ravening and Wickedness. Ye Fools, Did not he that made that which is without, make that which is within also? Do you make clean the outside of your Cups, &c. and suffer your inward Parts to remain full of Filthiness and Corruption? The other are external things, and contract but an external Filthiness, which yet Christ says defiles not a Man, Matth. 15. 20. But this which is in thy Nature is intrinsical, and there by Birth, and a rooted Filthiness in thee, which continually casts out Mire and Dirt, Matth. 15. 18, 19, 20. But those things which proceed out of the Mouth, come forth from the Heart, and they defile the Man. For out of the Heart proceed evil Thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, Fornications, Thefts, false Witnesses, Blasphemies. These are the things which defile a Man: But to eat with unwashen Hands defileth not a Man. So that these Pollutions light not on you by Accident, and externally only upon you, as Dirt on your Clothes, &c. but being in your Hearts, and there inside the Man indeed, as Christ says. These make thee a filthy loathsome and abominable Person; these make your Minds and Consciences defiled, Titus 1. 15. and defile Us: these make you abominable, Titus 1. 16. They profess that they know God, but in Works they deny him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good Work reprobate. Will you not then purge them? This therefore is a Use proper to the first Doctrine which I have handled, and so the Scripture inforceth it, using that Metaphor of Purging, 1 Cor. 5. 7. as having allusion to the working out of that inward Corruption which sticks in us by Nature: So David having acknowledged the Filthiness of his Nature by Birth, and the Uncleanness of it, Psal. 51. 5. Behold, I was shapen in Iniquity, and in Sin did my Mother conceive me: he cries out upon it, Purge me with Hyssop, and create a clean Heart within me, ver. 7. And so Paul in the Place before cited, 1 Cor. 5. 7. Purge out the old Leaven, says he. Now as Leaven is a corrupt Tainture and Sowness in the Dough, so is there answerable a Corruption in the Soul, and this ab origine, from your Birth, from the old Adam, which because it is a Corruption, therefore purges; for that is a Metaphor hath still Reference to Corruption, mingled or blended with some thing which is good in it self, but spoiled whilst that is in it, because it is the old Leaven that hath been there so long, and therefore there is so much of it, and is put so deeply rooted: Therefore go about speedily to cast it out, it is high time to begin; Jer. 4. 14. Wash thy Heart, O Jerusalem: how long shall thy vain Thoughts be in thee? Thy Filthiness hath been there long enough; an old Sore that hath festred, and was from thy Nativity, and thou never didst dress it yet, never purg'd or wash'd it yet; and so after a long Expectation, God says, Jer. 13. 27. I have seen thine Adulteries, and thy Neighings, the Lewdness of thy Whoredom, and thine Abominations on the Hills in the Field. Wo unto thee, O Jerusalem, wilt thou not be made clean? when shall it once be? God thinks it long that you should all be filthy from the Womb, and never so much as once go about to cleanse you; And therefore methinks you hearing this Doctrine, that there is such a Corruption and Filthiness in your Natures, the next Thoughs you should have about it, should be, I am indeed thus from my Birth; O when shall I begin to purge my self?

Chap. 4th

And it being a Corruption of thy Nature, a Filthiness of Flesh and Spirit, as 'tis called, 2 Cor. 7. 1. which sticks both in Soul and Body, seated principally in the Heart, out of which all defiled things come; therefore, I say, be sure the thing thou principally laboureſt to cleanse be thy Heart, and thy natural Disposition. It is a Folly to purge the Streams of thy Life, and neglect the Fountain whence all springs: Cleanse that which is within, says our Saviour Christ, and then that which is without will be clean also, Matth. 23. 26. Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the Cup and Platter, that the outside of them may be clean also. Take a Sow and cleanse her from her Mire without, yet her swinish Disposition remaining, she cannot be said to be clean, but a filthy Creature still, because 'tis her Nature again and again to wallow in the Mire, 2 Pet. 2. 22. There are a Generation of Men purge themselves from the grosser Filth of outward Evils, and think that is enough: But let them consider, that this Corruption is inherent in their Natures, and though their outward Mire be washed off, and they leave gross Sins, yet they may be filthy Swine still; and therefore Solomon says, There are a Generation that are pure in their own Eyes, who are not wash'd from their Filthiness, Prov. 30. 12. Cleansed they were from something others are defiled with, how else could they be clean in their own Eyes, as gross Sinners are not; but yet their original Corruption and filthy Nature still remaining, from which they were not washed, they are not clean.

But you will say, If it be my Nature, how can I be purged of it?

I answer, It is not the Substance of thy Nature, but a corrupt Defilement cleaves to it; for in the phrase of Purging, there is implied a Separation of some Filthiness from something that is good, for that which is nothing but Naughtiness and Filthiness, cannot be said to be purged; for as Election is out of a Mass, refused, so purging from a Mass that is good: and so all the things which this Phrase is drawn from, and alludes unto, implies thus much; as the purging out of Leaven, 1 Cor. 5. 7. The Leaven is one thing, and the Substance of the Dough another, which is good: so that Allusion, Mal. 3. 3, 4. And he shall sit as a Refiner and Purifier of Silver; and he shall purify the Sons of Levi, and purge them as Gold and Silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an Offering in Righteousness. Then shall the Offerings of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the Days of old, and as in former Years. There is something which is naught, mingled with what is good; Dross with the Substance of Gold, and the purging is the severing of these two; and as the Gold hath a faces mingled with it, which it hath from its Original, as it comes out of the Book II. Womb of the Earth; so the Nature and Substance of Man, hath since the Fall a Dross and inherent Defilement, which is mingled and incorporated with the Soul; I may say so without Absurdity, for 'tis a Body of Sin and Death, Rom. 7. 24. O wretched Man that I am! who shall deliver me from the Body of this Death? Now therefore this Purging is not the taking away of any of the Substance, or what is created by God in the Soul, but only the Defilement. The Purges which Physicians give, carry away something that is good with the bad Humours; and the Fire that consumes the Dross, causeth some of the Gold to perish; and therefore, 1 Pet. 1. 7. Faith is said to be much more precious than Gold which perisheth, when it is tried in the Fire; for some of the Gold perisheth, but not a Shred or Grain of thy Faith: And so this Purging takes nothing away but only the Corruption, not a Jot of the Substance which God created perisheth. Isa. 27. 9. By this therefore shall the Iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the Fruit to take away his Sin: when he maketh all the Stones of the Altar as Chalk-Stones, that are beaten in sunder, the Groves and Images shall not stand up. The Prophet speaks of this Purging which I now exhort to, as it is wrought by Affliction; by this shall the Iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is all the Fruit to take away the Sin, that is, all so takes away, impairs not the Substance of thy Soul; so that when I say it is a purging of thy Nature, my meaning is, it is a severing the Corruption which now is in thee by Nature from the Substance of thy Soul, which God made. I exhort you to purge away nothing else; for, my Brethren, you have a Substance made by God, endued with natural Faculties, all which are good, and Sin is the Spoil and Corruption of them, as the Dross is the Spoil of the Gold and Silver, if it be not severed from it; as ill Humours are the Spoil and Corruption of the Body, if they are not severed from it, and purged out. And therefore that should be a Motive to you, to purge your selves from this Filth, because it is the Spoil of that which is good in thee; God loseth a Creature, a noble Creature, by reason of it, and this is an Argument Christ useth, Luke 11. 39, 40. Why, they should wash their Hearts as well as their Cups; Did not God that made that which is without make that which is within also, namely, their Hearts? Their Hearts were of God's making, and it is the Corruption which spoils the Creature that God made, and destroys it: Now therefore purge your selves, and wash your Hearts as well as your Cups; for why shouldest thou suffer that which is naught, to spoil that which is good in thee, for want of purging it out? Thou hast good Wit, it may be, which God hath made a Wisdom, and a large Understanding; is it not pity it should be spoiled? Why, thou art born with a Corruption cleaving to it, which if thou severest it not, will be the Spoil of it, that it shall be good for nothing; but as Silver when the Dross is in it, is fit to make nothing of, but crumbles and breaks. Tit. 1. 15. He having said, that Mens Minds and Consciences are defiled, he adds, ver. 16. That they are reprobate to every good Work: And therefore now God shall be forced to reject them, and to destroy the Creature that he hath made, if thou wilt not purge out the Defilement from thee. Jer. 6. 30. when he laboured to purge them, and they would not, it is said, Reprobate Silver shall Men call them, for the Lord hath rejected them: Though there was a Substance which was good in them, which God might regard as his Creature, yet their Dross remaining, he could have no Use of them; they being reprobate in themselves to every good Work, God would reject them also: As a Vessel which a Man cannot get the Filth out of, he dasheth against the Walls and breaks; 2 Tim. 2. 21. There are Vessels of Honour, and Vessels of Dishonour; if a Man purge himself, he shall be a Vessel unto Honour, sanctified and meet for the Master's Use, and prepared to every good Work.

Womb

Observe, first, That there are Vessels of several sorts, and the Clay and Fashion is from God, the Potter: Now, how come some to be Vessels of Dishonour, that is, of Damnation, and Wrath, and Confusion of Face? some of Honour and Glory, namely, Salvation? for so Honour is taken, Rom. 2. 7. Why, says the Apostle, if a Man purge himself, then he shall become a Vessel of Honour; for all have Defilement in them by Nature, none become Vessels of Honour but those that purge themselves: and why? because none else [illegible]

God imploy in that honourable Imployment of his Service, fall to a filthy course sanctified and made for his Master's Use. God thanks us the more for his Business, no more than you can do with an unclean Vessel to drink in; and so he is fain to lay you aside as Vessels wherein he hath no pleasure; Hos. 8. 8. Israel is swallowed up, now shall they be among the Gentiles, as a Vessel wherein is no pleasure. And not only so, but as break you in pieces like a Potter's Vessel, Psal. 2. 9. So that unless you mean to lose all that is good in you, and lose God's Creature, purge your selves from all Pollutions of the Flesh and Spirit; only be sure to make thorow Work; and above all, endeavour to purge Corruption out of thy Heart (and Nature, as well as out of thy Actions); for take what pains thou wilt to purge thy self from gross Actions, thou shalt still be reckoned a filthy Person, as one that hath no part in Christ, John 13. 8. — If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me. Thou art but an Out-side, or civil Man he who purge themselves from Adultery, &c. but within are full of Uncleanness, &c. O Jerusalem, (says God, Jer. 4. 14.) wash thy Heart, — How long shall thy vain Thoughts lodg within thee? Not thy Hands only, and the outward Converse, but thy Heart and the evil Thoughts must be purged; and therefore says David, Psal. 51. 7. Create a clean Heart within me; apprehending his Corruption, it would not content him to be kept clean from wallowing any more in Uncleanness, but he must have his Heart be washed from the Defilement he left behind in it, and from those unclean Fancies, the impression of that Sin renewed in him day by day. And therein lies the difference of Hypocrites and Believers, the foolish and wise Virgins, as they are called Mat. 25. 2. Virgins they are both called, as keeping themselves undefiled from some Corruptions and adulterous Practices to which others are given to. And so Virgin is used in opposition to the Romish Whore, Rev. 14. 4. These are they which were not defiled with Women, for they are Virgins; these are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth; these were redeemed from among Men, being the First-fruits unto God, and to the Lamb. Only the wise Virgins purify their Hearts as well as their Hands; but the foolish, though Virgins in regard of being clear from common Whorings and Adulteries of the World, yet their Hearts were unclean within, their Folly lying in this, that they purged the Streams, and not the Fountains, which is a vain and foolish Labour; so therefore Christ calls Pharisees, Fools, Luke 11. 40. Ye Fools, did not he that made that which is without, make that which is within also? And therefore you shall find that difference between true Believers and Temporaries, in 2 Pet. 1. 4. Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious Promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the Divine Nature, having escaped the Corruption that is in the World through Lust. And 2 Pet. 2. 20. For if after they have escaped the Pollutions of the World, through the knowledg of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again intangled therein, and overcome; the latter end is worse than the beginning. There is a riddance in both of Defilement, but the one is said barely to escape Pollution, τὰ μιάσματα, the other Corruption though Lust; the one inward, the other outward, the Mire external only; for so 2 Pet. 2. 22. interprets it, comparing them to Swine: But the other are cleared from internal Pollutions; for on the contrary, they are to be partakers of a Divine Nature.

Object. But you will say, How shall I get this Corruption out, seeing it is in my Nature; Jer. 13. 23. Can a Blackmoor change his Skin? This is my Skin, the natural Die which I brought with me into the World; or, Can a Leopard change his Spots? Though they be but Spots, yet how shall I be able to get them out?

Answ. I indeed confess there is nothing in Nature can do it, there is no Creature, that is simply a Creature, can do it; a Toad cannot empty it self of Poison, because it is incorporated into it; so neither canst thou empty thy self of Sin, because it is incorporated into thee, it is blended in thy Nature, and there is nothing but that which is contrary can expel a contrary. Now, there is nothing contrary to Sin in thee, yet, there is the Creature can do it for thee; Jer. 2. 22. Though thou wash thy self with Nitre, and take much Sope, yet thine iniquity is marked before thee, &c. Take all the Sope in the World, such as

Book II.

Object. But how doth he do it?

Answ. He doth it, first, by his Blood; there was nothing else could do it, i... that which purges your Consciences from dead Works; as Heb. 9. 14. How m... more shall the Blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit, offered himself wi... out Spot to God, purge your Conscience from dead Works to serve the living G... There is in every part of our Nature a Mass of Corruption, a Bundle of F... ly, Prov. 15. 22. the aſſiſtance of his Spirit: Purge me, O Lord, (ſaith he) [illegible]. 1 Pet. 1. 2. this Work is attributed to the Spirit: in 1 Pet. 1. 22. Seeing ye have purified your Souls in obeying the Truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the Brethren; ſee that ye love one another with a pure Heart fervently.

Thirdly; The Spirit is conveyed to us in the Word; therefore the Apoſtle, 1 Pet. 1. 22. They had purified their Souls in obeying the Truth: that thou muſt be pure in Heart, be frequent in the Word: therefore our Saviour ſays, You are clean through the Word that I have ſpoken to you; for the Spirit goes with the Word, and that waſhes and purifies the Heart, but you muſt firſt obey it then; therefore it is ſaid, they purified their Hearts in obeying the Truth. It is not enough to hear a Sermon, but you muſt ſet it down, and do what it commands, and then it will purge your Heart. Pſal. 119. 9. Wherewith ſhall a young Man cleanſe his ways? by ruling himſelf according to thy Word. Take the Word and digeſt it, ſqueeze the Juice of it into thy Heart, and it will purge thee from all contrary Corruption.

Fourthly; Of all parts in the Word, the Promiſes have the moſt Virtue in them, they do purge moſt of all; 2 Pet. 1. 4. Whereby are given to us exceeding great and precious Promiſes, that by theſe ye might be partakers of the divine Nature, having eſcaped the Corruption that is in the World through Luſt. 2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore theſe Promiſes, dearly Beloved, let us cleanſe ourſelves from all Filthineſs of the Fleſh and Spirit, perfecting Holineſs in the fear of God. Do but throughly drink down the Promiſes, and they will purge thy Heart.

Fifthly; God giveth Power to ſome Graces to do it;

As, 1. Faith is a ſpecial Means to purge thy Heart, Acts 15. 9. for it brings home the Promiſes ſo to thy Heart, as it is purged by them; as when a Man comes to conſider of his Priviledges, that he is the Son of God in Chriſt, 2 Cor. 6. 18. And alſo conſidering, that if he be the Son of God, then he muſt be like him. Now knowing that God is pure, this makes him labour by all means to purge himſelf: So likewiſe when the Soul conſiders, I have a new Husband, now I am married unto Chriſt, and therefore I muſt labour to be pure. So likewiſe when the Soul by Faith conſiders, I am now the Temple of God, and he walks in it, and therefore I muſt not make it a Den of Thieves; 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20. What, know ye not that your Body is the Temple of the Holy Ghoſt which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your Body, and in your Spirit, which are God's. And indeed, Holineſs becomes his Houſe for ever, Pſalm 93. 5.

2. The Lord gives his Power to hope; 1 John 3. 2. He that hath this Hope, purifies himſelf. So that, haſt thou a Hope ever to come to Heaven? then thou wilt fall to waſhing and ſcowring of thy Nature. By this you ſee how you may be pure: Go to Chriſt, bathe in his Blood, pray for the Spirit, obey the Word, ſqueeze out the Juice of the Promiſes, and theſe will be excellent Helps to purge your Hearts.

And there are certain Times when this is to be done:

Eſpecially, 1. Young Men they ſhould do it; How ſhall a young Man cleanſe his ways? Pſal. 119. 9. Remember thy Creator in the Days of thy Youth, Eccleſ. 12. 1. God ſpeaks not to old Men, there is not ſuch a place to them in all the Scripture, where God ſaith ſo to them; therefore ſet about the Work betimes, and take the beſt opportunity, it is good to purge the Body in the Spring, it is good to purge the Kingdom in the Spring of a King's Reign; and it is good to purge the Heart in the Spring of thy Youth, before old Age come upon thee.

2. Again, when God ſtirs thy Heart at the hearing of the Word, or with a good Motion of his Spirit, then it is good purging; they ſay, it is good purging in a rainy Day, becauſe then the Humours are ſtirring, and they will go away the eaſier. Now there are Times, (Eccl. 24. 13.) when God comes to purge you: O then do you fall a cleanſing of your ſelves; for God would then purge you, would you but join with him. Yet it is the Spirit that muſt [illegible]

Book II. do it after all? 1 Pet. 1. 22. Seeing ye have purified your Souls, in obeying the Truth through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the Brethren; see that ye love one another with a pure Heart fervently.

Object. But what is it to purge your selves?

Answ. It implies three things.

First; To loose thy Heart from Sin. As if you would purge a Cloth, you steep it in the Water to loosen the Defilement of it: If you would purge Silver, you put it into the Fire to loosen the Dross from it; if you would purge the Chaff from the Wheat, you thresh it first, that you may loosen it: so if you would purge Sin, you must labour to loosen it from the Heart: therefore it is said, that Christ came for this purpose, Zech. 13. 1. In that Day there shall be a Fountain opened to the House of David, and to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, for Sin, and for Uncleanness. Christ was to come to work a Separation from Sin and Uncleanness; thou wast bound up in the Band of Iniquity, and Christ came forth to loose the Band, and to untie thee from it, when it was incorporated into thee: 1 John 3. 8. He that committeth Sin, is of the Devil; for the Devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the Works of the Devil. He came to untie the Band, and to destroy the Works of the Devil.

Secondly; Purging implies a taking away of the Dross; for it is but a fool to put the Gold into Fire, if you let the Dross lie upon it and keil it again; it is but a folly to thresh the Wheat, if you do not winnow and fan it, and throughly purge the Floor: Even so you must do in this, you must purge out the Corruption, for this is all the Fruit of Purifying, to take away the Sin, Isa. 27. 9. By this therefore shall the Iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the Fruit, to take away his Sin: when he maketh all the Stones of the Altar as Chalk-stones that are beaten in sunder, the Groves and the Images shall not stand up. This is to purge your selves from Sin, to lay it aside as it is; James 1. 21. Wherefore lay apart all Filthiness and superfluity of Naughtiness, and receive with meekness the ingrafted Word, which is able to save your Souls. For it is but an Excrement: if Naughtiness could have an Excrement, Sin should be it. And there is this Scum in you which must be boiled out, Ezek. 24. 11, 12. you must not let it boil in again, but you must fetch it out; even as Merchants do in boiling and scumming of new Wines, so must you, when the Scum of your Corruptions rise, you must purge it out.

Thirdly; You being purged, you must keep your selves pure from the Pollutions of the World, and not so much as touch the unclean thing; 2 Cor. 6. 17. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you. And being once purged, you must walk carefully, even as a Man walking in a miry Lane, that you do not spatter your selves again. John 17. 15. I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the World, but that thou shouldest keep them from the Evil. 1 John 5. 18. We know that whosoever is born of God, sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not. Thou hast put on thy Clothes, and washed thy Feet, and wilt thou wallow in the Mire again?

Object. But how shall I get it loosened and purged? and what shall I do to keep it clean?

Answ. To get it loosened.

First; Get a dislike of Sin. As if we would loosen two Friends that are knit together in a common Bond of Friendship; the only way is to get a dislike of one another, and then they will soon part. So to loosen Sin, get an ill Opinion of it; which that you may, consider what the Word speaks against it, and think of Sin as it speaks of it, and it is able to engender in thee an ill Opinion of Sin, therefore hear the Word much, read it much, digest it much.

Secondly; Humble thy ſelf much for Sin, get thy Heart broken and melted: for it is ſaid of Joſhua, that when he humbled himſelf, his Heart melted at the Word. Now when you put Gold into the Fire, when it is melted, you may eaſily take the Droſs from it: So you may deal with your Corruptions, James 4. 8. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you: cleanſe your Hands, ye Sinners, and purify your Hearts, ye double-minded. But how ſhall they ſo do? Verſ. 9. Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your Laughter be turned to Mourning, and your Joy to Heavineſs.

Again, that you may purge Sin: The ſpecial Means is, to labour to ſtrengthen the inward Man; for there is in every Man vis ejectiva, an expulſive Faculty, to expel and purge out Corruptions. Now what is the reaſon that any Man dies, but only becauſe this Power is not ſtrong enough to caſt out the deadly Humours? Even ſo to purge out Sin, thou muſt ſtrengthen the inward Man, labour to get Grace, as Faith, Joy, Hope, to ſtrengthen and make the inward Man more lively; for Sin is but an outward Man, an Excrement which the inward Man will ſoon ſhake off, and purge it out, even as Nature doth a Scab; for all Grace purgeth the Heart, and maketh it to caſt out Corruption, therefore labour to purge it out.

Uſe 2. When thou haſt purged out thy Sins, keep thy ſelf clean. I have read a Story of a Fuller and a Collier; and as faſt as the Fuller purged his Cloth, the Collier fouled it again, becauſe they lived both in one Houſe: Even ſo it is with us, by reaſon of the nearneſs of the Fleſh, and the regenerate part in us, and therefore it is the harder to keep our ſelves clean. But that thou mayeſt, Firſt; Keep thy ſelf from evil Thoughts, for they defile the Man, Mat. 15. 18, 19, 20. But thoſe things which proceed out of the Mouth, come forth from the Heart, and they defile the Man. For out of the Heart proceed evil Thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, Fornications, Thefts, Falſe-witneſs, Blaſphemies. Theſe are the things which defile a Man; but to eat with unwaſhen Hands, defileth not a Man. The more thou entertaineſt theſe Thoughts, the more thy Heart will be corrupted.

Secondly; Keep thy ſelf from evil Speeches, becauſe evil Words corrupt good Manners, 1 Cor. 15. 33. thou canſt not gargle them in thy Mouth, but ſome of them will go down.

Thirdly; Take heed of ill Company, for that will defile the Man. In the Time of the Law, if a living Man touched a dead Man, he was Unclean: Take heed therefore of converſing with dead Men, for it will defile thee; as when thou haſt prayed and taken pains with thy Heart, and brought it into ſome good frame, when thou comeſt into ill Company, they will cool thee again.

Fourthly; Take heed of all occaſions of evil abuſe of things lawful, even they alſo will make thee impure, becauſe it is a means to draw out the impurity of thy Heart; therefore if thou be defiled, as Tit. 1. 15. Unto the Pure all things are pure; but unto them that are defiled, and unbelieving, is nothing pure; but even their Mind and Conſcience is defiled. Then all thoſe things that draw out the Corruption of thy Heart, though they be things lawful, yet uſe them not, for often by lawful Recreations, Men gather Defilement; even as a Man by telling of Money defileth his Hands with it.

And alſo to ſtir you up to this Duty; conſider theſe Motives.

1. Unleſs thou purge thy ſelf, thou haſt no Part in Chriſt, Joh. 13. 8. Peter ſaith unto him, Thou ſhalt never waſh my Feet. Jeſus anſwered him, If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no Part with me. If Chriſt have not waſhed thy Heart, thou haſt no part in him; Chriſt was made fit to looſe Sin in us, therefore if Sin be not diſſolved in thee, thou haſt no Part in him.

2. This

BOOK II.

2. This Purging diſtinguiſheth a godly Man from an Hypocrite; an Hypocrite waſheth the outward Man, Prov. 30. 12. Though they are pure in their own Eyes, yet they are not waſhed from their Filthineſs; but now a Child of God waſheth his Heart: Therefore if thou wilt have Comfort by this Diſtinction, labour to purge thy ſelf, and to get the Core of Sin out.

3. Without this thou ſhalt never ſee God, Pſal. 24. 3, 4. Who ſhall aſcend into the Hill of the Lord? and who ſhall ſtand in his holy Place? He that hath clean Hands, and a pure Heart; who hath not lift up his Soul unto Vanity, nor ſworn deceitfully: Only he that hath clean Hands and a pure Heart ſhall be received into God's Tabernacle: Now thou art impure, and doſt thou think ever to come to God? no, God will have no ſuch come to him.

4. For outward Bleſſings, till thou purge thy ſelf, God will not many times beſtow them upon them; it may be God hath a Heart to do it, but thou haſt an impure Heart, and therefore canſt not receive them, Pſal. 73. 1. God is good only to ſuch as have clean Hearts: He knows if he ſhould give thee outward Bleſſings, they would defile thee. I will ſhut up all therefore with that Exhortation, Jam. 4. 8. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you: Cleanſe your Hands, ye Sinners, and purify your Hearts, ye double-minded. God will never draw nigh unto you, unleſs you purge your ſelves. But how ſhall we do it? He tells you in the next Verſe, be afflicted and mourn: Go to Chriſt, bring Faith with you; go to Chriſt, and deſire him to purge thee; labour to drink down the Word deep into thy Soul; and this will be a means to purge thy Heart; and for all this thou wilt not be clean. Mark, with what God concludes all the Scriptures, He that is filthy, let him be filthy ſtill, Revel. 22. 11. As if he had ſaid, Go and ſee what will come of it; ſee who will have the worſt of it. But this know, that when God comes to purge thee, and thou wilt not, he will never ſtrive to purge thee more, Jer. 6. 30. God would have purged them, and they would not; therefore reprobate Silver ſhall Men call them, becauſe the Lord hath rejected them; and then thou wilt be found at laſt to be a Veſſel of Wrath, and ſo wilt be daſh'd in pieces. Therefore think this ſeriouſly with your ſelves, if I be found in my natural Defilement, not purged, the Lord will daſh me to pieces, and I ſhall never be found a Veſſel of Honour, fit for my Maſter's Uſe. Therefore labour to be earneſt to be in Chriſt, that purifying Vertue may go out from him, and thou mayeſt bring forth Fruit in him; John 15. 2. Every Branch in me, that beareth not Fruit, he taketh away; and every Branch that beareth Fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more Fruit: And then God will purge thee; and the more thou draweſt to Chriſt, the more purging thou ſhalt have, and the more God will cut off the old Branches of Sin in thee.

Uſe 3. If this Corruption be not only a Miſery befaln our Nature, but alſo truly and properly in it ſelf a Sin; then let me exhort you in a true and thorow ſenſe of it, not only to cry out and complain of it, (as Men uſe to do of Miſeries) but in an eſpecial manner to humble your ſelves for it, when you come into God's Preſence.

1. I ſay, to be truly and thorowly ſenſible of it; for otherwiſe you can neither truly complain of it as a Miſery, nor be humbled for it as a Sin, of which Corruption and Diſtemper of Nature yet the moſt Men have been and are (like Men in a mortal and deadly Sickneſs) inſenſible. So far were ſome of the Stoicks and Heathens of old, and Atheiſts of theſe times, from thinking it a Miſery, as conſequenter naturæ vivere, was with them, fælicitatis finem attingere, to live according to Nature was to attain the end of Happineſs; like brute Beaſts, following the ſwinge of Nature and corrupt Reaſon, as the trueſt Guide to Happineſs; whence haply it was that ſome in the primitive Times thought Fornication and Uncleanneſs could be no Sin, (becauſe it was an Action ſo agreable to Nature) no more than in Beaſts which do according to their kind. And indeed where nothing but Nature it ſelf ſat the Judg upon it ſelf, we need not wonder at ſo favourable a Sentence. But in thoſe among us Chriſtians, who have had the true Glaſs of God's Word to diſcover the Deformity and Depravation of their Natures unto them, I do much more wonder to hear hear them bolſter themſelves, and lay the Foundation of their Hopes for Heaven in the Goodneſs and Sweetneſs of their Natures, Smoothneſs and Ingenuouſneſs of their Diſpoſitions; yea, and that ſo far as to put it into the Ballance againſt the Exorbitancies and groſs Enormities in their Lives, thinking their actual Sins will not damn them, their Inclinations being ſo good and towardly. Chap. 5.

Others, if further convinced, ſo as not to juſtify themſelves by the falſe ſuppoſed Goodneſs of it, yet ſo as at leaſt to excuſe themſelves by the Badneſs of it, which they are forced to acknowledg, laying all upon the Devil and their Natures: 'Tis their natural Inclination and Diſpoſition to do ſo, and we are all Fleſh and Blood, and what other can be expected of them? This is their Talk. So far are and were all theſe ſorts of Men from laying it to Heart, and being truly ſenſible of it. Better ſhall it fare with thoſe more ingenuous Heathens, who were not only ſenſible of this Diſeaſe of Nature, but complained of it as a woful Miſery. So Tully, lib. 2. de Rep. as quoted by Auguſt. lib. 4. contra Julian. laments the miſerable Condition of Mankind, quem natura noverca in lucem edidit, corpore nudo, fragili, infirmo, animo ad moleſtias anxio, ad timores humili, ad labores debili, and libidines proclivi, in quo divinus ignis ſit obrutus, ingenium & mores. But yet all this Acknowledgment ended in a mere Complaint, and that not in particular ſo much, bewailing it in themſelves, (which only humbles) but in the general, as the common Condition; neither indeed was it ſo much an humble Complaint of this Miſery, as a proud Expoſtulation, and upbraiding of Nature, that is, the God of Nature, as a Step-father, for making them ſo as they thought. Which Acknowledgment, though it might humble them in regard of their Carriage one towards another, as conſidering they were ſubject to the like Miſeries other Men were, yet it brought them not upon their Knees for it before God, but fluſh'd them rather againſt him; and therefore complain they did, (as Titus Veſpaſian when dying) that the Frame of Nature ſhould ſo ſoon be diſſolved by Death, (God's Sergeant and Executioner) not conſidering that it was originally ſet wrong, not by God, but their own Default, and ſo went continually wrong, inſomuch that God was provoked to break the Workmanſhip that he had made, conſidering it would not be mended.

Deinde ad primam ſtatim manſionem Febrim nactus cum inde Lectică transferretur, ſuſpexiſſe dicitur dimotis plagulis cœlum multumque conquæſtus, eripi ſibi vitam immerenti: neque enim extare ullum ſuum factum pœnitendum excepto duntaxat uno. Suetonius in Vitâ Titi Veſp. c. 10.

Others among us Chriſtians there are, acknowledg it not only a Miſery, and themſelves miſerable Men in particular, in regard of it, but alſo humbly acknowledg it before God, as a Miſery, that not he, but they in their firſt Fathers have brought upon themſelves; ſo as indeed their Natures are juſtly thus corrupted, and therefore humbly ſue to him for Pity and Deliverance, as Beggars do to thoſe that are able to help them, as maimed Perſons do to a Phyſician.

Uſe 4. But yet, my Brethren, in the 4th Place, That which I am to exhort you to, is not only to be thus particularly ſenſible of it, and ſo to complain of it, and that not only as a Miſery that is juſtly befaln you, as the juſt Debt of the firſt Sin you are guilty of; but further than all this, to lay it to Heart as a Sin, and accordingly to humble your ſelves for it as low as Hell, with a Heart broken, confounded, and a Mouth put in the Duſt: For 'tis one thing ſo far to be humbled for it, as a Man that hath brought himſelf into Miſery, and ſo laments himſelf, and ſo ſues out to God for help and pity, or as a wounded Patient doth to the Phyſician: And another thing to be humbled before God for it, as a Traitor before his Prince, or a guilty Perſon before his Judg: ſo as to acknowledg, that though that curſed Root of original Corruption had never ſprouted forth into actual Sin, yet it, and himſelf for it, did deſerve to be ſtub'd up, and to be caſt into Hell, merely becauſe it was naturally ſo poiſoned and embittered, and envenomed with ſuch Diſpoſitions as are truly ſinful and hateful in God's moſt holy and all-ſeeing Eye.

Now thus to humble a Man's Soul for it, contains four things in it.

1. To be particularly ſenſible of the Evil and Miſery of it; for no Affection ſtirs to any thing, be it good or evil, till we apprehend it ſo; as not Love, ſo nor Grief, and ſenſible we muſt be of it: This particularly, not barely, as the common Condition of all Mankind, for that keeps Men rather off from humbling bling themſelves; we think our ſelves to be the more to be excuſed, as from Thankfulneſs for Mercies others have a ſhare in, ſo from the Guilt of Sins which are common to others. Therefore I ſay, a Man muſt be particularly ſenſible of it, that though all the World complain not of theſe Wounds and feſtred Sores we brought into the World with us, yet let us lay them open before the Throne of God from Day to Day, as if no Man elſe in the World had the like bad Nature to ours.

2. To be humbled, requires ſuch a ſenſible Acknowledgment, and laying open of this Miſery, as to have a Man's Mouth ſtopp'd, and nothing to ſay for one's ſelf, by way of Excuſe, how it befel us: And therefore that to be truly humbled, is expreſſed by being confounded, and not able to open the Mouth any more, Ezek. 16.63. That thou mayeſt remember, and be confounded, and never open thy Mouth any more; becauſe of thy Shame, when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou haſt done, ſaith the Lord God. The Heathens therefore, though ſenſible of it, were not humbled for it, becauſe they complained of Nature for bringing them forth ſo; and indeed if we apprehend we are fallen into Miſery, and not through our own Default; we think we deſerve pity and help, and complain of thoſe that afford it not: But to be humbled is not ſimply to be ſenſible of, and complain of a Miſery, and to ſeek and cry out for help; but to complain of our ſelves, through whoſe Default it is befaln us, and that juſtly: And then the Creature begins to be humbled before God, for then, though God be of a pitiful Nature, and ready to help, yet our Miſery being befaln us by our own Default, we then apprehend him not bound by the Laws of Pity to ſuccour us, but that he may juſtly ſay, You may thank your ſelves for it. Now all muſt confeſs their original Depravation, as a thing befaln them, wherein they have nothing to ſay by way of Excuſe; and though indeed none can help it or avoid it, (for we are born ſo) yet it comes by our Default, ſinning in Adam; and therefore the Apoſtle, Rom. 3.19. ſpeaking of the general Depravation of the Natures and Lives of all Mankind, as there he expreſly out of Pſal 14. doth from ver. 10, to 19. ſays he, ver. 19. That every Mouth may be ſtopp'd, have nothing to ſay, Why, I am thus unrighteous, and that there is no Fear of God before my Eyes.

But yet 3. This is not all; for ſimply to acknowledg a Miſery which needs pity, delivering us from it, ſuppoſe befaln us juſtly, doth not thorowly humble or bring the Creature low enough befow God, as now it ought to be. But when the Creature ſhall come in and acknowledg this Corruption, not only a Miſery, but alſo a Sin; and that therefore he needs not only pity delivering, but that alſo he needs Mercy pardoning; that not only he deſerves no pity, becauſe this befel him through his own Default, but that he deſerves Wrath inſtead of Mercy, as being his Sin: That it is not only deſervedly befaln him by Reaſon of the Guilt of Adam's Sin, that he cannot rid himſelf out of, but alſo that in it ſelf it deſerves a worſe Miſery, Eternal Death. And thus alſo ſhould all Mankind humble themſelves before God for this Corruption, Rom. 3.19. Now we know that what things ſoever the Law ſaith, it ſaith to them who are under the Law; that every Mouth may be ſtopped, and all the World may become guilty before God: All the World in regard of a natural Righteouſneſs ſpoken of before, even Children and all; all the World muſt become guilty, that is, in their own Acknowledgment before God, not only have their Mouths ſtopp'd, (if it were a Miſery ſo they might be) but alſo that they are guilty, that is, as ſignifies in the Original, ſubject to the Wrath and Judgment of God. Therefore, Epheſ. 2.3. ſpeaking of that natural Corruption brought by Nature, he ſays, By Nature we were the Children of Wrath, that is, by reaſon of the Corruption of our Natures, which he there ſpeaks of: for, as Whitaker well obſerves, he brings it after he had deſcribed the Corruption in their Lives, in the former Words, as the cauſe whence that ſprung: And having ſpoken of both in ver. 1. in general, in theſe Words, Dead in Treſpaſſes, that is, Sins actual, deſerving Death, and in Sins, namely, of natural Corruption. 1. He ſhews particularly the Treſpaſſes of the Lives, ver. 2, 3. And 2. adds the other part of their Sinfulneſs, which was the cauſe of the Corruption of their Natures; They were by Nature the Children of Wrath, that is, not only deſerving Wrath in regard of their Lives, but alſo of their very Natures; for to be a Child of Wrath, is to deſerve Wrath, as Judas is called, The Child of Perdition, John 17. 12. Chap. 5.

But in that true and kind Humiliation which I exhort you to, there is a 4*th* thing required, not ſimply to judg and acknowledg a Man's ſelf ſubject to Wrath for the Sin, but to look on a Man's ſelf with Loathing and Deteſtation for it; for you ſhall find humbling a Man's ſelf, ſo expreſſed, They ſhall loath themſelves for their Sins, Ezek. 36. 31. Were this Corruption ſimply a Miſery that had befaln them, though juſtly, yet if it were no more, one would not loath himſelf for it, no, no more than a Man doth his own Fleſh, though full of Boils and Diſeaſes; he hates not his Fleſh, becauſe he looks on thoſe Diſeaſes as a Miſery only befaln it; neither to be humbled for it is merely to apprehend that Wrath due to it as to a Sin, for that may be where no Love of God is, out of Self-Love; but to humble thy ſelf for it, is to look upon this Diſeaſe, and even to hate thy own ſelf for it, to look upon it as God doth, not only as a thing that deſerves his Wrath, but which he abominates, cannot endure to have any Communion with, as contrary to him and his Laws; and ſo now to look on thy ſelf for it with the ſame Eye, to account thy ſelf not only a guilty Perſon, but a filthy, loathſom, abominable, vile Perſon, contrary to God as a Creature, which, if God would not, thou couldeſt find in thy Heart to deſtroy. And thus Job humbled himſelf for the Corruption of his Nature, Job 42. 6. having ſeen, ver. 5. the Holineſs of God's Nature, Now mine Eye hath ſeen thee, ſays he; and then reflecting his Eye upon himſelf, his filthy Nature, he abhorred himſelf: for, in regard of this Corruption, a Man is not only a miſerable Perſon in God's Eye, Rom. 7. 24. O wretched Man that I am: who ſhall deliver me from the Body of this Death? and ſo he is the Object of pity; but Man is a ſinful Creature, and ſo an Object of Wrath, Epheſ. 2. 3. yea, an abominable Perſon, Job 15. 16. How much more abominable and filthy is Man, which drinketh Iniquity like Water? He is the Object of Hatred and Loathing; he ſpeaks there of Man in regard of original native Corruption; for ver. 14. he ſaith, What is Man that he ſhould be clean, and he which is born of a Woman, that he ſhould be righteous?

And now to preſs this on you, having ſhewn what 'tis to humble your ſelves for it. If you have cauſe thus to humble your ſelves, loath and abhor your ſelves for any thing, then much more for the Corruption of your Nature. Single out the groſſeſt Sin that ever thou haſt committed, which hath brought thee loweſt on thy Knees, and hath coſt thee moſt Sighs and Sobs, which thou haſt drenched and watered with moſt Tears; and compare it but with the evil Diſpoſition of thy Heart and Nature, which was the Root that curſed Fruit grew on; and whereas thou haſt beſtowed a thouſand Tears on the one, thou haſt cauſe to ſhed Millions of Tears for this, and to wiſh indeed that thy Head were a Fountain of Tears, to weep Day and Night, becauſe thy Heart is a Fountain of Sin, that caſts out Filth both Day and Night. Jer. 9. 1. Jer. 6. 7.

Conſider, 1. That actual Sin was but a Bud ſprung from this Root, that the Cauſe; this groſs Sin but the Effect; the groſſeſt Sin that ever thou committedſt, ſimply conſidered, is but the Effect of thine inbred Corruption.

But this is not all, I may add, Compare it with many, I dare not ſay all, thy groſs Sins, ſimply conſidered, as Fruits out of this Root and Stalk they grew on, and thou haſt as much Cauſe to be humbled for the Badneſs of thy Nature, as for them: Though indeed thou ſhouldſt do well to put both together, and humble thy Soul for thy actual Sins the more, becauſe they are the Offspring of ſo curſed and hateful a Mother; and for the Corruption of thy Nature, becauſe it is the Mother of ſo curſed a Brood. And if thou ſayeſt, Why, but my actual Sins are infinite in number, ſurpaſſing my Knowledg more than the Sands; ſo is the Wickedneſs of thy Heart and Nature paſt thy Knowledg, Jer. 17. 9. The Heart is deceitful, and deſperately wicked above all things, who can know it? an abounding Depth, which thou canſt never gage the bottom of.

And that thou mayeſt ſee this to be true, view it 1*ſt*, in the general Nature of it; and 2*dly*, in the particular Parts of it.

BOOK II.

Firſt, In the general; Conſider,

1. That it is the Root, yea the Mother of all thoſe thy actual Sins, the Womb from whence they ſprang, and where they were conceived. The Apoſtle rips up the Womb of it, when he ſays, When Luſt hath conceived, it brings forth Sin, Jam. 1. 15. Though Temptation and Occaſion may be the Midwife to help to bring Sin forth, yet this is the Mother: and therefore, Gal. 5. 19,20. he ſays, that Adultery, Fornication, &c. all that curſed Catalogue he there muſters up, he ſays they are the Fruits of the Fleſh, that is, of inherent, native Corruption, that is the Root, theſe the Fruits. So Chriſt alſo calls it the evil Treaſure, out of which all Sins are brought, the Treaſure or Mine whence they are all taken, Matth. 12. 35. —And an evil Man out of the evil Treaſure bringeth forth evil things. Not that they are ready minted, but in the Oar or Bullion, as it were; yet ſo, as no Sin is brought forth, that hath not its Materials there; for 'tis brought forth out of that Treaſury. And if it be thus the Mother-Root and Treaſury of all Sin, have you not cauſe to be humbled for it as much, as ſimply for all other Sins? Doth not Paul ſet out the Foulneſs of the Love of Money, by calling it the Root of all Evil? 1 Tim. 6. 10. Is not this much more odious, that it is the Root, as of all other, ſo of Covetouſneſs it-ſelf; that bitter Root ſpoken of, Heb. 12. 15. that bears all the Gall and Wormwood that grows up in our Lives? Take any poiſoned Root, and you'l find the leaſt Piece of it hath as much ſtrength of Poiſon in it, as all the Leaves and Branches. Of every Action, yea, of all Actions it may be ſaid, Thou beareſt not the Root, but this Root bears thee. The Sea hath more Waters in it than all the Rivers that come from it, and infinitely more Dirt at the bottom of it than it caſts forth. Now unto this doth Iſaiah compare Original Sin in compariſon to actual, Iſa. 57. 20. But the Wicked are like the troubled Sea, when it cannot reſt, whoſe Waters caſt up Mire and Dirt.

And if it be the Mother, then as the Devil is therefore called that wicked One, κατ' ἐξοχήν, John 8. 34. becauſe he is the Father of Sins, all Sins being called his Works, 1 John 3. 8. there, in a higher demonſtration. The great blame will be caſt upon the Mother of all Sin, by how much it is more near and intimate, (as to our Hearts) the Cauſe thereof nouriſhing, breeding, cheriſhing of them more than Satan doth. As Rome being the Mother of Fornication, all Nations being drunk with her Cup, and therefore ſhall be rewarded double, Rev. 18. 24. In her are found all the Blood of the Slain; yea, and the Souls of Men. So ſhall this Sin be arraigned at the latter Day, to have been the great Whore and Mother of Fornication, in whom ſhall be found all the Sins that ever thou didſt commit. Yea, as Chriſt to his Glory ſhall preſent himſelf, and ſay, Lo, here I am, and the Children thou haſt given me: ſo at that Day, after that all thy Sins have been ſet in order before thee, (as Pſal. 50. 20.) then ſhall this great Beldam be brought in with all her Brood; and then, Curſed ſhall be the Womb that bare them, and thoſe Luſts which as Paps did give them ſuck.

A Mother it is, that conceives and brings forth often, yea, without a Father, which other Mothers cannot: So as the Devil ſhall not need, neither doth he indeed tempt us to every Sin we commit. This Womb is never barren, but fruitful of it ſelf; neither is it the Mother of all only by Succeſſion, or alone lineal Deſcent, as Adam is accounted the Father of all Mankind, and Eve the Mother of all Living, but every Sin comes immediately out of the Loins of this Mother. David lays his Adultery and Murder upon his being born in Sin. 'Tis the great Traitor that hath a hand in every Treaſon to the end of the World; though I confeſs it is much more increaſed, and the Treaſury is enlarged by Cuſtom in ſinning; yet ſo as Paul ſays, when any Sin is committed, it is that Sin that dwells within him that doth it, even this inherent Corruption, Rom. 7. 20. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but Sin that dwelleth in me. And though indeed God puniſheth often one Sin with another, (as Stapleton objects) yet ſo as ſtill this is the Sin, by which, and for which we are ſo puniſhed, the immediate Cauſe of both; and inclines us as well to that Sin which is the Puniſhment, as it had done to that other Sin for which this Puniſhment is inflicted: only God in letting out corrupt Nature, obſerves a Method, broacheth one after another; but this Sin inclines us alike immediately unto all.

But

Chap. 5.

But 2. This is not all thou art to conſider in it for the humbling of thee; it hath not only been actually the cauſe of all the Sins thou haſt committed, but virtually, and radically, and potentially, it is the ſeminal Root of Millions more, even of all manner of Sin, which thou never actedſt, God reſtraining thee, ſo as thou haſt ſeen the leaſt part of the Villany of it. And indeed it is Cauſa univerſalis malorum, the univerſal Cauſe of all Evils, even as God is of all Good, not only becauſe he is the Cauſe of all the Good that is, but becauſe he is potentially the Cauſe of Millions of Worlds which lie in his power to create; ſo this potentially is the cauſe of new Worlds of Sins: So though it can act but one Sin at a time, yet potentially it would and might incline thee to any other Sin, and might hale to contrary Luſts at once; ſo as when we ſin, there is ſtill more in Nature than can be acted: therefore, Matth. 12. 34. a Man that is wicked, is ſaid to ſpeak out of the abundance of the Heart; which argues there is ſtill more in the Heart, an Abundance there, which the Mouth ſpeaks not: ſo actual Sin is brought out of that Treaſury, ver. 35. and there is far more Store in the Treaſury and Warehouſe, than brought out into the Shop. Yea, I ſay, look not only on thine own Sins, but go out into the World, and view all kinds of Sins ever acted, (as indeed the Lives of Men have been a Comment on this Text) ſpoken of, Rom. 1. Whatever the Word forbids, they are all in thee virtually, for the Sin of thy Nature would be the like cauſe of them all. For as when he wondred that Saul propheſied, one that ſtood by ſaid, Yea, but who is the Father of them? 1 Sam. 10. 11, 12. His meaning was, Wonder not at him, but conſider that it is God who is the Father of the Prophets, who is able to make theſe Stones to propheſy. So do I ſay, When thou ſeeſt ſo many Villanies that thou never committedſt, I ask, but who is the Mother of them? Even the ſame original Corruption that is in the Sect. So as multi Marii in uno Cæſare, ſo multi Judæ in uno peccato; As there are many Caius Marius's in one Ceſar, ſo there are many Judas's in one Sin, that Sin of thy Nature. But a pair of Sheers went betwixt thy Nature and theirs. If the Sins in the World be not enough to inform thee, go down to Hell; this Sin is the Image of the Devils, they are but wild ones, we are tame by God's reſtraint, yet both of the ſame kind.

Uſe 5. If it be ſo that every Man by the Corruption of his Nature is inclined to all Sin; then watch and pray, that you fall not into Temptation, Mark 14. 36. For if thou hadſt but one Luſt, viz. Love of Money, then ſhouldſt thou, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, have Temptations enow, even many fooliſh and hurtful Luſts, 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. But they that will be rich, fall into Temptation, and a Snare, and into many fooliſh and hurtful Luſts, which drown Men in Deſtruction and Perdition. For the Love of Money is the Root of all Evil: which while ſome coveted after, they have erred from the Faith, and pierced themſelves through with many Sorrows. Now it will be much more ſo when thou art addicted to all Luſts. My Brethren, the World is full of Snares, and Men walk upon them. To ſome Men their Table is a Snare, to others Credit, Luſt, &c. and therefore no wonder if Men fall into Temptation and a Snare. 'Tis ſaid, Sin compaſſeth Men about, Heb. 12. 1. So that let a Man go which way he will, Sin will be ſure to meet with him: yea, whatſoever we put our hands to, Recreation, Meats, &c. they are all defiled, whilſt the Heart is defiled; and thy Corruption runs out to every Creature thou uſeſt. The Heart daſheth againſt no Object, but thy Luſts, like Sparks of Fire out of a Torch ſtruck againſt a Poſt, do in multitudes fly out. Therefore truſt not thine Heart, fear in all thy ways leſt Sin meet thee. Therefore watch in Prayer, for thine Heart hath a thouſand Chinks for Flies to come in at. Take heed in good Company, that thou be not preſumptuous; and in bad Company, that thou be not ſcandalous. In Proſperity take heed leſt thy Heart be full, and thou deny God; and in Adverſity, leſt thy Heart run out into unlawful Courſes. When thou art at a Feaſt, put thy Knife to thy Throat, &c. If thou walk in the Street, make a Covenant with thine Eyes, leſt Luſts ſteal in; for Luſts are apt to be drawn out in every one of theſe things. In a word, watch in all things, as 2 Tim. 4. 5. keep thy Heart up as thou wouldſt do a Man given to Company, from his old Companions: if he get but out, he then flies out into all Exceſs: So will thy Heart, there will be no ſtopping of it: keep it up, and let it not ſlip the Collar, for thou wilt not eaſily get it in again. Pray alſo to the Lord not to give thee up to Temptation; for thou being fill'd with all Unrighteouſneſs, if God do but take away his Hand from the Hole, there is no Luſt but will be apt to leak out. Labour alſo to get all Grace ſtamped upon your Hearts, as you have all Sin there; and arm you ſelves with reſolution againſt every Sin, as 1 Pet. 5. 9. for he that hath no rule over his Spirit, is like a City without Walls, any Temptation may break in: And if a Breach be made, mend up the Wall again aſſoon as you can; for it is as the breach of Waters which is not eaſily ſtopp'd. And if you would not fall into Sin, be ſtill in the exerciſe of ſome Grace; and then ſaith the Apoſtle, you ſhall never fall.

Uſe 6. If it be ſo, that there are the Seeds of all Sin in us: Then you that have Light, take heed that you do not ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt. The Gentiles indeed are not capable of it; but you that have the Spirit of God moving your Hearts in the Word, that have received the knowledg of the Truth, take heed leſt you ſin willingly; Heb. 10. 26, 27. For if we ſin wilfully after that we have received the knowledg of the Truth, there remaineth no more Sacrifice for Sins, but a certain fearful looking for of Judgment, and fiery Indignation, which ſhall devour the Adverſaries. Which is the Sin that David prays againſt, Pſal. 19. 13. Keep back thy Servant alſo from preſumptuous Sins, let them not have dominion over me. He calls it the great Offence, a Sin greater than preſumptuous Sins; for againſt them he had prayed in the Words afore. And doubtleſs where the Goſpel is much preached, and many are converted to Chriſt, many fall into this Sin, and more do than we think of. Therefore you that are of younger Years, whom God deals with, and convinceth you of his Ways, of the Truth of them, and of the Sincerity of the Goſpel, take heed how you reſiſt theſe Motions: for though this reſiſting be not the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, yet it is a fearful ſtep to it. And know this when God comes to thy Bed-ſide morning and evening, talks with thee, perſwades thee of the Truth and Goodneſs of the Ways of Grace, and thou refuſeſt, thou ſinneſt againſt the Holy Ghoſt, though thou doſt not commit that Sin which we uſually call the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt; but ſuch Sins are a ſtep to it.

Take heed alſo how thou ſpeakeſt againſt the People of God contrary to thy own Knowledg and Conſcience; for thoſe Dogs that will out of wantonneſs fall upon Sheep, when they have taſted their Blood, will kill them in earneſt. So there is many a Man that will begin to ſpeak againſt the People of God, for ſome other end at firſt, but at laſt God may give them up to the Malice of their own Hearts: And ſo thou doſt not only run into inevitable Danger, but there is the ſoreſt Puniſhment of all other belongs to thee: How much ſorer Puniſhment, &c. Heb. 10. 29. and therefore it is ſaid, Mat. 21. 40, 44. The Lord will come and miſerably deſtroy thoſe wicked Men: and ver. 44. Whoſoever ſhall fall on that Stone, ſhall be broken; that is, ordinary Sinners that ruſh againſt Chriſt, ſhall be broken by him; but on whom this Stone ſhall fall, that is, he that ſhall out of Malice ſin againſt Chriſt, (for that Sin is nothing elſe but Revenge againſt God, that is the form of it) he ſhall grind them to Pouder: As if a Glaſs fall upon a Stone, 'twill be broken; but if a Rock fall upon it, 'twill grind it to Pouder. I ſpeak not to diſcourage any: but as the Apoſtle, fearing leſt ſome would be diſcouraged at the delivery of this Doctrine, ſaid, Heb. 6. 9. ſo ſay I, We are perſwaded better things of you, and things that accompany Salvation, though we thus ſpeak.

CHAP.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VI.

A general Diviſion of the Corruption of Man's Nature into the ſeveral Parts of it, a Privation of all Goodneſs, and an Inclination to all Evil. That there is in Man fallen, an Emptineſs of all that is good, proved: And that all the Faculties of his Soul are void of that Righteouſneſs which ought to be in them.

ROM. v. 6, 8, 10.

For when we were yet without Strength, in due time Chriſt died for the Ungodly.

But God commendeth his Love towards us, in that while we were yet Sinners, Chriſt died for us.

For if when we were Enemies, we were reconciled to God by the Death of his Son: much more being reconciled, we ſhall be ſaved by his Life.

I Have demonſtrated the Greatneſs of the Sinfulneſs of the natural inherent Defilement in Man, which is here called Fleſh, of which I have diſcourſed more generally, and but comparatively only, both as compared with our groſs Sins; or ſecondly, as compared with all a Man's other Sins. Now we will conſider it in the Parts of it, more abſolutely as it is in it ſelf. It is our preſent buſineſs to view and cut up and anatomize this Body of Sin, which viewed in the lump and groſs only, ſeems not ſo ugly; which Anatomy is either into the more general Parts of it, which expreſs the Nature of it, as it is in all the Faculties: or ſecondly, into the particular Parts of it, as it hath diverſly corrupted each Faculty, as it is Darkneſs in the Underſtanding, Luſt in the Will and Affections, &c. And ſo I ſhall cut up every particular Vein, and let you ſee what corrupt Blood runs there; in each ſeverally.

Now the more general Parts of it, which expreſs its general Nature, are (as they are uſually diſſected by Divines) two.

Firſt, A total and utter Emptineſs and Privation of all that Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs which God firſt created in Man, and which the Law of God requires.

And, Secondly, A poſitive ſinful Inclination to all that is contrary to Grace, namely, a proneneſs to all Sin, of what kind ſoever, which any Law of God forbids; which poſitive Sinfulneſs is divided into two parts. 1. The inordinate Luſtings of the Faculties after things earthly, fleſhly, ſinful. 2. An Enmity unto God, and unto what is holy. Or, if you will, you may quarter this our inherent Sinfulneſs into four parts, and that according to the Section of the moſt curious Anatomiſt, the Apoſtle Paul, as it is to be ſeen, Rom. 5. from ver. 6, to 11. where, to ſet forth the Greatneſs of the Love and Grace of God in Chriſt, he aggravates the Diſeaſe of our Natures and Condition, of which Grace was the Remedy. For as the Greatneſs and Deſperateneſs of the Diſeaſe commends the Remedy, ſo God commends his Love, (they are his words, ver. 8.) in that whilſt, firſt, without ſtrength, ſecondly, ungodly, ver. 6. thirdly, Sinners, ver. 8. yea Enemies, ver. 9. Chriſt died for us.

Which may ſeem to import out four degrees of the Corruption of their Natures and Lives, for whom Chriſt died, eſpecially of their Natures, as the firſt of them (without ſtrength) implies: which Gradation plainly comprehends the full full Diſtemper of Man in the general Nature of it. And theſe Degrees may come under our former Diviſion, wherein are diſtinguiſhed the Corruption of Nature into that, which is, (1.) Privative, which the Apoſtle's Words (1. Ungodly, 2. Without ſtrength) import. (2.) The poſitive Part of it, which includes, 1*ſt*. The Inclination and Diſpoſition of Sinners to all Evil. 2*dly*. Enmity to God, and all that is good. But we will take them as the Apoſtle hath ſet them down, in ſo many ſeveral degrees of our Sinfulneſs.

The firſt and loweſt Degree is Weakneſs, ἀσθενία, which implies want of Power and Ability as to help it ſelf, and to come out of that Condition, ſo unfitly to be uſed in the Service of God: for, 1 Cor. 15. 43. the ſame word is uſed to expreſs a dead Carcaſe, that is buried and ſown in Weakneſs, ſo as that dead Trunk is unable to ſtir, and is unfit to be uſed any way, and is fit for nothing but to be buried: ſo are we as dead in Sins and Treſpaſſes, Epheſ. 2. 1. ſo as we could ſtand God no way in ſtead, nor help our ſelves, but were fit for nothing but to be buried in Hell, which is our own Place.

The ſecond is Ungodlineſs, as being wholly cut off and eſtranged from God, and all the Life of Grace, which was the cauſe of our Impotency. And as there is not one ſpark of Grace left, ſo there is an Aukwardneſs and Unapplicableneſs to what is good, yea, a Renunciation, denying of what is good, as well as a Weakneſs and Unfitneſs for it: both which, as being primitive, I make the two Parts of the firſt general Head, viz. an Emptineſs of all Good.

The third Degree is, That they are Sinners, as they have nothing in themſelves which leads them to God, or which can be employed for God: they are thereby alſo become prone and inclined to Sin and nothing elſe; for Sinners properly notes out one, in whom the habitual Diſpoſition to Sin prevails.

The fourth Degree, which is further than this, is, That they are Enemies, and that is in their Natures too, Enemies in their Minds, Col. 1. 21. as fighting againſt all the Means that ſhould deliver them out of this Condition, oppoſite to God and all Godlineſs, in themſelves irrecoverable. They are not ſimply ſuch as are ungodly, and ſo will do nothing for God, or without Strength, as unable only, but Enemies to him and all his Ways.

And both theſe laſt are poſitive Acts, and ſo to be reduced as the Parts of the ſecond general Head.

The firſt Branch of inherent Corruption, is an Emptineſs of whatever is holy and good in the ſeveral degrees of it. Rom. 7. 18. that which is here called Fleſh, is an emptineſs of all Good and Grace. And is not this a great Accuſation laid to the charge of our Natures, if it can be proved, that there is nothing good in them, not a Spark or Dram of the leaſt Godlineſs, or Grace, or Power to do any Good? Hath not this cauſe to humble a Man, and pull down all the fly-blown Conceits of our ſelves, that by Nature thou haſt nothing in thee which ſhould make thee acceptable in the Eyes of God, but that thou art a Lump of Terra damnata, as the Chymicks call it, namely that which is the Droſs of their Diſtillations, out of which they have diſtilled all that is good or uſeful; or rather, to uſe the Scripture-Compariſon, curſed Earth? Heb. 6. 7, 8. For the Earth which drinketh in the Rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth Herbs meet for them by whom it is dreſſed, receiveth Bleſſing from God: But that which beareth Thorns and Briars, is rejected, and is nigh unto curſing; whoſe End is to be burned. Curſed Earth, I ſay, which hath not one good Seed in it, able to bring forth nothing but Briars and Thorns, not one good Herb meet for the Dreſſers Uſe; this is nigh to curſing, and the End of it is to be burned. Our Natures are like the Basket of rotten Figs, as God compares the Jews, Jer. 24. 2, 3. which were bad, and very bad, as they could not be eaten, good for nothing but to be ſeized on as bad Wares, and openly burnt: for you uſe to preſerve nothing but that which hath ſome Goodneſs in it; neither would God deſtroy Infants and damn them for ever, if there was any Goodneſs in them: As in Iſa. 65. 8. a Vine that hath but one Cluſter of Grapes on it, one ſays, Deſtroy it not, for there is a Bleſſing in it, ſome good and bleſſed thing which it is a pity to have deſtroyed. And ſo likewiſe in 1 Kings 14. 13. becauſe Abijah the Son of Jeroboam had ſome good thing in him towards the Lord his God, therefore God had a care of him to keep him from the Evil that was to come, and brought him to the Grave in Peace: Ay, but thou haſt no good thing towards the Lord thy God in thee, and therefore thou haſt cauſe to judg thy ſelf not worthy to live, and mayſt wonder that thou wert not deſtroyed e're this: and it may humble thee; for nothing lifts up, but an Opinion of ſome Goodneſs in one; and therefore the contrary may bring thee as low as nothing, to reckon every Creature in their kind better than thy ſelf; for they retain moſt of their native Goodneſs which God put into them, and are good for thoſe Ends they were at firſt appointed: but thou (to uſe Chriſt's Compariſon) art as Salt whenas it hath loſt all its Savour, and is fit for nothing but the Dunghil, becauſe though it hath a Being ſtill, yet it hath loſt its Goodneſs to that good end for which it was appointed: And ſo thou, being at firſt ſeaſoned with Grace, whereby thou ſhouldſt have glorified God, which was the adequate End for which thou wert created, having now loſt that Seaſoning, art now good for nothing, (though thou haſt a Being in thee ſtill) for, bonum & finis convertuntur, nothing is good further than it tends to its End; and ſo far as it is unfit for its End, it is ſaid to grow naught. Now thou art by Nature altogether unſerviceable for God, to glorify him; and therefore all that is in thee is naught; yea, and as thou haſt cauſe to humble thy ſelf, and think ill of thy ſelf for this, ſo alſo to hate thy ſelf; for we naturally love nothing but what is good. Chap. 6.

Now to prove and make this good unto you:

Firſt, Conſider that one Place, Rom. 7. 18. For I know, that in me (that is, in my Fleſh) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is preſent with me, but how to perform that which is good, I find not. Says St. Paul, In me (that is, in my Fleſh) dwells no good thing, that is, no Grace; for the Goodneſs he there ſpeaks of, is a ſpiritual Goodneſs oppoſite to Sin; ver. 17. Now then, it is no more I that do it, but Sin that dwelleth in me. And St. Paul ſpeaks this of his unregenerate Part, which he calls Fleſh; and though he being regenerate, and having another [I] in him, as he ſays in the 17*th* Verſe, which gave ground to that bleſſed Diſtinction, In me (that is, in my Fleſh) dwells no good thing; as implying that there was ſomething in him that was not Fleſh, that had ſome good thing in it. Yet take a Man as born into the World, and not born again, and he is nothing but Fleſh: That which is born of Fleſh, is Fleſh; that is, there is not that thing in him which is not Fleſh, and therefore there is no Good at all in him: and therefore, Job 11. 12. he is called empty or hollow Man, as it is in the Original, and in the Margent ſo noted; void and empty of all Wiſdom, much more of ſpiritual Wiſdom, Grace and Goodneſs; and this by Birth, for it is ſaid, that he is born as empty of it as a wild Aſſes Colt; in the next words, he is a mere empty thing, in reſpect of any Good. And anſwerably the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Rom. 3. 10, 11, 12. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one: There is none that underſtandeth, there is none that ſeeketh after God: They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable, there is none that doeth good, no not one. There is none righteous, none that hath the leaſt ſpark or part of Righteouſneſs or true Wiſdom; for ver. 18. he ſays, The fear of God is not before their Eyes; which yet you know is the beginning and firſt ſtep to Wiſdom, Prov. 1. 7. that is, to Grace and Righteouſneſs; and if you will ſee reaſon for it,

1. Adam loſt all Grace and Goodneſs by his Fall, and therefore we too; and ſo our Natures muſt needs be brought forth ſtripp'd of all: Now if Adam did not loſe all Grace at his firſt ſinning, then it muſt have been with him as with a regenerate Man now in the State of Grace when he ſins, of whom the Apoſtle ſays, The Seed of God remains in him, 1 John 3. 9. And if ſo, then Adam needed not to have been born again, and ſo nor we, if any ſuch Seed remained, which was not wholly expelled; for to be born again, is to have the immortal Seed put into us, 1 Pet. 1. 23. and Chriſt ſays, Therefore we muſt be born again, that is, by a new Work of the Holy Ghoſt: We muſt have this Seed ſown anew in us, becauſe we are nothing but Fleſh, which Fleſh hath no good in it, and therefore it is ſaid, the new Man muſt be created again, Col. 3. 10. which is renewed in Knowledg, after the Image wherein God created him at firſt, as having now in his corrupt State wholly put it off, as was the Condition of Adam after after his Fall, who ſays of himſelf, Gen. 3. 10. that he was naked, as having loſt every piece of that Image, and ſo had no Goodneſs to cover him, as I proved afore.

2. If Adam, then we all by Nature have not the Spirit of God dwelling in us, and then we have no Grace, not the leaſt Spark dwelling in us: and ſo è contra, if we had the leaſt Grace, then alſo we muſt have the Spirit dwelling in us; for as the Sun maintains Light, ſo the Spirit, Grace: and, as take the Sun out of the World, and all the Beams of Light vaniſh; ſo take the Spirit away, and you take all Grace away alſo; for he is the Father of Lights, and God of all Grace. Now what ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. 9. You are not in the Fleſh, but in the Spirit, if ſo be the Spirit of God dwell in you. And ſo if the Spirit of God dwelt in us by Nature, then (according to the Apoſtle's Argument) by Nature we were not in the Fleſh; but ſo we are, all in the Fleſh, and in the gall of Bitterneſs, as a Fiſh in Water; even Fleſh it ſelf. For being in the Fleſh, is uſed to expreſs our natural Eſtate, as Rom. 7. 5. For when we were in the Fleſh, the Motions of Sins which were by the Law, did work in our Members to bring forth fruit unto Death. Whilſt we were in the Fleſh, that is, whilſt we were unregenerate, in our natural Condition, and therefore during that State the Spirit of God dwells not in us. And in Jude 19. ſpeaking of carnal Men, he ſays, they are ſenſual, and have not the Spirit, that is, dwelling in them; and if ſo, then no good thing, no Grace dwells there.

And if this be true, have you not cauſe to humble your ſelves for this Nature of yours as above meaſure ſinful? For it is not a bare negation of Grace that is in you, but an emptineſs and privation, which is carentia entitatis debitæ ineſſe, the want of a Goodneſs which you ought to have: for this Grace which thou wanteſt, ought to be in thee, and that not only by the meer Law of Nature, as the power of Seeing ought to be in that Eye that is born deſtitute of it, but it ought to be there by the Law of God, which requires that all Grace ſhould be in thee, and that you ſhould be fill'd with Grace, and abound therein, enriched with every Grace, and nothing wanting. But now in thy Nature there is not any one kind of Grace, nor any one degree, no not the leaſt: and therefore thou art to humble thy ſelf, as in this reſpect guilty of as many Sins as there are Graces, and degrees of Graces wanting; for the want thereof is a Sin, be it but of the leaſt. If that Servant was condemned that did not increaſe the Talent given him, though he brought his Maſter his own again, Mat. 25. 24. how much more thou who haſt loſt it all? eſpecially ſeeing every Grace is ſo precious a Talent, which God gave Man at firſt, and no Creature elſe. As Faith is called precious Faith, 2 Pet. 1. 1. ſo Love may be called precious Love, which alſo he gave him as a token of his deareſt Love, as his Image and Picture to remember him by.

Yea and further; Look how many Parts and Branches of Graces there were at firſt implanted, and they are innumerable; ſo many Sins art thou guilty of. Now there are innumerable Graces, 2 Pet. 1. 3. According as his Divine Power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto Life and Godlineſs, through the knowledg of him that hath called us to Glory and Vertue. There is a bundle of them, all things belonging to Godlineſs; he ſpeaks of them as of many, theſe many, ſeveral Limbs of that glorious Image. And Chriſt tells us, that a good Man hath a good Treaſure in his Heart. A Treaſure notes out Variety and Abundance. Yea, look how many ſeveral Branches there are of the Law affirmative, look how many ſeveral Duties God requires, ſo many ſeveral Graces there are, for Grace is but the Law written in the Heart: So many Sins art thou to humble thy ſelf for, in that thou wanteſt all theſe Graces through the Ungodlineſs of thy Nature.

And now as for theſe particular Parts of it before-mentioned, wherein this Emptineſs conſiſts: Firſt, A want of Strength. Secondly, Ungodlineſs: I will ſpeak ſomething of them, tho not much.

Firſt; You ſee it is a want of Strength to any thing that is good, ἀσθενεία, which word being taken from dead Corps, as the word is uſed, 1 Cor. 15. 43. may well befit us, in regard of this Emptineſs of all that is good.

For

Chap. 6.

For 1. It is not only the Weakneſs of Men in a Conſumption or Sickneſs, that have ſome Life or Strength, though joined with much Feebleneſs; for this is ſaid of regenerate Men, Heb. 12. 12. Wherefore lift up the Hands that hang down, and the feeble Knees. Strengthen the Hands that hang down, as unable to ſtir to what is good; and the feeble Knees, which is ſpoken of ſuch as were regenerate Men, that had ſome Strength, yet Feebleneſs joined with it: That as a Man that is weak, and yet hath ſome Life, yet through Weakneſs is ſcarce able to ſtir; or when he comes to raiſe himſelf, falls down again in a Swound: Such may be the caſe of regenerate Men, that have ſome Life, as being indeed more than Fleſh, as was the caſe of St. Paul, Rom. 7. 18. To will is preſent with me, but how to perform I know not, not having Strength wherewithal; for in my Fleſh dwells no good thing, that is, no Strength to do any Good.

Neither, 2. is it only as the Weakneſs of a Man out of Joint, all his Bones being diſplaced, though this alſo is moſt true; for Gal. 6. 1. when a Man falls into Sin, ſet him in Joint again, ſays the Apoſtle, καταρτίζετε, for that Fall breaks all, and ſo weakens a Man for whatever is good.

But 3. It is as the Weakneſs of a dead Man, for ſo the word ἀσθενεία is uſed, 1 Cor. 15. 43. and ſo we are ſaid to be dead in Sins, Epheſ. 2. 1. not having the leaſt principle of Life to ſtir to what is good. See his Expoſition on Epheſ. 2. 1. in Vol. 1. of his Works.

Yea, 4. It is not only a want of an active Principle to ſtir, but alſo a want of a paſſive Fitneſs, an Unwieldineſs and Unfitneſs to be uſed or employed: ſo it is with a dead Man, and ſo with us; therefore it is ſaid of us, 2 Cor. 3. 5. Not that we are ſufficient of our ſelves to think any thing as of our ſelves; but our Sufficiency is of God. Unapt, unfit for to think any thing; it is not only a want of Sufficiency, as if we had ſtrength, but only ſo weak as it were not ſufficient: But further, it is Inidonietas, Inaptitudo, (as Beza reads it) an Unwieldineſs to it. Therefore we are ſaid, not to be meet Veſſels, till this Corruption is purged out, for God's Uſe, to be employed for him, 2 Tim. 2. 21. If a Man therefore purge himſelf from theſe, he ſhall be a Veſſel unto Honour, ſanctified and meet for the Maſter's Uſe, and prepared unto every good Work. And in Pſal. 14. 3. and Rom. 3. 12. we are ſaid to become unprofitable, ἠχρειώθησαν, unfit for uſe; and in the Hebrew of the Pſalm it is, Spumæ inſtar putruerunt, as Beza obſerves, become even as putrified Froth: Froth in it ſelf is unfit for any thing, much more putrified Froth, which until ſweetned, can be put to no uſe. Or, as the Prophet compares us, Ezek. 15. 34. we are like the Wood of a Vine, which you cannot make a pin of to hang any thing on; ſo nor of our Nature, but we are reprobate to every good Work, Titus 1. 16. They profeſs that they know God; but in Works they deny him, being abominable and diſobedient, and unto every good Work reprobate. And this the word ἀσθενεία plainly imports. οὐκ ἱκανοί ἐσμεν

Secondly; A ſecond and further Degree of emptineſs of Good, is, That our Natures are ungodly. As the other notes out an impotency and weakneſs to any Good in general, agreeable to any part of the Law, this more particularly an unability and averſeneſs of Mind to ſanctify God, (for whom, and by whom are all things) either in our Hearts or Lives; ſo that ſuppoſe we have ſtrength to do any good things, tending to the good of our ſelves and others, to be good Subjects and good Common-wealth's-Men; ſuppoſe we had Strength and Hearts to all Duties of Righteouſneſs, to Men and our ſelves, and do them as exactly as ever Adam ſhould have done, and ſhould give our Bodies to be burnt for the common Good, (as ſome of the Heathen Romans ſacrific'd their Lives for the Good of their Country;) yet, as St. Paul ſays, of wanting Charity, it is nothing; ſo may I ſay, We ſtill being without Godlineſs, may truly be ſaid to be empty of all Good, and all this to be nothing. For as God himſelf is ſaid by way of Eminency to be only good, There is none good but God, Mat. 19. 17. (for no Creature is good otherwiſe, than as it hath a derived Goodneſs from him) ſo indeed nothing in Man can be ſaid to be good, unleſs it ariſeth from a Principle of Godlineſs in us, which ſprings from God, and tends to him again. Therefore is that Diſtinction made, 1 Kings 14. 13. And all Iſrael ſhall mourn for him, and bury him: for he only of Jeroboam ſhall come to the Grave, becauſe in him there is found ſome good thing toward the Lord God of Iſrael, in the Houſe of Jeroboam. Abijah is ſaid to have ſome good thing in him, (but how?) towards the Lord his God. And oppoſitely it is expreſſed of Iſrael, Hoſ. 10. 1. Iſrael is an empty Vine, he bringeth forth Fruit unto himſelf: according to the multitude of his Fruit, he hath increaſed the Altars; according to the Goodneſs of his Land, they have made goodly Images. Iſrael is ſaid to be an empty Vine, when as yet in the next words, it is ſaid to have brought forth Fruit to it ſelf; how then empty? becauſe though it was fruitful, yet it it was not fruitful to God, as thoſe are who are united to Chriſt, Rom. 7. 4. Wherefore, my Brethren, ye alſo are become dead to the Law by the Body of Chriſt; that ye ſhould be married to another, even to him who is raiſed from the dead, that we ſhould bring forth Fruit unto God. So let what Goodneſs ſoever be in thee, either of Ingenuouſneſs of Nature, or Parts of Wiſdom or moral Vertues; as *Hoſ.*6.4. hypocritical Ephraim is ſaid to have Goodneſs in him; as empty Ears of Corn on the Houſe-tops, are called Corn; yet if Godlineſs be wanting, which is as the Kernel in the Husk, a Man is empty of Goodneſs ſtill, and the reaſon is, becauſe finis & bonum convertuntur, all things that tend to any end, receive Goodneſs from their End they tend to. Now God was the immediate adequate End for which our Nature was made, viz. to ſanctify him: and therefore if that be wanting in thy Nature, which ſhould carry thee on to him as the End, then all in thy Nature ceaſeth to be good, notwithſtanding that any other Goodneſs, ſerving for other ſubordinate Ends, may ſeem to be in it.

Now I will but in brief explain to you, what this Ungodlineſs is, which I will do:

First of all, In the general.
Secondly, In the Particulars.

I. In general. It is a want and emptineſs of thoſe Diſpoſitions and Abilities in our Natures, whereby once we were enabled and enclined to ſanctify God as God.

1. I call it a want of that which once we had; for otherwiſe we could no more be call'd ungodly, than the Stones can be termed blind. And therefore at the firſt God planted in our Natures ſuch Diſpoſitions, whereby we were inclined thus to ſanctify him, which he planted in no Creature elſe except the Angels. But as in the Body, to the other Members it is neceſſary there ſhould be an Eye, to behold things without it ſelf; ſo beſides, among the reſt of the Creatures it was requiſite that there ſhould be ſome made, that might behold God in all his Works, and ſanctify him in all, which Men and Angels were made to do. Therefore I expreſs what this Ungodlineſs is a want of, namely, to ſanctify God as God: for ſo, Rom. 1. 21. Becauſe that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, &c. It is expreſſed, they worſhipped him not as God: for as if we do not fear, reverence and honour a King as a King, we diſhonour him; ſo if we do not ſo ſanctify God as we ought to do, we do it not at all. Now then God is ſanctified as God, when he is known and exalted above all, in all the Faculties of Soul and Body; Pſal. 46. 10. Be ſtill, and know that I am God: I will be exalted in the Earth: that is, conceive and apprehend of me as I am in my ſelf, with ſuch Thoughts as are fit to be had of my Greatneſs, Holineſs, Majeſty, &c. and accordingly exalt me above all, ſet me up above all things in your Deſires, Fears, Loves and Rejoicings, and as a Commander of all, as your chiefeſt Good and chiefeſt End. When you do ſo, then you ſanctify him as God.

Now becauſe the Mind and Heart of Man is no way able, nay utterly unwilling to do this, therefore we are by Nature ungodly Perſons, without Religion, and therefore alſo without God in this World, Epheſ. 2. 12. That at that time ye were without Chriſt, being Aliens from the Common-wealth of Iſrael, and Strangers from the Covenants of Promiſe, having no Hope, and without God in the World. As a blind Man is ſaid to be without the Sun, becauſe he ſees it not, or an evil Servant without a Maſter, when he is not diſpoſed to love, fear, or do any thing in reverence to him; ſo now are we ſo cut off from God every way, and eſtranged from him, as Coloſſ. 1. 20. that it is with us, as if there were no ſuch God in the World, and it is thus with us as to every Faculty. So the Apoſtle Paul applying that Place of the Pſalmiſt to this Corruption of Man's Nature, Rom. 3. 11, 18. There is none that underſtandeth, there is none that ſeeketh after God: There is no fear of God before their eyes. He ſays, there is none of them who either underſtands God, or ſeeks after him, or fears him; neither, firſt, are their Underſtandings capable of ſuch ſanctified Thoughts as are to be had of him; neither, ſecondly, are their Wills capable of being moved to ſet the Man a-work to ſeek after him; neither, thirdly, will his Affections be ſtirred with ſanctified Fear, or Love, or Joys in him; for if any Affection was apt to ſtir, it would be Fear: now he ſays, That the Fear of him is not before their Eyes; ſo as all Faculties are empty of this Ability to ſanctify God at all as God, till God by his exceeding precious Promiſes in Chriſt, makes us again partakers of a Divine and God-like Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. and by a new Covenant makes us new Hearts, to be able to know him, Jer. 31. 33, 34. and 24. 7. and puts his Fear into our Hearts, Jer. 32. 40. for by Nature there is none of theſe there, but we are Lumps of all Ungodlineſs, and every Faculty we ſee is empty of all Good. Chap. 6.

II. And for Particulars, it were infinite to go over all the Ungodlineſs in the Nature of Man.

1. For the ſpeculative Judgment and Underſtanding is ſo far corrupted and darkened, as it would of it ſelf, if left to it ſelf, think there is no God, Pſal. 14. 1. The Fool hath ſaid in his Heart, There is no God. Fools, not Idiots, but all unregenerate Men, (for he ſpeaks there of the univerſal Corruption of Man's Nature) having Sayings in their Hearts, There is no God. And if ſuch Thoughts be diſpelled by Light put into corrupt Nature, as Rom. 1. 19, 20. by God himſelf manifeſted out of the Creatures, his eternal Power and Godhead; yet by Nature they are but as Men groping in the dark, Acts 17.27. and the wiſeſt of them confeſſed but an unknown God, ver. 23. and though Men have this glimmering Light, yet they became vain in their Imaginations, Rom. 1. 21. If not thinking him, as the Gentiles did there, Acts 17. 29. like the Creatures, yet their Hearts are filled with Under-conceits of him, they know him not as God, limiting his Power, as they did, Pſal. 78. 41. Yea, they turned back, and tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Iſrael. How did they limit God? why, by leſſening his Power, ver. 19. Yea, they ſpake againſt God: they ſaid, Can God furniſh us a Table in the Wilderneſs? And though they ſaw he ſmote the Rock, *ver.*20. yet, Can he give Bread alſo? thought they. Unregenerate Men ſecretly deny God's Providence, Hoſ. 2. 8. For ſhe did not know that I gave her Corn, and Wine, and Oil, and multiplied her Silver and Gold, &c. Unregenerate Men are not able to ſee that it is God who is the great Houſholder of the World, that layeth in all the Proviſion which the Earth bears; Or elſe they deny his Omniſcience, ſaying, as they in Job 22. 13, 14. Thou ſayeſt, How can God know? Can he judg through the dark Cloud? He walks in the Circuit of the Heavens, &c.

And if theſe Conceits be diſpelled in the ſpeculative Part, as in us that know the Word; yet unregenerate Men knowing God notionally, ſanctify him not in their Thoughts, according to their Knowledg, for they think not of him daily: Pſal. 10. 4. God is not all in their Thoughts. Men ſpend the deareſt of their Thoughts on Honours, Pleaſures, Riches, but God is not found amongſt all their Thoughts; and though they can remember and think of every Toy and Trifle that belongs to them; Can a Woman forget her Ornaments, as things ſhe cannot be without? but my People have forgot me days without number, Jer. 2. 32. Yea, and if the Thoughts of God will needs come in and thruſt themſelves upon them; yet the Thoughts of him are but, as Ahab ſpoke to Elijah, 1 Kings 21. 20. Haſt thou found me, O mine Enemy? So they wiſh they could forget God, becauſe he damps their Mirth. Rom. 1. 28. they like not to retain God in their Knowledg; or they ſay, (as it is in Job) Depart from us, we deſire not the knowledg of thy Ways, Job 21. 14.

2. For their practical Judgments, thoſe whereby their Lives are guided and ſteered, it is moſt certain, that however they profeſs they know him, yet they deny him, Titus 1. 16. deny him they do in their Works, and therefore firſt in their practical Judgments, which is the Court where all Acts are firſt paſſed e're they come forth to Action; and ſo thoſe that can diſcourſe of God and all his Attributes, are yet utterly ignorant of him; Jer. 2. 8. They that handle the Law, (open it and expound it, and God in it) yet knew me not. There are certain fixed Principles which the whole Man is guided by, contrary to what elſe he knows of God; and there are Sayings in the Heart, That there is no ſuch God as the Word deſcribes him to be. Thus in Pſal. 10. what is the reaſon that is there given why a wicked Man doth perſecute the Poor? ver. 2. curſeth and deceives, ſpeaks Lies? ver. 7. and ſecretly lies in wait to murder the Innocent? ver. 8, 9. Why, ver. 11. He hath ſaid in his Heart, God hath forgotten, he will never ſee it. And would Men elſe commit Sins in ſecret, which they dare not do before Men, if they had not this Principle as moſt certain in their Hearts? And ſo in Pſal. 50. the Hypocrite who knew God well enough in his ſpeculative Underſtanding, ver. 16. yet ver. 18, 19, 20. is full of Theft, Adultery, evil Speaking and Slander; and what is the reaſon? Thou thoughteſt I was a God like thee, that would approve of thy Ways and Courſes, and as one who delights in the ſame Ways himſelf: They imagined God like themſelves, and by this Principle they walk from day to day, and think their Eſtates to be as good as the beſt: and this is the reaſon why Men are ſecure and careleſs, and ſettled upon the Lees of all kind of Sins, and grow old in them; Zeph. 1. 12. They are ſettled on Lees, and ſay in their Hearts, God will neither do good nor evil. Though indeed Men ſpeak not this, nor profeſs this, yea, know the contrary; yet this is the Rule they go by, and therefore Men grow old in Sin, ſecure and fearleſs.

And in their Wills and Affections, they are utterly taken off from him; ſeek him they will not, to enquire for him, Zeph. 1. 6. much leſs draw nigh to him, as unto their chiefeſt Good; Zeph. 3. 2. She drew not near to her God, but can be content to live eſtranged from him from the Womb, Pſal. 58. 3. and go a whoring from him, Pſal. 73. 27. after their Lovers, and after them they will go, Hoſ. 2. 5. loving of Pleaſures, even every Vanity, rather than God, 2 Tim. 3. 4. forſaking God, Jer. 2. though a Spring, and that of living Waters, that offers it ſelf as a Spring, and is perpetual; and they are ſo averſe from God, as they will rather dig for Water, for muddy Water, and that in broken Ciſterns, than come to this Spring, contemning all the Goodneſs that is in him, and having empty Pleaſures in this Life to live upon, as 'tis in Job 21. ſpending their Days in Wealth, &c. ver. 13. they ſay to God, Depart from us, (we are well enough) ver. 14. We deſire not the knowledg of thee or thy Ways, whereby we may come to enjoy thee, ver. 14. for, What is the Almighty, what Excellency or Goodneſs is there in him, that we ſhould ſerve him? that is, what Worth is there in God, that might allure us to ſerve him; and what advantage would it be to us, if we ſhould pray to him? what Good is got by our Acquaintance and Fellowſhip with him? And as they contemn his Goodneſs, ſo alſo his Greatneſs and Power; and as they care not for his Friendſhip, ſo neither for his Hatred, and all he can do unto them: therefore, Pſal. 10. 13. they are ſaid to contemn God: and Pſal. 36. 1. their daring to offend him ſhews as much, proclaims to all the World, that there is no fear of God before their eyes; they ſay ſo in their Heart, ſaith David, There is no fear of God before their eyes: And I cannot but judg ſo, ſaith he, for the thing ſpeaks it, when Men dare ſwear and be drunk, lie, whore, break Sabbaths, contemn the Saints, and do thus from day to day, it ſpeaks in all ungodly Mens Hearts, that there is no fear of God before their eyes; they fear not to offend him to his Face, when their Conſciences tell them he looks on. Thus they are ſaid to ſin to God's Face, Gen. 13. 13. they ſinned before Jehovah, as it were before the Preſence of a Judg, yea hardning themſelves againſt his Fear: and if they may be brought to fear or ſeek him, (as out of Self-love they may) yet it is not for himſelf, Hoſea 7. 16. They return, but not to the moſt High; fear his Goodneſs they do not; and for himſelf they do not ſeek him, as godly Men are ſaid to do, Hoſ. 1. 35. and if they do draw nigh to him, yet it is out of Flattery, Pſal. 78. 34. When he ſlew ſome of them, then they ſought him, ver. 36. but they did but flatter him; they ſeek not his Friendſhip for it ſelf, ver. 37. Their Hearts were not right with him; ſo as, though they draw nigh with their Lips, yet their Hearts

Hearts are far from him, Iſa. 29. 17. It is not out of a Delight in his Goodneſs and Holineſs, ſo as to take him to be their Portion: Job 27. 10. Will the Hypocrite delight himſelf in the Almighty? And though Men may ſeem to delight, as *Iſa.*58.2. They take delight in approaching to God, out of a carnal Sweetneſs they find in his Mercy, &c. yet it is no ſuch Delight in God, as conſidered in his Holineſs and Purity; and therefore they continue not to do ſo long; Will he pray always? ſaith Job; And why not always? becauſe he delights not in God, Job 27. 10. And for doing him any Service, firſt, they cannot if they would; Rom. 7. 8. They that are in the Fleſh, cannot pleaſe God. Serve him they may with a Form of Godlineſs, but not in the Life and Power of it: Joſh. 24. 19. they thought they could, but Joſhua tells them they could not; for he is a holy God, whom nothing but holy and ſpiritual Service, out of a pure Heart and ſingle Eye, will content. Jer. 4. 21. But theſe are wiſe to do evil, but to do good, know not how to go about it; if they could, yet they would not, for they have no Hearts for any thing but for Sin; Jer. 22. 17. But thine Eyes and thine Heart, are not but for thy Covetouſneſs, and for to ſhed innocent Blood, and for Oppreſſion, and for Violence to do it. And though in ſome Fit they take up Reſolutions to ſerve God, as in Deut. 5. 29. yet even then God doth complain they want Hearts to ſet ſeriouſly to it, and therefore are ſoon weary. Amos 8. 5. When will the Sabbath be gone, or Prayer be over? They will not always pray, Job 27. 10. And take them out of their Fits, and they deſire not to hear of their Duties, or to come nigh any Ordinance wherein God is manifeſted, as in Job 21. 14. We deſire not the knowledg of thy Ways.

CHAP. VII.

The Objections anſwered, which are made againſt the Doctrine. 1. That thoſe excellent Qualities, and Endowments of Mind, which are in Men unregenerate, evidence that their Natures are not deſtitute of all Good. 2. That there are in the natural Conſciences of Men, Principles of Good directing them, and in their Wills ſome inclining Diſpoſitions to what the Law of God commands; and therefore that Man's Nature is not utterly empty of all Goodneſs. In Anſwer to the firſt, That though there is a natural Goodneſs in ſuch Endowments, yet being ſeated in the corrupt Nature of Man, they are tainted and infected by it, which ſpoils all that Goodneſs which otherwiſe is in them. In Anſwer to the ſecond Objection, That the Light of natural Conſcience hath not the ſame real Goodneſs as the Law hath, but is only a Picture and Shadow of it: That thoſe Principles of Morality and Honeſty in the Conſcience, do not reſult from Nature, but are owing to a higher Cauſe: That God for the preſerving of Order in the World, hath inſtill'd them into Man: And that this is a common Benefit of his Mediation.

WE have ſeen how full of Ungodlineſs the Heart and Nature of Man is. Now againſt this Truth there is much objected, How that much Good may be found mingled with the Natures of Men unregenerate. I will aſcend in the Objection by degrees.

Object. 1. Not only many excellent Abilities and Endowments of Mind, concerning things natural and political, (which I will not much inſiſt on, yet mention) ſuch was the Wiſdom of Achitophel, whoſe Counſel in Matters of State, was as the Oracle of God, 2 Sam. 16. 23. Such is ſtill in manual Trades, whereof wicked Men have been Inventors, as Cain and Tubal-Cain, the firſt Inventors of Tillage and working in Braſs, &c. Gen. 42. 22. All which being Gifts from God, for he teacheth Men Diſcretion to till the Ground, Iſa. 28. 26, 29. They plow (as I may allude to it) with his Heifer, and his Spirit fills Men with Wiſdom to work on Braſs, which was Tubal-Cain's Invention: and he gives Wiſdom to Stateſ-men to rule Monarchies and Kingdoms, 1 Kings 3. from 9 to 13. All theſe, I ſay, being Gifts from him, muſt needs be granted to be good: Every good and perfect Gift comes from above, James 1. 17. Theſe therefore are good, and yet they have place in wicked Mens Hearts.

Anſwer. But the Anſwer to this is eaſy, and therefore I will not inſiſt on it, namely:

1. That indeed theſe are good things, and are therefore Ornaments to corrupt Nature; but yet they are good only, but as every Creature is ſaid to be good,

good, 1 Tim. 4. 4. with a natural created Goodneſs, but which reacheth no higher. Now many ſuch good things we grant to be in Men, though Devils by Nature, as the Subſtance and Faculties of their Souls: and ſo theſe good Endowments, which are ſuper-inducted and infuſed by the Spirit of God for the good of Men, whilſt theſe live in Societies together, without theſe ſeveral Endowments the World could not ſtand, nor a City be inhabited: But when it is ſaid, there is no Good in the Nature of Man, ſuch a Goodneſs is meant, as in Rom. 7. 12. is attributed to the Law, which is there ſaid to be juſt, holy and good: So that a ſpiritual, holy Goodneſs is denied to be in Man's Nature, ſuch as might make us acceptable to God. We deny not but there is much natural created Goodneſs, ſuch as is in other Creatures, which yet God hath no pleaſure in, when they are not found in the way of Righteouſneſs, that is, joined with Holineſs and Righteouſneſs. He hath no pleaſure in Man's Legs, Pſal. 147. 10. that is, by a Synechdoche, in no outward Endowments of Body or Mind: They are all but as Gold Rings in a Swine's Snout, as Solomon ſpeaks of the Beauty of the Body without Grace, Prov. 11. 22. So theſe Beauties of the Mind are but as Pearls in a Toad's Head, and ſo loſe their Excellency, or are but as Flowers ſtuck on a dead Corps. Chap. 7.

2. So as though in themſelves theſe Endowments have this natural Goodneſs in abſtracto, or abſtractedly conſidered, as they are in their own Nature; yet take them in concreto, as they are ſeated in a corrupt Mind, they are unclean and abominable things in the ſight of God; For why? All theſe Gifts are poiſoned and infected, yea, and make the Source of Sin the greater, and to work the more ſtrongly. As Wine when it is poiſoned, though the Wine be good, yea and good againſt Poiſon, yet when Poiſon is in it, it adds ſtrength to the Poiſon, and makes it work more violently and ſpeedily: ſo all Wiſdom and good Gifts that are in them, make them the more wicked. The Wiſdom of the Fleſh is Enmity againſt God, Rom. 8. 7. God therefore looks upon all theſe, as things that make his Enemies ſtronger againſt him: And therefore you that are Scholars, and have good Gifts natural and acquiſite, yet you wanting Grace, theſe make you ſo much more abominable in God's Eyes; God looks upon you as ſtronger Enemies, and ſo you will prove: as Agur ſays of himſelf, having Gifts in him, Prov. 30. 2. that he was by Nature more brutiſh than any Man, than others that had not ſo large Parts. The fineſt, freſheſt Tempers are apteſt to take the Plague or Small-Pox, and be fulleſt of Boils and Sores when theſe Diſeaſes doth take them; and the pureſt Clothes take greateſt and deepeſt Stains; ſo the fineſt and moſt acute Wits are capable of the fulleſt and greateſt Sins: Do not then think that God will ſpare thee for them; thou thinkeſt it pity ſo fine, ſo green a Wit, having ſuch Workmanſhip beſtowed upon it, ſhould be burnt; nay, but thy green Wit makes the Fire the hotter.

Object. 2. But yet the Objection which in this Point preſſeth us moſt, is, That in Man's Nature there are not only ſuch things, as theſe which are naturally good, but which ſeem to participate of a higher kind of Goodneſs, even a Conformity in ſome meaſure to the Law; and ſuch a kind of Goodneſs is found both in Mens Minds and Wills.

Anſw. 1. In the Mind and Conſcience there are Principles and Seeds of Divine Light and of the Truth of the Law, ſown, which have the ſame effects in them that the Law hath, Rom. 2. 14. The Gentiles do by Nature the things of the Law, and ſhew the Effect (or Work) of the Law written in their Hearts. For doth the Law condemn Sin? ſo doth this Light, and fights againſt it: Doth the Law take part with what is good? ſo doth this alſo, and cannot be bribed or hired to do otherwiſe; ſo that, eadem præſtat officia, this Light hath the ſame effects in the Heart which the Law hath, as appears from Rom. 1. 18. For the Wrath of God is revealed from Heaven againſt all Ungodlineſs, and Unrighteouſneſs of Men, who hold the Truth in Unrighteouſneſs. It is called Truth, and that ſuch as oppoſeth Unrighteouſneſs, and therefore Men impriſon it; and it is not a Principle of natural Truth only, whereby we know the Works of God, but ſuch as whereby we know the Divine Truth, and many parts of the

BOOK II.

Will of God; and therefore it muſt needs be good: for verum & bonum, Truth and Goodneſs are Twins; what is true, is good; yea, and look what kind of Truth any thing hath in it, ſuch a kind of Goodneſs. Now this being more than natural Truth, muſt needs have more than natural Goodneſs in it; having the Truth of the Law in it, it muſt needs have the Goodneſs of the Law, and ſo be holy as the Law is, and juſt and good. 2. There is in every Man ſome part of this Truth, it is in all more or leſs, both in good and bad, for the Wrath of God is ſaid to be revealed againſt all Men for detaining this Truth; the Gentiles had it written in their Hearts, Rom. 2. 14. and therefore ſome holy thing is in the Nature of Man. Yea, 3. as it ſhould ſeem by Nature alſo; for, he ſays, the Gentiles do by Nature the things of the Law, &c. And Jude 10. ſpeaking of ungodly Men that ſin againſt their Light groſly, he ſays, they corrupt themſelves in things they know naturally; that is, commit ſuch foul Sins (for that is to corrupt themſelves, Deut. 14. 15, 25.) as are againſt the natural Knowledg of their Minds. And doth not Nature teach you the contrary, ſays Paul? 1 Cor. 11. 14. Yea, 4. this abides there, dwells there, for it is written in their Heart; ſo as Auguſtin ſaith, Non ipſa Iniquitas delet, Sin razeth it not out.

Lib. 2. Confeſſ. c. 4.

2. Anſwerable to theſe Sparks of Truth in the Mind, there are alſo Inclinations, Diſpoſitions, Stamps, and Impreſſions upon the Will to ſome Good, conformable to the Law, that ſame ἔν φυία, bona indoles, the Philoſophers obſerve and ſpeak ſo much of thoſe good Diſpoſitions, of Ingenuity, Modeſty, Love to thoſe that love them, as Chriſt ſays of the Gentiles, Luke 6. 32. the Characters of which appearing in the young Man, made Chriſt love him, Mark 10. 21. and theſe are indeed not tranſient but habitual Diſpoſitions; as was of Juſtice in Cato, of whom it is ſaid, Cum rectè fecerit, aliter facere non potuit; and therefore Continency, as a common thing to good and evil Men, is called a Gift, 1 Cor. 7. 7.

This ſeems to be a great Difficulty, for much of this is true which hath been ſpoken, it requires therefore a large Digreſſion to give Anſwer thereunto, for which we will conſider and enquire into theſe four things concerning this Light of Conſcience and moral Vertues.

I. What kind of Goodneſs is in their true and proper Nature abſtractly conſidered.

II. Their Original and Spring, whence they came to be in Man's Nature, whether as the Endowments of Nature, ſo as they may juſtly be called ours.

III. Their manner of inhering in Man's Nature, how entertained therein; for, quicquid recipitur, recipitur admodum recipientis.

IV. Their manner of working therein, whether their Acts be properly and truly good.

All which will clear the Point, that there is no ſuch good dwelling there, as ſeems to be objected.

I. Take this Light at its beſt, abſtractedly conſidered in its own true, naked, real, abſtracted Nature and Eſſence; and though I acknowledg it a Creature of God's, and therefore good with a natural kind of Goodneſs, yet I deny it to be good with that kind of Goodneſs which the Law hath in it, Rom. 7. 12. whatſoever hath been ſaid to the contrary notwithſtanding.

To examine which, let us have Recourſe to the Places alledged, we ſhall find, and it is obſervable to this purpoſe, that the Apoſtle calls not this Light, Rom. 2. 15. the Law written in the Heart, but only τὸ ἔργον τοῦ νόμου γραπτὸν, the written Work of the Law, that is, ſomething which produceth many Effects, which the Law alſo hath, but yet it is not of the ſame Nature with the Law, for it is proper only to the Works of Regeneration, to have the Law written in the Heart, that is, ſuch a Light and Diſpoſition which hath the ſame holy and ſpiritual Nature that the Law hath, as Grace in a Godly Man's Heart is ſaid to have; therefore Jer. 31. 33. But this ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael; After thoſe Days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my Law in their inward parts, and write it in their Hearts, and will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. Thus to write the Law in the Heart, is ſaid to be from the New Covenant, &c. To illuſtrate this by a Similitude, (which though it doth not, omnibus quadrare, as none do, yet will explain the thing) we ſee that in ſome Beaſts that are ſagaciores, of quicker Fancies, there are ſome things more than Senſe, which are umbræ rationis, as we uſe to call them, as in Elephants, &c. Yea alſo quædam umbræ of ſome Vertues, as of Chaſtity, &c. both which are ſo called, becauſe by virtue of theſe, they do many Works of Reaſon, and above Senſe, that is, the ſame things which Reaſon in Men produceth; yet theſe ſhew not a true Principle of Reaſon written there, but only τὰ ἔργα, the Works of Reaſon, that is, ſome Effects anſwering to it. So in Mens unregenerate Minds there is extant alſo umbra legis, a ſhining and glimmering of the Law, a Light that is the Image of it, as lumen eſt lucis, as Splendor is of Light, or which rather we may call the Picture of it, (the true real Light of which is only written in the Regenerate) whereby they do τὰ τᾶ νόμᾳ, things of the Law, that is, ſome things about the Law, or which the Law commands; the outwards of it, or as Beza hath it, eadem officia præſtat quæ legis ſunt facit; as it forbids Sin, ſo doth this Light; as it condemneth for Sin, ſo alſo doth this Light condemn them for ſinning. Chap. 7.

Now to prove that this Light that is thus in them, is but as it were a Shadow or Picture of the Law, and therefore not of the ſame Nature with the Law, that word uſed, Rom. 2. 20. is obſerveable; An Inſtructor of the fooliſh, a Teacher of Babes, which haſt the form of Knowledg and of the Truth in the Law. Speaking of the Light of the Law in a learned Jew, being unregenerate, he ſays, he hath μόρφωσιν, a form of Knowledg, and of the Truth of the Law; which as it ſignifies the Syſtem of the Law in his Brain, or the Object of his Knowledg, ſo alſo doth withal intimate the Slightneſs of his Knowledg, for the kind of it, that it is but a Form, a Picture, an Idea of it, and this he ſpeaks of in compariſon to the real thing it ſelf, and Power of it; for ſo in 2 Tim. 3. 5. the word μόρφωσις is uſed, and this ſo in reſpect of thoſe anſwerable Tinctures and Impreſſions of Piety and Vertue, which in the Objection are ſaid to be in the Will, Having a form of Godlineſs, (ſays the Apoſtle) but denying the Power of it; that is the thing it ſelf, and the powerful Effects of it. As that Goodneſs which is in their Wills, is there ſaid to be but a Form and Picture of true Godlineſs; ſo in this place of Rom. 2. 20. the Light in their Underſtanding is ſaid to be but a Form of Knowledg; the Word is the ſame now: If the Light that is engendred and lighted as it were immediately from the Law it ſelf, be but μόρφωσις, a Picture of the Truth, then much more is the weak divine Light of Nature, that is but a weak Reſemblance or ſhadow of the Law. And that it is no more, and not of the ſame real Nature with the Law, appears by the weak Effects of it, for in ver. 21, 22, 23. all this Knowledg did not enable them to keep the Law, but they broke it notwithſtanding. But though it ſhould be granted to do the ſame things which the Law doth, yet the powerful Energy of it is wanting, which is to ſanctify the Heart, which when the real Light of the Law it ſelf, the Truth it ſelf, comes into the Heart, it doth ſanctify, John 17. 7. Sanctify them through the Truth, thy Word is Truth. But here the very Conſcience it ſelf it is ſeated in, remains (as I ſhall ſhew more fully afterwards) ſtill impure, Tit. 1. 15. Their Conſciences are defiled; and this is not ſaid of it in part only, (as if in part only it remained defiled) for it is ſpoken in Oppoſition to a regenerate Man, whoſe Conſcience remains defiled but in part, but this wholly; whereas had it a real Contrariety to Sin, as Grace and true Holineſs hath, Gal. 5. 17. [Theſe are contrary:] it could not come to reſide in Man's Nature till Sin were in part mortified, and the Conſcience purified by Grace, which in an unregenerate Man it is not, for both this Light and thoſe moral Diſpoſitions are ſymbolical with our natural Defilement, and are compatible with it in the Conſcience not yet emptied of Sin.

Object. If it be objected, that this Light fights againſt Sin, as an Enemy, and likewiſe Mens unrighteous Natures againſt it, and therefore they are contrary.

I anſwer, That it being but the Picture of the Law, it is contrary to Sin, repreſentativè repreſentatively, not eſſentialiter eſſentially; it hath a verbal teſtimonial Contrariety in ſpeaking againſt it, but not a real natural Contrariety to work againſt it, as one Contrary doth againſt another, ſo as to expel and overcome Sin; for it is but the Form of Truth, it wants the Power of it: and no wonder that though it be not the real Law, Men yet hate it; for as Grace makes a Man hate the Appearance of Sin, ſo Sin hates this Shadow and Appearance of Truth and Goodneſs. As it is ſaid of the Panther, that it hates a Man ſo deadly, that it ſeizeth and preys not only upon a Man, but the Picture of him. This ground thus laid, the Anſwer to the former Obiection is clear; for whereas, Rom. 1. 18. it is called Truth, I expound it by this Rom. 2. 20. that is, but as it were a Form of the Truth, the Picture of the Truth, which was in the Heart of our firſt Parents. And if you ask why hath it the ſame Name? I anſwer, Becauſe that Pictures uſe to have the ſame Name given them, that the Perſons they repreſent have; you ſay, That is the King, that the Queen, ſpeaking of their Pictures; and therefore I acknowledg in the ſame ſenſe, it is ſaid to be Truth, wherein alſo it is called Goodneſs; but being but the Form of Truth, it is alſo but the Form of Goodneſs. And ſo, Hoſ. 6. 4. the light tinctures of Good that were wrought in Ephraim, which yet ſoon vaniſhed, are called Goodneſs, Thy Goodneſs is but as the Morning-Cloud, &c. yet is really but the Umbra of it thus expreſſed; not but that theſe moral Diſpoſitions, and Light of Conſcience, are a real thing created by God, but that, being compared with the Light of a regenerate Man's Mind, they are but the Picture of it; as Aurichalchum is a real Metal, yet but the reſemblance of Gold, and ſo called falſe Gold.

And whereas it was objected, That it is more than ſimply natural Truth, and therefore hath more than a natural Goodneſs, as other Creatures have.

I anſwer: Confeſſing it hath, but yet ſtill falling ſhort of the Truth and Goodneſs that is in the Law, and pure Light of Conſcience in a godly Man: For as in a Picture there is a double Truth and Goodneſs, the one natural in the Colours which are laid on, when they are true and good, and the other artificial, as it is a Picture; which is by ſo much the more ſaid to be true and good, by how much it is more like him it was made for; but yet it cannot be ſaid to have the Goodneſs which is in the Man himſelf: ſo this Form of Truth hath not only a natural Goodneſs which is in all Creatures, but alſo a further Goodneſs which you may call moral, or what you pleaſe, ſo you do not attribute the goodneſs of Holineſs to it, which is attributed to the Law, whereof this is but the Picture. And conſider withal, what things of the Law they are the reſemblance of: As Pictures repreſent but the outward Lineaments, ſo this but the Letter of the Law; not the Law it ſelf comprehenſively taken, but τὰ τᾶ νόμᾶ, ſome things about the Law, outward Acts; and ſuch Light reacheth no farther: therefore that Jew Paul ſpeaks of, he ſays was partaker of the Letter of the Law, Rom. 2. 27. as the Gentiles only of τὰ τᾶ νόμᾶ, that is, the outward Rind of the Precepts of it, in what is to be done for the Matter, the Corps of it, as I may ſo ſpeak; for 2 Cor. 3. 6. the Law is ſaid to have been to them only the Miniſtration of the Letter; and therefore St. Paul ſays of himſelf, that when he was a Phariſee, Rom. 7. 6. that he ſerved God according to the oldneſs of the Letter, not in newneſs of the Spirit. Now the Letter of the Law, ſevered from the Spirit of it, cannot be ſaid to be holy or good in that ſenſe the Law is, (for ver. 12. The Law, ſays he, is holy, ſpiritual and good) no more than the Body of a Man can be ſaid to be living when the Soul is gone; for when the performance of any Duty is ſevered from the right End, and from right Motives, to God it is but bodily Exerciſe, not Godlineſs, 1 Tim. 4. 8. and therefore this Light not directing unto, nor expreſſing the Spirit of the Law, and not exciting a Man upon right Motives, nor raiſing up all in Man to God, it is not ſo much as the Picture of the Holineſs of the Law, but only of the Letter, which ſevered from the Spirit, is not holy: for the Law is not totum homogeneum, but heterogeneum, conſiſting of Letter and Spirit, Body and Soul: and therefore, Quicquid dicitur de toto, non dicitur de qualibet parte; what is ſaid of the whole together, is not ſaid apart of every part. And ſuppoſe it did expreſs the Inwards of the Law, yet ſtill it is but the Picture, comparatively with the Light in a godly Man, which Chriſt calls the Light of Life, John 8. 12. that is, the living real ſpiritual Law; whereas the other is but dead and lifeleſs lifeleſs, and can be ſaid no more to be holy, than the Letters wherewith the holy and ſpiritual Law was written in upon the Stones, can have that Name: which Compariſon the Scripture ſeems to allude to, Jer. 31. 32, 33. I will take away the Heart of Stone, (alluding to the Stone the Law was written in) I will write the Law in your Hearts, and make them Hearts of Fleſh, ſanctified, altered, and made ſpiritual and holy as the Law is. Chap. 7.

Or, ſuppoſe it be the real Law, as it may ſeem in troubled Conſciences it is by the real effects of it: Rom. 7. 9. For I was alive without the Law once: but when the Commandment came, Sin revived, and I died. When it kills and condemns, yet this is only the literal effects of it; ſo as ſtill theſe Effects may be called but literal Effects, and occaſional Effects of it, for 'tis the Letter that kills; the holy ſpiritual Effects of it are to raiſe the Heart up to God, to ſanctify the Heart, and theſe this Light wants, 2 Cor. 3. 6.

Therefore to conclude: This Light of Conſcience, and thoſe moral Diſpoſitions are no more acceptable to God, or good in his ſight, than a Jew in the Letter was to him, Rom. 2 ult. When the Spirit in him was wanting, his Praiſe is of Men, not of God; and therefore, as the Oppoſition ſhews, was not approved of by God. Nay further, theſe appearing good Diſpoſitions, in regard of the Perſons they are in, may be ſaid to be abominable; Prov. 21. 27. The Sacrifice of the Wicked (becauſe a wicked Man) is abominable, much more when he brings it with an evil Heart.

Uſe. Theſe Truths, though they ſeem but Notions, yet they much ſerve and tend to Practice: For do not theſe Acts of enlightned and natural Conſcience deceive many? Therefore to think they have Grace, many, becauſe they have been troubled for Sin, therefore conceive their Eſtate good; or, becauſe Conſcience checks and fights againſt Sin, ſo as the Light which God ſets up as a Candle, to ſearch the Chambers of the Belly, Prov. 20. 27. to find out their Sinfulneſs, occaſionally deceives them; but let them conſider that this argues no Holineſs or Sanctification, for you ſee it falls ſhort of it.

But eſpecially, Men do think their Eſtates good, if they follow their Conſcience in any thing that is right: but conſider that we may do ſo, and yet not be holy Men; for the Sampler cannot be better than the Copy; no Man's Actions are better than his Light which is the Rule of them; they may be, and are worſe. The Light it ſelf you ſee is not holy, ſuppoſe your Actions were framed exactly to it, as ſome think St. Paul's were, by that Speech, Acts 23. yet as he did ſin in all he did, for all he kept to the Rules of his Conſcience, yea, he ſays, he was the greateſt of Sinners; ſo may you be: Therefore content not your ſelves with that Light, and practiſe anſwerable, as Civil Men do: but get the Light of Life, the Law written in the Heart, and to be transformed in your Minds, to prove what is the acceptable Will of God; get the newneſs of the Spirit, that you may ſerve God, who is a Spirit, in Spirit and Truth.

And for thoſe ſhows of moral Vertues, conſider, you may be garniſh'd with them, and ſwept by the Light of Conſcience from groſs Sins, and yet remain empty of Grace; as it is ſaid in the Parable, Mat. 12. 44. And therefore many that truſted in them, are in the end given up to groſs Sins; and then all theſe waſhy ſlight Vertues, not being rooted in the Heart by the Spirit of Sanctification, are waſh'd off; for Luke 8. 18. it is ſaid, From him ſhall be taken away that which he ſeemed to have.

II. Having diſcovered that this Light of natural Conſcience falls ſhort of true Holineſs in the nature and kind of it, let us, in the ſecond place, enquire into the tenour of its Conveyance to us, whether as a Legacy bequeathed by Nature, or as a mere Endowment beſtowed from ſome other good Hand, pitying our Poverty and Nakedneſs. And herein that the Mind, and the Faculty in which this Light is received, is a natural Faculty, and an Appurtenance of Nature, muſt not be denied: but yet whether this Light it ſelf be in Man as an Appurtenance that goes by the tenour of Nature, with our Natures, as the Faculty of the Soul, and Corruption or Fleſh now doth, is queſtioned by ſome; yea, and they are denied to be ſo much as the Ruines of the former Image left unextinguiſh'd by Adam's Sin, ſo to be derived to us by Birth, and the Right thereof, and it may be ſome more than probable Demonſtration of it.

Firſt, That the Experience both of the Partiality of this Light in all, and the unequal Diviſion and Diſtribution of it to Adam's Poſterity, may ſeem to give in ſome Evidence to this, that it is not of Nature's Inheritance, but moveable, and ſo loſt, and reſtored again by a new Gift.

For if it was left as Reliques of the former Image to be derived to us, as unextinguiſhed by Adam's Sin;

1. What Reaſon can be given why there ſhould be left a Light to ſee ſome kind of Sins to be Sins, rather than to diſcern others, which are as groſs? Jude 10. it is ſaid of evil Men, that they ſpeak evil of things they know not; and in what they know naturally, they corrupt themſelves: which implies they know but ſome things naturally, and others not. Now there can be no reaſon given, why Adam's Sin extinguiſh'd Light concerning ſome Sins, but the ſame Reaſon may as ſtrongly be urged, that it is of it ſelf a ruined and razed out Light concerning all Sins, if de novo it was not ſome way repaired.

2. Why are theſe Sparks of Light ſo unequally ſhared and parted, if they had been left in Adam's Soul, to have been derived to us? Some of the Heathens had more, as Socrates, ſome leſs; ſome are in a manner as brute Beaſts, others have more noble and elevated Minds. Other Gifts of Knowledg and Underſtanding in the Mind, being perſonal, may therefore come to be unequally diſtributed, but this Light of it was natural, and left as the Ruines of the former Image, it would ſurely be much more alike in all than we ſee it is; for Adam begat in his own Image, that is, of what was left in him, Gen. 5. 3.

Secondly, The Scriptures may further incline us thus to think; as that place

(1.) In the 3*d* of John, That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh; that is, all that is derived to Man by virtue of his Birth, is poſſeſſed and filled with nothing but Fleſh and Corruption, both Subſtance and Faculties; ſo that if thoſe Sparks of literal Light (as I chuſe with the Scriptures to call it) be more than Fleſh, as is objected, and will eaſily be granted; then I affirm that they are not derived, as rak'd up in the Aſhes of our Nature, and ſo by Birth, but ſtruck in by ſome external Hand, which fetches this Fire from Heaven, as of old the Poets feigned, which diſcovers the Nakedneſs of our Grandmother Eve's Nature, and Grandfather Adam's, to the full and utmoſt: ſo that now take the Faculties of the Soul, with their bare Birthright-Dowry only, and there is not only no good thing that is holy, but not ſo much as theſe Shadows of what is good derived to us as native Indwellers; but as Nature brings us forth naked in our Bodies, and covered all over with menſtruous Blood, ſo (as the Alluſion is in Ezek. 16. 5.) alſo in our Souls it would not have left us ſo much as thoſe Fig-tree-Leaves, either of literal Light, or moral Vertues, to cover us withal; That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh.

(2.) That Phraſe Rom. 2. 14. proves the ſame thing, where this Light is ſaid to be written in Mens Hearts, for Writing is Opus artificis, non naturæ, a Work of Art, not of Nature; theſe Characters are written, not born with us; we by Nature have but abraſas tabulas, Tables in which every thing is raz'd out; it is the new Work of ſome ſecond Hand hath took the Pains to write them there; and therefore the Syriack calleth Conſcience, Tira, from a Word that ſignifies formavit, pinxit, hath formed or drawn any thing in Picture, becauſe it is the Table on which theſe Principles are written.

And if the Queſtion be, By what means this Light ſhould come to be de novo derived unto us.

(3.) For a third ground let us conſider that Place, John 1. 9. where he ſays, that Chriſt enlightneth every Man that comes into the World. To underſtand which Place, let us view the frame of the Chapter, from ver. 1, to 15.

Firſt, He ſhews what Chriſt is in himſelf and in his Perſon.

Secondly, What he is and hath been in his Diſpenſation towards the World.

1*ſt*. Before the Fall, what he was both to all Creatures, they were made by him, ver. 3. eſpecially to Man, that Life and Light of Grace which was in Man in Innocency, was from him, ver. 4.

2*dly*.

Chap. 7.

2*dly*. What he is to Men ſince the Fall.

Firſt, When that Light in Man and the Image of God was extinguiſh'd and turn'd into Darkneſs, he is become the Light of the World, and ſhines into that Darkneſs which elſe would want all Light, ver. 5. And the Light ſhineth in Darkneſs, and the Darkneſs comprehended it not: ſo as all Light is now from him, renewed and diſpenſed by him, which he ſhews more particularly, going over all the Degrees of Light which now ſhines to Men.

(1.) That common Light in all Mankind, ver. 9. He is the true Light that lightneth every Man that comes into the World.

(2.) That eſpecial Light of the Knowledg of the Law and Goſpel, which he had diſpenſed to his own Kinſmen and Country-men the Jews, ver. 10. who yet received him not. But then,

(3.) In thoſe that did believe, he comes with a further Light than both theſe, ver. 12, 13, 14, 16, 17. But as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name: Which were born, not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Fleſh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God. And the Word was made Fleſh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his Glory, the Glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of Grace and Truth. And of his Fulneſs have all we received, and Grace for Grace: For the Law was given by Moſes, but Grace and Truth came by Jeſus Chriſt: yet ſo as even that natural Light (which I may ſo call in compariſon of the other) which lighteth every Man that comes into the World, ver. 9. is alſo from Chriſt the ſecond Adam, as a Fruit of his Mediation; here we light all our Lights which otherwiſe would be but cæca lumina, but blind Lights.

Now that that Speech is ſpoken of that common Light vouchſafed to all Mankind, appears;

1. That he ſays not only in general, that it is a Light that enlightneth every Man, which is general enough; but further adds, which cometh into the World; that is, every Man that is born into the World, and this is in oppoſition to that ſaving Light which only thoſe that are born of God receive, ver. 13.

Then alſo the Series of thoſe three Degrees of Light afore-mentioned, argues this to be meant of common Light vouchſafed to Jews and Gentiles.

2. He ſpeaks of this Light as reſtored by him ſince the Fall in Man's Nature corrupted: Therefore, Firſt; When he ſpeaks of the Light given Man in Innocency, he ſays in the time paſt, he was the Light of Men; but now of this Light he ſpeaks in the preſent Tenſe, which ſhines and enlightneth.

Secondly; That in ver. 5. he ſays, this Light ſhines in Darkneſs, not comprehending or imbracing it: It is evident he ſpeaks of Man's Nature now as corrupted, and not as created at firſt, nor as regenerated by Grace, there being nothing but Darkneſs covering the deep Heart of Man, as once that deep Gen. 1. 2. till Chriſt ſays, Let there be Light, by a new Work, and as a common print of his Mediation.

Thirdly; That this is ſpoken eſpecially of that Light whereby we underſtand bonum & malum, Good and Evil, and not of that only whereby we underſtand verum & falſum, Truth and Falſhood, (though I think it true of that alſo) appears in that it is ſuch a Light as the Darkneſs of Man's ſinful Nature comprehends or receives not, but labours to avoid, as diſcovering their Darkneſs unto them, (which it doth) not the Knowledg of natural Truths.

Fourthly; This Light muſt either be underſtood of Light in natural Truths, or moral, or both: If of that in natural, then I argue; If Light of Underſtanding to diſcern of other things be from Chriſt, then much more to deſcry thoſe which are moral; and hence now it comes ſo unequally to be divided and diſpenſed to Men that come into the World, as all common Benefits of his Death are, and yet the Scripture for all this calls it natural, as in Rom. 2. 14. St. Paul expreſſeth it in oppoſition to that other Light which is vouchſafed from the preaching of the Word, which is not a Priviledg vouchſafed to all, as this is to every Man that comes into the World; and therefore that term of natural Light is diſtinguiſh'd from the other, as being in Men, wanting the Light of the Word left to meer Nature, and as being the common Priviledg to Men, and every Man that comes into the World.

BOOK II.

And of this Light, brought thus de novo into the dark Lanthorn of Man's Mind, may that Place be underſtood, Prov. 20. 27. where Solomon ſays, that the Spirit that is in Man is the Candle of the Lord, ſearching the Chambers of the Belly, or the Heart, ſo it is in the Original; which is not meant of the natural Faculty of Reaſon in common; for it is deſcribed by a peculiar office of looking and ſearching into a Man's own Heart; and therefore ſurely it peculiarly means this Light of Conſcience, whereby a Man reflects upon himſelf: And the Meaning ſeems to me to be, That whereas a Man hath many Rooms or Chambers in his Soul, ſeveral Faculties, upper and higher Rooms, Underſtanding, Will and Affections, and all filled and taken up with ſome thing or other; all which Rooms now are in the State of Corruption, Adam having left them in the dark, and as bare Walls ungarniſhed; ſo alſo without Light, though not in regard of ſeeing what is done within them, in ordine naturæ, that is materially, what Thoughts and Deſires are there, (for ſo a Man differs from a Beaſt, 1 Cor. 2. 12.) but in regard of what is good or evil in thoſe Thoughts and Deſires, in ordine moris. And thus though a Man had a reflecting Faculty left, as in order to the firſt; yet in regard of diſcerning the Good or Evil of what was done or acted in theſe Chambers, a Man ſhould be ſtill in Darkneſs, if God did not ſet up a Candle of a ſeminal Light, a Spirit or Diſpoſition inſpirited, therefore called Spirit, as Job 32. 8. There is a Spirit in Man, and this is the Inſpiration of the Almighty which gives Underſtanding, that is, Quickneſs and Ability, which is as a Candle of the Lord's, not innate, but brought in anew, as ſuch Lights that are by a new Inſpiration from the Almighty.

Fourthly, To evince that theſe are not the Appurtenances of Nature derived by Birth, let us conſider the End for which this Light is appointed, and brought thus in by Chriſt; and thus it may ſeem to be (as alſo moral Vertues are) a Means to curb and reſtrain, controul and rebuke corrupt Nature, and the ſwelling Forms of it: It is not there as a native Inhabitant, but as a Gariſon planted in a rebellious Town, by the great Governour of the World, to keep the Rebellion of the Natives within compaſs, who elſe would break forth into preſent Confuſion. In the 14*th* Pſalm, David ſpeaking of the Corruption of Man by Nature, ver. 1, 2, 3. after this Queſtion, Whether there be not ſome knowledg to diſcover their evil Doings to them? yes, ſays he, Have they no knowledg, ver. 4. which eat up my People as Bread? Yes: and therefore, ver. 5. they are often in fear, God having placed this there to overcome them with Fear, and by that to reſtrain them from many Outrages againſt God's People, whom in their Deſires, and ſometimes Practice, they eat up as Bread: Therefore this Knowledg is put in as a Bridle to corrupt Nature, as a Hook was put into Sennacherib's Noſtrils, Iſa. 37. 29. to rule and tame Men, and overcome them with Fear. That as it is ſaid of the Horſe and the Mule, Pſal. 32. 9. David there compares our Nature, for the outragious Fury of it, if left to it ſelf, without this Underſtanding as the Bridle of it; Be not as the Horſe and Mule that have no Underſtanding, whoſe Mouth (ſays he) muſt be held in by bit and bridle, leſt they come near thee, that is, kick and fling, and hurt thee: ſo would Man's Nature, there would be no Ho with them, no Man could come near another; if they had no knowledg, they would eat up one another, and the Church as Bread; but there is there Fear, ſays he, that is, thence it comes to paſs they are kept in awe, God puts in Knowledg and Conſcience as a Bridle; which, as a Bridle that curbeth a Horſe, is no part of the Nature of it, it being to break its Nature; ſo alſo this infuſed Light, only by Nature we have a tender Part or Faculty of Mind, as a Horſe hath a Mouth which is ſenſible of the Guides of this Bit or Light when God holds the Reins hard, as ſometimes he doth.

Firſt, You have ſeen how this Light of Conſcience, ſuppoſe it had been derived by Nature, yet it is not holy.

But ſecondly, That it is not only not holy, but that it is not there from Nature.

III. Now conſider what Inherency this Light hath in the Mind, or what Entertainment it hath, and you will ſee it cannot be ſaid to dwell there; it never becomes naturalized, as I may ſpeak, in Man's Nature, into a Subject ſuitable table to it; but as it is a Stranger by Birth, it hath a Stranger's Entertainment, and is not admitted or incorporated into the Society of Man's Heart, not enfranchiſed, or as a naturalized free Deniſon, only it crowds in there by force of Arms, and ſo holds Reſidence; for it comes thus to judg and reprove only; and Men entertain it, as the Sodomites did Lot, ſaying, Gen. 19. 9. This Fellow comes in to ſojourn, and he will needs be a Judg. Nay, the Heart of Man deals more unrighteouſly, impriſoning it in Unrighteouſneſs, κατεχόντων, Rom. 1. 17. affording it not a Dwelling-houſe, but a Priſon to be in; ſo as it dwells not there, but is impriſoned rather: The Scripture tells us, that the Darkneſs in Man receives it, John 1. 5. nay puts it away, not willing to entertain it, 1 Tim. 1. 19. Holding Faith, and a good Conſcience; which ſome having put away, concerning Faith have made ſhipwrack. Ἀπωσάμενοι, putting away a good Conſcience; ſo as it cannot properly be called theirs, it being neither from Nature, nor owned by or received as a Nature in their Hearts. Whereas, true Grace and Light in a godly Man, though it be not in him by Nature, is made a new Nature in him; therefore he being Partaker of it, is ſaid to be Partaker of a Divine Nature, 1 Pet. 1. 4. there being ſuch a Connection between him and Grace and the Light of it, as is between natural Diſpoſitions and the Subject they are in; but it is not ſo in an unregenerate Mind, as to the Light that is in it: And therefore for all this Light the Conſcience ſtill remains defiled; for as it takes away no inherent Sinfulneſs, but reſtrains it only and curbs it; ſo it cannot be ſaid to dwell there. Chap. 7.

IV. Suppoſe this Light had ſuch an admittance, and was naturalized; yet by that Inherence or Admittance it hath in the Subject of natural Conſcience, it would be defiled; for, Titus 1. 15. Unto the Impure all things are impure, becauſe their Minds and Conſciences are impure. Mark it, he inſtanceth in the beſt part of them, their Conſcience, which defiles all that come near it, as well as any Faculty elſe, and worſe: For as in the old Law, if an unclean thing did but touch a thing, otherwiſe in it ſelf clean, yet it was defiled by it, Hag. 2. 14. So (ſays God) are this People, and therefore all that belongs to them; ſo now in the preſent Caſe, if this Light but comes into their Conſciences, and becomes theirs, it is polluted. And indeed Nature in other things, ſhews as much; for, quicquid recipitur, recipitur ad modum recipientis. What is more pure than the Light of the Sun which ſhines on a Dunghil, and is not defiled, becauſe it admits of it not at all? But if it ſhines on a thing that can receive it, as on a red Glaſs, it preſently is died red; the ſhine of it hath the tincture of the Glaſs; ſo this Light, either it is beaten back by the Darkneſs which receives it not, and then 'tis not theirs; or if it be received, yet their Conſcience being impure, it becomes impure: therefore, Mat. 6. 22. the Eye of Man, that is, which is in Man, which gives light to the whole, and is his Guide, is called evil, and Darkneſs that is ſinful, though mixed with ſome Light, Mat. 6. 23. But if thine Eye be evil, thy whole Body ſhall be full of Darkneſs.

Uſe 1. See then the Mercy and Goodneſs of God and Chriſt now to the darkned Condition of Man; conſider, he lights a Candle, holds it there in your Hearts for you to ſee to work by, without which a Man would be as a Horſe and Mule, yea as a wild Aſs, Job 11. 12. ſo Man is born; which, as it is the moſt ſtupid of Creatures, empty of thoſe Shadows of Reaſon other Creatures have, ſo are we of thoſe Shadows of Goodneſs; and therefore of our ſelves we would be wild and ravenous, eating up one another, but that God hath put a Bit into our tender Part, our Conſciences. All fierce Creatures have ſtill ſome tender Part left, without which they could not be ruled, as an Horſe a Mouth to put in a Bit, a Bear a Snout to put in a Ring, elſe none might come near them; ſo hath Man a Conſcience: And that which ſhews God aimed at the Good of Mankind in it, appears by this, that the Light of thoſe Principles which tend moſt to the Preſervation of Mankind, are moſt deeply impreſſed and ſet on, as againſt Murder, for which, of all Sins elſe, their Conſciences uſe moſt to trouble them, &c. inſomuch as Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus ſays, that within the Walls of Rome, for 620 Years none were found kill'd by a private Hand; and and therefore this Sin and the Guilt of it affrights the Conſcience moſt, becauſe it is moſt againſt the Good of Mankind.

And conſider, if God had not put this Viceroy into the Heart, what Villanies would the World be filled with! Our Caſe would be as the Caſe of Iſrael when they had no King; Every Man did what was good in his own Eyes, Judg. 17. 6. So if there was not this King and Viceroy, this Gariſon in Man, whoſe Voice is Vox Dei, every Man would do what's good in his own Eyes; but God hath put it in to tame Men, and hereby cuts ſhort even the Spirit of Princes, takes off their Edg and Fury, Pſal. 76. 11. by terrifying their Conſciences: Hereby Herod's Malice againſt John was reſtrained, for he feared him being holy, Mark 6. 20. Hereby God kept Abimelech from defiling Sarah, Gen. 20.

Uſe 2. See the Corruption of Man's Nature, that admits not, but as it were by conſtraint, ſo much as of the Light of Conſcience, though it be but a Picture. As it is one of the utmoſt Expreſſions of Holineſs, to avoid the appearance of Evil; ſo it is a ſign of the Sinfulneſs of Man's Nature to hate the appearance of God: as the Hatred of the Panther is argued to be greater, becauſe it ſeizeth not on a Man only, which other Beaſts do, but it will ſeize alſo on the Image of a Man, which no other Beaſt will; ſo it argues the Wildneſs of Man's Nature, that it hates not the Law and Grace only, which is the Image of God, but even this Truth which is but the Picture of this Image.

Uſe 3. Is the Light of Conſcience a Work of Chriſt? Then take heed how you deal with it: it was put into you, if poſſible, to keep you from Hell, or that you might be kept from Sins, and ſo have the leſs Puniſhment; but it occaſions the Aggravation of all your Sins by Mens abuſing it: But conſider, that to impriſon this Truth in Unrighteouſneſs, what a Sin it is, Rom. 1. 18. which Men do when they will not ſuffer it to break forth into Practice. Of all Herod's Sins this is made the greateſt, that he put John in Priſon, who preached to him to inſtruct him, Luke 3. 20. And ſo this is that which God took ſo hainouſly at the Gentiles Hands, and for which his Wrath is therefore to be revealed againſt them, that they impriſoned the Light of their Conſciences, Rom. 1. 18. And if to reſiſt the Power of a Magiſtrate, is to reſiſt the Power of God; then to reſiſt the Conviction of Conſcience, which is placed as a Viceroy for the Good of them that do well, and to be a Terror to the Wicked, is to reſiſt God; for the Judgment of Conſcience is the Lord's. And this alſo is to change the Truth of God into a Lie; for a Man's Actions being the Interpreter of his Mind, when that Truth which is within is not diſcovered in our Actions, we tell a Lie: and though things done erroneouſly are Sins, and therefore Errors and Ignorances were ſacrificed for in the old Law, yet if againſt Light, 'tis much more Sin; and yet how do Men ſin even againſt Light, till they be paſt feeling, as thoſe in Epheſ. 4. 18, 19. who liv'd in unnatural Uncleanneſs, Oppreſſion, contrary to the common Light of Nature, which therefore is made the Aggravation of their Sinfulneſs, Jude 10. to corrupt themſelves in what they know naturally: therefore God gave them up to reprobate Minds, not diſcerning Good and Evil, Rom. 1. 28. and in the end they do act as brute Beaſts, (as in that place of Jude) ſo that there is not a Principle to work upon by the Word, and their Light is taken from them, and they are left in the dark, and carried hoodwink'd to Hell by the Devil: as he that is in the dark, knows not whither he goes. And you that have been troubled in Conſcience, and know the bitterneſs of Sin, and yet fall to ſin again, though your Conſciences have broke forth again upon you as much as ever, take heed how you go on; though at preſent your Conſciences may be drunk and aſleep, and the Light impriſoned, yet know that this Light will one day break Priſon and rage; and as a Mad-Man, that when he is awake, is more mad than when he lay down, ſo will your rows'd Conſcience be more terrifying than ever.

CHAP.

Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

The ſecond Part of Original Corruption, Enmity unto God, and to all that is good. We became Enemies to God, violating all Obligations which were upon us, to love and ſerve him. This Enmity is in our Natures and Hearts, and ſhewn alſo in outward Acts of Hoſtility.

COLOSS. 1. 21.

And you that were ſometime alienated, and Enemies in your Mind by wicked Works, yet now hath he reconciled.

WE have ſeen how our Natures by Sin are deprived of all Good. We are now to conſider the poſitive Part of Original Corruption, which hath two eſpecial Branches.

1. An Averſeneſs, Contrariety, or Enmity unto God, which follows upon our Averſion from him: we are not only turn'd from God, but turned Enemies againſt him.

2. An inordinate Converſion from God to the Creatures, and the Pleaſures of Sin as their chiefeſt Good, and their utmoſt End; which is in Scripture expreſſed unto us by Luſts.

So the Apoſtle reduceth the whole to theſe four Degrees, Rom. 5. that we are dead Men, without Strength, Ungodly, Sinners, Enemies. The privative Part being diſpatch'd, this therefore now remains to be as the Concluſion more amply treated of, to make this firſt general Part of this Diſcourſe entire, and the total Sum of our Iniquity full.

Now firſt, for Explication of this Enmity in Man's Heart and Nature againſt God, there is a twofold Enmity found amongſt Men one againſt another; the like Proportion unto which holds here, one directly and ſetly intended, the other indirect and by way of Reſultancy.

1. Direct and intended, when a Man's Aim is to ruin, or to oppoſe and vex ſuch a Man. Or,

2. Indirect, when a Man doth that which provoketh, or tends to diminiſh from another, when yet a Man hath no ſuch direct Aim againſt his Perſon, &c. in his Thoughts, that do carry him on to it. Which double kind of Enmity is exemplified by Mens Offences againſt States or Princes ſet over them.

Thus 1. Thoſe are Enemies, that maliciouſly and ſetly plot and contrive Treaſon, Ruin, &c. in an hoſtile way.

And 2. Thoſe are Enemies too, that do contrary to the Laws, the declared Will of a Prince or State. So with us, a Felon that ſtealeth for his Luſt, yet is to be arraigned as one that acted contrary to the King's Crown and Dignity: though he ſhould plead, he never aimed at the King, or intended to diminiſh ought from him; yet doing what is contrary to his Law, on which his Soveraignty is ſtamp'd, he is arraigned and condemned as an Enemy to the King.

Now of that firſt kind of direct and ſet Oppoſition againſt God, none are found to be guilty but the Devil, who is called the Enemy, the Adverſary; or Men that ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, whoſe Sin is direct Revenge againſt God, and who do deſpite to the Spirit of Grace. But that indirect and implied Enmity is common to the Nature of Man, and is the Subject of this Diſcourſe. Let no Man therefore think to ſhift, and ſay, I an Enemy to God! God forbid; I never in ſinning aimed at Hurt or Injury to him, I had him not in my Thoughts. But if there be an indirect Enmity, it is charge enough to juſtify the Accuſation. Men are executed and put to Death by a State, as well as for Acts againſt Law, which do involve the Honour of the Prince, as for Acts of open or ſecret Hoſtility. So as Men are Children and Servants of the Devil; either 1. directly, that give up their Souls to him, as Witches: Or 2. that do his Work, though their Aim is not to ſerve him as their Father; and yet becauſe they do his Luſts, Chriſt termed them ſuch, John 8. 44. Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the Luſts of your Father ye will do.

Now I lay this for a fundamental Maxim all along this Diſcourſe, That all that are not for God, or are againſt that which his Law and Will is for, &c. are Enemies, and juſtly ſo accounted. God is ſo great, ſo ſoveraign, that if thou pleaſeſt him not, he accounts thee an Enemy; if thou beeſt not ſubject to him, thou art a Rebel. As Kings, yea Favourites, thinking themſelves ſo great, that if any be not wholly theirs, if any-way not for them, if any Man vails not, ſtoops not, their Spirits riſe againſt them as Enemies; as Haman's did againſt Mordecai, Eſther 3. 5. And ſo in like manner, Art thou not King? ſays Jezabel to Ahab, 1 Kings 21. 7. and therefore judg'd it an Affront to him to be denied any thing. In like manner, Am I not God? ſays the Lord. If there be any Averſeneſs of Spirit ſhewn to Kings, it is interpreted Enmity, becauſe their Greatneſs expects all ſhould ſerve and be ſubject to them. Now the Greatneſs of God is ſuch, as it neceſſarily and juſtly draws this on with it. Hence the carnal Mind is ſaid to be Enmity againſt God, Rom. 8. 7, 8. Becauſe the carnal Mind is Enmity againſt God; for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are in the Fleſh, cannot pleaſe God. So that not to pleaſe God, not to be ſubject to his Law, to be any way ſtrange or averſe to him, nay not to be for him is Enmity, yea, and Enmity againſt him. Thus Chriſt ſays, He that is not with me, is againſt me. And Rom. 1. Thoſe that glorified God not as God, ver. 21. are termed Haters of God, ver. 25.

This being premiſed, I come to open the Particulars of this Enmity of ours to God.

Firſt, In the Degrees of it. I ſhall need to ſeek no further than the Words of this Text in the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians, (it being fuller to this purpoſe than any other Scripture I meet withal) as noting out unto us three Degrees and Grounds of this Enmity, wherein it conſiſts; in that, 1. Eſtranged. 2. Enemies in Minds. 3. In evil Works. For whereas there are three and but three Grounds of all Friendſhip among Men. When 1. There are certain mutual Ties and Bonds of Relations, by which two are obliged and tied together in Friendſhip, as Husband and Wife, Father and Child, &c. Or 2. There is Likeneſs of Mind, which is indeed the Soul and Life of all true Friendſhip; for all Friendſhip is grounded on Likeneſs, (ſimile gaudet ſimili.) The third Ground of Friendſhip is mutual Expreſſions and Manifeſtations of that good Will and Agreement of Minds, by kind Offices of Friendſhip, without which no Friendſhip can long endure, but dies and goes out, as Fire without Fuel to feed it. Now all theſe three when they meet together, muſt needs make up the entireſt Friendſhip that can be, even a threefold Cord twiſted, which cannot eaſily be broken.

But now (if you obſerve it) you ſhall find in the Text three Grounds of this Enmity, directly anſwering to theſe three of Friendſhip, (for Friendſhip and Enmity being Contraries, they have anſwerably contrary Grounds.) For firſt of all, In the word alienated, ἀπηλλοτριωμένοι, or eſtranged, there is implied, That we are obliged to God by ſome Bonds of Friendſhip, and that yet we are fallen off from him, and entred into League and Friendſhip with ſome other, ſo as he is thereby provoked; for the Apoſtle makes it the firſt degree of this Enmity. Secondly, Inſtead of Agreement in Mind and good Will, there is an Enmity, a Contrariety in the Mind. Thirdly, Inſtead of kind Offices of Friendſhip, which ſhould be Tokens of that good Will, as Love, &c. there is nothing but evil Works ariſing from the Mind, every one of which contains in it Enmity and Contrariety againſt God: And therefore all theſe meeting in one, as they do here, muſt needs likewiſe argue the Enmity full.

Contrariorum contraria eſt ratio.

And

Chap. 8.

And Firſt, We are therefore Enemies, becauſe by Nature eſtranged; for notwithſtanding God hath bound all Men to himſelf at their firſt Creation in Adam, but eſpecially all us that live in the viſible Church, by all the neareſt and ſtrongeſt Bonds of Friendſhip that are to be found on Earth; yet we have forſaken him, and live eſtranged, and have ſought out other Friends contrary unto him. And if this is enough to provoke Men to Enmity, much more God: Yea, and by how much nearer the Bonds are, the greater Enmity ariſeth upon the Breach. None are greater Enemies, when fallen out, than thoſe that have been moſt obliged and neareſt Friends. And this is the firſt Degree, which I will further explain.

1. Mankind ſhould by that Eſtate they were created in, have enjoyed a moſt holy and bleſſed Communion, Familiarity, and Intercourſe of Acquaintance with the great God of Heaven and Earth, as may appear by ſome Paſſages betwixt God and Adam, Gen. 2. 19, 22, 23. Sure I am, that to all us that live in the viſible Church, God offers Acquaintance daily, notwithſtanding that our firſt Breach in Adam, who when he heard God's Voice, walking in the Garden, Gen. 3. 8, 9. hid himſelf, as one who would not have been ſpoken withal: God would yet be acquainted with us all; for to that end ſerve his Ordinances; his Word, wherein he ſpeaks unto and woes us; Prayer, wherein he would have us draw nigh to him. But we, beſides that Eſtrangement of our Foreſather, are eſtranged even from the Womb, Pſal. 58. 3. The Wicked are eſtranged from the Womb, they go aſtray, aſſoon as they be born, ſpeaking Lies. And at laſt we come in our Hearts to ſay with thoſe in Job, Depart from us, we will not have the knowledg of thee or thy Ways, Job 22. 17. Acquaintance in this kind refuſed, provokes Men that are but Equals, much more God, the infinite God. Yea, my Brethren, every Sin committed is made the deeper Act of Enmity by reaſon of this Bond broken by it. See how David takes a Wrong from one that had been of his Acquaintance, more hainouſly by far, than if he had ever been a profeſſed Enemy, Pſal. 55. 12, 13, 14. For it was not an Enemy that reproached me, then I could have born it; neither was it he that hated me, that did magnify himſelf againſt me, then I would have hid my ſelf from him. But it was thou, a Man, mine Equal, my Guide, and mine Acquaintance. We took ſweet Counſel together, and walked unto the Houſe of God in company. Had it been mine Enemy, I could have born it, ſays he; but it was thou my familiar Friend, my Equal; we took ſweet Counſel once together: a Wrong from ſuch a Perſon David could not brook. Had we indeed been created Enemies at firſt, God would not have regarded our Eſtrangement, nor our wronging him, for no other could have been look'd for: But you have heard 'twas otherwiſe; and yet he and we are not Equals, there is an infinite Diſproportion: and yet this is not all. For,

2. God being the great King of Heaven and Earth, obliged us to him, as his eſpecial Favourites, at our firſt Creation, above all the inferiour Creatures, raiſing us up out of nothing, and out of the ſame Duſt they were taken out of: he breathed into us an immortal reaſonable Soul, which yet they want, and ſet us next himſelf in his Throne, over them all. Yet Adam his Favourite, and we in him, diſobeyed him in that which was God's eſpecial Charge to the contrary, in eating the forbidden Fruit. How infinitely more are Kings incens'd if their Favourites prove Traitors, than if inferiour Subjects are ſo? And is not God provoked ſo too the more, by theſe many Favours abus'd by us? Yes, certainly. See how hainouſly he took David's Adultery at his Hands, more than he would at the Hands of an inferiour Subject, becauſe he was his eſpecial Favourite; 2 Sam. 12. 7, 8, 9. And Nathan ſaid to David, Thou art the Man. Thus ſaith the Lord God of Iſrael, I anointed thee King over Iſrael, and I delivered thee out of the Hand of Saul: And I gave thee thy Maſter's Houſe, and thy Maſter's Wives into thy Boſom, and gave thee the Houſe of Iſrael and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee ſuch and ſuch things. Wherefore haſt thou deſpiſed the Commandment of the Lord, to do Evil in his ſight? Thou haſt killed Uriah the Hittite with the Sword, and haſt taken his Wife to be thy Wife, and haſt ſlain him with the Sword of the Children of Ammon. Did not I anoint thee King? ſays God; gave thee the Houſe of Iſ- rael and Judah? and would have done much more for thee: Wherefore haſt thou deſpiſed the Commandment of the Lord, in doing Evil in his Sight? Was not this now juſt our Caſe in Adam, in eating the forbidden Fruit? and in our own particular too, whilſt unregenerate, breaking and deſpiſing all thoſe holy and righteous Laws which God hath given?

And 3. by Creation we were all the Sons of God, as Adam is call'd Luke 3. ult. For God ſtamp'd his own Image on us; therefore we were his Sons, when others but his Creatures. Yet Adam our Fore-father ſought, like a rebellious Abſalom, to diſthronize God; that he ſhould be as God, was his temptation to Sin, Gen. 3. 5. We ſet up other Gods, making our Bellies, that is, every earthly Vanity as a God, Phil. 3. 18, 19. And this Rebellion of ours, as Children againſt God our Father; the breach of this Bond provokes to deeper Enmity, than the violation of any of the former, 2 Sam. 16. 12. When Shimei curſed David; O, ſays he, if my Son ſeek my Life, how much more may this Benjamite? And God takes it ſo too at our hands very hainouſly, Iſa. 1. 2. Hear, O Heavens, and hearken, O Earth: I have brought up Children, and they have rebelled againſt me. This was Res inaudita, a Thing unheard of; and therefore he complains to theſe ſenſleſs Creatures of it.

4. We were by the Law of Creation eſpouſed unto God in ſome reſpect; Jer. 31. 31, 32. Behold, the Days come, ſaith the Lord, that I will make a new Covenant with the Houſe of Iſrael, and with the Houſe of Judah: Not according to the Covenant that I made with their Fathers, in the day that I took them by the Hand, to bring them out of the Land of Egypt, (which my Covenant they brake, although I was an Husband unto them, ſaith the Lord). God ſpeaking of the Old Covenant, the Covenant of Works; and ſo Adam's Covenant is involved, he ſays, Though I was an Husband to them. He therein ſhews, by what he was to the Jews, what he was unto Adam then. But as Adam's Heart at firſt ran a whoring after an Apple, ſo ours, whilſt unregenerate, after every Vanity: We are lovers of Pleaſures, Riches, Credit, &c. more than of God; and therefore doth the Scripture challenge us as Adulterers and Adultereſſes, as James 4. 4. Ye Adulterers, and Adultereſſes, know ye not that the Friendſhip of the World is Enmity with God? Whoſoever therefore will be a Friend of the World, is the Enemy of God. We are called Adulterers, as thoſe that had forſaken our firſt Husband, (as God is called, Hoſ. 2. 7. by the Church) and had entred into League with the World, and other ſtrange Lovers, as it follows in both thoſe Places. Adultery, we all know, is the breach of the Marriage-Knot; which being the higheſt Tie upon Earth, (as both the firſt and the ſecond Adam's Speech doth teſtify; For this Cauſe ſhall a Man forſake Father and Mother, &c.): Therefore the Breach of this Knot cauſeth the deepeſt Enmity; ſo 'tis with Men: Jealouſy, ſaith Solomon, Prov. 6. 35. is the Rage of a Man. Jealouſy, as you all know, is that Enmity which ariſeth from the Breach of the Marriage-Knot, as it alſo is taken there, as appears by the former Verſes. And this Jealouſy is Rage; the deepeſt that can be, more than Anger, Fury, or Wrath: It notes out Unpacifiedneſs, for it follows, He will not ſpare in the Day of Vengeance; though thou giveſt him many Gifts, yet he will not reſt contented. And God is a jealous God, ſo he ſtiles himſelf, and takes this Breach of our Marriage-Bond as hainouſly, and more, as he hath reaſon, than Men. Jer. 3. 1, 2, 3. They ſay, If a Man put away his Wife, and ſhe go from him, and become another Man's, ſhall he return unto her again? ſhall not that Land be greatly polluted? But thou haſt played the Harlot with many Lovers; yet return again to me, ſaith the Lord. Lift up thine Eyes unto the high Places, and ſee where thou haſt not been lien with: in the Ways haſt thou ſat for them, as the Arabian in the Wilderneſs, and thou haſt polluted the Land with thy Whoredoms, and with thy Wickedneſs. Therefore the Showres have been withholden, and there hath been no latter Rain, and thou hadſt a Whore's Forehead, thou refuſedſt to be aſhamed. You, (ſays he) if you put away a Wife, and ſhe becomes another Man's, will not own her again: But thou haſt played the Whore, &c. As if God had ſaid, Judg betwixt me and you.

1*ſt*, Conſider, that God did not put us off, but we forſook him firſt, freely and cauſeleſly: God offered no Wrong, no Unkindneſs.

2*dly*,

2*dly*, Nay, there could not be any Jealouſies or Suſpicions, (which often ariſe among Friends); for God is not ſubject to the leaſt ſhadow or appearance of turning: God ſhall clear it at the latter Day, as he doth, Jer. 2. 5. What Iniquity have you or your Forefather Adam found in me? Did I forſake you firſt? or could it be conceived that I was glad to be rid of you? No, 'twas on your part free, on my part cauſeleſs; and your Enmity to me is ſo continued. Nay, Chap. 8.

3*dly*, This was at firſt, and is continued ſtill at the perſwaſion of God's utter Enemy, and ours, the Devil: One Word, nay a Lie of his, prevailed more than all theſe Cords of Love.

And ſo much for the firſt Degree, noted out in the word Alienated, namely, That we have broken all the Bonds of Friendſhip, whereby we were obliged; both of Acquaintance, the neareſt Bond of Friendſhip Civil; of Favourites to a Prince, the higheſt Bond in Friendſhip Political; of Children to a Father, the neareſt in Friendſhip Natural; of a Wife unto her Husband, than which there is no greater Obligations.

All Relations of Friendſhip may be reduced to one of theſe Four; and theſe Inſtances are, (Summa in quolibet genere, & regulæ reliquorum) The higheſt in each of theſe Four, are the Meaſures of the reſt. Neither were theſe Bonds bare Reſemblances, but real, and which God uſeth to expreſs the neareſt Obligation between us, and which yet cannot expreſs it. God looks upon us as obliged to him by all theſe Bonds; as thoſe that ſhould be to him as his Spouſe; Children ſhould carry themſelves as his eſpecial Favourites, Friends; and therefore in every Act of ſinning, he will charge the Breach of all theſe Bonds upon all our Conſciences: Rom. 7. 2, 3. For the Woman which hath an Husband, is bound by the Law to her Husband ſo long as he liveth: but if the Husband be dead, ſhe is looſed from the Law of her Husband. So then if while her Husband liveth ſhe be married to another Man, ſhe ſhall be called an Adultereſs: but if her Huſband be dead, ſhe is free from that Law: ſo that ſhe is no Adultereſs, though ſhe be married to another Man. The Apoſtle expreſly ſays, That a Woman once married, is bound to her Husband as long as he and ſhe live: and if ſhe become another Man's, ſhe ſhould be in every Act called an Adultereſs. Now, not only in this Tie of Marriage, but in all the reſt of their Bonds betwixt God and us, it is true, that Time can never wear them out. God never dies, nor we, but are Immortal; therefore theſe Relations hold, and whilſt we ſin, are daily broken, and we do therefore continually provoke him to Enmity.

Secondly, But yet in the ſecond place, there is a further Ground and Degree of a far deeper Enmity, betwixt God and us; for there is an internal Contrariety and Enmity in our Minds, which is deeper than the former: For as in Friendſhip, outward Relations, Ties and Bonds are but the Body of it; it is inward Good-will that is the Soul and Life, and that muſt join Hearts together: Therefore a Friend is called, Deut. 13. 6. a Man's own Soul, and reckoned, as ſometimes, nearer to Men than all Relations. The other Externals of Friendſhip, are but as Sauder or Lead that joins Glaſſes together, that is quickly melted; and ſo it would be with theſe, if this inward Good-will doth not animate them. And therefore alſo, by the Rules of Contraries, it is ſo in cauſing Enmity: though the breach of outward Relations doth deeply provoke, yet we ſee it true amongſt Men, that when notwithſtanding them, they perceive a ſecret Good-will continued to them in the Party of ſending, they are ready to paſs by, and ſo pardon ſuch Wrongs. Yea, and ſo doth God; for notwithſtanding his Children who are regenerated, are more deeply obliged and engaged to him, than all Creatures, Men and Angels beſides; yet becauſe even when they offend, they bear inward and ſecret Good-will to God for all that, doing what they hate, what they approve not, and grieving they ſhould offend God whom they love above all; God therefore paſſeth by, and putteth up abundance of Injuries; as he did in David, accounting him a Man according to his own Heart, that is, a faithful Friend to him, notwithſtanding many outward Breaches of the neareſt Bonds that could be. But now, in

Men

BOOK II.

Men unregenerate, there being not only an external Breach of ſuch near Bonds of Friendſhip, but alſo an inward Enmity, Contrariety, that fills the Mind; it muſt needs moſt deeply provoke, for it is full Enmity indeed.

I will open this as a ſecond and further Degree. God created us at the firſt in his own Image or Likeneſs, both in Mind and Will: which Image conſiſted in an Agreement of Mind, liking and approving that Holineſs he did, and alſo chooſing it in our Wills, embracing it in our Affections; whence Good-Will did ariſe betwixt God and us. And when two Minds agree thus in Vertue, Ariſtotle ſays, it makes up perfect Friendſhip; he making ὁμονόια and ευνόια, meeting in Vertue, to be the ſtrongeſt Ground of Friendſhip, and to be the Eſſence of it. And ſo this being an Agreement between God and us about Holineſs, (for the Image of God in us is created after God in Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, *Epheſ.*4. 24.) it muſt needs do ſo too. But now on the contrary, there is an Enmity in the Mind, we neither in Mind or Judgment approving that Holineſs, nor in our Wills chooſing it; but we in both liking and following the clean contrary, namely, every Sin and evil Work, for to that purpoſe is the Phraſe uſed in the Text emphatically, Enemies in the Mind, in evil Works: therefore Enemies in our Minds, becauſe our Minds are in evil Works: which Phraſe implies that the Mind is wholly ſet upon and inclined and diſpoſed unto Evil. As when a Man is ſaid to be in Love, that is wholly taken up with it, given to it. Like Phraſe unto which alſo is that, Animus eſt in patinis, his Mind is in his Diſhes: even ſo that Phraſe uſed here, the Mind in evil Works, (as it is in the Original) for every evil Work, as you ſhall hear anon, contains direct Enmity againſt God in it. Therefore now, I ſay, this muſt make perfect Enmity. And further to confirm it, That there is this Enmity in the Mind, in Men unregenerate, in Acts 13. 10. 'tis ſaid of Elimas, (and what is true of one wicked Man in regard of his Nature, of which we now ſpeak, is true of all) that he was an Enemy to all Righteouſneſs, and full of all readineſs unto Evil, as the word ῥαδιουργιας ſignifies, an Enemy in his Mind to all Righteouſneſs, becauſe his Mind was prone, ready and ſet to all Evil: ſo that the ſame reaſon is given for that his Enmity, which is here in Col. 1. 21. And Simon Magus alſo (after the ſame manner of Phraſe uſed in the Text) is ſaid to be in the gall of Bitterneſs, Acts 8. 23. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of Bitterneſs, and in the bond of Iniquity. Which Phraſe implies, that his whole Heart, and the Frame of it, is ſteep'd deeply, and ſeaſoned in Works which are as Gall to us, viz. Enmity againſt God; for he is rather ſaid to be in this Gall, than it in him; to ſhew that his Nature is only full of it, and abounded, and was overcome by it: as a Man is ſaid to be in the Water, when he is drowned in it; or in Drink, when he is overcome with it.

I might be large in running over all the Faculties, and ſhewing how this Enmity reſides in them all.

As firſt of all, in the Judgment, the reaſoning and underſtanding Part of the Mind, of which principally the Text ſpeaks, ἐν διανόια, which implies that all the Thoughts, Reaſonings and Deviſings which are within the Mind of Man, are againſt God and his Ways, and altogether for Sin and evil Works, which are Enmity againſt him. And is not that argued to be deadly Enmity, when there is nothing but plotting, deviſing and uſing ones Wits againſt another? yet ſuch is this here: Yea, in theſe Reaſonings lies the ſtrength of the Enemy; by reaſon of which the inferiour Faculties are encouraged, backed and maintained in their Oppoſition. And therefore, 2 Cor. 10. 5. he compares theſe Reaſonings in the Mind of Man unto high Forts, Bulwarks or Towers, ſtrong Holds, which are caſt up to maintain and hold Siege againſt the Knowledg and Obedience of Chriſt.

Neither, 2. is the Will free of this Enmity: for though indeed the Will is not mentioned directly and expreſly in the Text, but only the reaſoning Part, yet 'tis not becauſe the Will is free, but rather becauſe that, of all other Faculties, the Underſtanding might be leaſt ſuſpected; ſeeing wicked Men in their Reaſonings, in the ſpeculative Underſtanding, are for the Truth often, and againſt evil Works; though again in the practical (which the Apoſtle means here) it is clean contrary with them. All Enmity lies principally in the Will; and and even common People, when they expreſs Enmity, they call it Ill-Will. And ſo in John 8.44. Luſts of Enmity and Malice againſt God and Chriſt, (of which Chriſt there ſpeaks) and which he calleth the Devil's Luſts, are made Acts of the Will, both becauſe they are called (as in the Devils they are found) Luſts: Now in the Devil, Luſts are Inclinations and Acts principally of the Will; as alſo becauſe Chriſt ſaith there of the Phariſees, You are of your Father the Devil, and his Luſts ye WILL DO; the word in the Original is Θλετε ποιειν. And anſwerably, wicked Men are ſaid to be Haters of God, Rom. 1.30. Exod. 20. 5. Chap. 8.

Yea 3. 'Tis ſeated in the whole Man, and whatſoever is in Man, as may appear by comparing theſe two Scriptures; John 3.6. That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh; and that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit. Rom. 8.7. Becauſe the carnal Mind is Enmity againſt God: for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. In the firſt, Chriſt ſays, what is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh: In ſaying, that which is born, &c. he ſhews, that there is not that thing in Man, which comes of fleſhly Generation, but 'tis wholly tainted with Fleſh, Sin and Corruption; even the Will, and all Parts. And in Rom. 8. 7. you may ſee what the Nature of this Fleſh or Corruption is, and what it brings with it to every Faculty; it is ſaid to be Enmity againſt God, φρόνημα σαρκὸς: ſome tranſlate it the Wiſdom of the Fleſh, becauſe that indeed is principally meant: but the word doth in the Signification generally extend it ſelf to the ſeveral Acts of each Faculty tending towards its Object, as I could ſhew by other Scriptures. So that the Meaning of the Holy Ghoſt is to ſhew, how that every Act of every Faculty, Underſtanding, Will and Affections, all which are tainted with Fleſh, are Enmity againſt God. 'Tis ſaid ſo in the Abſtract, becauſe it is in the very Nature of the Fleſh, in each Faculty to be ſo; even as it is the Nature of a Wolf to be at enmity with a Lamb.

And ſo much likewiſe of the ſecond Ground and Degree of Enmity, 'tis inherent in the Mind, and in every Faculty thereof.

Now did this Enmity lie and reſt there only, and break forth no farther? nor manifeſt it ſelf in Acts of Enmity, it were leſs full. But as Ariſtotle makes it a Condition of true Friendſhip, ut ſit manifeſta nec otioſa, that it be manifeſted by expreſſions of Love, or elſe 'tis idle, worthleſs Friendſhip: So likewiſe to make up the Meaſure of this Enmity full, it remains that I ſhew the manifeſtation of this Enmity in the Mind, in regard of evil Works mentioned in the Text, and which the Mind, as you have heard, is ſet on, and wholly given unto. The Mind of Man unregenerate, doth bring forth nothing elſe continually but evil Works, which do contain in them direct and expreſs Enmity againſt God: Every ſinful Act contains in it Enmity againſt God. That forenamed Place, Rom. 8.7. is expreſs for both, where 'tis ſaid that φρόνημα σαρκὸς, that is, (as I ſaid before) the leaſt ſtirring Deſire, or Act of any Faculty, even the Wiſdom of a Man, the beſt and pureſt Act the Mind brings forth, the wiſeſt Thought an unregenerate Mind thinks, is Enmity againſt God. And ſo, Iſa. 3.8. their Doings are ſaid to be againſt the Lord, and to provoke the Eyes of his Glory: for (beſides that every Sin is aggravated by being the breach of all Bonds) it contains a further and directer Enmity in it, as both thoſe Places do imply: for it is denominated to be Enmity in the Abſtract, which doth imply that it is in the Nature of it, and is ſaid to provoke the Eyes of his Glory, as being againſt him. Now let us examine the Reaſon given there in the following Words, and it will appear ſo: for therefore the Apoſtle ſays, 'tis Enmity againſt God, becauſe 'tis directly againſt God's Law, and will not be ſubject. And becauſe ſome Men may ſay, What is this to God? he is one thing, and his Law another; it touches not him. Yes verily, and that exceeding nearly, in a double reſpect.

1. Becauſe upon every moral Law of God, his Soveraignty, his Prerogative Royal is enſtamped and engaged in it; his being God and ſoveraign Lord, lies at the ſtake: For the Law is enforced upon that ground, I am the Lord thy God, ſo the Commandments begin; he commanding us, as he is God, and by his Divine Authority, to ſubmit to thoſe Laws; the main End and Intent of all thoſe Laws being, that Men ſhould acknowledg God's Soveraignty over them.

Now

BOOK II.

Now therefore in this Caſe, the breach and thwarting of the leaſt of theſe with full Conſent of Mind and Will, is flat Rebellion, a gainſaying his Soveraignty, a direct and immediate oppoſing his Prerogative Royal, denying him to be God. And therefore, Titus 1. 16. they are ſaid in Works to deny him. Now we all know whatſoever is done thus againſt the Soveraignty of a King, is an Act of High-Treaſon: whatſoever doth flatly deny the King to be King, is open Rebellion. And therefore every evil Work may well be ſaid to be againſt God, and to provoke the Eyes of his Glory; for it debaſeth, tendeth to impair and intrench upon his Prerogative Royal, his Glory and Soveraignty: But this is not all, it is flat Enmity, hath ſome Contrariety in the Nature, Form and Eſſence of it, to God's moſt holy and pure Nature. Becauſe,

2. God hath enſtamped his own Image on his Laws. For God's Laws, eſpecially his firſt Command, is but the Copy and Extract of God's moſt holy, righteous and bleſſed Will; and many of the Commands are the Copy of his moſt holy Nature, as that of his firſt Command; as ſuch which he in his Nature is inclined to will and command: And therefore his Law is called holy, as he is holy; and being written in the Heart, doth renew us in his Image. Whatſoever Act therefore is done againſt this Law, and hath a Contrariety thereunto, hath in the Nature of it a Contrariety unto the Nature of God. Which, my Brethren, being ſo, and the Mind of Man unregenerate continually producing ſuch Acts, needs muſt this Enmity be deep in this regard. But,

3. This indirect Enmity (as I may ſo call it) which is terminated in the Breach of the Law, proceedeth in the end to more immediate and direct Acts of Enmity againſt God himſelf, and breaketh forth into ſuch at laſt, as occaſion is given from collateral Enmity: it lancheth out unto direct Enmity againſt God, and all that would bring us to him. For although Man's Nature at firſt in ſinning, aims but at Pleaſure, and not to injure God, (only 'tis againſt him, as being his Soveraign, who hath commanded the contrary) yet if God come to diſcover his Offence taken at theſe their Sins, then corrupt Nature is apt to ſhew it ſelf in a direct Enmity. So that as by reaſon of every evil Work, there is an Enmity taken up by God againſt us; ſo alſo further, when God goes about to reclaim us here-from, to diſcover his Soveraignty and Diſpleaſure againſt us, then there ariſeth further active Enmity in us againſt him. If Light comes from him, that theſe our Works are evil, then preſently we hate the Light, John 3. 19. And this is the Condemnation, that Light is come into the World, and Men love Darkneſs rather than Light, becauſe their Deeds are evil. If God makes himſelf known to us to be our Lord and King, we like not the Knowledg of him, Rom. 1. 28. And even as they did not like to retain God in their Knowledg, God gave them over to a reprobate Mind, to do thoſe things which are not convenient. If he diſcovers himſelf to be our Judg, that threatneth us for theſe Courſes, then we hate him, Prov. 8. 36. But he that ſinneth againſt me, wrongeth his own Soul: all they that hate me, love Death. Wiſdom, that is, Chriſt, that would reclaim Men from ſinning, ſays, If they refuſe him, they hate him, and love Death. It is ſpoken conſecutively; for in ſinning they love that which cauſeth Death; and ſo in ſinning too they do that which will produce Hatred of God, and end in it when he comes to reckon with them. We either ſlight him or hate him, either we contemn his Judgments, or wiſh he were not. If he puniſh us, our Hearts riſe againſt him, as againſt an Enemy, and murmur, as Cain's did; and accordingly we quarrel with all ſuch Means as might reduce us into Subjection to him.

CHAP. IX.

Some Conſiderations propounded, which do more evidence how great the Enmity of Man's Nature is againſt God. That it is uninterruptedly continued. That it is Implacable. That it is an univerſal Hatred againſt God, and all that hath any relation to him. We ſhould try our State, by examining our ſelves, whether we continue Enemies to God or not. What are the Signs by which it may be known.

UNTO all this we may add three Conſiderations more concerning the manifeſtation of this Enmity in the Mind, and you ſhall ſee the Depth, Length, and Breadth thereof, abounding in all three Dimenſions, even above meaſure.

Firſt of all, It is continued, without interruption, even from the very beginning of a Man's Days, whenas the Mind of Man begins to put forth any Acts at all, Jer. 32. 30. For the Children of Iſrael, and the Children of Judah, have only done Evil before me from their Youth: for the Children of Iſrael have only provoked me to Anger with the Work of their Hands, ſaith the Lord. They have only provoked me to Anger from their Youth, by the Work of their Hands; they had done nothing elſe from the very beginning. And as 'tis ſaid of Jeruſalem, in the following Verſes, That that City had been a Provocation to him from the very firſt day that it was built: ſo it is true of every Man Unregenerate, that from the very day wherein he was born, he hath been a Provocation unto God by the Works of his Hands. And I pray you conſider it, The deadlieſt Enemy that ever was, was not always plotting, acting, and practiſing Hoſtility; there is a Truce ſometimes, a laying down of Weapons, by reaſon of other Employments. Ay, but this Enmity never hath a Ceſſation of Arms; and hereby appears the Length and Continuation of it.

Again, ſecondly, It is ſo deep an Enmity, that is thus ſeated in the Mind, as no Time, no Means that can be uſed, no Perſwaſions or Threatnings can of themſelves reconcile them, or wear this Enmity out, until God doth extend his mighty Power, and ſlay this Enmity, &c. And why? Becauſe 'tis ſeated in the Mind, in Nature: as in Rom. 8. 7. it is called Enmity it ſelf; which is not, nor cannot be made ſubject. 'Tis in the nature of the corrupt Mind to be an Enemy to God, as it is in the Nature of a Wolf to be an Enemy to a Lamb; and therefore Nature ſo remaining, it will never yield unleſs it be changed. Men may be Enemies to one another, and yet reconciled, becauſe 'tis not ſeated in their Natures, but only occaſioned (it may be) by ſome outward occaſional Difference and Variance, as appears in Suits of Law betwixt Man and Man, which therefore Compoſition will end; and the Cauſe being taken away, they prove as good Friends as ever. Ay, but this Enmity will never be at an end, unleſs God changeth the Mind; no Compoſition, no Parley or Treaty of Peace can end it: Nay, a Man cannot endure to hear of ending it, but falls out with all the Means, the Word, Spirit, and Light of his own Conſcience, that perſwades him to it; ſhunning, hating, reſiſting all Means of ending it; hating to be reformed, Pſal. 50. 17. hating even Reconciliation it ſelf; caſting all God's Laws behind their Backs, as 'tis there expreſſed; that is, dealing with all the Perſwaſions and Meſſengers that come from God to treat about the Peace, even as Jehu did with thoſe which came from Je-

BOOK II. horam, ſaying, What have I to do with Peace? And all this with a deep inbred Pride and Stubbornneſs in the Mind and Will, ſcorning to yield or ſtoop, Pſal. 10. 4. Inſomuch as God is ſaid, James 4. 6. to reſiſt, to withſtand, ἀντιτάσσεται, or juſtle him, even to throw him down to Hell.

Laſtly, 'Tis an univerſal Hatred, in regard of the manifeſtation of it, manifeſting Enmity againſt God, and all his Friends that ſtand in any Relation of Nearneſs to him continually, as it meets with any of them, or as Occaſion is offered.

1. An Enmity to God, there being ever and anon Reaſonings in the diſcourſive Part, that there is no God; denying, or deſpiſing, or abuſing all that the Mind knows of God; his Grace, turning it into Wantonneſs, Jude 5. deſpiſing the Riches of his Goodneſs and Long-ſuffering, Rom. 2. 4. mocking at his Omniſcience, in ſuch Thoughts or Words as theſe, Tuſh, God ſees it not; Pſal. 10. 11. He hath ſaid in his Heart, God hath forgotten: he hideth his Face, he will never ſee it. And if the Underſtanding be convinced, yet Deſires ariſe in the Will, Would there were no God! And is not that deadly Enmity, thus to reaſon againſt God's Being? or knowing that he is, to abuſe him? or wiſhing the Deſtruction of God? Rom. 1. 30. The Gentiles are therefore called Haters of God, becauſe when they knew God, they glorified him not as God in their Heart, ver. 21, 25.

2. Again, it is an Enmity to all the Friends of God. Let him ſend Prophets, and after them his own Son crucified; let him diſpenſe to them the Preaching of the Goſpel, and that as the only Means to reconcile them; yet they hearing this, out of the Hardneſs of their Hearts, turn Enemies to the Croſs of Chriſt, as 'tis expreſly ſaid, Phil. 3. 18, 19. Let the Lord deal with them by his Spirit, and that about their own eternal Good, as if he came as an Enemy, they reſiſt him evermore, and all his good Motions, Acts 7. 51. Ye ſtiffnecked, and uncircumciſed in Heart and Ears, ye do always reſiſt the Holy Ghoſt: as your Fathers did, ſo do ye. By the Light of their Conſciences the Truth they detain, and that unrighteouſly, like an Enemy in Priſon, Rom. 1. 18. For the Wrath of God is revealed from Heaven againſt all Ungodlineſs, and Unrighteouſneſs of Men, who hold the Truth in Unrighteouſneſs. If God ſpeaks to them by his faithful Miniſters, O mine Enemy, (ſay they) haſt thou found me? as Ahab ſaid to Elijah, 1 Kings 21. 20. And as he ſaid alſo to another Prophet, I hate him, for he never propheſies Good to me, 1 Kings 22. 8. So do they ſay of God, Doth he ſend his Children among them? There is an ancient Enmity ſown betwixt theſe and them, Gen. 3. 15. And I will put Enmity between thee and the Woman, and between thy Seed and her Seed. And this Enmity manifeſts it ſelf in all Indignities and Injuries.

Uſe. Becauſe the Apoſtle makes this as one eſpecial Character and Brand of an unregenerate Eſtate, To be Enemies unto God, the Uſe ſhall be of Trial and Examination of our Eſtates hereby. Now 'tis certain that we all, even that profeſs our ſelves Chriſtians, are born Enemies, as well as Gentiles: for we came all from Adam, from whom deſcends this Enmity, as you have heard before. And howſoever Men may think, and carry the matter outwardly in their Profeſſion; yet the Scripture tells us, and the latter Day will find it ſo, That God hath but few Friends in the World, and whole Swarms of Enemies, that lie and lurk even in the viſible Church, ὑπεναντίους, under-hand Adverſaries, Heb. 10. 27. whom nothing but the Word applied, and their own Conſciences, can accuſe and find out: yea, and the worſt Enemies are thoſe of God's own Houſhold. And this one Conſideration added to the former, namely, that we are born Enemies in our Minds, and that it is ſealed in our Natures, may make even the beſt of us to look about us, and to ſuſpect our Eſtates; for hereupon it will neceſſarily follow, that it is not all the Priviledges outward, which we Chriſtians have above Gentiles, that can alter our Eſtates; for we are born ſuch, even ſuch Enemies to God, as a Wolf is to a Lamb, Enemies in our Minds. As therefore take a Wolf when it falls firſt from the Dam, put it into a Lamb's Skin, keep it up in the Fold with the Sheep, let it (if it be poſſible) feed of the the ſame Food with the Sheep, tame it, do all what you will, it remains a Wolf ſtill, and therefore an Enemy unto a Lamb; neither will ever a Lamb and it be reconciled, till either that Wolf becomes a Lamb, or the Lamb a Wolf. Juſt ſo, take one of us when we are new dropp'd from the Womb, give us a Chriſtian Ear-mark, Baptiſm, bring us up in the ſame viſible Church with others, put us into a Chriſtian Coat, the Profeſſion of Chriſtianity, let us feed and partake of the ſame Word and Sacraments with others; nay, let us by all theſe Means ſeem outwardly never ſo much tamed, civilized, outwardly and formally conformable to good Duties; yet ſtill we may remain, as Chriſt ſays, inwardly ravening Wolves; Matth. 7. 15. Beware of falſe Prophets, which come to you in Sheeps Clothing, but inwardly they are ravening Wolves. We are ſtill where we were, unleſs there be a further Work to change the Nature, and not only ſuch an one as proceeds from good Motions, and moral Perſwaſions of the Word and Spirit; for what can theſe barely work, when we are of our ſelves ſuch irreconcileable Enemies in our Minds, as hath been delivered? A Treaty of Peace argues not Reconciliation, nor will in this caſe ever effect it. But it muſt be ſuch a Work as the All-powerful Arm of God hath a Hand in, ſlaying this Enmity, and changing the bent and frame of the Mind, naturally ſet on evil Works, unto the contrary Good, by putting in new Principles, friendlike Diſpoſitions unto God and all his Ways. And, my Brethren, if this be wanting, we remain ſtill in the Gall and Bitterneſs of our Natures, as Peter told Simon Magus, Acts 8. 23. for all that, it is ſaid he was baptized, believed, wondred at what he ſaw the Apoſtles do, was conformable to Chriſtian Duties; for he was a Helper with Philip, as 'tis in the 13*th* Verſe; and all this while he was an undiſcovered Enemy. And as I ſaid before, that until the Nature of a Wolf be changed, and it be made a Lamb, or a Lamb a Wolf, they can never be reconciled: So neither God nor we enter into a Covenant of Reconciliation, till either God become ſuch an one as we, which is impoſſible, or we become Partakers of the Divine Nature, and be thus inwardly changed in ſome meaſure, into his Image. Can two walk together, ſaith the Prophet, and not agree? Amos 3. 3. Surely no. And whereas many will further plead, and ſay, That they could never perceive any ſuch matter, that either they were Enemies to God in Mind, they never meant him hurt; but they have loved him, feared him, ever ſince they can remember; neither can they perceive that God is an Enemy to them, but loves them, clothes them, feeds them; they taſte of his Kindneſs daily, and therefore they have good cauſe to think that there is mutual Love between them. But for anſwer to this, I would have Men further conſider, As for this dealing of God towards you, that God is exceeding kind to his Enemies, as our Saviour ſaith, Matth. 5. 45. making the Sun to riſe on the good and bad, and ſendeth Rain on the juſt and unjuſt: and therefore alſo he bids us be kind to our Enemies. And alſo as it is in Job 31. throughout, God forbears with, yea, and heaps abundance of Bleſſings on one that is his utter Enemy: Yet 'tis but as the King reprieving a condemned Traitor, letting him enjoy his Lands and Livings, but reſerving him ſtill, as 'tis at the 30*th* Verſe, to the Day of Wrath. Therefore all theſe are no Arguments of a Man's Reconciliation through Chriſt.

If any are diſcovered here to be ſuch, let them not ſtand out ſtill ſhifting, and pleading Not guilty, but deal plainly with their own Souls, and lay it to heart, that they may ſeek out for Peace betimes. And let this one Conſideration move them, That it muſt and ſhall be confeſſed one day, at the Day of Death, or in Hell; and then they will confeſs it with this Addition, that they were Enemies to themſelves, in that they confeſs'd it no ſooner, whilſt Reconciliation was offered. 'Twere better for a Traitor to confeſs at the Bar when he hears of a Pardon, than at the Gallows.

The firſt ſign of being Enemies and unreconciled to God, is Strangeneſs to him, and unto the Life of God. Strangers to God are yet Enemies; for ye ſee, that being eſtranged is made a degree of Enmity in the Text, and in Job 22.21. Acquaint thy ſelf with him, (ſays one of Job's Friends to him) and be at Peace: Implying, that whoſoever is at Peace with God, muſt be acquainted with him. Strangeneſs indeed between two that never were familiar Friends, breeds not Enmity, it is not a ſign of it: but if you ſee two that once were familiar and acquainted, now to walk aloof off one from another; and though they have occaſion to meet often, yet to carry themſelves ſtrange one to another, ſurely (you ſay) they are fallen out. And ſo if you ſee Man and Wife live aſunder, never come at, ſpeak of, or ſeem much to care for one another; there is a Breach certainly, that is your next Thought. Why ſo it is here, for God and we once were acquainted. Let me apply this now.

1. Is God a Stranger to your Thoughts? That whereas every Trifle, Learning, Credit, Riches, Pleaſures and Cares of the World, Thoughts of theſe things, plotting for them, are very familiar with you, the firſt that call you up in a Morning, take up your Minds, converſe with you all Day, and lie down in your Boſom at Night: But as for God, Thoughts of him, or Contrivings how to pleaſe or to glorify him, are little, or not in all your Thoughts, as 'tis ſpoken of a wicked Man, Pſal. 10. 4. Or, if the Thoughts of him chance to come in, yet it is not welcome, as the Thought or Sight of a Friend is, but as of a Judg, or as of a Maſter that comes in on the ſudden upon a negligent Servant, and you wiſh he was further off: Then are you Strangers to God.

2. Or, are you Strangers to thoſe more ſpecial Duties in which Communion is to be enjoyed with him? Why is it you are ſo ſtrange? The truth of it is, you are Enemies. Can you go whole Weeks, Months, and never ſpeak to him by ſecret and intimate Prayer, ſo as to take him alone, as you would do a Friend, into a Corner, and there pour out your Heart before him, and tell him all your Secrets? Or, if you do draw nigh to him with your Lips, yet are not your Hearts far from him? There are Millions that could never yet ſay, that God and their Hearts were brought together in a ſweet Cloſe, nor do know what it means to talk with God as a Friend, as Moſes did. Such are Strangers.

3. Are you Strangers to and from the Life of God? as it is made the Note of a wicked Man, Epheſ. 4. 18. There is a bleſſed, holy and ſpiritual Life which God and Chriſt are the Fountain of, which they live, as it is ſaid of Chriſt, Rom. 6. 10. For in that he died, he died unto Sin once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. A Life which all the Saints and Angels live in Heaven, not depending on what is here in this World: And it is begun in a Chriſtian here, 1 John 5. 12. He that hath the Son, hath Life; and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not Life. Now try and ſearch thy ſelf, what Objects are thy Affections moſt quickned and kept up in Life with; Omnis vita guſtu ducitur. What doſt thou ſavour and reliſh? Are you utter Strangers to ſuch a ſpiritual Life? It may be a Life natural, of eating and drinking, marrying and giving in Marriage, &c. or it may be a Life of Reaſon, fitting you to converſe with Men; or further, a formal Life, in regard of religious Duties, in the Letter of them, as Rom. 7. 6. But now we are delivered from the Law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we ſhould ſerve in newneſs of Spirit, and not in the oldneſs of the Letter. But have you an inward Life of Grace, Influences and Comings-in, from Recourſes to and Communions with Chriſt, (as Paul ſays he had, Gal. 2. 20.) quickning you in all theſe, and above all theſe, as that which you reckon your Life, more than all theſe? If you want it, you are Strangers to the Life of God.

Laſtly, You are Enemies to God, if you be Strangers to the things of God, his Graces, Converſes with a Soul in ſecret; which God gives his Friends and Children, as Love-tokens: 1 Cor. 2. 12. Now we have received not the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. God hath many Secrets which he makes known to them that are his Friends, John 15. 15. and Pſal. 25. 14. The Secret of the Lord is with them that fear him: and he will ſhew them his Covenant. But now when we hear experimental Diſcourſings of ſuch near and intimate Dealings of God, as how he draws the Heart to believe; when we hear of change of Heart, of Regeneration, of the new Birth, &c. and of the Signs of theſe made plain to us out of the Word; Do we hear and entertain them as ſtrange, or as known things to us? Or, do not our Hearts think the ſame that the Athenians ſaid of Paul's Doctrine, Acts 17. 20. For thou bringeſt certain ſtrange things to our Ears; we would know therefore what theſe things mean. So do not our our Hearts think ſecretly of ſuch Sermons, what mean theſe things? theſe being ſtrange things to our Ears. I have written to him the excellent things of my Law, but they were counted as a ſtrange thing; as God in the Prophet complains, Hoſea 8. 12. All this argues, we are yet Strangers, and therefore unreconciled. Chap. 9.

A ſecond Note of Enmity to God, is not only this Strangeneſs mentioned, but too much inward entire Affection to or Friendſhip with the World. The Scripture makes this Enmity with God, though Men think not ſo, James 4. 4. Know ye not, ſays James there, ye Adulterers and Adultereſſes, that Friendſhip with the World is Enmity with God? By World there, he means not only the Corruptions of the World, or the Sins of it, (as Peter calls them) but the things of the World, ſuch as are in themſelves the good Bleſſings of God, as Honour, Riches, Credit, Learning, &c. as appears by the foregoing Verſes; for he ſpeaks of ſuch things as Men ask, and uſe to receive at the Hands of God. And whereas Men might ſay, Theſe are the good Bleſſings of God; and to love them, and rejoice in them, will God take this ſo heinouſly? Yes, if it be inordinate: He tells them, 'tis Adultery ſpiritual; for of that he ſpeaks, Ye Adulterers and Adultereſſes. Is it not Adultery in a Wife to cleave in her Heart unto, to delight in, and converſe with, as with a Husband, not only one that is an abſolute Enemy of her Husband's, but one whom her Husband otherwiſe reſpects and loves? Potiphar loved Joſeph well, for he gave him Charge over all things in his Houſe; yet when as Potiphar's Wife enticed him to Adultery, Joſeph tells her, that though his Maſter had committed all things elſe to him, and kept nothing back but her, whom he reſerved to himſelf: and therefore ſee how incenſed Potiphar was, but upon the opinion that he would have defiled her. Adultery breeds the greateſt Enmity. 'Tis not the having theſe, or the uſing theſe things, that is a ſign of Enmity; it is the very Phraſe by which the Apoſtle expreſſeth himſelf, allowing us the uſe of the World, 1 Cor. 7. 31. And they that uſe this World, as not abuſing it; for the Faſhion of this World paſſeth away. Upon occaſion of this was founded that ancient diſtinction of uti and frui, uſing the Creature, but enjoying God. Not the Lordſhip of the World, but the Friendſhip of the World breeds the Quarrel, and is the Enmity. You may uſe theſe things as Servants, not as Friends, reſerving and keeping your Hearts to God alone, as to your Husband. Ariſtotle ſays, that πολυφιλία cannot ſtand with true Friendſhip, that is, a Man cannot have many Friends in an entire and true Amity; but Friendſhip is always but between two. As you cannot ſerve, ſo nor be Friends unto God and Mammon too. If a Maſter will not bear it, a Friend much leſs. It is a ſad Speech which concerns us all to look to, that in 1 John 2. 15. Love not the World, neither the things that are in the World. If any Man love the World, the Love of the Father is not in him. He profeſſeth to ſpeak not of groſs Sins only, but any Vanity in the World, the things of the World: and he is peremptorily concluſive in it, to pronounce the Love of the Father not to be in that Heart which affects and delights therein more than in God, or in whoſe Heart Love to God prevails not over Love to them. Now if an Husband obſerves his Wife to take all her care for another Man, and that ſhe is always ſpeaking of him, and glad to hear from him, and jolly in this other's company, but in his own little, or coy to himſelf, or glad when ſhe is out of his company; but inordinately delighting in the other's, converſing whoriſhly with him: this breeds Jealouſy and Enmity. Let us look to our Hearts, and judg betwixt God and them.

A third Note whereby they may be diſcovered to be Enemies, is not being ſubject to the Law of God: So Rom. 8. 7. a carnal Mind is therefore there ſaid to be Enmity againſt God, becauſe it is not ſubject to the Law of God. In Luke 19. 27. Chriſt calls thoſe his Enemies, that would not have him reign over them; that is, that would not be ſubject unto his Laws: And the reaſon is, becauſe God's Soveraignty lies at the ſtake, and is deſpiſed, God giving every Command as he is God and ſoveraign Lord. And again, he that lives not by his Laws, lives by the Laws of Sin, as they are call'd, Rom. 7. 21. He is ſubject to the Devil, God's Enemy, lives a Subject to his Kingdom, and this is open and and manifeſt Enmity to God. Now in the firſt Verſe, carnal Men are ſaid to be married to the Law of God, Rom. 7. 1, 2. At the firſt Creation, the Law and Man's Heart were as Wife and Husband, and the Knot ſtill holds; but there is a helliſh Life now between them; for his Heart, as the lawful Wife, ought to be ſubject, but his Heart will not: The Law commands ſomething that is clean contrary to his Heart's Luſts, and it will not ſubmit if it were to die for it. The Law urgeth upon his Heart the Sabbath, ſtrictly to be kept in Thoughts, Words and Actions: It is Death to his Heart to be kept thus in, it will out and find its own Pleaſures that Day. I might inſtance in a great deal more, I refer my ſelf to Mens Conſciences: Doth not the Law by the Light of your Conſciences urge ſome Duty upon you, be it private Prayer? &c. which you will no way be ſubject to, cannot endure to hear of it, wiſhing that Commandment ſcraped out, or that you had never had the knowledg of it, crying as they in Job 21. 14. Depart from us, we will not the knowledg of thy Laws. And though the Heart be convinced, yet it will not yield, but ſecretly ſays, as they in the Prophet, What the Will of the Lord is, we will not do. So as the Law in ſome Particular finds not a tractable, loving, obedient Wife of their Heart, as grieving for offending in the leaſt Particular, (as it doth find a regenerate Man's Heart to be) or as ſtanding out in nothing. And therefore the Law begets not on their Hearts unfeigned and conſtant Deſires to obey in all things, ſtrong Purpoſes, daily Strivings, Mournings, which at laſt ſhould bring forth obedient Performances, as it doth in a regenerate Man's Heart. But it begets Stubbornneſs, Rebellion, hating to be reformed, the more eagerneſs of Luſt to the contrary of what the Law commands. So it is in the 5th Verſe, the Motions of Sin which were by the Law, brought forth Fruit unto Death. It is a Marriage-Phraſe, implying that the Law begat ſtronger Deſires to Sin, and that which the Law forbad; theſe were the Children which were begotten by the Law on his Heart, as a Woman is ſaid to have Children by her Husband.

A fourth Note of a State of Enmity, is daily and willingly harbouring, nouriſhing, foſtering and maintaining of one of God's Enemies in practice or fancy, openly or ſecretly. Not only he that commits High-Treaſon, is a Traitor by our State-Conſtitution; but alſo he that wittingly or willingly (for otherwiſe unwittingly a good Subject may) houſeth or harboureth a Traitor, and continueth to do it, let Proclamation ſay what it will to the contrary, and gives loving Welcome and Entertainment to ſuch an one that is an Enemy, as if he were a Friend. In John 19. 12. the Jews accuſing Chriſt under the notion of a Rebel and an Enemy to Ceſar, when they ſaw Pilate but willing to releaſe him; they terrify Pilate with this State-Axiom, If thou letteſt this Man go, thou art none of Ceſar's Friend. Nay, we know that if one be but a ſuſpected Perſon, if in this caſe a Man harbour him, he ſhews himſelf no good Well-willer to a State. Let us now judg betwixt God and our own Souls. Every Sin is a proclaimed Enemy to God by his Word, yea, and to be our Enemy alſo, as Peter ſays, which fights againſt our Souls, 1 Pet. 2. 11. Dearly beloved, I beſeech you as Strangers and Pilgrims, abſtain from fleſhly Luſts, which war againſt the Soul. Is there now any ſuch Sin which we know to be a Sin, (for that Condition muſt be added, as I ſaid before, a true Subject may harbour a Traitor unwittingly) be it Covetouſneſs, Pride, or any inordinate Pleaſure: And do we houſe it, make it our ſweeteſt Companion in our daily Thoughts, and that which lies next our Hearts, in whoſe Converſe, and enjoying of which we ſpend many an hour with ſweeteſt contentment? He that doth this, is an open and convicted Enemy. Nay I go further, Is he but a ſuſpected Perſon? Are they ſuſpected by thee to be Sins? and yet doſt thou without examining of them, thorowly entertain them friendly, and receive them into thy Heart and Life? It is no good ſign. Nay more, do we ſtand with them all in terms of Enmity, at Daggers drawing, as we uſe to ſay? And if you come within me, I will kill you: And if they do get in, (as Sin dwells in the beſt) yet do we complain of them, bring them forth before God, as we would a Traitor or Enemy, arraign them, accuſe them, and ſay, Lord, here is an Enemy both of mine and thine, a curſed Achan, that troubleth all in me, that would ſhroud it ſelf under my Roof, and thinks there to have Entertainment? But ſtone it, Lord, and let Iſrael ſtone it, let every Sermon fling a Stone at it, let every Prayer knock it down. Do we deal thus with our known Sins daily, or as oft as we are aſſaulted? Or, on the contrary, do we hide them, as the Woman did the Spies in the bottom of the Well, covering them with ſtrawy Pretences? If we let theſe Enemies of God's go thus, we are argued to be none of his Friends. Chap. 9.

The laſt Note of Enmity to God, is Enmity to the Children and Ways of God. And what ſurer Note or Sign can there be of direct Enmity and fighting againſt God, as it is termed, Acts 5. 39. than an Enmity thus born in Heart, or manifeſted in Word or Actions, againſt any thing that ſeems to be of God's ſide, or to take his part, or that ſtand in any Relation of Friendſhip or Likeneſs with God, be they either his Ways, his Children, or his Miniſters? Theſe Men bear the Devil's Colours, ſtand in the Fore-front, and therefore are more eaſily diſcovered; this being one of the fartheſt degrees and moſt apparent ſign of Enmity that can be: For many, though fallen out with another, yet ſtill love well enough his Servants, his Wife, his Children, his Friends. But as Love is argued to be the ſtronger, the more it is diffuſed, (Propter quem alia diligimus, ipſe magis amatur: He for whoſe ſake we love other things beſides him, is more beloved of us:) ſo is it in Hatred. It is argued that he is greatly and deeply hated, againſt whoſe Perſon we do not bear only direct Hatred, but collateral alſo, it falling upon and extending it ſelf to all that are any way near him for his ſake. As they ſay of the Panther, that therefore it is the deadlieſt Enemy to Mankind of any other Creature, becauſe it will prey even upon the very Image and Likeneſs of a Man, which other Beaſts will not do, though there are many will ſeize on Man himſelf.

Men have indeed the Name of Holineſs in their Mouths with a ſeeming Reverence; but yet ſtill the Reality of it, the Power of it, the Thing it ſelf, cannot be endured by them, ſo long as it is wrapp'd up in a bundle, viewed in the general. Men profeſs they love it; but break it up, come to the particular Duties of it, and then they cannot away with it: or, in the Abſtract they love it; but in the Concrete, as it reſides in any particular Subject or Perſon, they hate it. Set the Picture of a Lamb to a company of Wolves, and they will never ſtir at it; but let a living Lamb come, they tear it preſently. So let a living Saint come among theſe Haters of Godlineſs, a holy Man in the Concrete, their Hearts riſe preſently; then they rage, ſtorm, and ſpeak all manner of Evil of him, as it is in Matth. 5. 10, 11. And is it not for the ſame Reaſon they do ſo, which Chriſt gives there, viz. for Righteouſneſs ſake?

I know there are few or none ſo wicked to perſecute any, as knowing them to be Chriſt's, and under that notion, (that is, peculiar to thoſe that ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt) yet it is that which is from Chriſt, which Men do perſecute; for it is he who lives, prays, ſpeaks in holy Men, that appears in all that is good in them: and therefore Chriſt will ſay to them, as to thoſe at the latter Day, that were ignorant of it, Inaſmuch as you did it to one of theſe, you did it to me. Men ſee not Chriſt now; but did they know him, they would not oppoſe ſuch as are any way like him: But when he ſhall appear, and Men ſhall know what ſtrain he was of, Men will confeſs that they hated and perſecuted him, in perſecuting his Saints.

There are yet a third ſort of Men that lie in the Enmity of their Natures, and in an unreconciled Eſtate, living in the viſible Church, who are not only much reſtrained, and bite their Enmity in, but who, by means of an inferiour Work of the Word and Spirit of God upon their Hearts, are brought to ſeek unto God for Friendſhip, yea, and do much for him in outward Actions, ſide and take part with his Friends; and yet their Hearts being unchanged, the curſed Enmity of their Nature remaining unkilled and not taken away, they lie ſtill in the gall of Bitterneſs: For inſtance, look to thoſe in Pſal. 78. 34, 35, 36, 37. When he ſlew them, then they ſought him; and they returned, and enquired early after God. And they remembred that God was their Rock, and the high God their Redeemer. Nevertheleſs, they did flatter him with their Mouth, and they lied unto him with their Tongues. For their Heart was not right with him, neither were they ſtedfaſt in his Covenant. It is ſaid, that they ſought the Lord early as their Redeemer, whilſt he was a ſlaying of them; yet they did but flatter him with their Mouths, &c. A Flatterer, you know, differs from a Friend, in that he pretendeth much Kindneſs, yet wants inward Good-will, doing it for his own Ends. And ſo do many ſeek God, that yet he accounts as Enemies; for they ſeek him whilſt they ſee themſelves in his Lurch.

Now it is harder to diſcover theſe than the former, becauſe they pretend much Friendſhip, and externally (it may be) do as many outward Kindneſſes as the true Friends; as Flatterers will abound in outward Kindneſſes as much as true Friends, nay often exceed them, becauſe they may not be diſcovered. Now if none of the former Signs reach to them, nor touch them, then there is no better way left, than to ſearch into the Grounds of all they do, and to examine whether it proceeds from true, inward, pure and conſtant Good-will, yea or no, or Self-reſpects? As now when we ſee an Ape do many things that a Man doth, how do we therefore diſtinguiſh thoſe Actions in the one and in the other? Why by the inward Principles from whence they ſpring, by ſaying, that they proceed from Reaſon in the one, but not ſo in the other. If therefore it can be evinced, That all that any Man ſeems to do for God, comes not from Good-will to him; it is enough to convince them to be Perſons unreconciled. For when as all outward Kindneſſes and Expreſſions of Friendſhip proceed not from friend-like Diſpoſitions, and pure Good-will, but altogether from Self-Reſpects, it is but feigned Flattery, even among Men; and when diſcovered once, it breeds double Hatred: And there is much more reaſon it ſhould do ſo with God, becauſe he being a God that knows the Heart, to flatter him, it is the greater Mockery: for that is it which chiefly provoketh Men to hate ſuch as diſſemble Friendſhip, becauſe there is Mockery joined with it. Now that God accounteth every one that doth not turn to him out of pure Good-will, a Flatterer, is plain by thoſe words in Pſal. 78. 36, 37. Notwithſtanding, they did but flatter him, and dealt falſly in his Covenant. Yea, and Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 12. 30. That he that is not with him, is againſt him. If Mens Hearts be not inwardly for God, and with him, as a Friend would be to a Friend, in their Actions, he eſteems them againſt him. Thy Heart, ſays Peter to Simon Magus, is not right before the Lord, Acts 8. 22. and therefore he tells him, he was ſtill in the gall of Bitterneſs.

But thinkeſt thou, O Man, that art guilty of theſe things, that thou ſhalt eſcape? to uſe the Apoſtle's own words, Rom. 2. 3. And thinkeſt thou this, O Man, that judgeſt them which do ſuch things, and doeſt the ſame, that thou ſhalt eſcape the Judgment of God? No, God that is a righteous God, and judgeth every Man according to his Deeds, ſhall render to the Contentious, that is, thoſe that have contentiouſly dealt with him, and carried themſelves as Enemies in oppoſing him and his, according to their Deeds, (they ſhall have enough of it) he will render Indignation and Wrath, Tribulation and Anguiſh, to every ſuch Soul. Are Men ſtrange to God, and care not for him? will not be acquainted with him now? The Day will come he will carry himſelf as ſtrange to them: and when a good Look from him would be worth a World, he ſhall angrily ſay, Depart from me, ye Workers of Iniquity, I know you not, Matth. 7. 23. Will Men ſtand out, and will not ſubmit to his moſt holy, juſt and righteous Laws, but will live like Rebels and lawleſs Perſons, and not be ſubject to him? Upon their own Perils be it: Let them hear their Dooms pronounced by Chriſt's own Mouth, Luke 19. 27. Theſe mine Enemies, that would not I ſhould reign over them, bring them hither, and ſlay them before my Face. He will ſee Execution done himſelf.

Τοις ἐξεστηκοσιν.

Are Men Friends of Pleaſures alſo more than of God, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the World, or any thing in the World, as James ſpeaks, Adulterers and Adultereſſes? Then, as it is ſaid, Prov. 6. 34. Jealouſy is the Rage of a Man; and it is the Rage of God more than Anger, it notes out Unpacifiedneſs: Will he ſpare in the Day of his Vengeance? Is it not ſaid, Pſal. 73. 27. Thou haſt deſtroyed, O Lord, all thoſe that go a whoring from thee? He ſpeaks of it as of a thing hing already done, becauſe God would aſſuredly do it, and therefore it was as good as done. Chap. 9.

Are Men Nouriſhers and Maintainers of any Sin, that they know is a proclaimed Enemy of God in his Word; ſparing, cheriſhing that that God hates, and which he hath in his Word appointed to Deſtruction? Let them but hear what the Prophet ſays to Ahab in the like caſe, for the letting go of Benhadad, and apply it to this Purpoſe, 1 Kings 20. 42. And he ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the Lord, Becauſe thou haſt let go out of thy hand, a Man whom I appointed to utter Deſtruction, therefore thy Life ſhall go for his Life, and thy People for his People. Becauſe thou haſt let one go, that the Lord had appointed to Deſtruction, therefore thy Life ſhall go for its Life.

To conclude; Are Men Enemies to the Children of God? You touch the Apple of his Eye. You had better have a Mill-ſtone hang'd about your Necks, and you thrown into the midſt of the Sea, than to have offended one of theſe little Ones. Every Scoff, wry Look, riſing in thy Heart, when God ſhall charge it on thy Conſcience, will ſink thee down, down into the bottom of Hell. In Zech. 12. 2, 7. he compares the Church unto a burdenſom Stone; all that burden themſelves with it, ſhall be cut in pieces, though all the Earth ſhould be gathered together againſt it; and unto an Hearth of Fire; and wicked Men that oppoſe them, unto Wood, and a Sheaf, thinking to quench that Fire; but that Fire ſhall devour all the People round about.

Or, do Men oppoſe the Word of God? Let them know that it is an Armoury and Store-houſe of Weapons, that God hath in readineſs to revenge all Diſobedience; 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5, 6. For the VVeapons of our VVarfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of Strong-holds, caſting down Imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the Knowledg of God, and bringing into Captivity every Thought to the Obedience of Chriſt: And having in a readineſs to revenge all Diſobedience, when your Obedience is fulfilled. It hath enough of its own to revenge its own Quarrel.

AN Unregenerate Man's Guiltineſs BEFORE GOD In Reſpect of SIN and PUNISHMENT.

BOOK III.

The Corruption of Man's Whole Nature, and of all the Faculties of his Soul, by Sin; and firſt of the Depravation of the Underſtanding, which is full of Darkneſs, and blinded, ſo that it cannot apprehend Spiritual Things in a due Spiritual Manner.

1 THESS. 5. 23.

And the very God of Peace ſanctify you wholly: and I pray God your whole Spirit and Soul and Body be preſerved blameleſs unto the Coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

CHAP. I.

The Words of the Text explained. That all the Faculties of the Soul, even the Mind, are wholly corrupted; proved from the Expreſſions concerning it in Scripture, and from the equal extent both of Sin and Grace.

THESE Words have no Coherence or Dependance with the foregoing, for the Concluſion of the Epiſtle doth begin with them. They are a Prayer for the working and perfecting that Sanctification in them, unto which he had exhorted, and which God had begun to work. Concerning which you have theſe things.

1. The Author of this Sanctification, God, to whom Paul prays to work and perfect it. And in Prayer, Believers uſe to ſuit their Invocation to God, according to the nature of the Bleſſing they ſeek for. James 1. 5. If any of you lack lack Wiſdom, let him ask of God, Ver. 17. the Father of Lights. So if we pray for Mercy and Comfort, then we are to call upon God, as the Father of Mercies, and God of all Conſolation, as Paul doth, 2 Cor. 1. 3. Bleſſed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Father of Mercies, and the God of all Comfort. Yet ſtill we are to uſe ſuch Expreſſions, both as Motives to move God, out of his Fulneſs, to beſtow what we ask, and as a ſtrengthening to our own Faith. And accordingly here in the Text, when Paul asks Sanctification at God's Hands, he looks up to him as the God of Peace. Sin is nothing elſe but a diſorder and confuſion of all the Powers of our Souls, whereby they are turned Rebels, and will not be ſubject to God: Rom. 8. 7. Becauſe the carnal Mind is Enmity againſt God; for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. And theſe Powers of our Souls are alſo turned Enemies one to another. Hence there is in our Souls a Confuſion, an ἀκαταστασία, James 3. 16. ſo that Luſts war in our Members. James 4. 1. From whence come Wars and Fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your Luſts, that war in your Members? Whereas now Sanctification puts all into their right Order again, and ſo cauſeth Peace; and that Kingdom where it comes, and is ſet up, is Peace and Righteouſneſs; Rom. 14. 17. For the Kingdom of God is not Meat and Drink, but Righteouſneſs and Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt. As the end of other Kingdoms, is by Laws to put Subjects in Order, and to bring them to, and to keep them in Peace; ſo it is the end of Grace, and Righteouſneſs alſo: Therefore he deſires God to ſhew himſelf ſuch a God, a God of Peace, in ſanctifying them throughout more and more, by putting all the Powers of the Soul into their right Frame and Order. For ſo,

2. You have expreſs'd the Subject of this Sanctification in its full extent, not themſelves only, but every thing in them; expreſs'd firſt in general, not ſimply to ſanctify you, but throughout, ὁλοτελεῖς, which is more than ὁλος; for it ſeems to ſignify not only totus homo, the whole Man, but totum hominis, the whole of Man, all in Man; alſo it ſignifies ſanctifying them to the end, ὅλος τέλος. Then, ſecondly, he expreſſeth the Subject of this Sanctification particularly by an enumeration of the particular and chief Parts of which Man's Nature conſiſts, Spirit, Soul and Body: For as the whole Man is uſually divided into Soul and Body, which Diviſion to be true, Death proves; ſo he divides that which we call the Soul, into Soul and Spirit; which Diviſion to be right, the Word of God makes good; Heb. 4. 12. For the Word of God is quick, and powerful, and ſharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joints and Marrow, and is a diſcerner of the Thoughts and Intents of the Heart. Piercing to the dividing of Soul and Spirit: By Soul he means thoſe inferiour Faculties and Powers of the Mind, the internal Senſes and Affections, Fancy, Anger, Deſire, &c. which being the more groſs Part, common to Beaſts; and the other being more ſublime, viz. the Judgment, Conſcience, &c. theſe he terms Spirit: Even as thoſe more ſublime, active, nimble Parts of the Body, which run in our Bloods, and cauſe all the Motion in us, we call Spirits, in compariſon of the reſt of the Body, though they are Parts of it; ſo this more ſublime Part of the Soul, wherein we partake with Angels, is called, in compariſon of the other, the Spirit of the Mind, Epheſ. 4. 23. And be renewed in the Spirit of your Mind. Where it is put for a part of the Mind, and not for any thing ſuperadded; as, I confeſs, ſometimes Spirit is taken for thoſe Sparks of moral Light and Vertues in the Conſcience and Will. But here Spirit ſignifies that natural Power of the Mind, which is the Strength and Quinteſſence of it. Neither, thirdly, doth he content himſelf with reckoning thus up all the Parts in a threefold Diviſion, but becauſe every one of theſe contain many Particulars in them, as the Spirit hath in it the Underſtanding, Memory, Judgment, Conſcience, &c. the Body many Members; therefore to ſhew that all in every one of theſe are to be ſanctified, he adds another Word, that your whole Spirit, ὁλόκληρον, tota Sors, every Portion of it, as it ſignifies; which Words are as full as can be imagined to expreſs that the whole Man, Body, Soul and all, and every thing in Man, is to be ſanctified and reſtored; the want of which Integrity, that ought to be in them all, he ſays, is a Sin, and blame-worthy; therefore he adds, that they may be kept blameleſs. So that there are two Doctrines, which naturally and principally ariſe out of theſe Words. Chap. 1.

Obſerv. 1. That every Part and Faculty of Soul and Body in a Man unſanctified, are wholly and throughout corrupted and defiled, for elſe they needed not Sanctification.

Obſerv. 2. That true Sanctification is alſo univerſal.

And theſe two Doctrines may be proved by the ſame Reaſons. But I ſhall (as my Method leads me) ſpeak only to the firſt.

Now, as I have ſhewed before, that this Corruption is univerſal in regard of all Sin, or that all Sin is in every Man's Nature, ſo now I am to prove that this Corruption is in all parts of our Nature: For this is a differing Conſideration from the other; as it is one thing to have all Diſeaſes, and another thing to have all Parts diſeaſed, which may be ſo by but one Diſeaſe.

1. We have a clear proof for this from the Teſtimony even of the Phariſees themſelves, who though they were much corrupted in Judgment, in regard of diſcerning into Man's Corruption, thinking and teaching Luſt to be no Sin; yet it may ſeem there was in them a Relick and Glimpſe of the total Corruption of every Man's Nature, by a Speech which they caſt out concerning the Man born blind; John 9. 34. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, Thou waſt altogether born in Sins, and doſt thou teach us? Thou wert altogether ὅλῳ, born in Sin: This indeed they ſeem only to apply unto ſuch, whom in their Births God had branded with ſome Defect, as he had this Man with Blindneſs; yet we may juſtly take it from thoſe Extenuators of Corruption, as a remainder of that Truth, which from their Forefathers had been derived to them, but which they had corrupted, and limited only to ſuch, as unto whom ſome Miſhap had befallen in their Birth. Now I cite this to prove, not that Men are born in Sin, but that the whole Man, ὅλῳ, is ſo.

2. We have plain Scriptures which evidence it.

1*ſt*. It is called the old Man; Why? becauſe it overſpreads every Part in Man: it is not called the old Underſtanding only, or old Will, but the old Man, becauſe all the Powers and Parts that go to make a Man, are tainted with it, and therefore all things do become new, when a Man is regenerated; 2 Cor. 5. 17. Therefore if any Man be in Chriſt, he is a new Creature: old things are paſt away, behold, all things are become new; that is, all things in a Man's Nature. All things were old, corrupted, and naught, and therefore all becomes new. And to this purpoſe it is obſervable (which is obſerv'd by ſome) that the Scripture ſpeaking of the Subject of this Corruption, ſpeaks not as of the Perſon of Men only, but of the Faculties in Man, as implying not totus homo, the whole Man only, but totum hominis, all that is in Man: Gal. 3. 22. But the Scripture hath concluded all under Sin, that the Promiſe by Faith of Jeſus Chriſt might be given to them that believe. The Scripture (ſays he) hath ſhut up all, τὰ πάντα, all things under Sin: ſo that the Word implies not only all Men, πάντες, but all things in Man. So likewiſe Chriſt expreſſes it, Joh. 3. 6. That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh; and that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit. He doth not only ſay, that he that is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh, but that which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh, τὸ γεγεννήμενον, there being not that thing in Man, who is born of Fleſh by fleſhly Generation, but is corrupted. And therefore,

2*dly*. We find all Parts in Man termed Fleſh; ſo the Mind of the moſt acute Knowers (for of ſuch he there ſpeaks) is termed, Col. 2. 18. —Intruding into thoſe things which he hath not ſeen, vainly puft up by his fleſhly Mind. It is a Mind of Fleſh. And anſwerably that Wiſdom, whereby in our walking we are guided, is termed Wiſdom of the Fleſh, 2 Cor. 1. 12. For our rejoicing is this, the Teſtimony of our Conſcience, that in Simplicity and godly Sincerity, not with fleſhly Wiſdom, but by the Grace of God, we have had our Converſation in the World. Nay, the Conſcience which ſeems leaſt to be corrupted, is yet laid to be defiled, Titus 1. 15. —But unto them that are defiled and unbelieving, is nothing pure; but even their Mind and Conſcience is defiled. And now theſe are the noble Parts of the Spirit: and as theſe, ſo the Will is of the Fleſh alſo; Epheſ. 2. 3.

Among

Book III.

Among whom alſo we all had our Converſation in times paſt, in the Luſts of our Fleſh, fulfilling the Deſires of the Fleſh, and of the Mind. It is τὰ θελήματα τῆς σαρκὸς, καὶ τῶν διανοιῶν, the Wills of the Fleſh and of the Mind. And in another Scripture the Will of the Gentiles is flatly oppoſed to the Will of God; 1 Pet. 4. 2, 3. That he no longer ſhould live the reſt of his time in the Fleſh, to the Luſts of Men, but to the Will of God. For the time paſt of our Life may ſuffice us to have wrought the Will of the Gentiles, when we walked in Laſciviouſneſs, Luſts, Exceſs of Wine, Revellings, Banquetings, and abominable Idolatries. Where the Apoſtle perſwades them to live no longer to the Luſts of Men; which, ver. 3. is interpreted working the Will of the Gentiles, but to the Will of God. And our Affections alſo are called the Luſts and Paſſions of the Fleſh; Gal. 5. 24. And they that are Chriſt's, have crucified the Fleſh, with the Affections and Luſts. And 1 Pet. 2. 11. Dearly beloved, I beſeech you as Strangers and Pilgrims, abſtain from fleſhly Luſts, which war againſt the Soul. And theſe make up that which in my Text is called Soul. And laſt of all, the Fleſh or Body is ſaid to be corrupt and filthy, as well as the Spirit or Soul: So 2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore theſe Promiſes, dearly Beloved, let us cleanſe our ſelves from all Filthineſs of the Fleſh and Spirit, perfecting Holineſs in the Fear of God. And Sin is ſaid to reign in the Body; Rom. 6. 12. Let not Sin therefore reign in your mortal Body, that ye ſhould obey it in the Luſts thereof: which is taken as diſtinct from the Soul, for it is added mortal, which the Soul is not. And if we look on all the Members of the Body, they ſhew their Corruption, they being fit Weapons for Unrighteouſneſs, even all the Members of the Body: The Eyes are full of Adultery: 2 Pet. 2. 14. Having Eyes full of Adultery, and that cannot ceaſe from Sin, beguiling unſtable Souls: an Heart they have exerciſed with covetous Practices: curſed Children. The Tongue is a World of Evil; James 3. 6. And the Tongue is a Fire, a World of Iniquity: ſo is the Tongue amongſt our Members, that it defileth the whole Body, and ſetteth on Fire the Courſe of Nature; and it is ſet on fire of Hell. The Feet are ſwift to ſhed Blood, and the Throat an open Sepulchre; Rom. 3. 13, 14, 15. Their Throat is an open Sepulchre; with their Tongues they have uſed Deceit; the Poiſon of Aſps is under their Lips: whoſe Mouth is full of Curſing and Bitterneſs: their Feet are ſwift to ſhed Blood. To conclude, they are ſaid to be full of all Unrighteouſneſs, full of all Readineſs to Evil; Acts 13. 10. —O full of all Subtilty and all Miſchief, thou Child of the Devil, thou Enemy of all Righteouſneſs, wilt thou not ceaſe to pervert the right Ways of the Lord? He doth not ſpeak of the Fulneſs of actual Sin, as a Tree is ſaid to be full of Fruit, as the Phraſe is uſed, Rom. 1. 29. Being filled with all Unrighteouſneſs, Fornication, Wickedneſs, Covetouſneſs, Maliciouſneſs; full of Envy, Murder, Debate, Deceit, Malignity, Whiſperers. But here in Acts 13. 10. the Fullneſs is underſtood, tanquam plenitudo vaſis, as a Veſſel is full of Liquor: Elimas his Soul and Body was full of Readineſs to Evil, which denotes inward Diſpoſitions thereunto. Neither doth he (as there he ſpeaks of it) call it a Fullneſs in regard of all the Parts of Unrighteouſneſs only, for that is after added beſides, full of all Unrighteouſneſs, not only all Readineſs to Evil, but full of all. And therefore in this regard our depraved Nature is compared to a corrupt Tree, whereof we know both Root, and Branch, and Bark, and all to be poiſoned, if the Tree is ſo; Matth. 7. 17, 18. Even ſo every good Tree bringeth forth good Fruit, but a corrupt Tree bringeth forth evil Fruit. A good Tree cannot bring forth evil Fruit: neither can a corrupt Tree bring forth good Fruit. And ſo is every Sprig and Faculty in Man, that brings forth any Act or Motion, as Fruit, be it the Underſtanding, Will, &c. all is corrupt, Bark and Body, and all. And this Sin of our Nature is called ἁμαρτία εὐπερίστατος, that which begirts all our Faculties; Heb. 12. 1. Wherefore ſeeing we alſo are compaſſed about with ſo great a Cloud of Witneſſes, let us lay aſide every Weight, and the Sin which doth ſo eaſily beſet us, and let us run with Patience the Race that is ſet before us. Now for the Reaſons and Demonſtrations of this Truth, that every Part in Man is corrupted and infected by Sin, and ſo ought to be ſanctified.

Firſt, In General. The Dominion and Extent of Power, both of Grace and and Sin, are commenſurate, and their Dominions are of equal Compaſs; and where they come, they give Laws to every Member, and ſubject that which is within their Dominions, for both are ſaid to reign, and both are of a ſpreading Nature over all. Grace is compared to Leaven, becauſe it leavens the whole Lump, Matth. 13. 33. —The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto Leaven, which a Woman took and hid in three Meaſures of Meal, till the whole was leavened. And Sin and Corruption of Nature is compared to Leaven alſo; Gal. 5. 7, 8, 9. Ye did run well, who did hinder you, that ye ſhould not obey the Truth? This Perſwaſion cometh not of him that called you. A little Leaven leaveneth the whole Lump. 1 Cor. 5. 6, 8. Your glorying is not good: Know ye not that a little Leaven leaveneth the whole Lump? Therefore let us keep the Feaſt, not with old Leaven, neither with the Leaven of Malice and Wickedneſs; but with the unleavened Bread of Sincerity and Truth. Grace where it comes, comes in as Life, and as the Soul doth into the Body, and informs all in that Body it comes into; and accordingly we ſee all Parts to live in a living Man: And on the contrary, this Corruption of our Nature is as Death, which is as general alſo as Life, for it is the Privation of it. And habitus & privatio verſantur circa idem: The Habit and Privation belong to the ſame Subject. But,

Secondly, More particularly to demonſtrate this. If habitual Grace and Sanctification was ſeated in every Part of the firſt Adam, and of the humane Nature of Chriſt, and begins to be in every Faculty of a regenerate Man, then is every Faculty by Nature corrupted. The Conſequence is ſtrong, not only for the Reaſon before given in general, that Grace and Sin are of a like Extent, but more particularly it may be demonſtrated from them ſeverally.

1. If Grace begun, reacheth to every part of a regenerate Man, then did Sin before corrupt all, for that Sanctification is but the reſtoring of every Part to its Health and Integrity again. Now if any Part were whole, it would not need the Phyſician nor Cure.

2. That Sin is thus ſeated in every Part, may be proved by Experiment, drawn from the State of a regenerate Man. We feel that there is a Combat againſt the Work of Grace in every Part; Darkneſs and Unbelief in the Underſtanding fights againſt Light and Faith: Lord, I believe, help my Unbelief, ſays that poor Man in the Goſpel, Mark 9. 24. Grace in the Will, fights againſt Sin in the Will: The Fleſh in the Will, luſteth againſt the Spirit in the Will; Gal. 5. 17. For the Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the Fleſh; and theſe are contrary the one to the other; ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would. I ſay, in the Will; for the Apoſtle infers from what he had ſaid, that thence it was that they could not do the things which they would. It is not a Fight of one Faculty againſt another, but of the ſame Faculties againſt themſelves, and this through the whole Man.

3. The Conſequence is alſo ſtrong, that if the Grace which was in Adam, when innocent, did reach to every Part of his Nature; then that Sin, after he had fallen, hath the ſame Extent: for the Corruption of our Natures is but the Privation of that Grace which was in him, and therefore is in every Part wherein that Grace was. Privatio eſt in eodem ſubjecto in quo habitus: Privation is in the ſame Subject wherein the Habit was before.

4. The Conſequence is ſtrong too, that if in the Nature of Chriſt, Grace was in every Part of it, then Sin is ſo in our Natures: for the End of Chriſt's aſſuming and ſanctifying our Natures, was to condemn Sin in the Fleſh; Rom. 8. 3. For what the Law could not do, in that it was weak through the Fleſh, God ſending his own Son, in the Likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh, and for Sin condemned Sin in the Fleſh; that is, by ſanctifying our Nature in his Perſon, and by the Righteouſneſs of that his Nature, he takes away the Sin of ours, and there was no Part of that his Nature which he ſanctified to any other End. John 17. 19. And for their ſakes I ſanctify my ſelf, that they alſo might be ſanctified through the Truth. And in this Rom. 8. ſays the Apoſtle at ver. 2. The Law of the Spirit of Life in Chriſt Jeſus, hath made me free from the Law of Sin and Death. He had complained in chap. 7. of a Law of Sin in his Members, which would be there to his dying Day; now, ſays he, my Comfort is, that a contrary Law of Grace

Book III. and Life was in Chriſt to take away the Guilt of it. So that every Part in Chriſt being ſanctified with a Law of Life, was to take away the Law of Sin in every Part of us. Now it remains to be proved, that every Part of humane Nature in Adam and in Chriſt, was ſanctified, and alſo that every Part of it in a regenerate Man begins to be made Holy. This I demonſtrate two ways.

Firſt; You ſhall ſee how the one follows from the other, ſo as if it be true of any, it is true of all.

Secondly; I will give the general Reaſons for it.

1. I ſay the one follows neceſſarily upon the other. For,

1*ſt*. If every Part in a regenerate Man be ſanctified, then every Part of humane Nature was ſanctified in Adam, and è contra; for it is the ſame Image that is reſtored and created new, which was created at firſt, only with this Difference, (as one obſerves) Adam was ὁλῶς, ſanctified, but not ὁλοτελῶς; but we, tho not ὁλῶς, that is wholly and perfectly, yet ὁλοτελῶς, that is, to the End. Now that every Part in a regenerate Man is ſanctified, appears by that common Experiment, which yet is peculiar to regenerate Men, that there is a Combat in every Part between Fleſh and Spirit ſeated in all the Faculties, as I proved before.

2*dly*. If every Part of humane Nature was ſanctified in Chriſt, then it is ſo in us, and è contra; for he took Fleſh to ſanctify us; John 17. 19. For their ſakes I ſanctify my ſelf. And Heb. 2. 11, 14, 17. For both he that ſanctifieth, and they who are ſanctified, are all of one: for which Cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them Brethren. Foraſmuch then as the Children are Partakers of Fleſh and Blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part of the ſame: that through Death he might deſtroy him that had the Power of Death, that is, the Devil. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his Brethren; that he might be a merciful and faithful high Prieſt, in things pertaining to God, to make Reconciliation for the Sins of the People. It is ſaid of Chriſt and us there, that he who ſanctifieth, and we that are ſanctified, are of one, that is, of one Nature, in every Part; for ver. 17. we are ſaid to be like in all things. He took our Nature, and every part of it to ſanctify it, that we might be made Partakers of his Sanctification, and ſo might be of one, agree and be alike to him: and that there might want no part in his Sanctification, he wanted no part of our Nature. And even in this Senſe we may underſtand that Scripture in Epheſ. 1. 23. of Chriſt's filling all in all: He fills all in all his Children, from his own Fulneſs. Now he is full of Grace and Truth. John 1. 10. He was in the World, and the World was made by him, and the World knew him not: And he took our Natures to ſanctify them, and therefore all he took was ſanctified; therefore he is called that holy thing, Luke 1. 35. —The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the Power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee: therefore alſo that holy thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God.

2. Now I ſhall aſſign the Reaſons which may evince that Grace was and is ſeated in Chriſt and Adam, in and through every Part of them, and ſo ought to be in us.

1*ſt*. Becauſe God hath made all in Man to glorify himſelf, not as other Creatures only, but by ſhewing forth thoſe Vertues and Graces, which he ſtamped on Man above all other Works of his Hands; 1 Cor. 6. 20. Glorify God in your Body and Spirit too. Pſal. 103. 1. Bleſs the Lord, O my Soul; and all that is within me, bleſs his holy Name. God therefore gave Abilities at firſt to Man thus to glorify God in his whole Soul. For as we cannot love him till he love us, ſo neither can we glorify him, unleſs he implant in every Faculty Holineſs and Grace firſt, whereby we have Abilities to do ſo.

2*dly*. The whole Nature of Man, and every Part of it in its pure and right Conſtitution, was made ſubject to the Law of God, and therefore was entirely holy: And therefore thus was the entire Nature of Adam and of Chriſt conſtituted; for indeed if any thing had been in Adam and Chriſt not ſubjected to the Law, it had been Enmity to God: for that is the Reaſon which the Apoſtle ſtle gives of the carnal Mind's being Enmity againſt God; Rom. 8. 7. Becauſe the carnal Mind is Enmity againſt God; for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. But now there being nothing of this Enmity neither in Adam, while innocent, nor in Chriſt, no Part in them was lawleſs. And this is evident too from the Word of God's judging every Creature in Man; Heb. 4. 12, 13. For the VVord of God is quick and powerful, and ſharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joints and Marrow, and is a Diſcerner of the Thoughts and Intents of the Heart. Neither is there any Creature that is not manifeſt in his Sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the Eyes of him with whom we have to do. And every thing in Man which is thus tried and judged by the Word, ought to be agreeable and ſubject to it in its firſt original Frame. And it is yet more clearly proved, if we conſider, that when Chriſt declares the Sum of the Law, he reckons up all in Man; Mark 12. 29, 30. And Jeſus anſwered him, The firſt of all the Commandments is, Hear, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one Lord; and thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, and with all thy Soul, and with all thy Mind, and with all thy Strength: this is the firſt Commandment. Leſt any thing ſhould be left out, Chriſt adds, with all thy Strength. If this then be the Law, as Chriſt ſays it is, then this Law was originally written in the whole Soul, and every Part of it in Adam, and ſo in Chriſt too, of whom it is ſaid, that the Law was in his Heart, Pſal. 40. 8. And what is indeed the Sanctification of the Underſtanding and Will, but the writing of the Law there? which God promiſes to do under the new Covenant; Jer. 31. 33. But this ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael; After thoſe Days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my Law in their inward Parts, and write it in their Hearts, and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. Now to write the Law in the Heart, is to put ſuch Diſpoſitions in, whereby a Man may live according to it. And thus the Law was written on all in Man, in his primitive Condition. And now alas, ſince his Fall, the contrary Law of Sin is written upon all in his Heart.

3*dly.* God hath made and ordained ſpiritual Objects and Acts for every Faculty of Soul and Body, and therefore he gave to Adam at firſt anſwerable ſpiritual Diſpoſitions in all his Faculties: For between every Faculty and its Object there muſt be a Suitableneſs: and as the natural Man receives not the things of the Spirit, for, ſays the Apoſtle, they are ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 Cor. 2. 14. ſo neither can any Faculty, if not ſanctified, be in a ſpiritual manner carried to, or be converſant about ſpiritual things. Therefore if God did provide ſpiritual Objects for all in Man, then ſurely he put ſpiritual Diſpoſitions into all thoſe Powers of his Soul. Now that God did provide ſpiritual Objects for every Faculty, is eaſy to be demonſtrated by all the Particulars. For the Underſtanding, there are things of the Spirit; for the Will, ſpiritual good things; for Conſcience, ſpiritual Motives, &c.

4*thly.* God made all in Man capable of Glory, therefore he made every thing in Man holy: for ſince God would glorify all that is in Man, ſo that even ſo much as our Bodies ſhall be made like his glorious Body, Phil. 3. 21. all in Man muſt therefore be ſanctified; for indeed no Veſſel is capable of Glory, till it be prepared, Rom. 9. 23. and made meet, Col. 1. 13. And therefore ſince the Underſtanding, Will, Memory, and all, ſhall be glorified, all theſe Powers of the Soul muſt be firſt ſanctified. And therefore now Grace and Holineſs being introduced into every Faculty of the Soul, ſhews that all in Man is infected with Sin, ſince the Diſeaſe and the Remedy are of equal Extent.

Book III.

CHAP. II.

Arguments to prove that not only the inferiour Powers of the Soul, but the ſupream, the Underſtanding and Mind, are corrupted. That the Mind it ſelf is called Fleſh as well as the other. Arguments from Reaſon further to evince it.

IT is not only the inferiour Powers of the Soul which this Plague of Sin hath ſeized, but the Contagion hath aſcended into the higher Region of the Soul, the Mind. It is this ſupream, ſublime and noble Part, (which is not to be found in Beaſts) the Underſtanding, Judgment and Conſcience, which the Apoſtle in this 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. means by Spirit, as needing Renovation and Sanctification, as much as the lower Faculties in Man. And in this ſenſe Spirit is alſo taken, 1 Cor. 2. 11. For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, ſave the Spirit of Man which is in him? Where Spirit of Man ſignifies the knowing and diſcerning Part in Man: and in the ſame meaning it is to be underſtood, when it is diſtinguiſh'd from Soul, as here in this 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. and in other Places.

Since I deſign to ſhew how all the ſeveral Faculties of our Souls are by Sin depraved, that which I am to begin with, is the higheſt and nobleſt of them all, the Spirit of Man. And this then is the firſt Propoſition I will prove.

Propoſ. That the moſt ſupream, moſt ſpiritual Faculty in Man's Mind, the underſtanding Power of Man, is corrupted, and needs renewing.

This is a Doctrine had need be proved, becauſe to a carnal Underſtanding not enlightned by the Word, this hath always been, and is the greateſt Paradox. So it was to the Heathen Philoſophers, and to many of the Schoolmen alſo, though called Chriſtians; who though indeed they did acknowledg Dregs to lie at the bottom of the Affections in the lower part of the Soul, which ſometimes, when ſtirr'd and joggled by outward Temptations, do mud, and corrupt the Mind; yet that ſublime and noble Faculty, according to their Opinion of it, was in it ſelf moſt pure, and the cleareſt of all the reſt. And therefore they ſay, Reaſon did ſtill direct, adviſe and perſwade us to the beſt things, and was in it ſelf a pure Virgin. And thus the Phariſees alſo judged, Rom. 2. 17, 18, 19. Behold, thou art called a Jew, and reſteſt in the Law, and makeſt thy boaſt of God; and knoweſt his Will, and approveſt the things that are more excellent, being inſtructed out of the Law; and art confident that thou thy ſelf art a Guide of the Blind, a Light of them which are in Darkneſs. They boaſted they knew God's Will, and were confident, becauſe they were Guides to the Blind, a Light of them in Darkneſs; therefore of all things elſe, they thought leaſt that their Underſtandings were corrupt and blinded: John 9. 40. And ſome of the Phariſees which were with him, heard theſe Words, and ſaid unto him, Are we blind alſo? When they heard Chriſt ſpeaking of Blindneſs even in them that ſee, ſaid theſe Men, Are we blind alſo? Of all the Imputations elſe, they wondred at this the moſt: And indeed when blind Reaſon, which thinks it ſees, is Judg, it is not ſtrange, that this Corruption of the Underſtanding ſhould be a Wonder to it. For Reaſon being the ſupream Faculty of all the reſt, which judgeth all elſe, and is judged of none but it ſelf, by reaſon of its nearneſs to it ſelf, it leaſt diſcerns it ſelf. As a Man's Eye, which tho it may ſee the Deformity of another Member, yet not the Bloodſhot that is in it ſelf, but it muſt have a Glaſs by which to diſcern it. And ſo though even corrupt Nature diſcerns the Rebellions of the Affections and ſenſual Part of Man by its own Light, as the Heathens did, and complain'd thereof; yet it cannot diſcern the Infection and Defile-

Chap. 2.

Defilement that is in the Spirit it ſelf, but the Glaſs of the Word is the firſt that diſcovereth it; and when that Glaſs is alſo brought, there had need be an inward Light of Grace, which is oppoſite to this Corruption, to diſcover it. And therefore the Holy Ghoſt doth moſt of all inculcate this Depravation of the Mind, and expreſs it with the greateſt Emphaſis: When he would ſhew how impure Unbelievers are, who yet profeſs that they know God, ſays he, Even their Mind and Conſcience is defiled, Titus 1. 16. They leaſt of all ſuſpected theſe Parts (which are not Fleſh) to be tainted, becauſe they know God, and have ſome Light in them. Therefore now, in oppoſition to this their Conceit, he mentions only the Mind and Conſcience, as being impure, and that with an Emphaſis, καὶ νοῦς, καὶ συνείδησις, even their Mind and Conſcience is defiled. And there is almoſt no Place where he ſpeaks ſetly of the Corruption of Nature, but νοῦς or διάνοια comes in, and is ſometimes alone mentioned, and put for all the reſt: ſo Epheſ. 2. 3. Fulfilling the Deſires of the Fleſh, and of the Mind. Epheſ. 4. 17, 18. —That ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the Vanity of their Mind, having the Underſtanding darkned, being alienated from the Life of God, through the Ignorance that is in them, becauſe of the Blindneſs of their Heart. Col. 1. 21. And you that were ſometime alienated, and Enemies in your Mind by wicked Works, yet now he hath reconciled. Enemies, ἐν τῇ διάνοιᾳ, in the Mind. And ſo when he ſpeaks of renewing, he exhorts them to be renewed in the Spirit of the Mind, Epheſ. 4. 23. He inſtances in that for all the reſt.

Now for the proof of the Spirit of the Mind being deprav'd in Man, beſides thoſe Places that ſpeak of the particular Corruptions of it, which I reſerve till I come to treat of them, I will name but one or two Places more, which ſpeak of the Corruption of the Mind in general.

1. We find that Fleſh is attributed to this as well as to any other Faculty. The Underſtanding, the natural Underſtanding of Man is called Fleſh and Blood, Mat. 16. 17. Fleſh and Blood hath not revealed this, ſays Chriſt. You may know what Faculty he ſpeaks of, by the Act which he aſcribes, or rather denies to it, [Revealing] which is proper unto the Light of the Mind: And now this Light and Acumen he calls Fleſh, that is, Corruption, as well as any other. And Hereſy alſo, which is ſeated in the Underſtanding, is yet ſaid to be a Fruit of the Fleſh, Gal. 5. 20. This evil Fruit grows upon that Branch or Faculty, which is indeed the Top-Branch of all the reſt, and yet it is not ſo high, but Fleſh or Corruption, as ill Sap, aſcends and comes to it; and therefore all the Wiſdom of it is called fleſhly, 2 Cor. 1. 12. and it ſelf is termed Mind of the Fleſh, Coloſſ. 2. 18. —Vainly puft up by his fleſhly Mind.

Nor is it privatively corrupted only with Ignorance, but poſitively alſo with corrupt Diſeaſes, habitual evil Diſpoſitions: 1 Tim. 6. 4, 5. He is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about Queſtions and ſtrifes of Words, whereof cometh Envy, Strife, Railings, evil Surmiſings, perverſe Diſputings of Men of corrupt Minds, and deſtitute of the Truth, &c. He doth not only ſay, Their Minds are deſtitute of the Truth, ſo as they aſſent not to wholeſome Doctrine, but he ſays their Minds are corrupt, ſick and diſeas'd, νόσων, ſick about vain Queſtions, longing for them, as a diſeaſed Stomach doth for any Traſh. And this Diſtemper of the Mind the Apoſtle in another place calls an Itch after Fables, 2 Tim. 4. 3, 4. —But after their own Luſts ſhall they heap to themſelves Teachers, having itching Ears: And they ſhall turn away their Ears from the Truth, and ſhall be turned into Fables. And 2 Tim. 2. 25, 26. In Meekneſs inſtructing thoſe that oppoſe themſelves, if God peradventure will give them Repentance to the acknowledging of the Truth; and that they may recover themſelves out of the Snare of the Devil, who are taken captive by him at his Will. The Apoſtle there ſpeaking of the Repentance of thoſe who oppoſed the Goſpel, he calls that their Repentance, ἀνανήψεως, a Recovery out of not an ordinary Sickneſs, but perfect Frenzy, unto Health and Sobriety; which ſhews, that the Mind was diſeaſed and frantick before, and that this was the cauſe of its oppoſing the Truth.

2. As I have proved this Infection of the Mind by Sin from Scripture, ſo now I will demonſtrate it by Reaſons.

1*ſt.* If the Spirit and Judgment, and higher Faculties of the Soul, were not corrupted, but only the inferiour; if not the Spirit, as well as the Soul of Man, was depraved; then the Image of the Devil in the proper Lineaments of it, would not appear in wicked Men; then his chief and main Sins would not be found in them, which yet they are. If we conſider this great evil One, Satan, he is a Spirit, and hath no ſenſual or bodily Luſts, either of Uncleanneſs, Drunkenneſs or Gluttony in him, but his Wickedneſs is ſpiritual Wickedneſs; for which reaſon the Helliſh Powers of Darkneſs have that peculiar Name given them, Epheſ. 6. 12. For we wreſtle not againſt Fleſh and Blood, but againſt Principalities, againſt Powers, againſt the Rulers of the Darkneſs of this World, againſt ſpiritual Wickedneſs in high Places. And why is the Wickedneſs of the Devil called ſpiritual, but becauſe it is rooted in a Spirit, and all his Sins are ſeated in his Underſtanding and Will? What is the Devil's great Sin but Pride, the Womb whereof is chiefly the Underſtanding? And this Sin of Pride was the Devil's Condemnation and Ruine; 1 Tim. 3. 6. —Leſt being lifted up with Pride, he fall into the Condemnation of the Devil. It was this Pride which fum'd up into the Devil's Head, and made him reel out of Heaven. Of ſuch Sins as theſe Men are alſo guilty, and prone to them as well as the Devils. Our proud contentious Wiſdom is called devilliſh, James 3. 15. This Wiſdom deſcendeth not from above, but is earthly, ſenſual, devilliſh. And all that Envy, Malice, Lying and Diſſembling, which though in the Will, yet are rooted in the Underſtanding, are in this Scripture mentioned by the Apoſtle, as bearing the ſame devilliſh Reſemblance. And theſe and ſuch like Luſts which are in wicked Men, Chriſt calls the Luſts of their Father the Devil, John 8. 44. Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the Luſts of your Father ye will do:——When he ſpeaketh a Lie, he ſpeaketh of his own; for he is a Liar, and the Father of it. When the Devil tells a Lie, he ſpeaks it of his own, as being an Act of the Mind againſt it ſelf. And ſo Blaſphemy, and all blaſphemous Thoughts and Expreſſions concerning God, are ſaid, as well as all other vain Thoughts, to proceed out of our Hearts; Matth. 15. 19. For out of the Heart proceed evil Thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, Fornications, Thefts, falſe Witneſs, Blaſphemies. Theſe Blaſphemies, as they are Acts of the Mind, are more agreeable to the Devil's Sins, than Murders, Fornications, &c.

2*dly.* In the firſt Sin of our firſt Parents, (whereby our Natures became tainted) the Judgment and Underſtanding had a great, if not the firſt and main Stroak: and therefore if by that Act, Sin entred on our Natures; the Underſtanding, which was ſo deeply guilty, deſerv'd to be puniſhed and wounded as deeply as any other. Now examine what was the main Object which drew on that Sin, and which was aimed at in it; it was an apprehended Excellency in the Underſtanding, to know Good and Evil, that they might, as they conceived, be like unto God: and the Original of their being deceived, was in liſtning and aſſenting to the Devil rather than God; for twice when the Apoſtle ſpeaks of that Sin, he expreſſeth it as an Error in Judgment, as their being deceived; 2 Cor. 11. 3. He beguiled Eve through Subtilty, that is, his Wit deceived her. Their Sin therefore conſiſted primarily in Error; 1 Tim. 2. 14. And Adam was not deceived; but the Woman being deceived, was in the Tranſgreſſion. So that the Woman's being deceived, may ſeem to have been the firſt Wicket which let Sin in; or if it be not ſo, yet however 'tis mentioned as the main Cauſe and Subject of that firſt Sin; and from this Deceit it was, that corrupt Opinions of God were ingendred in their Minds, to imagine fooliſhly that he envied them a happier Eſtate, as I have before ſhewed. Now then if the Underſtanding was (as it appears to have been) one of the chief, if not the chief Party in this Sin; then certainly that Act of the Underſtanding was the cauſe of that Corruption which is in us: and therefore this Faculty muſt needs be much, if not moſt corrupted; this Faculty muſt receive one of the greateſt Wounds, and be puniſhed with one of the greateſt Loſſes. For if God ſaid, The Soul that ſins, ſhall die; then that Faculty in the Soul, which you ſee ſinned mainly, muſt die, that is, muſt loſe the Life of Holineſs which was in it before. The Schoolmens Reaſon why the Body is moſt corrupted, was, becauſe that Sin is conveyed by bodily Generation, not conſidering that this was only the Conduit-Pipe, but Adam's firſt Sin was the Spring and Cauſe; and therefore the Corruption of the Faculties is to be meaſured by the Stroke which the Parts and Faculties of his Soul had in it. Her Eye indeed and Taſte helped forward the Act: for ſhe ſaw the Apple to be good and deſirable; Gen. 3. 6. And when the Woman ſaw that the Tree was good for Food, and that it was pleaſant to the Eyes, and a Tree to be deſired to make one wiſe; ſhe took of the Fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave alſo unto her Husband with her, and he did eat. But now the Luſt of the Underſtanding, and the Deceit therein, had firſt poiſoned all, or a mere Apple could never have ſo entic'd them, but it was conceiv'd to have Virtue in it to give the knowledg of Good and Evil, the Devil candying it over with ſuch a ſpecious Appearance; and hence it was that the Apple became ſo alluring. Therefore if it be the Influence and Puniſhment of Adam's ſinful Act, which cauſeth that Corruption of Nature which is in us, as I have proved, then in a juſt and meet Puniſhment, thoſe Faculties muſt needs be mainly corrupted in Adam, and ſo in us, (though indeed his Sin corrupted all in him, and in us too) that had the greateſt ſtroke in his ſinning, which I have proved his Underſtanding to have had. Chap. 2.

Parts

3*dly*. If we conſider the Nature of Grace, and of Sin, and how they are expreſs'd to us in Scripture, as being both of them of a ſpiritual Nature, it is evident, that therefore they muſt have the moſt ſpiritual Subject. They are not as Dregs and Lees that go down to the bottom, but as Light and Darkneſs which ſwim above, and are in the finer and ſublimer Parts of the Soul, and moſtly poſſeſs and lodg in its higher Regions. For indeed as it is Reaſon that renders us capable of Sin, and of Grace, which Brutes are not, Reaſon therefore is the chief Seat of them both. We find alſo, that Grace is compared to Light, as Corruption (which is the privation of it) to Darkneſs. Thus even the State of Grace is called Light, and the State of Nature, Darkneſs, Eph. 5. 8. For ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, but now are ye Light in the Lord. As he calls Grace Light, ſo them he calls the Children of the Light, that being the principal and prevailing Principle in them. And the Strength and Power of Sin alſo is ſaid to lie in Darkneſs, which is oppoſite to this Light; Col. 1. 13. Who hath delivered us from the Power of Darkneſs, and tranſlated us into the Kingdom of his dear Son. That from which we are delivered, is called the Power of Darkneſs, and the Kingdom of Chriſt, into which we are tranſlated, is called Light; ver. 12. —Which hath made us meet to be partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light. And that the Power of Sin lies in Darkneſs, is clear from this, that the Strength of a Man lies in Wiſdom and Reaſon, and Grace animating that Reaſon: Prov. 24. 5. A wiſe Man is ſtrong, yea, a Man of Knowledg increaſeth Strength. So now corrupted Reaſon, which is Darkneſs, is the ſtrength of Sin; and the cauſe why the Devil rules ſo in Men, is from the darkneſs of their Minds; Epheſ. 6. 12. For we wreſtle not againſt Fleſh and Blood, but againſt Principalities, againſt Powers, againſt the Rulers of the Darkneſs of this World, againſt ſpiritual Wickedneſs in high Places. And when the Apoſtle would expreſs how Oppoſers of the Truth are recovered out of the Devil's Snare, he puts it upon their having Repentance, to acknowledg the Truth; 2 Tim. 2. 25, 26. In Meekneſs inſtructing thoſe that oppoſe themſelves, if God peradventure will give them Repentance to the acknowledging of the Truth, and that they may recover themſelves out of the Snare of the Devil, who are taken captive by him at his Will. When they have μετάνοιαν, a changed Mind to acknowledg the Truth; when they have found the way out of thoſe thick Miſts of Darkneſs, with which they were covered, and in which the Devil kept them; when they ἀνανήψωσιν, are recovered out of that Diſeaſe, Lethargy, and indeed Frenzy of the Mind, and like the Prodigal are come to themſelves again; then the Devil's Snare is broke, who before, through their Ignorance, Blindneſs and Madneſs, did what he would with them. Now if Grace be Light, and Sin is Darkneſs, (and indeed what is the Life of Grace and Glory both, but Light? and Sin and Hell, but Darkneſs?) then they have their principal Seat in that Faculty, to which Light properly belongs, as to the Underſtanding it doth; from which higher part of the Soul, as from a Sun above, it might diffuſe its Influence and Heat to all the lower Faculties. And if the underſtanding Power of Man be the Subject of the Light of Grace, it is alſo of the Darkneſs of Sin, ſince both Light and Darkneſs belong to the ſame Faculty, according to what our Saviour ſays,

ſays, Matth. 6. 22, 23. The Light of the Body is the Eye: if therefore thine Eye be ſingle, thy whole Body ſhall be full of Light. But if thine Eye be evil, thy whole Body ſhall be full of Darkneſs. If therefore the Light that is in thee be Darkneſs, how great is that Darkneſs? Which proves my Aſſertion, that not only the lower, but the nobler Faculties in Man, the Underſtanding and Mind, are depraved with Sin.

4*thly*. If we conſider that the Production and Increaſe of Grace is ſaid to be a Work wrought and tranſacted in the Underſtanding, and firſt beginning there; then certainly it follows that this Faculty is mainly, if not principally corrupted. But now the Work of Grace is expreſſed to us, Acts 26. 17, 18. to be the opening the Eyes, and turning Men from Darkneſs to Light; and ſo when Men are raiſed, (whether by a new Life from the Death of Sin, or by an awakening out of a ſinful Backſliding, I will not now diſpute) what is the Life which comes into them? Epheſ. 5. 14. Wherefore he ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ariſe from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall give thee Light. And indeed the Life of Grace is originally nothing but Light: John 8. 12. Then ſpake Jeſus again unto them, ſaying, I am the Light of the World; he that followeth me, ſhall not walk in Darkneſs, but ſhall have the Light of Life. As Grace there, is called the Light of Life; ſo anſwerably in thoſe Words, John 1. 4. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. Light is interpreted to mean that Grace which we had in Innocency: that whereas Chriſt is ſaid in ver. 3. to have given all things being; ſo to Man he gave that Life and Image which he had in himſelf as ſecond Perſon; In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. So that the Life of Grace is principally Light, and if ſo, the Underſtanding is one of the chief Vitals, the primum vivens, that which firſt lives, as the Heart is in Man: and therefore the Death of Sin is alſo mainly ſeated in the Underſtanding, as this is the firſt Faculty which is quickned by Grace, ſo it was the firſt that died by Sin. And this is one of the firſt Faculties which is enlivened, and by means of it the reſt have Life produced in them: and therefore when the Apoſtle Paul exhorts to put off the old Man ſtill more, and to put on the new, that is, to get the whole Man changed; he puts this in between both, as the means of both, Be renewed in the Spirit of your Minds; Epheſ. 4. 22, 23, 24. That ye put off concerning the former Converſation, the old Man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful Luſts; and be renewed in the Spirit of your Mind. And that ye put on the new Man, which after God is created in Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs. And when he exhorts us to be transformed, which means that the Frame of our whole Man ſhould be changed; he directs how it is done, viz. by the renewing of the Mind, that ſo we may prove (or in true Judgment allow of) the Will of God; Rom. 12. 2. And be not conformed to this World: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your Mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect Will of God. Which expreſſeth thus much, that when the Mind is once wrought upon and renewed, there is a Conformity to God wrought in the whole Soul; as if the Eye be ſingle, the whole Body is full of Light, Matth. 6. 22. Not that barely the Light doth the Work by filling all our Powers, but the Holy Ghoſt by that Light changeth the whole Man. As the Heavens by their Light convey their Heat and Influences, ſo Heat and Life, and Quickning in the Will and Affections, are conveyed into them by the Light of the Mind. If then the Renovation muſt thus neceſſarily be begun in the Underſtanding, then certainly that Faculty of all other is primarily and moſt deeply depraved.

5*thly*. This will alſo appear, if we add to all the former this Conſideration, That the main and proper End of one of the Offices of Jeſus Chriſt, for which it was appointed, is to cure the Defects of the Underſtanding. He hath but three Offices, King, Prieſt, and Prophet; and, as a Prophet, his Office is to work on the Underſtandings of Men, and to heal the Defects in them. As a Prophet, he removes our Ignorance, and therefore is called a Teacher; Matth. 23. 8, 10. But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt, and all ye are Brethren. Neither be ye called Maſters: for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt. The Word is ὁ καθηγητὴς, Doctor or Teacher. And as Chriſt is a Teacher to inſtruct our blind and ignorant Minds; in him are therefore hid all Treaſures of VViſdom and Knowledg, Col. 2. 3. that he might diſpenſe them to us. And the ſame Apoſtle in another Scripture, reckoning up the main Benefits which we have by Chriſt, puts in Wiſdom as one and the firſt; 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us VViſdom, and Righteouſneſs, and Sanctification, and Redemption. Well, and if we conſider too all the Inſtructions, Reproofs and Doctrines in the Word, what are they but as ſo many Plaiſters which Chriſt lays to our Heads, to cure our diſeaſed Judgments, and by healing them, to heal all the other Faculties? All thoſe wholeſome Words are principally applied to the Underſtanding, as to that Part in us which is as ſick or moſt ſick of any, and by that they work on the other.

6thly. It is the Defect and Pravity of the Mind, which is the Original and Root of all Sin in the other Powers of our Souls; nay, a corrupt Underſtanding is the immediate Cauſe and firſt Mover in moſt Sins, and the prime Subject of many, and thoſe the greateſt Sins, and therefore certainly it is deeply corrupted.

1. The Darkneſs of the Underſtanding is the Author of that Rebellion which is in the Will and Affections, for therefore doth the Will and ſenſual Appetite ſeek out ſo inordinately the Pleaſures of Sin; becauſe the Mind is ignorant of God, knows him not, and ſo is a ſtranger to him, and can have no Fellowſhip with him: for it is Ignorance of God eſtrangeth us from him, ſince all Fellowſhip and Friendſhip is grounded upon Knowledg, and all friendly Entercourſe is chiefly tranſacted by the Help of it; and therefore reaſonable Creatures are only capable of Friendſhip, which Beaſts are not. That we may then have Communion with God, the Knowledg of him is neceſſary: and accordingly the firſt and main thing which God doth, when he enters us into the Covenant of Grace, is to teach us to know him, Jer. 31. 33, 34. But this ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael; After thoſe Days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my Law in their inward Parts, and write it in their Hearts, and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. And they ſhall teach no more every Man his Neighbour, and every Man his Brother, ſaying, Know the Lord: for they ſhall all know me, from the leaſt of them unto the greateſt of them, ſaith the Lord: for I will forgive their Iniquity, and I will remember their Sin no more. It is Ignorance therefore which keeps Men from Fellowſhip with God, and want of that Fellowſhip makes every Faculty in the Man ſhift for it ſelf, hunt and ſeek about in other things in the Pleaſure of Sin and Variety of Luſts, to find that Happineſs and Delight which the blinded Soul cannot ſee or diſcern to be in God. Men are therefore eſtranged from God, becauſe they know him not, and then they are abandon'd to all manner of Sins; Epheſ. 4. 17, 18, 19. This I ſay therefore and teſtify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the Vanity of their Mind, having the Underſtanding darkned, being alienated from the Life of God, through the Ignorance that is in them, becauſe of the Blindneſs of their Heart: who being paſt feeling, have given themſelves over unto Laſciviouſneſs, to work all Uncleanneſs with Greedineſs. Mark, it is ſaid, that they are alienated from God through Ignorance, becauſe of the Blindneſs of their Hearts; and thence it follows, that they gave themſelves over to Laſciviouſneſs.

2. The Darkneſs of the Mind is not only thus negatively (as depriving the Soul of the Knowledg of God) the Root of all Sin, but it is poſitively the immediate Cauſe of moſt Corruptions in Mens Lives. Thus Paul mentions fleſhly Wiſdom, as the corrupt Principle by which Men lead their Lives, and as the main oppoſite Principle unto Grace: 2 Cor. 1. 12. For our rejoycing is this, the Teſtimony of our Conſcience, that in Simplicity and godly Sincerity, not with fleſhly Wiſdom, but by the Grace of God, we have had our Converſation in the World, and more abundantly to you-wards. There is a fleſhly practical Wiſdom which enables Men to do much Miſchief, and therefore wicked Men are ſaid to be wiſe to do Evil; Jer. 4. 22. For my People is fooliſh, they have not known me, they are ſottiſh Children, and they have none Underſtanding; they are wiſe to do evil, but to do good they have no Knowledg. And indeed this carnal Wiſdom is the Cauſe of the greateſt Part of Wickedneſs in the World; Iſa. 47. 10. For thou haſt truſted in thy VVickedneſs: thou haſt ſaid, None ſeeth me. Thy VViſdom

Book III.

VViſdom and thy Knowledg, it hath perverted thee: and thou haſt ſaid in thine Heart, I am, and none elſe beſides me. What Practices do corrupt Opinions put Men upon? How do they hold them in the Snare of the Divel? How do corrupt Principles in the practical Underſtanding ſecretly ſteer Men, and do all covertly and with underhand Dealing, when yet the contrary Principles keep a Noiſe in the Conſcience and ſpeculative Part? Corrupt Reaſonings and falſe Judgments of things are the chief Movers and Actors in all our Sinnings; Epheſ. 2. 3. Among whom alſo we all had our Converſation in times paſt, in the Luſts of our Fleſh, fulfilling the Deſires of the Fleſh, and of the Mind; and were by Nature the Children of VVrath, even as others. They are ſaid to fulfil the Wills of τῶν διανοιῶν, of the Mind, of the Reaſonings, as well as of the Fleſh, the ſenſual Part. And really thus it is with Men, that though they are convinced in their ſpeculative Underſtandings, that there is a God, and that it is beſt to ſerve and worſhip him, &c. yet there is a corrupt Principle in their practical Judgments, which will deny and renounce all this, and act contrary to it; and Men will ſtill walk in the Vanity of their Minds, Epheſ. 4. 17. that is, vain Principles are their Guide.

3. The Underſtanding it ſelf is the Subject of many Sins, and the chief Tranſactor of them; and though uſually they affect the Will alſo, yet they are ſeated there principally. As Pride hath its chief Place in the Mind, and therefore the Apoſtle Paul deſcribes it by a being puff'd up with a fleſhly Mind; Col. 2. 18. Let no Man beguile you of your Reward, in a voluntary Humility, and worſhipping of Angels, intruding into thoſe things which he hath not ſeen, vainly puft up by his fleſhly Mind. So Idolatry, Hereſy, Blaſphemy, Hypocriſy, Infidelity, evil Surmiſings, ſeeking after Credit, and Praiſe, and Glory, which is an aereal thing, a ſublimated Object of the Underſtanding; in fine, all Inordinacies after any Excellencies, of which the Underſtanding only judgeth, all theſe Sins are principally ſeated in it; and all the evil Thoughts, wicked Deviſings, ſiniſter and hypocritical Ends, which ſet unregenerate Men on work in all their ways, theſe are all ſeated in the Underſtanding. And theſe Sins are both the great ſwaying Sins in Mens Lives, of longeſt Continuance, of mightieſt Strength, and of higheſt Guilt; which I add, to ſhew the deep Corruption of the Underſtanding, and as Motives to mortify them, having them in our Eye, ſearching them out, and alſo humbling our ſelves for them.

1*ſt.* Theſe Sins in the Underſtanding are the moſt ſwaying of all other; they are of a larger Extent and Compaſs, and a Man hath more Occaſions to pleaſe them than others, and therefore they command moſt, and bear the greateſt Sway in a Man's Life. As to inſtance in one of them, Credit, and Glory of a Name, a Man ſeeks to uphold it, and is mindful of it continually; yea, for the ſake of it a Man will abſtain from many a groſs Sin, and ſome Affections and Luſts are ſtarved to feed and nouriſh this, and it keeps other Sins under: and in ſhort, acts a Part in every thing, whenas other Luſts do but occaſionally and at ſome times exert themſelves.

2*dly.* Theſe Sins in the Underſtanding are the ſtrongeſt of all other. The ſtrong Holds which exalt themſelves, are Sins ſeated in the Mind, and therefore called Reaſonings, which exalt themſelves againſt God; 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. For the Weapons of our Warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of ſtrong Holds, caſting down Imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the Knowledg of God, and bringing into Captivity every Thought to the Obedience of Chriſt. And therefore theſe Sins are the ſtrongeſt Holds, becauſe they are founded in the Reaſon, which argues for them, defends and juſtifies them, when other Luſts have no Shew or Colour of Reaſon, and have little or nothing to ſay and plead for themſelves. When Chriſt was here on Earth, what was the ſtrongeſt Luſt which kept Men from coming to him, and believing? It was Pride and vain Glory. What was it they ſtuck at moſt? Diſgrace, and renouncing the Credit of their Learning, and foregoing Hopes of Preferment and Wealth, and abandoning the Correſpondency of their Friends, by loſing their Eſteem: Here it was they ſtuck moſt, and all theſe are Sins of the Underſtanding:

3*dly.*

3*dly*. Theſe Sins are of moſt Continuance. When the Body decays, and the Temper alters, other Luſts wither, but not theſe in the Mind and Spirit, which are as green and freſh in old Age, as in Youth: ay, and as Men grow in Years, theſe Sins grow more ſtrong and lively in them. Chap. 3.

4*thly*. Theſe Sins are of the deepeſt Guilt: for, corruptio optimi eſt peſſima, the beſt things corrupted, become the worſt of all; as a Stain is worſe on a fine Cloth than a courſe. And therefore as the Underſtanding is the moſt excellent Part in Man, and the very Spirit of the Soul, and the Image of God is chiefly wrought there; ſo the Corruption of it is worſe than that of the other Faculties: If the Eye be dark, how great is that Darkneſs, Matth. 6. 23. And beſides all this, it is in theſe Sins of the Mind, that we reſemble the Devil, whenas in other Sins we are only like unto the Beaſts.

CHAP. III.

The Difference between the natural Defects in Mens Minds, cauſed by the Fall and Sin, and thoſe which are ſpiritual Defects. That Mens natural Imperfections in Underſtanding and Reaſon, would have been much greater, if they were not healed by the common Goodneſs of God to Men. Yet notwithſtanding, how deficient Men are in the Knowledg of civil and natural things, and therefore they muſt be much more ſo as to ſuch which are ſpiritual.

HAving prov'd in the general, that even the Spirit of Man, or his more ſublime Part, the Underſtanding, is defiled. I now come to ſhew in the particular Inſtances, wherein this Corruption of the Mind doth conſiſt. To make the way clear to my Diſcourſe, I premiſe theſe two Propoſitions.

Prop. I. There is a Difference between the Wounds and natural Defects which the Fall of Adam hath given the Mind, and the ſinful Defilements which it hath contracted from his Fall.

For as in the Body there are many Defects which in themſelves are Miſeries indeed, but not Defilements, and which may humble a Man as Puniſhments, but not as Sins, ſuch are Lameneſs, Blindneſs, &c. So in the Faculties of the Soul, and in this of the Underſtanding eſpecially, beſides the Defilements of it, there are many Wants, Imperfections and Weakneſſes, which ſimply in themſelves conſidered, may rather be thought Miſeries than Sins, as Weakneſs of Memory, Ignorance in humane Sciences, &c. the Principles whereof Adam had, who gave Names to Beaſts according to their Natures, and we ſhould have inherited them from him. That you may underſtand this further, conſider that Adam's Mind, (as the beſt of Mens Minds alſo now are) was enriched with two ſeveral Endowments. 1. The ſanctifying Light of the Law written in the Heart, whereby he knew God, and how he ought to ſerve him. And, 2. much other additional Knowledg and Wiſdom, which ſhould ſeem as Handmaids unto this former, and attend upon it, as Knowledg in the Nature of the Creatures, which God gave alſo to Solomon, an Heart as large as the Sea, and as many Notions in it as Sands on the Sea-Shore; all which though ſanctified, as being guided and ordered by the other, yet was not (as ſimply in it ſelf conſidereed) ſanctifying Knowledg. Now therefore the Underſtanding of Man, ſince the Fall, hath anſwerably received two Wounds; It is not only ſtripp'd of that ſanctifying Light utterly and wholly, but thoſe rich Hangings, and adorning Attendants are gone too: and therefore they are repaired, ſince the Fall, by two ſeveral Remedies, viz. Gifts, and the Grace of ſpiritual Knowledg; Gifts of Knowledg and Wiſdom you ſhall find where Grace is not. Thus the Heathens had the Imperfections of the Mind repair'd in Natural and Civil Knowledg, as much as we. And unregenerate Men alſo have Spiritual Gifts: Epheſ. 4. 8. —He led Captivity captive, and gave Gifts unto Men. Pſal. 68. 18. —Thou haſt received Gifts for Men; yea, for the Rebellious alſo, that the Lord God might dwell among them. But theſe Gifts are not Grace, for they heal not the Mind, nor rectify the crooked and perverſe Diſpoſitions of Men, as Solomon ſays, Eccleſ. 1. 15. That which is crooked, cannot be made ſtraight. And there is Grace and ſanctifying Light where theſe Gifts are wanting: and therefore the abſence of them is not a Sin; for many of thoſe whom God chooſeth and ſanctifieth, want theſe rich Endowments of the Mind, which are as the Handmaids to the great Miſtreſs of all, Grace: and where that is not, they all ſignify nothing to the real Purpoſe of our Salvation; 1 Cor. 13. 1, 2. Though I ſpeak with the Tongues of Men and of Angels, and have not Charity, I am become as ſounding Braſs, or a tinkling Cymbal. And though I have the Gift of Prophecy, and underſtand all Myſteries, and all Knowledg; and though I have all Faith, ſo that I could remove Mountains, and have no Charity, I am nothing.

My Intent is not to run over the Defects in Naturals, which are in the Mind, ſo much as the Defilements of it in regard of Spirituals; and we ſhall follow herein the Example of Scripture, which takes notice of the Defilement of the Conſcience, and Mind, and Memory, but not of the natural Weakneſs of them. Titus 1. 15. —But even their Mind and Conſcience is defiled. Now it is theſe Wants that are healed by Sanctification, into which we are to enquire, and for the healing of which the Apoſtle prays in this 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. and the healing of which are eſſentially neceſſary to Salvation.

The Uſe of this Propoſition laid down, may be to eaſe the Complaints of many poor Souls, who have the Defilements of their Spirits more healed, than the Defects and Imperfections of them; who have weak Memories, ſhallow Underſtandings and Capacities, and meaner Gifts, than other Men; and who yet have more of that Knowledg, wherein the Image of God conſiſts, Col. 3. 10. than thoſe other Men have, who excel them in Wiſdom and Gifts. Tho they be Fools in worldly Wiſdom, yet they err not in the Way of Holineſs; Iſa. 35. 8. And an High-way ſhall be there, and a Way, and it ſhall be called the Way of Holineſs; the Unclean ſhall not paſs over it, but it ſhall be for thoſe: the way-faring Men, though Fools, ſhall not err therein. And indeed if we look to the Purpoſe of God's Election, he hath not choſen the wiſe, but the fooliſh things of this World; 1 Cor. 1. 26,27. For ye ſee your Calling, Brethren, how that not many wiſe Men after the Fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the World, to confound the wiſe; and God hath choſen the weak things of the World, to confound the things which are mighty. And if ſo, what though thou haſt natural Defects in thy Mind, why ſhouldſt thou be caſt down? Thou mayſt have a weak Memory perhaps, yet if it can and doth remember good things as well or better than other, then it is a ſanctified Memory, and the Defilement is healed, though the Imperfection of it is not; and though thou art to be humbled for it as a Miſery, yet not to be diſcourag'd; for God doth not hate thee for it, but pities thee: and the like holds good, and may be ſaid as to the want of other Gifts.

As a godly Man who hath Grace, may be defective as to theſe Gifts; ſo wicked Men may have the Imperfections of their Underſtandings more healed by Gifts than a godly Man, and yet the Defilements of them, which are oppoſed to Sanctification, may ſtill remain utterly untaken away: and thus unregenerate Men may exceed thoſe who are ſanctified, as to ſuch Gifts; Luke 16. 8. —For the Children of this World are in their Generation wiſer than the Children of Light. They are ſaid to be wiſer in their Generation than the Children of Light, Light, that is, than thoſe who have a ſanctified Light in their Minds: yet conſider the diſtinction there put, which is, that they are but wiſer in their Generation, that is, in their Kind and Sphere: And this is no more than what is common and uſual, for every Creature in its own Kind may have a farther inſight into a thing, than another, which is yet more noble, hath. Thus many Beaſts in Sight, and Smell, and Taſte, and Fancy, put down and exceed a Man; as an Eagle excels us in Sight, an Ape in Taſte, and Dogs in Smelling; yet a Man hath Reaſon, which recompenſeth and over-ballanceth all. And thus wicked Men in their Kind, that is, ſo far as their Generation reacheth, which is common to both, and in ſuch Gifts which both partake of, may exceed the Godly; but yet theſe are Children of Light in the Lord, though not in the World; and the other are Children of Light in the World, but Darkneſs in the Lord; Epheſ. 5. 7, 8. Be not ye therefore Partakers with them: for ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, but now are ye Light in the Lord: walk as Children of Light. Such ungodly Men, who have ſuch Gifts and eminent Parts, are as the Crocodiles, which, according to the report of them, are quick-ſighted on Land, but dull-ſighted in the Water; ſo theſe are quick and ſharp-witted in all things, but what belong to their Peace.

Prop. II. Theſe Wounds and Defects of the Mind in natural and civil things, if ſearched to the bottom, and conſidered what they would be, if not healed in moſt Men, more or leſs, by eſpecial Gifts from God, will appear to be very great.

Moſt of that Light which Men have in them, is a borrowed Light from God, and more than Nature, now fallen, hath bequeathed and left us. And indeed that Portion which, as Sons of Adam, we may claim, as derived to us by virtue of that firſt Law ſtill in force, [Encreaſe and multiply], whereby we are Men, would be found exceeding ſmall, did not God, pitying us out of his Abundance, add to our Stock de novo, and help us to trade with it. If therefore we reflect, how little of natural Light at the moſt we have, and how much of that little is help'd by ſuperadded Gifts from God, we ſhall find our Loſs as to theſe natural Abilities to be great, and our remaining Stock to be very little and inconſiderable. 'Tis true indeed, we have, and muſt have Underſtanding and Reaſon; for this being the difference between us and Beaſts, without it we could not be Men: Pſal. 32. 9. Be ye not as the Horſe, or as the Mule, which have no underſtanding; whoſe Mouth muſt be held in with Bit and Bridle, leſt they come near unto thee. Without Underſtanding we could neither be capable of Sin, not obnoxious to Puniſhment for it, nor ſenſible of any Guilt; and therefore Sin doth not deprive us of all Underſtanding, ſince (as Proſper aſſigns it as a Reaſon) that Faculty concurs to the commiſſion of it.

Proſper, lib. 3. de vocat. Gentium.

It is alſo true, that as to other Creatures, according as they have Objects proportioned for them, God hath given anſwerably an Inſtinct to know and diſcern what is good for them in their Kind; ſo to Men alſo God hath given to know the things of a Man, in order to the upholding their natural and civil Being in this World: and therefore a Wiſdom in their Generation is proper to Men as ſuch. And how far theſe common fundamental Principles of Reaſon ſhould reach, and be improv'd, it is hard to determine.

That Adam's Sins hath not the ſame Influence into all Mens Underſtandings, which it hath into theirs who are born Fools, it is not as if theſe Idiots were more guilty of Adam's Sin, and more obnoxious to the Curſe and Miſchiefs of it than others, but that in thoſe who have the remainders of a natural Light, and uſe of Reaſon, the Works of God might appear, in fitting them at leaſt for civil Buſineſs and Employments of the World: And thus our Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſpeaks, and argues in the caſe of the Man born blind, John 9. 2, 3. And his Diſciples asked him, ſaying, Maſter, who did ſin, this Man, or his Parents, that he was born blind? Jeſus anſwered, Neither hath this Man ſinned, nor his Parents; but that the Works of God ſhould be made manifeſt in him.

But however, let us view the Underſtandings of the wiſeſt Men in natural or civil things, which belong to the preſent Life, let us ſound and fathom them to the bottom, and we ſhall find that all is exceeding ſhallow, and that they are but clung Bladders not blown to the wideneſs, for which they were made to ſtretch. If we conſider the Knowledg of Nature, how ſhort-ſighted are the wiſeſt of Men in it? Solomon who excell'd all others in Wiſdom, who was the great Dictator in Natural Philoſophy, who diſcourſed from the Hyſſop on the Wall, to the Trees of the Foreſt, 1 Kings 4. 33. yet when he comes to ſum up the Reckoning, he puts this at the foot of the Account, That what is wanting, cannot be numbred, Eccleſ. 1. 15. That which is crooked, cannot be made ſtraight; and that which is wanting, cannot be numbred. He who was ſo wiſe, ſaw that the Defects of his Knowledg over-paſs'd all Arithmetick, and yet he had Notions as many as the Sands of the Sea, 1 Kings 4. 20.

If we conſider the knowledg of thoſe things which are neceſſary to the maintenance and ſupport of Man's Life, or to the upholding of Civil Government, which are good for Man's Body either in Phyſick or Diet, or which are for the increaſe of his Eſtate and Credit, or which are neceſſary for the Communities of Mankind, to ſettle Order and Government among Men; How ignorant are the wiſeſt of Men in all theſe? Solomon ſays thus in the general, Eccleſ. 6. 12. For who knoweth what is good for Man in this Life, all the Days of his vain Life, which he ſpendeth as a Shadow? For who can tell a Man, what ſhall be after him under the Sun? What is good for Man (ſays he) in this Life? He doth not ſpeak of the World to come, but the preſent. And common Experience proves Solomon's Aſſertion, for thoſe who have moſt extended their Wits to the preſervation of their Healths, have deſtroyed them by Errors and Miſtakes: Thoſe Ways which the wiſeſt of Men have pitched on, as the neareſt and ſhorteſt Cuts to Riches and Honours, have prov'd the loſs of both: Eccleſ. 2. 13, 14. Then I ſaw that Wiſdom excelleth Folly, as far as Light excelleth Darkneſs. The wiſe Man's Eyes are in his Head, but the Fool walketh in Darkneſs: and I my ſelf perceived alſo, that one Event happeneth to them all. Though indeed Wiſdom exceeds Folly, as much as Light doth Darkneſs, yet one Event happens to all, and the Wiſe are poor and diſgrac'd as well as Fools: And to what end and purpoſe then is the Wiſdom of the greateſt and braveſt Men?

And after all, the moſt of that Knowledg unto which Men attain in theſe things fore-mentioned, is from a new Gift of God. They cannot underſtand and manage ſo much as Husbandry without his Inſtruction; but it is God who teacheth them diſcretion how to order their Corn in ſowing and threſhing it: Iſa. 28. 24, 25, 26. Doth the Plowman plow all day to ſow? Doth he open and break the Clods of his Ground? When he hath made plain the Face thereof, doth he not caſt abroad the Fitches, and ſcatter the Cummin, and caſt in the principal Wheat, and the appointed Barley, and the Rie in their place? For his God doth inſtruct him to diſcretion, and doth teach him. Thus the knowledg of the nature of Things, and of the application and uſe of them in profitable Inventions for Humane Life, is the Gift of God, which the old World did acknowledg, when any thing which is now common among us, was firſt invented: for they honoured them as Gods, who found out Plowing, &c. Sowing, Muſick, &c. And this gave occaſion to the Idolatry of thoſe Times, who worſhipp'd the Authors of ſuch Inventions, as thinking them more than Men, and that it was ſome eſpecial Divine Aſſiſtance enlightned them in it.

And if thus in Natural and Civil Things, Mens Minds were ſo defective, as to need God to help their Wit and Invention, much more great muſt be the deficiency of Man's Underſtanding in Things Moral and Divine; and the Aids from God more apparent, which ſupply thoſe Defects. If we reflect on the Heathens, what was the Light which the wiſeſt of them had? It was moſtly in Duties of the ſecond Table of God's Law: and they had but little Prints of Knowledg concerning the Duties of the firſt Table, and thoſe ſoon blotted or worn out. Rom. 1. 21, 28. Becauſe that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their Imaginations, and their fooliſh Heart was darkned. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledg, God gave them over to a reprobate Mind, to do thoſe things which are not convenient. And of thoſe Prints which they had of this firſt Table of God's Law, if you ask how they came to be ſet upon their Minds? The Apoſtle tells us, they were written; Rom. 2. 15. Which ſhew the Work of the Law

written in their Hearts, their Conſcience alſo bearing witneſs, and their Thoughts the mean while accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another. And how were they written, but by God's own Finger, as he writes the Law on the Tables of Stone? The knowledg of God which they had, it was manifeſt in them; Rom. 1. 19. Becauſe that which may be known of God, is manifeſt in them; for God hath ſhewed it unto them. And how was it manifeſt? Why God had ſhewed it to them, and that not only materially, by creating the World, though that be the Means inſtanc'd in, but alſo by teaching them to read in this great Volume of the Creation, and learning them to ſpell his Eternal Power and Godhead out of that Book: as the Printer, who barely prints a Book, doth not manifeſt to all Men what is in it; but it is what the Maſter, who teacheth to read and underſtand it, doth. And ſo God in this caſe doth the like; and therefore the Wiſdom which the wiſeſt of the Heathens had, is called the Wiſdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 21. For after that, in the Wiſdom of God, the World by Wiſdom knew not God, it pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſs of Preaching to ſave them that believe.

But now if you bring the ſharpeſt Underſtandings to read and apprehend the things written and revealed in God's other Book, his Word, they cannot do it without a ſupernatural Light and Aſſiſtance. And there is want of this Light to teach Men to know theſe Truths, even in a ſpeculative and notional manner, ſuch as unregenerate Men may have. For was not the mere Narration, the bare Story of them Fooliſhneſs to the Heathen, becauſe they had not this Light to enable them to do ſo much, as mere reading amounted to? as 1 Cor. chap. 1, & 2. Was it not matter of deriſion to the Athenians? Acts 17. 32. And when they heard of the Reſurrection of the Dead, ſome mocked; and others ſaid, We will hear thee again of this Matter. And why? Becauſe though they heard theſe things, yet their quick Wits, not enlightned by the Spirit, could not apprehend them. And therefore the Scripture is ſaid not to be of private Interpretation, 2 Pet. 1. 20. Knowing this firſt, that no Prophecy of the Scripture is of any private Interpretation; i. e. No private Underſtanding, nor the ſharpeſt Wit, if not aſſiſted by the Holy Ghoſt, can underſtand them; for their Meaning cannot be explained without help of the publick Secretary of Heaven, who wrote them at firſt; 2 Pet. 1. 21. For the Prophecy came not in old time by the Will of Man; but holy Men of God ſpake as they were moved by the Holy Ghoſt. And when Chriſt himſelf was the Preacher, he opened their Underſtandings, that they might underſtand the Scriptures; for without this his preaching was not enough: Luke 24. 45. Then opened he their Underſtanding, that they might underſtand the Scriptures. Though we attain to knowledg of the Letter of the Word, and of the meaning of Holy Writ, as unregenerate Men do attain other Knowledg; yet we could not gain this but by Gifts diſpenſed upon Chriſt's Aſcenſion, which qualify Men not to be Apoſtles only, but Teachers and Interpreters of the Word. Epheſ. 4. 8, 11. Wherefore he ſaith, When he aſcendeth up on high, he led Captivity captive, and gave Gifts unto Men: And he gave ſome Apoſtles; and ſome, Prophets; and ſome, Evangeliſts; and ſome, Paſtors and Teachers. And if it be ſaid, May not Men underſtand the Hiſtorical Matters of Fact laid down in the Word, as well as they underſtand other Hiſtories by the ſtrength of their natural Wit and Reaſon? I anſwer, Yes, they may, but yet not ſo as to apprehend the Deſign of the Sacred Story, or the holy Uſe for which it was wrote, to inſtruct Men in it, which is the chief Mind and Intent of the Holy Ghoſt; this they cannot underſtand without ſupernatural Aſſiſtance: Or if they could compaſs in their Thoughts, the meaning of the Hiſtory of the Bible, and thoſe Diſcourſes which, by way of Illuſtration, run in the Golden Veins of the Scriptures, concerning Natural Things and Political, wherein much of Job, and of the Proverbs is ſpent; yet they can never penetrate the Spiritual Myſteries of the Goſpel. Theſe are the Things of God, which he hath peculiarly given to his Children, and they are above the reach or capacity of the Minds of other Men. 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10, 11, 12. But as it is written, Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, neither have entred into the Heart of Man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit ſearcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, ſave the Spirit of

Man

Book III.

Man which is in him? Even ſo the things of God knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received, not the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things which are freely given to us of God. The inward Work of the Spirit, and the Myſteries of Free-Grace, are ſuch things, which the wiſeſt of Men cannot underſtand ſo much as in the Letter of them. Thus Nicodemus could not imagine what the New Birth ſhould mean; John 3. 3, 4. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, Except a Man be born again, he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God. Nicodemus ſaith unto him, How can a Man be born when he is old? Can he enter the ſecond time into his Mother's Womb, and be born? No, the Viſion of all theſe things is become as the Words of a Book that is ſealed; Iſa. 29. 11, 12. And the Viſion of all is become unto you, as the Words of a Book that is ſealed, which Men deliver to one that is learned, ſaying, Read this, I pray thee; and he ſaith, I cannot, for it is ſealed: And the Book is delivered to him that is not learned, ſaying, Read this, I pray thee; and he ſaith, I am not learned. What though you deliver it to one who is learned, and ask him to read it, yet he cannot; and why? Becauſe it is ſealed, and no one in Heaven or Earth is worthy to open the Seals of theſe hidden and cloſed Treaſures of Grace, but Chriſt alone; and without his Key no Man can come to know them. Or if an unregenerate Mind could be ſuppoſed to arrive ſo far, as to know them, and underſtand their meaning; yet they can never aſſent to them, without a Work of the Holy Ghoſt on the Soul; 1 Cor. 12. 3. —And that no Man can ſay that Jeſus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghoſt. He ſpeaks it of common Gifts, ver. 1. Now concerning ſpiritual Gifts, Brethren, I would not have you ignorant. He ſhews that the very changing of their Opinions, that they ſhould think the Gods, whom they before worſhipp'd, to be no Gods, and aſſent to this, that Jeſus was the Lord, that even this was from the Power of the Holy Ghoſt, without whom they could not have attained to ſo much. And yet farther, if the Underſtandings of Men were filled with all this Light, and needed not any new Aſſiſtance to the attainment of all Knowledg, not only Natural, Civil and Moral, but Divine and Spiritual alſo in the Letter, yet ſtill the Defilement, the Corruption of the Mind might remain, yes, and doth continue in Men who are enlightned in all theſe. So that ſuppoſe in none of theſe the Mind had received any Wound or Darkneſs, ſo as to need no new Light; or ſuppoſe that a Man hath received all this Knowledg from the Holy Ghoſt; yet there is a farther Knowledg required than all this, which till it be wrought, the Underſtanding may truly be ſaid ſtill to be defiled and blind, and to know nothing as it ought to know.

CHAP. IV.

Chap. 4.

What are the ſpiritual Wants and Defilements in Mens Underſtandings, which can be healed only by true Regeneration. They cannot have a ſpiritual Diſcerning of ſpiritual Things. This proved from Scripture, which expreſſeth, not only that ſuch things are hid from them, that they have ſomething over their Eyes which hinders the Sight, but that there is Darkneſs in the Eye of the Mind it ſelf.

HAving diſcourſed of thoſe natural Wounds which the Underſtanding hath received by the Fall, I now come to treat of the ſpiritual Wants and Defilements which are healed by true Sanctification, ſaving and ſpiritual Knowledg.

1. The firſt ſpiritual Defect in Man's Underſtanding, is that Blindneſs and Unability to know and diſcern ſpiritual things ſpiritually, as a regenerate Man doth; 1 Cor. 2. 14. But the natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are Fooliſhneſs unto him; neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. You know what ſpiritual things are, viz. the things which God hath revealed by his Spirit for your Peace, thoſe things which are neceſſary for you to know, if you be ſaved; Luke 19. 42. —If thou hadſt known, even thou, at leaſt in this thy Day, the Things which belong unto thy Peace; but now they are hid from thine Eyes. There they are called the things belonging to our Peace. Now to know them ſpiritually, is in brief (to expreſs it to vulgar Capacities) ſo to know them, as to know the true way of making our Peace with God by them: Thou mayſt know them ſo as expreſſed to others, and be affected with them alſo, and yet make no Application of them to thine own Uſe, Good and Benefit, and then thou doſt not ſpiritually underſtand them: for ſo to underſtand them, is to know them, as they are in themſelves, and in that true and full manner, and to that End they are revealed by the holy Ghoſt in the Word: and therefore we do not ſpiritually diſcern the Nature of theſe things, if we do not ſee the true right particular way wherein we may come to Salvation by them, becauſe that was the Mind of Chriſt and of the Holy Spirit in revealing them. Now then to ſee Sin and a Man's own Sinfulneſs, ſo as to be throughly humbled for it, and to have the Heart broken off from all Sin, and from putting any Truſt in himſelf: as Job and Paul had a Sight of it with ſuch an Effect upon them; Rom. 7. 13, 14. Was then that which is good, made Death unto me? God forbid. But Sin that it might appear Sin, working Death in me by that which is good; that Sin by the Commandment might become exceeding ſinful. For we know that the Law is ſpiritual: but I am carnal, ſold under Sin. This is to ſee it in a ſpiritual manner; and to behold the Excellence of Chriſt, and the Neceſſity of his Righteouſneſs with ſuch an Eye as he doth, who accounts all but Droſs and Dung in compariſon, and ſeeks to be found in him, not having his own Righteouſneſs; as Paul did, Phil. 3. 8, 9. Yea doubtleſs, and I count all things but Loſs, for the Excellency of the Knowledg of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord: for whom I have ſuffered the Loſs of all things, and do count them but Dung that I may win Chriſt: And be found in him, not having mine own Righteouſneſs, which is of the Law, but that which is through the Faith of Chriſt, the Righteouſneſs which is of God by Faith. This is a ſpiritual Knowledg of Chriſt. To know the Promiſes of free Grace and Mercy, ſo as to ſee the way fully open, for himſelf or any ſuch other poor Sinner to have a ſhare in it. This is ſpiritually to diſcern the infinite Riches of free Grace; to ſee the Strictneſs of that Holineſs which God requires; to approve that good perfect fect and acceptable Will of God: to know how we are to ſerve him in all Duties, in ſuch a manner as God who is a Spirit, and who is infinitely holy, commands: to ſee good and full Reaſon for an abſolute Neceſſity of doing this: to ſee Beauty, Excellence, and Happineſs in performing it: This is to know the Law as the Saints know it; Rom. 7. 12, 14. Wherefore the Law is holy; and the Commandment holy, and juſt, and good. For we know that the Law is ſpiritual: but I am carnal, ſold under Sin. Now ſuch Thoughts and Apprehenſions as the Saints have of theſe things, unregenerate Men cannot have; their Underſtandings being ſo blind, as they do not and cannot enter into them. This Blindneſs and utter Inability to diſcern ſpiritual things, is the firſt Subject of my Diſcourſe, which I am to explain, and prove to you, and you will the better apprehend what it is, if firſt I lay open the ſeveral Degrees of it, according as the Scripture ſets it forth to us.

1. The Scripture tells us, that ſpiritual things are hidden from the Eyes of Men, who are in their natural Condition; Luke 19. 42. —If thou hadſt known, even thou, at leaſt in this thy Day, the things which belong unto thy Peace; but now they are hid from thine Eyes. Matth. 11. 25. At that time Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto Babes. They are hid, i. e. they are as far from our finding out, as things are which are on purpoſe laid aſide in Places where our Eyes can never come to ſpy them or find them out: ſo as ſuppoſe a Man had a Mind to find them, and know them, yet he might ſearch to Eternity, and never light on them, unleſs God revealed them. Thus ſpeaks Chriſt to Peter, Matth. 16. 17. —Bleſſed art thou Simon Barjona: for Fleſh and Blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. Therefore they are called the Wiſdom of God, and not only ſo, but in Myſtery too; 1 Cor. 2. 7. But we ſpeak the Wiſdom of God in a Myſtery, even the hidden Wiſdom which God ordained before the World unto our Glory. They are ſuch a Myſtery which is as far from our Ability to find out, as the Thoughts of the moſt deep-hearted Men are; which Inſtance the Apoſtle uſeth to illuſtrate it, in ver. 9, 10, 11, 12. But as it is written, Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, neither have entred into the Heart of Man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit ſearcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, ſave the Spirit of Man which is in him? even ſo the things of God knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received, not the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Ay, theſe deep things of God's Heart are farther from a natural Man's Search and Scrutiny, than the deepeſt Thoughts of the wiſeſt Man on Earth are: For what ſays Solomon, who beſt knew Wiſdom, and the utmoſt extent of it? That tho the Heart of a Man be deep, yet a Man of Underſtanding may fathom it; Prov. 20. 5. Counſel in the Heart of Man is like deep Water, but a Man of Underſtanding will draw it out. He inſtanceth there in the Thoughts of a Man, becauſe of all things in the World, they are moſt unſearchable. But tho theſe may be ſearched into, yet what Man can penetrate the Counſels of God's Heart? Rom. 11. 34. For who hath known the Mind of the Lord, or who hath been his Counſellor? And upon this he breaks forth into that great Exclamation, ver. 33. O the depth of the Riches both of the Wiſdom and Knowledg of God! how unſearchable are his Judgments, and his Ways paſt finding out! But tho this is a great degree of ſpiritual Blindneſs, that Men are unable to make the firſt diſcovery of the Things of God, and it may be eaſily granted that they are ſo; yet you will ſay, When theſe ſpiritual Things are once publiſh'd, and made known and common, and laid before Mens Eyes, as in the Scriptures they are, then a Man is able to diſcern them. Therefore,

2. Conſider what farther the Scripture ſays in this matter: It not only ſays, that Men ſit in Darkneſs, but (to leave all under Expreſſions) it tells us, that we are Darkneſs it ſelf, Epheſ. 5. 8. For ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, &c. Now a Man who is in the dark, eſpecially if he carry Darkneſs about with him too, tho the thing he looks for be laid juſt before him, not conceal'd, but brought out, yet he is unable to ſee it: For that which makes all things manifeſt, is Light, ſays the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 3. 13. Every Man's Work ſhall be made manifeſt: for the Day ſhall declare it, becauſe it ſhall be revealed by Fire; and the Fire ſhall try every Man's Work, of what ſort it is. And, Lumen eſt actus perſpicui, ſaith Philoſophy. But now he doth not ſay, we are in the dark, but Darkneſs. There are ſome Creatures, which tho they be in the dark, have an innate Light, by which they can ſee things, as Cats have; but we are not only in the dark, but Darkneſs it ſelf. God hath put into the Mind of Man wherewith to ſee other things, a Light which Philoſophers call Intellectus agens, which doth irradiate thoſe Images that are received from the Senſes; ſo as a Man carries a Candle in his Head, and not only an Eye able to ſee, which they call Intellectus poſſibilis: But as to ſpiritual things, we want this; and inſtead of a Light, we carry Darkneſs in our Heads, which muſt be diſpell'd by new Light, brought in over and above the propounding and publiſhing of the Object; Acts 13. 41. Behold, ye Deſpiſers, and wonder, and periſh: for I work a Work in your Days, a Work which you ſhall in no wiſe believe, though a Man declare it unto you. Paul having plainly and openly preached to them Chriſt, and the Goſpel, and forgiveneſs of Sins, in the former Verſes, thus concludes his Sermon with this Caution, that they ſhould beware leſt that came upon them, which was ſpoken by the Prophet, that though they ſhould have eternal Life and Salvation ſet before them in a clear Light, yet they ſhould periſh, becauſe they did not believe it. Therefore it is not bare declaring or propounding the things of the Goſpel, that will ſerve the turn; for theſe Men heard it preached and publiſhed with the cleareſt Evidence. The Goſpel, though preach'd never ſo plainly, may be ſtill hid to them which are loſt; 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. But if our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that are loſt; in whom the God of this World hath blinded the Minds of them which believe not, leſt the Light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, who is the Image of God, ſhould ſhine unto them. And indeed as to ſee with bodily Eyes, it is not only neceſſary that an Object be before us, but that we have Light alſo ſhining into the Room where we are; ſo it is not enough that we have the Truths of the Goſpel rationally propoſed, but it is alſo needful that a Light ſhines into our Minds to illuminate them. Who hath not Experience, that a ſpiritual Reaſon and Argument, which convinceth a Man to day, yet ſhall not have the ſame effect upon him on the morrow, though as ſtrongly urg'd? And why? but becauſe a new Light is ſtill required to ſet it on. Thus a Man looks comfortably upon his Graces, and Evidences for Heaven to day, but the next Day, or perhaps but an Hour after, he ſees nothing but Darkneſs and Diſcomfort: and though he doth recal his former Thoughts, yet he cannot ſee things as he did before: What is the Reaſon? Becauſe that Light which before made his Graces and Evidences viſibly apparent, is now withdrawn, tho the Eye of his Mind be the ſame, and the Object where it was.

Chap. 4.

3. Conſider that if the Object is propounded, and Light ſhine round a Man, yet if his Eyes be ſhut or cloſed up, he is not able to ſee any thing. Therefore the Scripture, to ſhew a further degree of our unability to diſcern ſpiritual things, ſays, that Men have Vails, Scales and Films before their Eyes: The Dirt and Muck of this World doth not only, by being dawb'd over them, hinder the Sight, but the God of this World hath blinded them, leſt the Light ſhould ſhine into them; 2 Cor. 4. 4. In whom the God of this World hath blinded the Minds of them which believe not, leſt the Light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, who is the Image of God, ſhould ſhine unto them. And Vails are over their Hearts too, that as we ſay of the Eye, that it is Bloodſhot, ſo we may of the Heart, that it is Sinſhot. This Vail was over the Jews Hearts when Moſes was read; 2 Cor. 3. 14, 15. But their Minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the ſame Vail untaken away, in the reading of the Old Teſtament; which Vail is done away in Chriſt. But even unto this day, when Moſes is read, the Vail is upon their Heart. Though at the great turning of that People unto Chriſt, this Vail ſhall be taken away; ver. 16. Nevertheleſs, when it ſhall turn to the Lord, the Vail ſhall be taken away. The falling of the Scales from Paul's Eyes at his Converſion, was a Type of opening the Eyes of his Mind; for upon them there was an hard Film too. There is upon the Minds of Men, a πώρωσις, or Callouſneſs; Epheſ. 4. 18. Having the Underſtanding darkned, being alienated from the Life of God, through the Ignorance that is in them, becauſe of the Blindneſs of their Heart. The World is πώρωσις, and there is this Foreskin of Fleſh upon the Eye to be cut away.

4. Conſider, that the Scripture ſeems not to reſt here, but expreſſeth the weakneſs and incapacity of the Mind to know ſpiritual things, to be yet greater. One (as you know) who hath a Vail and Scales before his Eyes, to be reſtored to his Sight, needs no more than to have them removed; as Paul ſaw well enough when his Scales were fallen off; And why? becauſe he had an Eye under thoſe Scales, which ſtill retained the Faculty of ſeeing. But indeed, and in truth, there wants a Power, an Ability and Faculty in the Minds of unregenerate Men, to ſee and diſcern ſpiritual things, which Power muſt therefore be created anew. Our Underſtandings muſt not only have the Scales of Sin removed, but a new Eye muſt, as it were, be put into them. Now tho Art may remove the Scales, yet it can never make a new Eye, when it is once put out; and we are not as one that hath contracted Blindneſs by a Film, or Skin over the Eye, but we are born blind, and ſo are incurable by all the Arts of Reaſon. We have our Blindneſs from the Womb, and to heal ſuch an one, is a Miracle indeed, John 9. 32. It was never heard of from the beginning of the World, that one born blind, received Sight, becauſe the Organ of Sight is wanting, and there muſt be a new Creation of an Eye in ſuch a Man, which is a Work that none but God can do. We are not yet to think that this defect of Sight is the ſame in a Man as in a Stone, &c. for a Man hath an Underſtanding, which without renovation, may have ſome apprehenſion of ſpiritual Things; but to know them ſpiritually, to ſee them as they ought to be ſeen, and are to be ſeen, the beſt Mind unrenewed is uncapable. And therefore there muſt be a new Diſpoſition put in, which is to the Underſtanding, as the Organ of the Eye is to the Faculty of Seeing, which elevates and enableth it to ſee that, which of it ſelf it hath not a power to diſcern. The Scriptures accordingly call Converſion, not only a turning from Darkneſs to Light, and opening the Eyes, as Acts 26. 18. To open their Eyes, and to turn them from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveneſs of Sins, &c. But Converſion is alſo expreſs'd as giving us Eyes to ſee; Deut. 29. 4. Yet the Lord hath not given you an Heart to perceive, and Eyes to ſee, and Ears to hear, unto this day. And in another place it is ſtiled giving us an Underſtanding; 1 John 5. 20. And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an Underſtanding, that we may know him that is true. He hath given us an Underſtanding, that we may know him, ινα γινώσκομεν. 1. It is not natural, for it is a Gift, and that proper only to ſome, as it is declared to us by Chriſt himſelf, Mat. 13. 11. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, Becauſe it is given unto you to know the Myſteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to them it is not given. So in 1 Cor. 2. 12. Now we have received, not the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. 2. That which is given, is not barely Light, but διάνοια, an Underſtanding to know; which imports not an Act only, but a Power and Ability to produce Acts of Knowledg: for otherwiſe thoſe Words, ινα γινώσκομεν, that [we may know him] would not have been added; for if by the former διάνοια, he had not meant the Faculty of Knowing, but only the Act, then his Senſe would be, He hath given us to know, that we may know, which would be a Tautology.

So that now this want and defect in the Mind, is not of Light external only, or a denial of revealing the Objects themſelves, but it is the want of an inward Ability; and the Deficience is in the Underſtanding it ſelf, as is plain from what Paul ſays, 1 Cor. 2. 14. But the natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are Fooliſhneſs unto him: neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. The natural Man (ſaith he) that is, one that hath but natural Abilities, and is not regenerate, and made a ſpiritual Man, as they are oppoſed one to the other; this natural Man doth not receive the things things of God. Now ſince the Underſtanding is made as a Window to let in all that comes into the Soul, all the Beams of Knowledg, whence is it that ſpiritual Things have not admiſſion? Why becauſe there is a Stop, and that Stop is in a deficiency of the Underſtanding, that it cannot receive them. Chap. 4.

The Defilement then of Mens Underſtandings, is an utter Blindneſs, and want of the true ſpiritual knowledg of ſpiritual Things. You muſt only remember, and take this along with you, that this Blindneſs is only in regard to ſpiritual things, and ſuch ſpiritual things, as are peculiarly poſſeſſed and enjoyed by the Saints, and freely given them of God: for theſe things, and the ſpiritual diſcerning of them, are appropriated by the Apoſtle to them in 1 Cor. 2. 12, 14. Now we have received, not the Spirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things which are freely given to us of God. But the natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are Fooliſhneſs unto him: neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. He ſays, the natural Man receives them not. What things are they which he doth not receive? Such as are ſpiritual, and peculiar to Believers, ſuch as God's Free-Grace and Love in Chriſt, ſuch as Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs, ſuch as all thoſe Bleſſings of the Covenant of Grace which Chriſt hath purchaſed, and which accompany an Intereſt in him, ſuch as the Work of Grace and Regeneration, and how we may ſerve God acceptably in that State. Theſe are the Objects which we mean, and in reſpect to which we ſay, the Underſtandings of unregenerate Men are utterly blind, as to the ſpiritual knowledg of them.

But if ſpiritual Things be more largely extended, to comprehend all things whatever which are revealed in the Scriptures by the Spirit, as the Wrath of God againſt Sin and Sinners, the outward Acts of Sin forbidden by the Law, the many Diſcourſes, moral or natural, which are laid down in the Word of God, and run in the Veins of it, and which fall under the common Senſe and Light of Conſcience: Of all theſe an unregenerate Man, without any new Creation in his Mind and Judgment, may have a knowledg by the aſſiſtance of the common Light of the Spirit, who wrote the Scriptures, and hid theſe Treaſures in thoſe Mines. There is yet this Difference, that an unregenerate Man hath only the Notions of theſe Things without the Warmth or Life, or knowing how to make uſe of them; but a Believer hath both.

Book III.

CHAP. V.

The Reaſons why an unregenerate Man cannot ſpiritually diſcern ſpiritual Things, becauſe there is ſo great a Diſproportion between the Object and the Faculty; becauſe an Ability to know ſuch things, was part of the Image of God in Adam, which being loſt utterly by Sin, cannot be reſtored, but by a renewing of the Mind it ſelf in Regeneration.

I Have explained how defective the Mind is in the apprehenſion of Things which are ſpiritual. I ſhall now aſſign the Reaſons, why Things of ſuch a Nature cannot be conceived nor diſcerned by a Man in his unregenerate Condition.

1. The firſt Reaſon may be drawn from the vaſt Diſtance and Difference that there is between the Object and the Faculty. The Things are ſpiritual, and ſo above the reach of mere Nature: and the Man without Grace is purely natural; and if ſo, he hath then but natural Abilities; and therefore there muſt be an addition of an higher Power, to raiſe the Underſtanding to conceive of them in that manner as they ought to be apprehended. For, Nihil agit ultra ſuam ſphæram; Nothing acts beyond the ſphere of its Activity: And therefore what is natural, cannot mount up to ſpiritual things, they being ſo much above it. And beſides, it is an Axiom which holds good even in Nature, that between the Object and the Faculty there muſt be a proportion: and it is for this reaſon, that bodily Eyes cannot ſee and diſcern a Spirit in its own ſpiritual Nature, unleſs it be clothed with ſome bodily Shape; becauſe there is no proportion between a Body and Spirit. Tho indeed a bodily Eye may be elevated, and helped to ſee that which is afar off, and out of ſight, as by Optick-Glaſſes we do; and Stephen's Eyes by extraordinary Opticks ſaw Chriſt in Heaven, Acts 7. 53. yet ſtill it muſt be a Body which is ſo ſeen: but that bodily Eyes ſhould ſee a Spirit, unleſs preſented in ſome bodily Shape, this cannot be. No more can a Man's Underſtanding, being but natural, ſee ſpiritual things, there being not only a vaſt diſtance between them, (as Solomon ſays of Wiſdom, that it is above the reach of a Fool, Prov. 24. 7. Wiſdom is too high for a Fool; he openeth not his Mouth in the Gate;) for this might be help'd, but there is a diſproportion in the very nature of the things themſelves, becauſe thoſe which are ſpiritual, are of a higher Sphere, and Order of Beings: and therefore there muſt be higher Principles than what are purely natural, to underſtand them ſpiritually, i. e. in their native Life, and Colour, and lively Repreſentation, as ſpiritual. Clothed they may be under Similitudes, and pictured out; and by this help a natural Man may view them. And Chriſt expreſſing the Myſteries of Grace by ſuch ſenſible Metaphors, ſays, that he ſpake earthly things to them, as condeſcending in his way and form of Speech to their earthly Minds and Apprehenſions; John 3. 12. If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how ſhall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things? The things themſelves were ſpiritual and heavenly; for he had been diſcourſing of Regeneration; but he calls them earthly, becauſe he expreſſed them by ſuch Similitudes, as here in this Chapter he repreſents to Nicodemus that change of Nature, which the Spirit of God works, under the notion of a new Birth. John 3. 3. —Except a Man be born again, he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God. Which Chriſt did to aſſiſt the Underſtanding of Nicodemus in this matter. And the Apprehenſions of godly Men are help'd by ſuch Repreſentations: but they farther ther penetrate the deep and myſterious Nature of the ſpiritual Things themſelves, whilſt others look no farther than the Picture, the outward Shape and Colour which is laid over them, but the things themſelves in their heavenly Nature, they never ſee, nor can ſee. If I ſpeak earthly things (ſays Chriſt) you hardly underſtand them, as Nicodemus did not, much leſs will it then be poſſible to underſtand thoſe which are heavenly (as Chriſt argues there) i. e. in an heavenly manner, or ſpiritually. And really in that Paul, 1 Cor. 2. 14. puts in ſo carefully his Diſtinction between natural and ſpiritual, this argues evidently a new Power to be required in the natural Man, that may be ſuitable to ſpiritual things. Nay, he doth not only name a different Object materially, i. e. ſpiritual things, but a different Act about ſuch Objects, and the formal manner in which they are to be apprehended, which is ſpiritually; 1 Cor. 2. 14. But the natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are Fooliſhneſs unto him: neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. This great Difference then not only in the Objects, but in the Acts, infers a Difference between the Faculties or Powers; for Potentiæ diſtinguuntur per actus & objecta; Powers are diſtinguiſhed by their Objects and Acts: and as a natural Faculty exerts natural Actions about natural Objects, it is a ſpiritual Faculty which is converſant in a ſpiritual manner about ſpiritual things. Chap. 5.

2. That a Man remaining in his State of Nature, cannot duly underſtand ſpiritual things, is alſo evident from this Reaſon, becauſe ſuch an Underſtanding is part of that Image which was loſt in Adam, and utterly loſt, and therefore cannot be in any Man till it be reſtored, and he be renewed in his Mind. As Adam could not have had it at firſt, if God had not created it; ſo now being loſt, it cannot be in any Man, till it be a-new created in his Mind; Col. 3. 10. And have put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledg, after the Image of him that created him. The new Man is ſaid to be created after God's Image, εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν, in Knowledg, or unto Knowledg, ſo that there muſt be a new Creation of an underſtanding Power, that we may know God and ſpiritual Objects. Now if thoſe Sparks of Knowledg which are left in humane Nature, and are ſtruck into it before any Renovation, were of the ſame kind, and gave an Ability to know God, and the things of God, as we ought, then there would need no more but adding new Fuel to theſe Sparks, by bringing new Objects, and throwing them in to enkindle them, and make them blaze. But the Apoſtle ſays plainly, that there is need of a new Creation; and therefore that Knowledg or Power of knowing, which regenerate Men have, is not of the ſame kind with thoſe little Sparks which glimmer in unregenerate Men: Yea, and therefore Chriſt, when he would aſſign a reaſon of Nicodemus his Ignorance, and withal ſhew an abſolute need of the new Birth, he plainly aſſerts an Impoſſibility of ever ſeeing God without it; John 3. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Verily verily I ſay unto thee, Except a Man be born again, he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God. Nicodemus ſaith unto him, How can a Man be born when he is old? can he enter the the ſecond time into his Mother's Womb, and be born? Jeſus anſwered, Verily verily I ſay unto thee, Except a Man be born of Water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh; and that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit. Marvel not that I ſaid unto thee, Ye muſt be born again. Chriſt affirms a Man not regenerate, to be ſo far from entring into the Kingdom of God, that unleſs new Diſpoſitions be conveyed into his Mind, he is uncapable of ſeeing it: For, ſays he, that which is born of the Fleſh, is but Fleſh, and what is Spirit, muſt be born of the Spirit. Now by Spirit is meant a new radical Power in the Soul, from which Actions proceed, and on which Fruits do grow; Gal. 5. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. For the Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the Fleſh: and theſe are contrary the one to the other; ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would. But if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the Law. Now the VVorks of the Fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, Adultery, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, Laſciviouſneſs, Idolatry, VVitchcraft, Hatred, Variance, Emulations, VVrath, Strife, Seditions, Hereſies, Envyings, Murders, Drunkenneſs, Revellings, and ſuch like: of the which I tell you before, as I have alſo told you in time paſt, that they which do ſuch things, ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God. But the Fruit of the Spirit is Love, Joy, Peace, Long-ſuffering, Gentleneſs, Goodneſs, Faith. Fleſh and Spirit are there oppoſed as two oppoſite Principles, producing contrary Effects, and bringing forth ſuch different Fruits as thoſe there mentioned. Now Fleſh is a Principle rooted in a natural Man, and therefore ſo muſt Spirit be too in one who is ſpiritual: And being ſuch inward radicated Principles, they clog and obſtruct one another's Actions, as contrary Habits uſe to do, that you cannot do what you would. And that this Spirit is new Powers put into the Soul, is evident alſo from this, that Acts are aſcribed to this Spirit, and there are Fruits of the Spirit enumerated, as well as of the Fleſh. Now in the Soul there is nothing but either Acts, or Habits, or Diſpoſitions; a new Act is not that Spirit which is new born in a Man, for all Acts come from the Spirit, and therefore preſuppoſe it, and therefore it muſt be a new Principle and Root, and Power put in.

Now therefore for a Man to be born again in his Underſtanding, is to have ſuch a Spirit, that is, a new Principle of ſpiritual Knowledg wrought in his Soul, which if he want, he cannot ſee God's Kingdom, or the things which belong unto it, for they are ſpiritual and heavenly, and require an heavenly ſpiritual Eye. Yea, and this may be added, that if that which is called Spirit, be wrought by Regeneration in any Faculty, it is in the Underſtanding, for that is part of the Reaſon of its Name, why it is called Spirit, that it is ſeated in the Spirit of the Mind, and that this is renewed; Eph. 4. 23. And be renewed in the Spirit of your Mind.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VI.

An Objection propounded, If unregenerate Men know nothing of ſpiritual things, how is it then that the Scripture ſpeaks of their knowing them, and ſinning againſt the Light of them? The Anſwer to it, That they know nothing as they ought to know it: That it is but a falſe Knowledg: That it may be ſaid, that ſeeing they do not ſee; and underſtanding, they do not underſtand; they are yet ignorant, in compariſon of that clear Knowledg which the Regenerate have.

I Intend further to proceed in clearing and explaining the Blindneſs and Ignorance which is in the Mind of unregenerate Men, and will ſhew what kind of Knowledg of ſpiritual things it is, which a natural Underſtanding wants, that I may prove wherein the true Sanctification of the Soul conſiſts. And this I intend to do by framing an Anſwer to an Objection which is ready to ſtick in Mens Minds, and is commonly brought, and ſo is obvious, and lies in our way: And the anſwering it will be a ſecond Way and Courſe of demonſtrating this Truth.

Object. The Objection is this: " Have all the Workers of Iniquity no " Knowledg? as the Pſalmiſt ſays, Pſal. 14. 4. Have all the Workers of Iniqui- " ty no Knowledg? who eat up my People as they eat Bread, and call not upon the " Lord. And are they ignorant not only of thoſe things revealed, which are " contained in the Law, but alſo of the Truth of things revealed in the Go- " ſpel? How is it then that the Apoſtle ſpeaks of thoſe who ſin wilfully after " they have received the Knowledg of the Truth? Heb. 10. 26, 27. For if we " ſin wilfully after that we have received the Knowledg of the Truth, there remain- " eth no more Sacrifice for Sins; but a certain fearful looking for of Judgment and " fiery Indignation, which ſhall devour the Adverſaries: Which there is meant " of the Goſpel revealing the Blood of Chriſt, and the Fruits and Benefits of " it, as appears by their Sin againſt it; ver. 29. Of how much ſorer Puniſhment, " ſuppoſe ye, ſhall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under Foot the Son of " God, and hath counted the Blood of the Covenant wherewith he was ſanctified, an " unholy thing, and hath done Deſpite unto the Spirit of Grace? Doth not Peter " alſo ſpeak of thoſe who have known the way of Righteouſneſs, who yet " turn from that holy Commandment? 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21, 22. For if after they " have eſcaped the Pollutions of the World, through the Knowledg of the Lord and " Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, they are again intangled therein, and overcome; the latter " *End is worſe with them than the beginning. Are we " blind alſo? ſay the Phariſees with Wonderment; John 9. 40, 41. And ſome " of the Phariſees which were with him heard theſe VVords, and ſaid unto him, " *Are we blind alſo? Anſw. The Anſwer unto this Objection will farther clear and evidence this great Truth, of which we are diſcourſing, viz. the Inability of an unregenerate Man's Underſtanding to apprehend ſpiritual things.

1. Therefore in the General, let us but conſider, as a Foundation of what follows, that the Scripture acknowledgeth indeed as much as hath been objected, and yet withal tells us, That ſeeing, they do not ſee, and hearing, they do not hear, ſpeaking of underſtanding theſe Myſteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, which are the ſpiritual things that we ſpeak of; Matth. 13. 13, 14, 15, 16. Therefore ſpeak I to them in Parables, becauſe they ſeeing, ſee not; and hearing, they hear not, neither do they underſtand. And in them is fulfilled the Prophecy of Eſaias, which ſaith, By hearing ye ſhall hear, and ſhall not underſtand; and ſeeing ye ſhall ſee, and ſhall not perceive. For this Peoples Heart is waxed groſs, and their Ears are dull of hearing; and their Eyes they have cloſed, leſt at any time they ſhould ſee with their Eyes, and hear with their Ears, and ſhould underſtand with their Heart, and ſhould be converted, and I ſhould heal them. But bleſſed are your Eyes, for they ſee; and your Ears, for they hear. In which Words our Saviour makes both theſe, viz. ſeeing ſpiritual things, and yet an utter Blindneſs, as to the true diſcerning of them to be conſiſtent in the ſame Perſons, and to ſtand very well together. We have to the ſame Purpoſe another Scripture in Iſa. 42. 18, 19, 20. Hear ye Deaf, and look ye Blind, that ye may ſee. Who is blind but my Servant; or deaf, as my Meſſenger that I ſent? who is blind as he that is perfect, and blind as the Lord's Servant? Seeing many things, but thou obſerveſt not: opening the Ears, but he heareth not. Who is ſo blind as my Servant? (ſays God) and he who is perfect, having all Knowledg at his Fingers Ends, and ſo is able and ready to expreſs it unto others, and can by outward Inſtruction be an Inſtrument to open their Ears to hear what he himſelf hears not. And ſeeing many things (ſays God) yet thou obſerveſt them not, i. e. thou indeed ſeeſt them not to any good purpoſe: So that none are more blind than they who have the moſt Knowledg.

But you will ſay, this is a Riddle, how can theſe things be? Why truly in no way can theſe things be reconciled, unleſs it be acknowledged that there is a Knowledg of ſpiritual things which unregenerate Men may, and do attain to, and yet that there is a Knowledg of the ſame things, which without a Change of their Minds they can never acquire: which Knowledg becauſe they want, therefore they are ſaid to be blind. As it is ſaid of the Samaritans, that they feared God, and yet it is ſpoken of the ſame Men, that they feared not the Lord; 2 Kings 17. 32, 33, 34. So they feared the Lord, and made unto themſelves of the loweſt of them Prieſts of the high Places, which ſacrificed for them in the Houſes of the high Places. They feared the Lord, and ſerved their own Gods, after the manner of the Nations whom they carried away from thence. Unto this Day they do after the former manners: they fear not the Lord, neither do they after their Statutes, or after their Ordinances, or after the Law and Commandment which the Lord commandeth the Children of Jacob, whom he named Iſrael. Now what is the Reaſon, that what is in Appearance contradictory, is thus aſſerted of them, but becauſe that Fear of God which is truly ſo, was utterly wanting in them, and that Fear indeed which they ought to have had, they were abſolutely deſtitute of? So alſo it is as to the Knowledg of ſpiritual things, which in ſome ſort an unregenerate Man may have, and yet know nothing of them, as they ought to be known by him to a ſaving Purpoſe and Effect.

That

That you may ſee this more fully in the general Notion of it, conſider what the Scripture ſays in this Point, as it makes that Knowledg which unregenerate Men have to be no Knowledg, in compariſon of that which they want; Rom. 3. 10, 11, 12. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one: There is none that underſtandeth, there is none that ſeeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doth good, no not one. The Apoſtle there ſpeaking of the general Corruption of Mankind, doth as truly ſay, there is none that underſtandeth, as that there is none who ſeeketh after God, and as that there is none who is righteous; ſo as you may as well ſay, an unregenerate Man is capable of true Righteouſneſs, as of a true underſtanding of ſpiritual things. The Apoſtle James anſwerably diſtinguiſheth between a dead and living Faith; chap. 2. 17, 18. Even ſo Faith, if it hath not Works, is dead, being alone. Yea, a Man may ſay, Thou haſt Faith, and I have Works: ſhew me thy Faith without thy Works, and I will ſhew thee my Faith by my Works. An unactive Faith is dead, and it is a working Faith that is alive; ſo there is a Knowledg, which in compariſon of working Knowledg, (that influenceth the Heart and Life of a Man by its convincing Clearneſs and Evidence) is as a dead Eye compared with a living one, which is only equivocally called an Eye, but is not really and naturally ſo. The Eye of an unregenerate Mind is a dead Eye, which though it may have the Semblance of inward Light in it, yet it is really dull and dead: and it is only the living Eye of an Underſtanding ſpiritually enlightned, which hath in it the Light of Life, of which Chriſt ſpeaks; John 8. 12. Then ſpake Jeſus again unto them, ſaying, I am the Light of the World: he that followeth me, ſhall not walk in Darkneſs, but ſhall have the Light of Life. And now upon all theſe Accounts it is no wonder if the dead Knowledg of the Unregenerate is reckoned as none in compariſon of the other living Knowledg. This Knowledg of the holy Man is emphatically called ſo, as if the other was none at all, this getting away deſervedly the Name; Prov. 9. 10. The Fear of the Lord is the beginning of Wiſdom: and the Knowledg of the Holy is Underſtanding. It is ſpoken there with an Emphaſis, the Knowledg of the Holy is Underſtanding; as if that of other Men was to be reckoned as none. And indeed ſince all their Knowledg doth not arrive to the right End, but they miſs of that Salvation and Happineſs which the ſpiritually enlightned attain, it may be ſaid to be nothing but Blindneſs, Wandering and Error. Thus God ſays of thoſe who entred not into his Reſt, that they err in their Hearts, and have not known his Ways; Pſal. 95. 10, 11. Forty Years long was I grieved with this Generation, and ſaid, It is a People that do err in their Heart, and they have not known my Ways. Unto whom I ſware in my Wrath, that they ſhould not enter into my Reſt. Well, but more particularly.

Chap. 6.

1. This firſt the Scripture tells us expreſly, that though unregenerate Men know never ſo much, yet they know nothing as they ought to know it; 1 Cor. 8. 1, 2, 3. Now as touching things offered unto Idols, we know that we all have Knowledg. Knowledg puffeth up, but Charity edifieth. And if any Man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. But if any Man love God, the ſame is known of him. If a Man have all Knowledg, and it makes him proud, he knows nothing as he ought to know it. The Reaſon why he is not humbled by his Knowledg, is becauſe his Knowledg is faulty, it is not ſuch as it ſhould be; for if it were ſuch, it would humble his Heart. Now becauſe there is wanting in ſuch a Man the Knowledg which ought to be, therefore the Scripture and God reckons it as if it were not at all.

2. The Scripture calls that which an unregenerate Man hath, a falſe Knowledg in compariſon of that which he ought to have; 1 John 2. 3, 4. And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his Commandments. He that ſaith, I know him, and keepeth not his Commandments, is a Liar, and the Truth is not in him. He that ſaith, I know him, and keeps not his Commandments, is a Liar; i. e. if he ſays, he knows God, and is not wrought into the Obedience of what he knows, that Man lies. Now he could not be challeng'd with a Lie, if his Knowledg was true; for therefore he lies, becauſe he ſays, he knows God, when in Deed and in Truth he doth not. Therefore James calls that Faith which conſiſts only in ſuch a Knowledg as this, a dead Faith, chap. 2. 17. Even ſo Faith, if it hath not Works, is dead being alone. It is not therefore dead becauſe it works not, but therefore it works not, becauſe it is dead. And why is it dead, but becauſe the Spirit, the Life, the animating Form of Knowledg is wanting? As a dead Eye is ſaid to be an Eye, yet equivocally and improperly in compariſon of a living Eye; ſo hath this falſe dead Knowledg that Name given to it very improperly: For true Knowledg hath eternal Life joined with it; John 17. 3. And this is Life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. Pſal. 119. 144. The Righteouſneſs of thy Teſtimonies is everlaſting: give me Underſtanding, and I ſhall live. Give me Underſtanding, (ſays he) i. e. ſuch as is in Deed and in Truth ſuch, and I ſhall live. The true Effects of Knowledg are wanting therefore in that which unregenerate Men have, and this is ſufficient to argue it to be falſe. If one ſhould bring you a Stone, and tell you 'tis a Load-ſtone, and yet it wants the eſſential Property of the true, to draw Iron after it, you would reject it as a counterfeit one, not but that it is true Stone, yet it is not a true Loadſtone. Or if one ſhould bring a Drug to you, and you find it works not, nor ſtirs in you when you have taken it, you would ſay, that it was not true and right. Thus in Knowledg, that is a true Knowledg of things ſpiritual, which draws the Heart after it, and works in and upon that Heart. And therefore ſo immediate is the Connection between true knowing and doing, that the one is put for the other: Jer. 22. 15, 16. Shalt thou reign becauſe thou cloſeſt thy ſelf in Cedar? Did not thy Father eat and drink, and do Judgment and Juſtice, and then it was well with him? He judged the Cauſe of the poor and needy, then it was well with him. Speaking of the Obedience of good Joſiah, He relieved the Oppreſſed, &c. Was not this (ſays God) to know me? Thus he puts knowing for doing. And ſo there is a hearing and a learning which draws the Heart to come unto Chriſt; John 6. 44, 45. No Man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me, draw him: and I will raiſe him up at the laſt Day. It is written in the Prophets, And they ſhall be taught of God. Every Man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me. Every one that hath heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me, and this Hearing and Learning is the Father's Drawing: Such is the Effect of true ſpiritual Knowledg, which the Knowledg of the Unregenerate wants, and therefore is defective in the eſſential Property of true Knowledg.

Book III.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

Chap. 7.

The Difference between the Knowledg that an unregenerate Man hath of ſpiritual Things, and the Knowledg of one regenerate. That it doth not conſiſt only in Degrees, or in the addition of a greater meaſure of Knowledg to one than to the other; nor in that the Knowledg of the one is ſpeculative, but of the other practical. Tho this is ſome part, yet it is not the whole of the Difference. Reaſons aſſigned for it.

NOW then from all that hath been diſcourſed in the preceding Chapter, it is apparent, that there is a Difference, and a great one too, between that Knowledg which is in an unregenerate Man, whoſe Underſtanding and Judgment hath not received any Light from Heaven, and that Knowledg which is in a Man whoſe whole Spirit is ſanctified; yea, and ſo great and vaſt a Difference, as the one is ſaid to be no Knowledg, in compariſon of the other. That therefore which remains for me to do, is to ſhew you this their Difference, and wherein it lies; and this not only in the Effects of them, which are more apparent, but in the Cauſes, Principles and Nature of them, which make them to differ, and from which you ſhall ſee how thoſe differing Effects flow. Let us a little enquire into them.

1. Some ſay that the Difference between ſanctifying Knowledg, and that in the Minds of Men unregenerate, lies only in degrees of Knowledg, and not at all in Kind; i. e. that both are of the ſame Nature, and have the ſame Acts and Objects; but the one is a greater Knowledg, and the other leſs: as Heat in Water is the ſame kind of Heat that Heat in Fire is, but hath not the ſame degree; for Fire is more intenſively hot. As therefore Heat in Water may be boiled up to ſo high a degree, as to expel the Form of Water, and bring in the Form of Fire; ſo may, and is (ſay they) the Knowledg in an unregenerate Man, when converted, actuated ſo far, and made ſo intenſe, as it expels Sin and Darkneſs: and thus having attain'd to a certain degree, that proves ſanctifying now, which was not ſo before. And ſo even in this ſenſe unregenerate Men may be ſaid to be blind, becauſe they want that degree of Knowledg which a Man ſanctified hath; as a Man that can ſee, yet not very well, is called pur-blind, though not ſtone-blind. And thus the Apoſtle calls him blind, who is μυωπάζων, that neither doth nor can ſee afar off; 2 Pet. 1. 9. But he that lacketh theſe things, is blind, and cannot ſee afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from all Sins. Now indeed this Difference between them is true, but it is not all. It is true indeed, becauſe a regenerate Man, when converted, knows all he did before, and moreover, hath a farther degree of Knowledg added, a more full, ſtrong, intenſe degree of Knowledg, than he had before when unconverted: He hath now a more compleat conviction of things, whereof himſelf was not, and no other Man is ſo fully perſwaded. But yet this is not all; for if the Difference lay only in adding more Degrees of Knowledg, then why is a Man that hath many Reaſons in his Mind to convince him of ſuch a Truth or Practice, yet unconvinc'd and unconverted? why is not his Heart wrought on effectually, whenas one that hath perhaps one Motive or Conſideration impreſs'd on him, yet is wrought on powerfully by it? As is the caſe of many a poor Chriſtian, who hath not ſo many Notions of the Truths of the Goſpel, nor can diſcourſe ſo readily of them, nor ſay ſo much for himſelf as the other mere ſpeculative Chriſtian; and yet his Will is more moved by what what he knows, and his Heart affected more. Therefore certainly it is not ſimply an Addition of more Degrees that doth the buſineſs, as if it were the ſame caſe; as in Phyſick, that though the taking of twenty Grains of ſuch a Drug may not work, yet if one or two more be added, it will. There is a Faith, (Chriſt tells us) and ſo conſequently a Knowledg, that the leaſt Grain of it, even as ſmall as a Grain of Muſtard-ſeed, is powerful to ſave; Mat. 13. 31, 32. —The Kingdom of Heaven is like to a Grain of Muſtard-ſeed, which a Man took and ſowed in his Field: which indeed is the leaſt of all Seeds; but when it is grown, it is the greateſt among Herbs, and becometh a Tree; ſo that the Birds of the Air come and lodg in the Branches thereof. Such is the Nature of Grace, and ſo of ſanctifying Knowledg too; and therefore the difference between that and common Grace and Knowledg, conſiſts not only in degrees: there is the ſmoaking Flax, which though it breaks not forth into Fire, yet is true Grace, and ſhall get the Victory; Mat. 12. 20. A bruiſed Reed ſhall he not break, and ſmoaking Flax ſhall he not quench, till he ſend forth Judgment unto Victory. And there is a Knowledg, which though it hath more Light, yet it hath not Heat anſwerable to cauſe a Smoak, which the other hath: which argues a farther Difference than what is merely gradual, and that Difference to be in the Nature of the Knowledg it ſelf.

2. A ſecond Difference aſſign'd, is taken from the ſeveral and differing Seats and Parts of the Underſtanding, in which the knowledg of the one and the other is ſaid to reſide, and take poſſeſſion of: ſo as the nature of their Subjects being diverſe, they are ſaid in this reſpect alſo to be different. It is in ſhort thus; The Knowledg which unregenerate Men have, though it be a Habit in the Mind, yet it is fixed only in the outwardmoſt and upper-part of the Underſtanding, into which all things knowable do come, and may come; whoſe Office is barely to take a view of things, and contemplate them; and there is an end, and it hath no more to do. This we call the ſpeculative Underſtanding, or barely knowing Knowledg. But then beſides this there is another Room, or Part of our Underſtandings, whoſe Office it is to judg of the Goodneſs of all things, which you know ſo, as to move your Wills and Affections to the things which you apprehend and eſteem beſt for you, and to guide you in your Actions. This is called the practical Underſtanding, or working and affecting Knowledg. Now they ſay, that into this part of the Underſtanding in unregenerate Men, the knowledg of ſpiritual things never enters, and it receives them not, but they are ſhut up only in the other. But now in a Regenerate Man, the knowledg of ſpiritual Things is chiefly ſeated in the practical Underſtanding, whoſe Office, Privilege, Prerogative and Place it is to guide and ſteer all. And this is the reaſon why the one barely knows theſe things, and the other knows them not ſo as to be affected with them: for though an unregenerate Man's ſpeculative Eye be open, yet his practical Eye is ſhut; and ſo ſeeing, he ſees them not: but in a Regenerate Man God opens both Eyes, that he ſees them fully to all Purpoſes. To clear this farther, I thus expreſs it: In your Judgments there are two ſeveral Courts kept, and two Judges in thoſe Courts. The Office of the one, viz. that which ſits in the ſpeculative Court, is barely to enquire into the truth of Things, and their Goodneſs, only in the general; and to examine this merely in comparing Truth with Truth, by notional Principles of Reaſon, and ſo to go no further. As an Angel hath an underſtanding Power to judg Intemperance and Uncleanneſs to be evil and ſinful, as well as Men do; or as they themſelves do know Pride to be ſo, but yet they barely know this, for they are uncapable of Inclinations or Affections to ſuch Vices. So a Gentleman hath an Underſtanding capable of knowing the Myſtery of a Trade, as well as he who lives upon it; but yet this doth not direct him to work on it, or to live by it. Now beſides this General Court which takes all things knowable into conſideration, there is another Court kept by another Judg, the practical Underſtanding; whoſe Office it is to enquire, what of all the things a Man knows, is beſt for him, on which to ſpend his chief Intention and Affections.

And

And that by which this Judge meaſures things, and the Rules by which he goes in examining them, is what is moſt profitable, or pleaſant, or fitteſt for me upon all occaſions, and actions, and accordingly paſſeth Sentence; which Sentence all the reſt which is in a man ſtands unto, and puts in Execution. Now then to apply this to the thing in hand: Take an Unregenerate man, and in him the Judge of the firſt Court, viz. his Speculative Underſtanding, or knowing Knowledge, which enquires but into the Truth of things, may be enlightened with much knowledge of thoſe, which are ſpiritual, and be informed of thoſe Notional Rules of Truth, whereby to judge aright of the ways both of Sin, and Grace, and to paſs this Sentence alſo, that the ways of Grace are beſt, and that this is a certain Truth, and that the ways of Sin are worſt, and that to Swear, and be Prophane, to Steal, or to be Drunk, to Lye, or Cheat, do deſerve Death, and bring Damnation: But then when any particular practice of a Sin, and a Bill about it comes to be read in the ſecond Court, where the Practical Underſtanding ſits Judge, whoſe Office is to examine what is beſt for him to be done, whether to commit ſuch a Sin, or to practiſe ſuch a Duty; this Judge being Judge for the Man, (as the other was for the Truth) and examining all by Principles of Pleaſure, &c. Self-love being the Pleader, and Swayer of this Judge, reverſeth the Sentence of the former Court, and paſſeth one quite contrary. We have an Inſtance of the Judgment, and Sentence, which the firſt Judge, and Court pronounceth, in Rom. 1. 32. Who knowing the Judgment of God, (that they which commit ſuch things, are worthy of death) not only do the ſame, but have pleaſure in them that do them. We have an Inſtance of the Sentence of the other Court, in Rom. 2. 1. Therefore thou art inexcuſable, O man, whoſoever thou art that judgeſt; for wherein thou judgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelf, for thou that judgeſt, doſt the ſame things. He that paſſed the former Judgment, and Sentence againſt ſuch wicked practices, yet doth the ſame things. Now before he acts thus, there muſt firſt be a Sentence paſt, for the Underſtanding muſt aſſent to every Action of a man, and therefore now the other Judge, or part of the Underſtanding being corrupt, gives a Verdict clean contrary to the firſt, viz. that he may do thoſe things, which by his firſt Speculative Judgment he had condemned, and thinks he ſhall eſcape; Rom. 2. 3. And thinkeſt thou this, O man, that judgeſt them which do ſuch things, and doeſt the ſame, that thou ſhalt eſcape the Judgment of God? So that by reaſon of theſe two ſeveral Judges in a man, he condemns himſelf in what he formerly allowed; Rom. 14. 22. Haſt thou Faith? have it to thy ſelf before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himſelf in that thing which he alloweth. But now in a Regenerate man here is the difference, that both theſe Judges are enlighten'd, and inform'd, and go one and the ſame way in their Sentence; and an Act paſſeth againſt every Act of Sin, and for the performance of every known Duty in both Courts; and ſo this man is affected, and ſtirr'd, and hath the knowledge in him active, and working, which the other hath not. Tho' often in an Unregenerate man the Judge of the Practical Court may paſs a Sentence to forbear a Sin, or to do a good Duty, yet it is extorted by the Clamor, and Importunity of the Conſcience, which is the Judge of the other Court. As the unjuſt Judge did the poor Widdow Right in her Cauſe, and pronounced Sentence in her favour, being moved by her Importunity, tho' otherwiſe he cared not for Right or Wrong; Luk. 18. 4, 5. And he would not for a while; but afterward he ſaid within himſelf, Though I fear not God, nor regard man, yet becauſe this Widdow troubleth me, I will avenge her, leſt by her continual coming, ſhe weary me.

Chap. 7.

But tho' there be much uſe of this diſtinction, yet this is not all the difference between one, and the other. There are indeed two ſuch diſtinct Acts, and Offices of Man's Underſtanding, tho' it is all but one Faculty, inſomuch as many who know things ſpeculatively, know them not practically at all, as many Scholars. They are like Phyſicians, who know by the Rules of Phyſick, that ſuch Meat is ill, and unwholeſom, and yet will follow the Rule of Pleaſure, and eat it, if delicious, tho' hurtful to the health: So that indeed to have the mind, and underſtanding practically enlightened, is a new, and diſtinct work of the Holy Ghoſt, which all have not, who yet have much knowledge. But yet this is not all the difference between the Knowledge of a Regenerate, and Unregenerate man.

1. Becauſe even Unregenerate men have their underſtandings practically wrought on by ſpiritual things, i.e. they have a working Light, an affecting Knowledge ſet up in them, to cauſe them to do much, as well as to know much; 2 Pet. 2. 20. For if after they have eſcaped the pollutions of the World through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, they are again intangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worſe with them than the beginning. and Heb. 6. 4, 5, 6. For it is impoſſible for thoſe who were once enlightened, and have taſted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt; And have taſted the good Word of God, and the Powers of the World to come; If they ſhall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance, ſeeing they crucifie to themſelves the Son of God afreſh, and put him to an open ſhame. They are ſaid to be enlightened, and to taſt, i. e. with ſuch a knowledge, as lets in a taſt of the Powers of the World to come; tho' this be a diſtinct, and further work than barely to teach men to know them.

2. Becauſe, if herein lay all the difference, then at leaſt one part of the underſtanding might be ſaid as fully to be ſanctified, in an Unregenerate, as a Regenerate man, ſeeing the Speculative Underſtanding in both the ſtates, hath but the ſame Light, the difference being only in the practical; whereas the Apoſtle prays here, in 1 Theſ. 5. 3. that the whole Spirit be ſanctified.

CHAP. VIII.

That there is a vaſt difference between the Knowledge of a Man Unregenerate, and that which a holy Soul hath of Spiritual things. It is demonſtrated, and the Cauſes of it aſſigned.

WE muſt ſearch out ſome greater, and more diſtinguiſhing difference between the knowledge which unregenerate men have of ſpiritual things, and that of the regenerate, than any before mentioned. We muſt find out ſuch a difference as may make it appear, that tho' an unregenerate man know never ſo much, whether ſpeculatively, or practically, yet there is a knowledge of both theſe ſorts in one ſanctifyingly enlightened, which he utterly wants. We muſt enquire out, that there is a difference even in their ſpeculation of ſpiritual things, as well as in the working, or practical knowledge, and that a new habit, and principle of Regeneration muſt be infus'd into our underſtandings to produce true knowledge in both kinds.

1. As to the Speculative Knowledge, that there is a difference, I demonſtrate thus, and withal aſſign the cauſes of it. Where there is a different repreſentation of the thing to be known, there is a different knowledge of that thing. For example, if a man be repreſented to us but in his Picture, tho' never ſo lively; or if we have a deſcription of his good Conditions but by hear-ſay only, it is a faint dead knowledge, and vaſtly different from what we have, when we behold, and are acquainted with the man himſelf, as we all ſee by experience: And there is a plain Reaſon of it; for the cauſe by which we come to have the knowledge of things is this, that there is a likeneſs, a ſimilitude, a reſemblance, and image of the thing which we know brought to our minds, and imprinted there; as it is thus in ſeeing things, ſo in knowing too. Now therefore, as thoſe reſemblances, ſpecies, and ſhapes of things form'd, and drawn in our minds do differ, ſo muſt our knowledge alſo. But the image, or reſemblance of the man, which my mind takes of him, when I ſee himſelf. and am acquainted with him, is of another kind from that which my mind took of him, when I ſaw but his Picture, or heard him deſcribed by another, the one being called ſpecies propria, his own proper Repreſentation, the other ſpecies aliena, a forreign and borrowed one. To apply this then to the purpoſe in hand, ſuch and ſo great a difference is there between a regenerate man's knowing, and viewing ſpiritual things, and an unregenerate man's knowing them, tho' he be never ſo much enlighten'd, for the images, the likeneſſes, the reſemblances, the repreſentations of them do differ in this manner before ſaid: For the Idea's or Images, which in a regenerate man's underſtanding be form'd, and faſhion'd, are taken, and begotten from the preſence, real repreſentation, and ſenſe of the things themſelves as really, truly in their native proper being, and ſpiritual hue, and ſhape preſented to them, as things bodily are to the eyes of your bodies, which they are not to any unregenerate man in the World, but the moſt enlighten'd among them, have them only by hear-ſay, or by ſome exact Picture drawn of them. So God in his Holineſs and Purity was at firſt known to Job only, by what he had heard of it, but afterward by his own ſight; Job 42. 5. I have heard of thee by the hearing of the Ear; but now mine Eye ſeeth thee. It was not a knowledge engendred barely by hear-ſay, but by God's revealing his Face, and the Beauty of his Holineſs to him, which humbled him. God alſo in his fatherly Love and Kindneſs in Chriſt is only thus known; John 6. 45, 46. It is written in the Prophets, and they ſhall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me. Not that any man hath ſeen the Father, ſave he which is of God, he hath ſeen the Father. No man hath ſeen the Father, but he who is of God, i. e. who is regenerate, and taught by him. And ſuch a real repreſentation of thoſe deep thoughts of God in pardoning as a Father, thoſe Bowels of Mercy hanging out in him a natural man never ſaw, as the regenerate do. Thus alſo Jeſus Chriſt, and his Righteouſneſs, which is his Glory, are repreſented in a real true manner to a Believer; 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all with open face, beholding as in a glaſs the glory of the Lord, are changed into the ſame Image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. It is beholding as in a glaſs the Glory of the Lord, not in a repreſentation taken from a bare Picture, but a real Image of the Perſon, as that in a Glaſs is, and which repreſents his Glory in that manner, as no Picture can deſcribe it. So that he is ſaid to reveal himſelf to a man, John 14. 21. He that hath my Commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me ſhall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifeſt my ſelf to him. And he is alſo ſaid to dwell in our hearts by Faith; Eph. 3. 17, 18, 19. That Chriſt may dwell in your hearts by Faith, that ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all Saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height. And to know the Love of Chriſt, which paſſeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulneſs of God. By this means we are truly acquainted with him, and have real Communion with him, as a man hath with his Friend. And as to the work of Grace, a Regenerate man knows it not only by hear-ſay; as you ſee the Picture of an Herb in ſome Herbal, but he beholds Grace growing in the Garden of his own heart. Thus Chriſt ſpeaking of Grace, and Regeneration, in John 3. expreſſeth himſelf; John 3. 11. Verily verily I ſay unto thee, we ſpeak that we do know, and teſtifie that we have ſeen, and ye receive not our witneſs. We teſtifie (ſays he) what we know, and have ſeen, whereas Temporaries ſee but the counterfeit of theſe things in their hearts: They have but a Form of Godlineſs, not the Power; 2 Tim. 3. 5. and therefore know not what the real thing means, and therefore their apprehenſions of it muſt needs be differing, from thoſe of a Believer, who ſees, and feels it in himſelf. Now if you would know the reaſon of this difference in the productive Cauſes:

Chap. 8.

1. A Regenerate man hath the Spirit of God dwelling in him, which a man Unregenerate hath not: That Spirit to whom all things are continually preſent, tho' abſent from us, and therefore he dwelling in the man, can ſet thoſe things before him. He who calls things, that are not, as if they were, can alſo preſent to us things abſent, and repreſent them as they are. Nor can he only do this, but alſo open our Eyes, and put a principle into us, to behold thoſe things, which he placeth bare, and naked to our ſight. This is an

Book III.

Art peculiar to himſelf, which no Angel, nor Creature can imitate. The Devil indeed ſhewed Chriſt the Glory of the World, and phancy in men aſleep paints out things to them, but ſtill they repreſent not the things themſelves, but only the Pictures of them; but now the Spirit of God reveals the Glory of Chriſt as in a Glaſs, 2 Cor. 3. 18. Beholding as in a Glaſs (ſays he) the Glory of the Lord. And it is by the Spirit of the Lord this is done; for it follows, As by the Spirit of the Lord. And ſo God is ſaid to reveal theſe things by his Spirit; 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10, 11, 12. But as it is written, Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, neither have entred into the Heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by by his Spirit, for the Spirit ſearcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man, ſave the Spirit of man which is in him? even ſo the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received, not the ſpirit of the World, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. The things God hath prepared, Juſtification, Adoption, Sanctification, Glory; all theſe are prepared from everlaſting, which things Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, nor have they entred into the Heart of a man, that is, a natural man, for he oppoſeth him to US who Love him. Now his meaning then is, that there is ſuch a Revelation, ſuch a Species, Form, and Image of theſe things in their minds, (who Love God, and have them revealed by his Spirit) as their Eyes never ſaw, nor ever came into their minds, who are natural men. That is, the Species propriæ, the true proper Images of the things they never received, however, they may have them from other mens reports. Their Eyes may ſee them, as ſo deſcribed, and their Ears hear them, as ſo reported, and they may ſee them too by the Pictures drawn by the Holy Ghoſt, and repreſented by him in the Word of God; for the Holy Ghoſt in ſo doing (as in enlightening of Temporaries) deceives them not, as a Painter doth not, who draws the true Picture of a man; yet ſtill the Spiritual, Living, and Real manner of preſenting theſe things to the mind the Holy Ghoſt vouchſafes to none, but unto thoſe, who Love God, and ſo are Regenerate, it is to them, and them only this favour is conferred. Theſe things, as to this manner of diſcovering them, are hid from the wiſe, and prudent of the World, and revealed only to Babes, for to them only it pleaſeth the Spirit of God to manifeſt to them; Mat. 11. 25, 26. At that time Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto Babes. Even ſo Father, for ſo it ſeemed good in thy ſight.

2. A Regenerate man hath a new Principle of Faith infuſed into him, which one Unregenerate wants, and by this Faith he hath a ſight of ſpiritual things, which the other hath not. It is the Light of this Faith, which, as it gives ſubſiſtence to things hoped for, Heb. 11. 1. ſo it elevates, and helps out our ſight to ſee things, which are otherwiſe inviſible; which Principle the Unregenerate wanting, fall ſhort in the ſight of them: They wanting this new Eye, cannot receive the real repreſentation of them, as a ſore Eye cannot bear to behold the Sun in its glory. It is therefore made a difference between Believers, and others, that they are able to behold with open face the Glory of the Lord, which others cannot; 2 Cor. 3. 18. And to the ſame purpoſe Chriſt ſpeaks, when he ſays that the World cannot receive the Spirit; John 14. 17. Even the Spirit of Truth, whom the World cannot receive, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you. He means as to the buſineſs of Knowledge; The World (ſays he) cannot receive him, for it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him, nor theſe his effects, nor real repreſentations of ſpiritual things.

From what hath been diſcourſed we may make theſe Deductions, or Inferences.

1. Then Unregenerate men may truly be ſaid to want the real knowledge of ſpiritual things, and to want even that true ſpeculative, or knowing knowledge, which is to be had of them. For knowledge of a thing by hear-ſay, or by the Picture of it, beſide that it is often ſubject to Errour, and Miſconceit, ſince the likeneſs which our minds frame to themſelves from ſuch repreſenta-

tions proves other, than the thing it ſelf is indeed, and in truth, when we come to ſee it; and hence there are ſuch miſconceits, and miſtakings of the work of Grace in Unregenerate mens minds: But I ſay, beſides this, if we could ſuppoſe the conceptions, and thoughts anſwerable to the deſcription given, or the Picture drawn, yet this knowledge compared with that which a man hath, when he ſeeth the thing it ſelf may be ſaid to be no knowledge. In ordinary ſpeech no man ſaith he knows a man, when he hath but heard of him, and hath not ſeen him, nor is acquainted with him; ſo nor can they be ſaid to know ſpiritual things, who have ſeen but the Pictures, or deſcriptions of them: For they do not know them ſpiritually, (as the Apoſtle ſays, 1 Cor. 2. 14.) that is, in a manner anſwerable to their natures, and as they are to be known, that is, in their native colour, and hue, and proper likeneſs, ſo as to form ſuch conceits in our minds of them, as are homogeneal, and proportioned to the things. Chap. 8.

2. Hence it alſo appears, that there is ſomething known by a Godly man concerning ſpiritual things, which is not, nor can be known by any other, nor yet can be expreſſed by himſelf to another. And the Reaſon of it is evident; for let a man ſee the livelieſt Picture that is, and the beſt deſcription, and afterward ſee the man ſo pictur'd, or deſcrib'd, he then ſeeth ſomething, which he ſaw not before, and ſomething too, which could not be pictured nor expreſſed. So that there is a difference, for ſomething remains unknown in the thing, which cannot be drawn in the Picture; as ſomething there is in Fire, which cannot be painted, viz. the Heat; ſomething in the Sun, which cannot be delineated, viz. the Light, and Glory of it, which no Colours are bright enough to reſemble; ſomething there is in Man, which can be repreſented in no Picture, viz. his Soul, and Life; nay, ſomething in his Countenance cannot be drawn, viz. ſome peculiar lively Features; ſo that ſtill there is ſomething wanting in the Picture, which is ſupplied by the ſight of the thing. Now then anſwerably there is ſomething in God, and Chriſt, and in the work of Grace, which all the expreſſions of the Tongues of Men, and Angels, all openings of Scripture do not, and cannot make known, unleſs the Spirit ſtrike in with his Art, and uſe all theſe as Glaſſes to repreſent the things to you, as he doth to the Saints. The native glory of them goes beyond expreſſions, which all fall ſhort of the Life: And yet a man, who hath ſeen the things, can but uſe the like expreſſions, if he would go about to deſcribe them (which expreſſions, one who hath not ſeen the things, may uſe as well as he) but yet he knows more than he can expreſs. Now therefore, if it be asked (as often it is) Is there ſo great a difference between one knowledge, and the other? why! then expreſs it to us, let us hear diſtinctly what it is; what is it you ſee, which we do not? what have you apprehenſions of, which we are not able to conceive, as well as you? To this what anſwer can a Regenerate man make, for he ſeeth what cannot be painted, or deſcribed, and therefore to make it known to the other man, he muſt lend him his Eyes, for nothing elſe will be able to make him ſee it. As for example, there are two talking about a Country, whereof the one hath ſeen a Map of it, knows its ſcituation, faſhion of things, cuſtoms, &c. or hath heard all theſe deſcribed as fully, as can be expreſſed; the other hath travelled through the Country, and ſeen all its Cities, Cuſtoms, and Faſhions with his own Eyes: If he that never travelled, ſhould ſay, what is it you know which I know not? the Traveller is able to expreſs nothing to him, which he hath not heard, and is able to relate, but yet that Traveller is very well aſſured that there is a great deal of difference between his knowledge, and what the other hath, and that he knows ſomething which the other doth not, nor can know, unleſs he went into the Country, as he hath done. Thus alſo a man hath heard a Leſſon in Muſick, which he may prick out to another, with all the grounds of it, but yet unleſs he hath heard the Tune ſung, which another man hath, there is ſomething of which he is ignorant about the Muſick of it, which that other man knows, which yet he cannot expreſs to him. Thus likewiſe in ſpiritual matters there is a new Name given, which none knows, but he who receives it; Rev. 2. 18. that is, there is ſomething in it, which he cannot expreſs to another, another, for if he could, then that other might know it as well as he. And thus too when the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15. ſpeaks of this differing knowledge, the Spiritual man (ſays he) diſcerneth all things, and is diſcerned of none, that is, what he knows none can enter into the ſecret of. He knows all, that others can, but what he knows further, they cannot, nor can he expreſs.

3. Hence it comes to paſs, that the knowledge which a Godly man hath of Spiritual things is an evident, infallible, ſatisfying knowledge, but it is not ſo in others.

1. It is evident, becauſe he ſees the things themſelves, which leave a true living likeneſs of themſelves in the mind. Faith therefore being the ſubſiſtence of things hoped for, is alſo the evidence of things not ſeen, Heb. 11. 1. The ſight then of a real true thing leaves an evidence behind it that it is true. Chriſt having a real true body appeals to the Judgment of the ſenſes to teſtifie that it was ſo. What tho' a mans Eye may be deceiv'd by Apparitions, and in Dreams things are ſo livelily painted out in our Phanſies, that men think they ſee, and hear, and eat? yet this prejudiceth not, but that a man, who Eats true Meat, knows infallibly he is not deceived. Sure I am, ſays the man born blind (when his Eyes were open'd ; John 9. 25. that whereas I was blind, now I ſee. Other men may think Spiritual things to be true, becauſe of their fine and exact coherence, and the whole ſyſtem of them is ſo fair a Story, but a Godly man knows them to be true, and gives a certain infallible aſſent to the Story, whereof he is an Eye-witneſs, for he ſees the things done, and acted in his own heart, 1 John 5. 20. And we know the Son of God is come, and hath given us an underſtanding, that we may know him that is true: and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jeſus Chriſt. This is the true God, and eternal life. 1 John 2. 3, 4. And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that ſaith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. And you have (ſays the Apoſtle) Chriſt crucified before your Eyes, Gal. 3. 1.

2. It is a ſatisfying knowledge. When a man ſees but Pictures of things, or but by hearſay, the mind is not ſatisfied, but deſires to ſee further, as the Queen of Sheba did, when ſhe heard of Solomons Wiſdom, 1 Kings 10. 1, 6, 7. one who hath ſeen but the Pictures of Anatomy is not contented till he ſees a real Body cut up. One who ſees a Country deſcrib'd, is not ſatisfied in his knowledge, till he hath travailed through it When a man ſees the things, then, and not till then doth his mind reſt ſatisfied. Tho' he may deſire indeed to ſee more about them, yet he is ſatisfied, that this is the true thing it ſelf, which he ſees, and knows, he is aſſured that Grace can be no other thing, than what he ſees, and feels it to be. And tho' he may come to have greater degrees of knowledge, and to ſee more into it, yet ſtill he ſhall find it to be no other thing, than what at preſent he apprehends it to be. So then he ſeeth into the fartheſt end, and meaning of the word of truth, which another doth not, 2 Cor. 3. 13. And not as Moſes, which put a Vail over his Face, that the Children of Iſrael could not ſtedfaſtly look to the end of that which is aboliſhed.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

The uses of the Doctrine. We by this see how Malignant an evil sin is, which infects the whole man, and how great a work Regeneration is, which cures and restores a Soul so totally deprav'd, that it deeply concerns us to search into our Hearts, that we may know the evil which is in us.

WE have seen that the whole nature of man is depraved by sin, and that the direful contagion hath not only fallen on the Lower Animal faculties, but hath ascended to the higher, the Mind, and Understanding. Now the uses, and practical improvement we may make, are these.

Use 1. Is all, and every part in man corrupted? This gives us a sad discovery how great an evil sin is. You account that a very malignant disea e, which reacheth but to one Member, if it spoils it, or makes it useless, if it Lames but a Joint, or takes away an Eye; how much greater, and more dangerous is this Spiritual Disease, which extends it self to all that is in man, and vitiates his whole nature? It is therefore compared to such Bodily Diseases, which spread over all the parts, to a Leprosie, (for by that it was typified in the Ceremonial Law) that goes over all the body. You account that a poysonous Creature, and loath it, which hath Poyson but in one part, As Serpents have it only in their Stings, and Vipers in their Teeth, so as when they are taken out, the rest is not Poysonous. But this Poyson of sin hath soakt all, and peirced thro' every part of us. It is in our Souls, as the Soul is in the Body, as it were tota in toto, & tota in qualibet parte, the whole of Sin is in the whole Soul, and in every part too. If we look but to one part, the Tongue, James says of it, there is a World of evil in that little Member, James 3. 5, 6. Even so the Tongue is a little Member, and boasteth great things. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth. And the Tongue is a Fire, a World of Iniquity: so is the Tongue amongst our Members, that it defileth the whole Body, and setteth on Fire the course of nature; and it is set on Fire of Hell. How many Worlds hast thou then in thy whole man, which tho' in it self is but a little World, yet contains in it many Worlds of Sin? If thy Tongue hath in it so much evil, what hath thy Will, thy Understanding, thy Desires? These are more active than that little part of thine, tho' it be so moveable. They never lye still, but are always working. They have more distempers in them, than are in all the parts of thy Body, which according to Physitians reckoning, amount to so vast a number. If there are (as they say) three hundred several Diseases incident to the Eye, there are more in the Eye of thy Soul. Look inward then, and sagaciously search out all those noysom Distempers, which are in all thy faculties, and loath thy self at the sight of them.

Use 2. If the whole Soul be infected with such a desperate Disease, what a great, and difficult work is it to regenerate, to restore men again to Spiritual Life, and Vigor, when every part of them is seized by such a Mortal Distemper? How great a cure doth the Spirit of God effect in restoring a Soul by Sanctifying it? To heal but the Lungs, or the Liver, if corrupted, is counted a great cure; tho' perform'd but upon one part of thee; but all thy inward parts are very rottenness, Psal. 5. 9. For there is no faithfulness in their mouth, their inward part is very wickedness; their Throat is an open Sepulchre, they flatter with their Tongue. How great a cure is it then to heal thee? such as is only in the skill and Power of God to do. And the Universal Medicine he makes use of is the Gospel, by which all the Diseases of the Soul are heal'd; the Blind, the Lame, the Deaf, and all other are restored by receiving the Gospel, Mat. 11. 5. The Blind receive Book III. receive their ſight, and the Lame walk, the Lepers are cleanſed, and the Deaf hear, the Dead are raiſed up, and the Poor have the Goſpel Preached to them.

Uſe 3. Be you all exhorted to ſearch into your own Hearts, and make it your moſt inquiſitive ſtudy to know the variety of corruptions, which are in them.

This is an Uſe as proper to this Doctrine, as any other, and this I premiſe to all that is to follow in the diſcovery of the corruption of our nature, that in all the reſt of the particulars you may have this uſe in your eye. And indeed that you may know what is in Man, and ſo have an exact knowledge of your ſelves, is the Principal deſign for which I fixed on this Subject, and therefore in all that I ſhall ſay in the proſecuting it, I deſire you to keep this uſe in your ſight, and to ſearch ſtill into your hearts, as any particular corruption is diſcovered, to find whether it be in you, or not. I thought beſt to premiſe ere I go any farther, and the rather do I ſet you on work thus beforehand with ſome general directions how to enquire into your hearts, that having firſt tryed what work you can make of it your ſelves, you may be better able to underſtand the diſcoveries of particular defilements, which hereafter I ſhall make, you having firſt taken a view of ſuch particulars in your own hearts, which will make them good, and evidence the truth of them to you. And here it may be truly ſaid, that of all diſcourſes, and diſcoveries, they are the moſt difficult, which are concerning the inward workings of Grace, and ſin. As no Study is more hard, than Anatomy which diſcourſeth of the parts of Mans Body, unleſs a Man hath ſeen firſt ſome Body cut up, and then none is more eaſie, certain, and evident; ſo alſo it is in an Anatomy Lecture of the ſoul, and heart, and therefore the figures I ſhall draw and cut of the underſtanding, will, and affections in the following diſcourſe, will be difficult to underſtand, unleſs you withal, as I ſhall go along, Look inward, to ſee in your own hearts thoſe ſeveral parts of corruption, which the pictures tho ne're ſo well drawn, will otherwiſe but darkly repreſent. To do thus will perhaps be a work very difficult to ſome, who never yet were acquainted with themſelves, who have had their eyes turned outwards all their lives, and never turned them inward to look into their hearts. I remember Julius Scaliger hath a ſaying, that there be two things in Philoſophy, which do conceal, and hide themſelves from mans underſtanding, Ens primum, & Materia prima. The firſt being, or God, and the firſt matter of all things, or that Chaos, and confuſed heap, Gen. 1. 1. out of which all things were made. The one is incomprehenſible, propter ſummam ſuam perfectionem, by reaſon of his Infinite Perfection, the other is unperceptible, propter ſummam ſuam Imperfectionem, becauſe of its greateſt imperfection. This is true in Divinity alſo, and as to our preſent purpoſe, that God, and a man's heart, are things moſt unſearchable; God, becauſe of the Infinite Purity, that is in him; Rom. 11. 33. O the depth of the riches both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his Judgments, and his Ways paſt finding out? How little in portion is heard of him? ſays Job; Job 26. 14. Lo, theſe are parts of his Ways, but how little a portion is heard of him? but the Thunder of his Power who can underſtand? And the heart is unſearchable, becauſe it is a vaſt deep Chaos of all confuſion, and diſorder, and hath bundles, Prov. 22. 15. yea worlds of folly in it; Jer. 17. 9. The heart is deceitful above all things, and deſperately wicked, who can know it? None but God that made it, who is greater than our hearts, and yet he hath appointed means, whereby we may be helped to know, and ſearch them; which I ſhall now enumerate.

1. God hath put a Light of Conſcience within you, which tho' it is in every man by nature, yet it is a Candle ſet up, and lighted at the Sun, which enlightens every man that comes into the World; John 1. 9. compared with Prov. 20. 27. The Spirit of Man is the Candle of the Lord, ſearching all the inward parts of the belly. The Chambers of the belly ſome read it. So that as in a man's body, when cut up, you find ſeveral Rooms prepared, for the various Animal Offices, Vital, Natural, &c. as in Anatomy we ſee, and theſe diſtinguiſh'd by ſeveral partitions, as the Midriff, the Diaphragme, &c. Thus is it alſo in the Soul of man, where there are Spirit, Soul, Underſtanding, Will, Affections, &c.

as ſo many ſeveral Chambers. Now that Light of Conſcience God hath placed in theſe dark Rooms, to manifeſt all that is in them; and tho' he hath fram'd your Bodies ſo, as there is not a Caſement made to ſee through it what Entrails, and inward Parts a man hath, yet he hath made one for the Soul; 1 Cor. 2. 11. For what man knoweth the things of a man, ſave the Spirit of Man, which is in him? Chap. 9.

2. Becauſe this Light of Natural Conſcience is very dim, and by it you can diſcern but very little of what is in your hearts, therefore God alſo hath given you his Word, which is a quicker diſcerner of the thoughts, and intents of the heart; Heb. 4. 12. For the Word of God is quick, and powerful, and ſharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joynts and Marrow, and is a diſcerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. It divides between Soul, and Spirit, and cuts the heart open ſo, as to make a nice, and accurate diſſection, and ſhews every thing that is in it, and all that is done there. 'Tis the moſt ſharp Anatomizing Knife, which can be us'd, as 'tis compared in Heb. 4. 12. It hath the Key of Knowledge, as Chriſt calls it, ἡ κλεῖδα τῆς γνώσεως, and the Lock for which it is made, is man's heart, of which the ſeveral faculties are the Wards. And as it open'd Lydia's heart, it opens all ours, and diſcovers what is within; as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of Propheſying, that it hath ſuch an effect; 1 Cor. 14. 24, 25. But if all propheſie, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all: And thus are the ſecrets of his heart made manifeſt; and ſo falling down on his face, he will worſhip God, and report that God is in you of a truth.

3 Becauſe Natural Conſcience enlightened by the Word is not enough, therefore God farther renews in his Children the Spirit of their Minds; Eph. 4. 23. as to put off, ſo to diſcern the corruptions of the Old Man, which are in him through luſts. The ſpiritual corruptions whereof, which are eſſentially contrary to the ſpiritual workings of Grace, are not, nor can be diſcerned by any other Eye, than one ſo renewed. It is the Spiritual Man which diſcerneth all things; 1 Cor. 2. 15. Conſcience indeed diſcerns the groſs defilements of the Soul; but it ſelf being defiled, Titus 1. 16. and muddied like muddy water, you cannot ſee your face diſtinctly in it, ſo as to deſcry the leſs perceivable blemiſhes.

4. Becauſe this renewed Spirit alſo is but imperfect, and therefore dimſighted, and indeed the Light of Conſcience, and of the Word, and of the ſanctified Soul too, all put together, of themſelves can do little, or nothing, without the Light of God's Spirit, therefore God hath appointed his own Spirit to be in us, to ſearch our hearts, Jer. 17. 10. I the Lord ſearch the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings. And for this reaſon David, when he had done all that he could, calls upon God to try, and ſearch him. And when the Light of this Spirit enters in but at a cranny of the Soul, it manifeſts thoſe defilements in it, which before were unſeen; as the Sun Beams ſhining into a dark Room, ſhew thoſe little duſts, or motes in the Air, which were undiſcerned; nay, the Chairs, and Stools in it could hardly be ſeen before.

Now having all theſe helps, ſet upon the ſearch of your Hearts, and Spirits. Though they be deſperately wicked, and every part corrupted, even the Spirit it ſelf, which ſhould diſcern, and paſs Judgment on things, yet you have ſuperiour Aids, whereby you may be ſufficiently aſſiſted. Keep your Hearts, and Conſciences pure from groſs defilements, elſe it will be impoſſible to find out ſpiritual corruptions, of the Spirit, and Judgment, into which yet we are firſt, and chiefly to enquire. If a Looking-glaſs be dirty, little can be ſeen in it, but if it be rubbed clean, and kept clear, we may diſcern the leaſt ſpots. Make further uſe of the Light of the Word to diſcover what is in you. The Apoſtle Paul, tho' he could not but diſcern Groſſer Luſts, Senſual Luſts in him, by the Light of Nature, yet by that help alone he could not perceive thoſe which were ſpiritual, till the Spiritual Light of the Law came, and manifeſted them, and he ſaw not how all Concupiſcence was in him till then; Rom. 7. 7, 8, 9. What ſhall we ſay then? Is the Law ſin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known ſin, but by the Law: for I had not known Luſt, except the Law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not covet. But ſin taking occaſion by the Commandment, wrought in me all manner of Concupiſcence. For without the Law ſin was dead. For I was a live without the Law once; but when the Commandment came, ſin revived, and I died. Grow in Grace, and increaſe in the Light of it, and be ſure to keep that quick-ſighted. If you do not grow in Grace, you will not be able to ſee perfectly, and clearly, 2 Pet. 1. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. But a man increaſing in Grace, and walking in the Spirit, will be able to ſee the leaſt Mote of ſin that flies up and down in his Heart, which another Man, tho' regenerate, yet if he arrive not to ſuch a growth, and Spiritual walking, will not ſee. Pray for the Spirit of God alſo to help you. Becauſe Laodicea was deceived in the Knowledge of her Heart, and State, ſhe is counſelled to take Eye Salve, and to anoint her Eyes with it, Rev. 3. 17, 18. Becauſe thou ſayeſt, I am rich, and increaſed with Goods, and have need of nothing; and knoweſt not that thou art wretched, and miſerable, and poor, and blind, and naked. I counſel thee to buy of me Gold tried in the Fire, that thou mayeſt be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayeſt be clothed, and that the ſhame of thy nakedneſs do not appear; and anoint thine Eyes with Eye-ſalve, that thou mayeſt ſee. When Job was ſenſible that he knew not all of himſelf, which he ought, he goes to God to inſtruct him, Job 34. 32. That which I ſee not, teach thou me; if I have done Iniquity, I will do no more. And laſt of all be diligent, and conſtant in this exerciſe of ſearching your Hearts, the more you exerciſe your Eyes, the quicker they will be in ſeeing. Uſe Light, and have Light. Exerciſing of the Spiritual ſenſes produceth an Habit of diſcerning Good and Evil, Heb. 5. 14. But ſtrong Meat belongeth to them that are of full Age, even thoſe who by reaſon of uſe have their ſenſes exerciſed to diſcern both good and evil.

But further to inſtruct you in this duty, and art, I will ſhew what it is to ſearch the Heart, and teach the skill of cutting it open, and rightly Anatomizing it, and what in every faculty is eſpecially to be ſearched for. The true ſearching of the Heart I thus define. It is a reflex Act of the Mind, and Conſcience renewed, whereby a man, aſſiſted by the Light of the Word and Spirit, doth diſcern, and judge of the Spiritual Good and Evil, that is in his Heart, and in every faculty of it, both ſeverally, and jointly together.

1. It is a reflex Act of the Mind, wherein the mind looks inward, and comes home to it ſelf. For in the direct Acts of the Mind, a Man is carried out to things without himſelf, but this calls in his thoughts to view his own Soul. And this is one of the chiefeſt excellencies of the reaſonable Creature, wherein it doth ſo much tranſcend Beaſts, that it is able to turn its Eyes inward, and judge of its own thoughts, and deſires, what they are, and to what they tend. This I ſay is proper only to Man, and Angels, 1 Cor. 2. 11. who knows the things of a Man? the Spirit of a Man doth this, but not that which is in Beaſts. This of all Acts is alſo the nobleſt, and in the exerciſe of it conſiſts Mans Honour, and Wiſdom. As in Mathematicks a Circular Figure is better, and ſtronger, than any other, becauſe it returns into it ſelf, ſo that every part bears up another, ſo reflex thoughts returning in upon our ſelves are Wiſer, Stronger, and Safer. In this too the Image of God much conſiſts (I mean that Image which is in the natural faculties of the Soul) that as God doth know himſelf, we alſo are able to know our ſelves.

2. I add [of the Mind renewed, and aſſiſted.] For tho every man hath this reflecting power in him ſince the fall, yet it is dimm'd, and weaken'd more, than other direct Acts, which yet are dimm enough, and therefore we know all other things better than our ſelves, and of all elſe we know leaſt what is done in our own boſoms. The Heathens therefore could ſay that γνῶθι σεαυτὸν, was of all other the hardeſt Leſſon. Man by ſin becoming like the Beaſt, which periſheth, hath loſt this ability, whereby he was chiefly diſtinguiſh'd from the Brutes, more than any other. When man had Gods Image of holineſs, he underſtood God, and himſelf, the beſt of any other, but now Alas! it is the leaſt part of his knowledge. You ſhall ſee a poor ſoul mean in abilities of Wit, or Accompliſhments of Learning, who is Ignorant in all things elſe, who knows not how the World goes, nor upon what wheels States turn; Who yet being renewed, and aſſiſted by the Spirit of God, knows more clearly, and experimentally his own heart, than all Learned men in the World do theirs, and knows more of grace and ſin in it: And Tho the other may better diſcourſe Philoſophically of the Acts of the Soul, and the dependance dance of them one on another, yet this poor man ſees more into the corruptions of it, than they all. Chap. 9.

3. I add, [Whereby a Man knows the Spiritual Good, or Evil, in the Heart] for that is the object to be ſearched into. It is not only what his thoughts, and purpoſes are for the matter of them, for ask any man, and he can tell you what he thinks at any time; but there is a farther thing to be look'd into, the Good, or Evil, the Frame, the Temper, the Inclination of all either to Sin, or to Godlineſs. We are to feel the pulſe of the heart, and to diſcern by its beating whether it be ſound, or diſeas'd, and with what particular diſtemper it is moſt affected. And herein lies the great and difficult work. Any mans pulſe tells him, that his heart beats, and he may feel whether the motion be Orderly, or Irregular, but it is a Phyſicians Skill to gueſs at the diſeaſe, and know the temper of the blood by it, and it is a Chriſtians Skill too to know and judge the like of his Soul, and Spirit. Now the Word when it ſearcheth the heart, reads not a Philoſophy Lecture upon it, but ſhews the Evils which are in it. It is not the nature of the heart ſimply, and the dependance of one faculty on another, but the wickedneſs and deceitfulneſs which God there points out to be known, Jer. 17. 9. 10.

4. I add [in every faculty,] For then thou ſeeſt thy ſins in their cauſes, when thou ſeeſt from whence every ſin hath its riſe in thee, from whence its firſt motion is, wherein its ſtrength lies, and how ſin carries things within thee: How it runs through thy underſtanding in deviſing, projecting and approving of it, through thy will in conſenting to it, through thy affections which are inflam'd with it, till at laſt it works in the members to execution. Then thou knoweſt how ſinful thy heart is, when thou ſeeſt how all the ſeveral wheels in it turn ſtill to Evil, and how one wheel moves another, ſo that thou ſinneſt with a joint concurrence Of them all to the wicked Action. And in all this it eſpecially concerns thee to ſearch out the pollution of thy ſpirit, of thy underſtanding, judgment, and will. How far they are guilty in the commiſſion of the ſin, which will ſerve to aggravate, or leſſen the ſin ſo much the more, as they are found to have a greater, or leſſer hand in it. For as the ſins of Princes are greater, than thoſe of other men, becauſe they are their rulers, ſo are the ſins of theſe ſuperior faculties of a higher guilt, becauſe it is their duty, and they are plac'd to guide the reſt. And it concerns thee the more to be ſtrictly inquiſitive into theſe ſins, becauſe of all other they moſt conceal themſelves, and as their operations are more ſtrong, ſo with leſs noiſe, as poiſon works more ſtrongly in the head, than the ſtomach, tho it be perceived more there than in the head. Enquire thou into the ſins of theſe Ring-leaders in thee; and as in caſe of Treaſon, the State, the Government enquires moſt after the Plotters, and Contrivers of it; ſo look thou not ſo much to the Members of the Body, and the Luſts which war in them, as unto that corrupted Judgment, and Will in thee that deviſed the means to ſatisfie thoſe Luſts, which fed them with thoughts and fancies, which were privy to the firſt Contrivance of the Treaſon, and gave way, and conſented to it. The Luſts which war in the Members are but Weapons, Inſtruments; Rom. 6. 19. You muſt therefore look to the Higher Powers of Sin in the Soul, to the Throne of Unrighteouſneſs there, whoſe Agents thoſe Luſts are.

If a man would rightly underſtand a State, or a Common-wealth, it is not enough to know, and view what Proclamations come out, what Decrees, and Orders are made, what Factions are in it, what Tranſactions of Affairs, what Armies raiſed, &c. for this all in a Kingdom know; but he who would be an exact States-man, muſt alſo know what paſſeth at Council-board, what the Conſults, and Deliberations are, what was the Deſign of ſuch Acts, and Proclamations, and to what End they were made; what Ends ſuch, or ſuch a Potent Faction hath, with what Colours they hide their ſecret Intentions, and into what Principles of State all may be reſolved: This is ſo to underſtand a State, as few do, and for want of this knowledge how amiſs do vulgar Capacities judge of Publick Actions. Thus alſo if you would underſtand the State of your Souls, you muſt diligently, and eſpecially mark what paſſeth at Council-board in the underſtanding, the ſight of which is enough to amaze us, if Book III. we ſaw but by what Deviliſh Principles, and Atheiſtical Conſultations, all is guided, and ſwayed, and into which our Actions may be reſolved, what moſt baſe, and filthy Ends rule us, and what petty, ſlight, fooliſh Motives we have, what ungodly Reaſonings, and Deliberations paſs through us, and how contrary to the Rules of Conſcience, which notes all, as God's ſworn Secretary, and how all is over-ruled by our corrupt Reaſonings, let Conſcience ſay what it will in oppoſition: I ſay, if we ſaw all this, it would amaze any of us; and this is that which I mainly intend to ſhew in the following Diſcourſe, when I ſhall come to particulars. This is indeed to ſearch a man's heart, and to know it, for the wickedneſs of it lies eſpecially in deceitfulneſs, and that deceitfulneſs conſiſts in the Jugling tricks of the Mind, which are leaſt diſcerned by us.

5. I add [in each of theſe Faculties apart.] For when the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Word's powerful ſearching the heart, how doth he expreſs it? As dividing between the Soul, and Spirit; Heb. 4. 12. For the Word of God is quick, and powerful, and ſharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joynts and Marrow, and is a diſcerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. The meaning of which phraſe I underſtand thus, that the Soul, and Spirit is divided, when we conſider them apart, and ſeverally, when we remark what evil is in the Spirit apart, and in the Soul apart, that is, in the Judgment, and Affections. They joyn in the Action, and the Influences which they have are intricately involved, and twiſted in every Act, which comes from us; but this is the way to untwiſt them; viz. to diſſever, and to view apart what a man's thoughts, reaſonings, motives, and deviſings are in ſuch a buſineſs, which thoughts, reaſonings, &c. the Apoſtle there calls the Marrow of the Action. Then after this view what the deſires, or fears, or inflammations of Paſſions are by which thou wert acted in the doing it, which are but the Bones of it, and are indeed but guided and acted by thoſe Ends, Reaſonings, and Concluſions, which the heart made. And accordingly (as you ſee) the Apoſtle inſtanceth only in the intents, and thoughts, which are Acts of the Underſtanding, and Will. And ſo at the Day of Judgment what is it God will bring to Light? not Paſſions ſo much, and Actions, (tho' theſe alſo ſhall be manifeſted) as the Counſels of the Heart; 1 Cor. 4. 5. Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkneſs, and will make manifeſt the counſels of the hearts: and then ſhall every man have praiſe of God. Paſſions are but the Veins, and Arteries, in which our Intentions, and Ends, as the Blood, and Spirits, do move, when the Mind, which is as the Heart it ſelf, hath by reaſoning, and agitating things in it ſelf, hatched, and forged thoſe Deſigns, and Ends, as the Real Heart doth Spirits by motion. Take an Affection, which you have ſtirr'd, and examine it, and you will find a reaſon of it, a meaning of it, and that there is ſome End acts it, and ſtirs in it. And it is the End alſo which makes an Action good, or bad; and as God is ſaid to look to the meaning of the Spirit in us, Rom. 8. 27. that is, to every ſigh, groan, and deſire; ſo alſo to the meaning of Fleſh in us, what our Carnal Ends, and Motives are; therefore we ſhould look moſt eſpecially to them.

Now as you are to divide thus between Soul, and Spirit, Thoughts, Intents, and Paſſions, and to view them apart, ſo you muſt alſo view them joyntly, and together in every Action, and conſider not only what Affections you have, which may deceive, but conſider withal what Thoughts, Conſiderations, Motives ever ſtirr'd them up, and mov'd in them, then you know the Heart aright. Do not ſimply look to your Thoughts, but ſee what Motives prevail with the Heart, and ſtir the Will, and Affections, and what Motives, or Suggeſtions put in by Conſcience, or the Word, lie as dead Drugs, and work not. This is to ſearch the Heart. So if thou mourneſt for Sin, ſearch the ſpring of thy Sorrow, and look what conſideration mov'd it in thee, and do ſo likewiſe in other thy Actions.

I do ſpeak this before you all, that all Deceit lies in this, either Men view their Hearts undivided in the groſs, and do not divide between Soul, and Spirit, or elſe they view them only apart, and not in that dependance, or at leaſt concurrence currence the one hath with the other. They look upon Good Affections as on Ezekiel's Wheels, and becauſe they turn outwardly to Good, they reſt in them, not ſeeing, nor ſo much as enquiring what Spirit moves within thoſe Wheels, what Motives, Intents, Conſiderations, act, and inform them. The truth is, the Heart is a Maze, or Labyrinth, and if you would find the way into all its windings, you muſt be guided by a Clue, or Thread drawn through them all. And when you view any Action, you muſt go through Underſtanding, Will, and Affections, and not only ſee, that they concur to it, but the manner of their concurrence; ſearch the Chambers of the Heart, not only one Room to ſee what is done there, and what Thoughts and Fancies are in the outward Room (which is a Room that all come into, both good, and bad) but from thence go into the Privy Chamber, and hear what Principles, Sayings, Dictates, Reaſonings you are guided by, what Reſolutions you fix on, what Aims you have. Then go down to the Affections, and view how they as Agents act their parts, and ſee all this time, how Conſcience is impriſoned as in a Dungeon, Rom. 1. 18. being with-held in unrighteouſneſs, while they act all in the dark; 1 Cor. 4. 5. Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will both bring to light the hidden things of darkneſs, and will make manifeſt the counſels of the hearts: and then ſhall every man have praiſe of God. He calls the counſels of the Heart, the hidden works of darkneſs, and whilſt Conſcience is thus impriſoned, it may call, and cry till it be hoarſe, but it ſhall not be heard. Chap. 10.

CHAP. X.

That the Errour of the Papiſts is by this Doctrine evinced, who place Sin only in the Lower Faculties of the Soul. That we ſhould be ſenſible of the Defects of our Minds, and if we have any Natural Endowments of Soul, we muſt praiſe, and thank God alone for them. We who have the Diſcoveries of the Goſpel, and a Spiritual Light to diſcern the things of it, ſhould much more bleſs God.

AS we have not only proved this Corruption to have over-ſpread the whole Soul, but in particular have demonſtrated that the Superiour Faculties are in a high degree infected, and have alſo ſhewn wherein the depravation of the Underſtanding conſiſts; let us now farther conſider what practical Inferences, and Uſes this Doctrine will afford us.

Uſe 1. We ſee then how great an Errour it is of the Papiſts, and ſome others, who aſſert that the higher parts of the Soul are not touch'd, nor tainted with ſin, but they thruſt it all down to the Inferiour, and to the Senſual Appetite. And they anſwerably interpret the Combat between the Fleſh, and Spirit, which is ſpoken of in Rom. 7. 23. and Gal. 5. 17. to be but the Rebellion of the Senſes, and Animal Appetite againſt Reaſon, the one of which (they ſay) is meant by Fleſh, the other by Spirit. And as thus they make the Conflict to be between Soul, and Body, they anſwerably place the whole, or greateſt part of Religion in bodily worſhip. All their Acts of Mortification are to keep under the Body, whilſt the Soul lies neglected, as not needing any Remedy, or Help. But we have not ſo learned Chriſt, nor ſo little know our ſelves, and therefore as we feel our Superiour Faculties depraved by ſin, we moſt of all are humbled for, and ſtrive againſt the Spiritual Corruptions of our Minds, ſuch as Ignorance, Unbelief, Atheiſm, Pride, Darkneſs of Apprehenſion, henſion, and Dulneſs of Heart, and Affections in the Ways, and Worſhip of God, and Hypocriſie, and baſe Selfiſh Ends, by which we find our ſelves apt to be ſwayed, and byaſſed in our beſt Actions; we find not only Senſual Luſts warring in our Members, but Atheiſm againſt the Knowledge of God, Darkneſs againſt Divine Light, and Unbelief againſt Faith. 'Tis true indeed, ſins of the Underſtanding are leaſt diſcernible, for the Law in our Members is more clamorous, and impetuous, and ſenſual things do more ſenſibly affect us, but yet the other ſins of the Mind, tho' more ſtilly, and with leſs noiſe, yet do more conſtantly aſſault us, and prevail. 'Tis true alſo of the Combat between Fleſh, and Spirit, that it is leſs ſenſible in the Superiour Faculties of the Soul, than in the Inferiour: Becauſe not only Grace, but the Light of Nature, and Conſcience, make reſiſtance againſt the Luſts of our Senſes, and Fleſhly Appetites, but Natural Conſcience doth not oppoſe the Spiritual Luſtings of the Mind: It doth not check Pride, Unbelief, Selfiſhneſs, &c. as it doth Drunkenneſs, Adultery, and other Luſts of the Fleſh. But yet it is in the Combat between Sin, and Grace in the Mind, and Underſtanding, and Will, that a Godly man's Courage, and Reſolution againſt Sin moſt ſhines, and his Victory over it ſhews moſt illuſtrious. And it is alſo for thoſe Spiritual Wickedneſſes in the Mind, that a Godly man is moſt humbled. And as he alſo profeſſeth, that it is not Bodily Worſhip, which can take away the Guilt of Sin, ſo neither can the keeping under, and torturing the Body only, caſt out the Power of Sin: You may pray, and cry your Eyes out, but Sin will not flow out with your Tears: You may faſt down all your Spirits, and Fleſh, and yet tho Bodily Luſts may hereby be lean, yet Pride, and Hypocriſie may grow the fatter. The Papiſts ſhew alſo their Corruption in this, that it is all their care, and buſineſs to keep People in Ignorance, and Darkneſs, and ſuch a practice is ſuitable to their Corrupt Principles, and Errours, which by this means they may maintain undiſcovered, as Darkneſs hides all things. But we who Love, and Teach the Truth, are alſo for Light, and ſo far are we from thinking Ignorance to be the Mother of Devotion, that we reckon it among the Daughters of Sin, and account Grace to be Spiritual Light in the Mind, as well as Holineſs in the Heart, and Affections. We open to the People the Treaſures of Divine Knowledge, and we exhort men to ſeek it, ſince without it the Heart cannot be good, as Solomon ſpeaks; Prov. 19. 2. Alſo, that the Soul be without Knowledge, it is not good; and he that haſteth with his feet, ſinneth.

Uſe 2. Let us be ſenſible of all thoſe before-mentioned defects, and imperfections of our Underſtandings. Haſt thou Parts, and Learning, and Knowledge in Natural, or Civil Affairs, or haſt thou Spiritual Gifts? Know whom to thank for them: The grew not out of thy corrupt Nature, which is too vile, and baſe a ſoil, to produce any thing that is good, but it is God, who out of his bounty, and riches of goodneſs hath endowed thee with them, and he holds the Candle to thee, whilſt thou readeſt, and underſtandeſt, for ſo the Mind of Man is called. Prov. 20. 27. The Spirit of Man is the Candle of the Lord, ſearching all the inward parts of the Belly. What doth Agur acknowledge with much humility, tho' he was a Teacher of others? Prov. 30. 2. Surely I am more Brutiſh than any Man, and have not the Underſtanding of a Man. I am Brutiſh ſince I was a Man (as ſome read it) and have not the underſtanding of a Man by Nature. It is God who inſpires a Nobler, Quicker Spirit into ſome, and from thence ariſeth the difference of Mens underſtandings; Job 32. 8. But there is a Spirit in Man: and the inſpiration of the Almighty giveth them underſtanding. Wiſdom goes neither by Greatneſs of Birth, nor the Advantages of Education, for Great Perſons may have Wiſe Men about them, to inform them, who yet are not able to inſtill into them Wiſdom, nor can make them Wiſe, Job. 11. 12. For vain Man would be Wiſe, though Man be Born like a wild Aſſes Colt. And a wild Aſſes Colt is the moſt indocible Creature of all other. Neither doth Wiſdom come merely by Age, and Experience, Job 32. 9. Great Men are not always Wiſe: neither do the Aged underſtand Judgment. There is a Spirit in Man, and an Inſpiration of the Almighty, which giveth him underſtanding. View but your own Pictures in Fools, and tell me what hath put the the difference between you and them. If you ſay a various Temper of Body, 'tis true indeed it hath a hand in it, but yet what fogg'd the Oil in them, which ſhould have afforded fuel to the Light of Mind, ſo that the Candle burns blew in them? What was it produced that cloudy temper in them? Was it not Adam's Sin? Why might it not have had the like effect on thee? It was God only that gave thee finer Blood, and Spirits, that the Light of thy Mind might burn more clear, and bright. And if you think Temper is the only cauſe of this difference, do but look on Nebuchadnezzar, a Great, and Wiſe King, and yet how ſoon is his Heart chang'd from a Mans to a Beaſts? Dan. 4. 16. Let his Heart be changed from Mans, and let a Beaſts Heart be given unto him, and let ſeven times paſs over him. And ſo he was driven from men, as not having reaſon enough to converſe with them. And what was his caſe, might be thine, for that which befalls one Man for Sin, might befall all by reaſon of the firſt Sin. But God was Graciouſly pleas'd not to deal thus with men, tho' he might juſtly have done ſo. And as tho' he might annihilate men for Sin, and take their Beings away, yet he doth not, no not in Hell: So neither doth he take away their Underſtandings, no, not from the Devils, for how then ſhould they be puniſh'd with the ſenſe of his Wrath? And yet that puniſhment, which is inflicted is a deſtruction of their well being, and therefore is call'd deſtruction, tho' the Being ſtill remains. So in this Life God deprives not Men of their Underſtandings, for how then ſhould they be Men? yet becauſe they want the goodneſs of Underſtanding, the holineſs of it, therefore they are often in Scripture ſaid to have no underſtanding, Iſa. 27. 11. When the Boughs thereof are withered, they ſhall be broken off: the Women come and ſet them on fire: for it is a People of no underſtanding: therefore he that made them will not have Mercy on them, and he that formed them will ſhew them no favour. Rom. 3. 11. There is none that underſtandeth, there is none that ſeeketh after God. Chap. 10.

In the mean time it is a great obligation, that lies on thoſe, who have parts, to employ them for God, who preſerves them, when ſin might have taken them utterly away. And this may humble men too, who are moſt proud of Knowledge, and are puffed up, when as it is not their own, but borrowed from God. Much of Mans Wit now depends upon the right tempering of the Duſt, with which he is cloathed, and ſo is but a Flower of the Graſs, which each man lays down in the Grave, for the compaſs of underſtanding with which men ſhall ariſe into the other World is from another account. And this ſhould alſo teach men to depend on God for their Knowledge, and Learning, and the increaſe of them, for alas they cannot ſecure to themſelves all their Wit, or Learning. The parts of their mind are as ſubject to decay, as the Beauties of the Face, and may be waſted, and loſt, as well as them, or their Eſtates; and indeed Men who preſume on them, or who uſe them not for God, we ſee ordinarily bereft of them, and prove Fools and Sots in the end, or at leaſt they die deſpiſed, and forgotten.

Uſe 3. Raiſe your hearts unto thankfulneſs to God by all theſe ſteps, which follow.

1. Bleſs God, that he hath brought thee to thoſe times, and places, where the Goſpel is Preach'd, and the great Truths of it are laid open, and made plain to thee. This is one Mercy, and a great one, for without ſuch a diſcovery thou couldſt never have found them out. God made tryal of the utmoſt mens Wits could do for ſome thouſands of years among the Gentiles, but they bewildred themſelves in their inventions, 1 Cor. 1. 21. For after that in the Wiſdom of God, the World by Wiſdom knew not God, it pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſs of Preaching to ſave them that believe. They had quite loſt themſelves in all their vain enquiries, and therefore (ſays the Apoſtle) after that in the Wiſdom of God, the World by Wiſdom knew not God, he ſet out the Goſpel to be Preach'd, to reveal, what they could not ſearch out. They had indeed ſome Knowledge of God, but yet even that was not their own, but a borrowed Wiſdom receiv'd from God. God indeed afforded them ſome light to grope after him, Act. 17. 27. That they ſhould ſeek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us. But they were were ſo far from knowing God by all this Wiſdom, that by their abuſe of it they were put farther off, and became vain in their imaginations, and did not glorifie God, as God, and ſo with all their wit they were but Fools, Rom. 1. 20, 21, 22. For the inviſible things of him from the Creation of the World are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal Power and Godhead; ſo that they are without excuſe: Becauſe that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their fooliſh Heart was darkened. Profeſſing themſelves to be Wiſe they became Fools: This would have been thy caſe, and thus it would have been alſo with thee, if God had not made the Light of his Goſpel to ſhine for thy better direction. It is then great goodneſs that God hath reveal'd himſelf ſo clearly, and fully to men in his Word, and 'tis a great Mercy to thee, that thou ſhouldſt ever come where theſe great Truths, and of ſuch high concernment to thy Soul, are ſpoken of, and Preach'd. God hath not dealt thus with every man, nay not with every nation, as he hath with thee, but when he leaves Kingdoms, whole multitudes of people together to ſit in ſad darkneſs, thou ſtandeſt in his Light.

2. Bleſs God, if he hath farther given thee an inſight, into theſe truths, by enlightening thy underſtanding, which (as hath been diſcourſed) was naturally dark, and blind, and had no Spiritual diſcerning. if thou beginneſt to conceive of things Spiritual better than others, or than thy ſelf did ſome time ago, It is God who hath put a new Light into thy mind, and it is a great mercy, which thou ſhouldſt with the higheſt praiſes acknowledge. For remember that in thy ſelf thou art but darkneſs, as all other men are whom God hath not enlightened, as he hath thee, and therefore many, who tho' wiſer than thee in the World, and attentive hearers alſo, yet underſtand not ſo much as thou. The firſt ground in the parable, which received, the Seed of the Word, Matth. 13. 4. And when he ſowed, ſome Seeds fell by the way ſide: and the fowls came and devoured them up: What was it but ſuch hearers, who do not underſtand? Verſe 19. When any one heareth the Word of the Kingdom, and underſtandeth it not, then cometh the Wicked one, and catcheth away that which was ſown in his heart: This is he which received Seed by the way ſide. And the moſt hearers are ſuch, who do not ſo much as conceive in the General notions, the truth of Spiritual things. They cannot conceive that there is ſuch a thing, as Regeneration, much leſs what it is; as was the caſe of Nicodemus. There are thoſe who walk in darkneſs, tho' the Light ſhines round about them, who are Ignorant under all the means of knowledge, becauſe of the blindneſs of their heart, and therefore they walk in darkneſs, and know not whither they go. John 12. 35. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you: Walk while ye have the light, leſt darkneſs come upon you: For he that walketh in darkneſs, knoweth not whither he goeth. If thou ſeeſt Light in the Lord, bleſs him for thoſe eyes which he hath given thee, whilſt he hath denied them to others.

3. But now if God hath proceeded farther in mercy toward thee, and not only hath revealed theſe truths to thee, and not to others in other places, and times, and hath given thee a new light whereby thou ſeeſt thoſe things, which thy ſelf ſaw not before, tho' thou wert an Auditor, and heardeſt them before: But if God hath gone farther, and renewed thy mind alſo, and put in a new principle to ſee things aright, to ſee thy miſery, ſo as to be truly humbled for it, to ſee Chriſt, ſo as to prize him above all the world, to ſee what the truth is in Jeſus, i. e. what that truth of grace, and regeneration is, which Jeſus requires of thee, and to ſee this in thy own heart too: For this thou haſt farther cauſe to be thankful. Thou canſt now ſay, I know God, and Chriſt, and am not deceived, for he hath given me an underſtanding on purpoſe to know him, ſo as no wicked man knows him, 1 John 5. 20. And we know the Son of God is come, and hath given us an underſtanding, that we may know him that is true: And we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jeſus Chriſt. This is the true God, and eternal life. This is a higher mercy, and favour beſtowed on thee, and therefore greatly bleſs God for it. For tho' thou mighteſt have had a new light, whereby thou mighteſt have come to ſee things which thou never ſaweſt before, before, yet thou mighteſt not have had a new underſtanding. They of whom the Apoſtle ſpeaks in Heb. 6. 4. were enlightened anew indeed, but yet they were not renewed in the Spirit of their minds, for that is proper only to the Godly, who never fall away. It is peculiar to them alone as to have a new Light, and new Objects, ſo to have a new Eye. Chap. 10.

Uſe. 4. See, and admire the great, and wonderful work which God effects in regenerating our natures. How great and difficult is the work of Grace wherein Chriſt muſt not only be at the trouble, and coſt of purchaſing, by his blood, Truths to be reveal'd, but he muſt ſend his ſpirit to reveal and bring them to light, and then he muſt be at the coſt to ſet up a candle by which to read them, and when all is done he muſt find you eyes, with which to read. And then he muſt alſo take the pains to teach you himſelf, he cannot ſet Under-Uſhers to do this office, but when you have eyes given, you muſt be all taught by himſelf too.

If the knowledge thus of Spiritual truths be not in any manner in us, no not ſo much as a power to receive theſe things ſavingly into our minds, then certainly the work is Gods, and wholly his. Men think indeed that to Subdue their affections, and to curb their luſts, a great and mighty power is neceſſary, but as for knowledge they think, that they have at command enough of it, and more than they can tell what to do with, and that it is ſufficiently eaſy. But conſider that to make thee able to know Spiritual things ſavingly, coſteth God as much, as any other work, that paſſeth on thy Soul, and therefore Paul in every Epiſtle Prays for it. Thus he Prays for the Epheſians, Eph. 1. 16, 17, 18. Ceaſe not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my Prayers; That the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Father of glory, may give unto you the Spirit of wiſdom and revelation, in the knowledge of him: The eyes of your underſtanding being enlightened: that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the Saints. Thus he Prays for the Philippians Phil. 1. 9. And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge, and in all Judgment; Thus he Prays for the Coloſſians, Coloſ. 1. 9. For this cauſe we alſo ſince the day we heard it, do not ceaſe to pray for you, and to deſire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will, in all wiſdom and ſpiritual underſtanding. And therefore whenever thou goeſt to God in Prayer hereafter, forget not to ask this Eye-Salve of him, Rev. 3. 18. I counſel thee to buy of me gold tryed in the fire, that thou mayeſt be rich; and white raiment that thou mayeſt be clothed, and that the ſhame of thy nakedneſs do not appear; and anoint thy eyes with Eye-ſalve, that thou mayeſt ſee. What is that but his Spirit to anoint thine eyes, that thou mayeſt ſee things aright, and Judge of things that differ? Remember that Chriſt is a Prophet for thee as well as a King, and Prieſt, and that when all his benefits are reduced but to four heads, Wiſdom is put in as one, and one of the chief alſo, 1 Cor. 1. 30, 31. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us wiſdom, and righteouſneſs, and ſanctification, and redemption: That, according as it is written, He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord.

Unregenerate Man's Guiltineſs

BOOK IV.

Of that corruption, which is in the Practical Judgments of Unregenerate Men.

CHAP. I.

The Nature of Practical Knowledge explained. The different Judgments which Men Unregenerate, and Regenerate, have of Spiritual things.

I Have proved that the mind, and underſtanding is corrupt, that it is Dark as to any apprehenſions of the things of God, I have explained wherein this blindneſs Conſiſts, and what are the cauſes of it, I have deſcribed the difference there is between the ſpeculative knowledge of a Godly man, and of one unregenerate. It now remains that I ſhould plainly draw the lines of difference that is between the practical Judgments, or working Knowledge of one, and the other concerning Spiritual things. This is neceſſary to be done, becauſe men whoſe minds are not renewed by the Spirit of God, have ſome kind of Judgment or practical knowledge about Divine truths, which yet doth not ariſe to that knowledge which the regenerate have, and alſo becauſe that the Chief end of theſe truths, if known aright, is to operate on our hearts, and to ſet them awork.

Now herein, that I may carry things clearly before me, it is neceſſary, that I lay open to you,

Firſt In general the nature of that kind of knowledge, which we call practical, that is, which works in, and upon a Mans will, and affections, by what we know; and then,

Secondly Come particularly to ſhew the difference which is between this kind of knowledge in one who is ſavingly enlightened, and another, who is not.

Firſt, In the General, to explain what practical knowledge is; it is ſaid to be ſo in two reſpects.

1. Then knowledge is practical, when it affects, moves, and ſtirs the Will, and Affections, to the thing which it knows. I put in this, to the thing which it knows, to ſet one difference between it and barely knowing Knowledge. For in ſpeculative knowledge our Minds are wholly took up, and delighted with the bare knowledge, and ſpeculation of the thing, and tho' the knowledge may and doth affect us, for it produceth ſuch a pleaſure, yet not the things which we know. But when we know things in that manner as that our Wills and Affections are mov'd, and ſtirr'd to the things themſelves, as well as to the deſire of, or delight in the knowledge of them, it is call'd practical knowledge. Or, Chap. 1.

2. It is call'd practical, when it is ſuch a Knowledge as is able to guide, manage, and direct our Wills, and Affections, and other faculties in us, in the practice, and exerciſe of ſuch actions, whereby we may come to enjoy the thing, which we deſire. To give an inſtance, by which this may the more fully be clear'd to you.

A Man may have Learn'd the Art of Muſick, and know how Songs are made, and all the rules of Harmony, by which they are compos'd, and he may be much delighted with this Knowledge, and yet not have a mind to have a Leſſon plaid, nor be much affected, if he hear one, but he reſts ſatisfied barely in the knowledge of the Art it ſelf. This now is a bare knowing Knowledge.

2. Another Man, who knows not ſo well the Art of Muſick, yet when he hears a Leſſon, he underſtands the Harmony, and is pleas'd, and much affected with it. This now is a practical Knowledge, an affecting Knowledge, becauſe by it his Affections are carried to the thing it ſelf perceiv'd.

3. But yet thirdly, it is a new buſineſs to teach this Man thus affected to Muſick, the Art of playing upon an Inſtrument, and to inſtill into him ſuch a Knowledge, and Phanſie, as may guide his Fingers aright to play a Leſſon, which he underſtands, the art of which conſiſts more in Knowledge, than in nimbleneſs of Fingers. This alſo is a farther degree of Practical Knowledge.

Now to apply this to things Spiritual;

A man may have the whole frame of Divinity, and of Spiritual Truths in his Head, and yet they may have no influence on his Heart. He may have a form of knowledge, and yet feel no power of it, Rom. 2. 20. an inſtructer of the fooliſh, a teacher of Babes, which haſt the form of Knowledge, and of the Truth in the Law. He may have a pattern of wholeſome Words, 2 Tim. 1. 13. and yet have no experience of the things ſignified by them. Nay he may be much delighted with ſuch Knowledge, and not have his Heart affected with the things themſelves, which he knows in Divinity. Tho' he knows what the true Nature of Love to God is, and of Hatred of Sin, yet his Heart is not excited to love God, or to hate Sin. Tho' he knows Chriſt, and Grace, yet he doth not love, nor deſire them, nor delight in them. Now this is a meer knowing Knowledge.

But when he hath ſuch a knowledge, as both works upon his Mind, and Will, and ſtirs them, and inflames them to thoſe things which he knows, and makes him earneſtly deſirous of the attainment of Gods favour, and love, and of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, &c. and alſo ſets him a work, and guides him in thoſe practices, ways, and means, which God hath appointed for the attaining of them, ſuch as Faith, and Repentance, ſo as he knows how to do them, and how to frame himſelf, and all in him as inſtruments in the practice of them: Both theſe kinds of Knowledge are called practical knowledge, and the one of them you may call affecting knowledge, and the other guiding knowledge. And you ſhall find in Scripture ſuch a Knowledge ſpoken of, as cauſeth you to love the things you know, according to the worth of them. Thus there is a Knowledge to love the things which are excellent, Phil. 1. 9, 10. And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge, and in all Judgment; That ye may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be ſincere, and without offence till the day of Chriſt. And there is a Knowledge too, which guides you in doing ſuch duties whereby you may attain thoſe things, which are excellent, as is plainly ſuppoſed in Jer. 4. 22. For my people is fooliſh, they have not known me, they are ſottiſh Children, and they have none underſtanding: they are Wiſe to do Evil, but to do Good they have no Knowledge. There is a Knowledge implied in this Text, to do Good.

Now Unregenerate Men may, and do come to have ſuch a Knowledge of Spiritual things, as affects them with the things which they know, as thoſe Hearers which are repreſented by the Stony Ground in the Parable, received the Word with Joy, Mat. 13. 4, 5, 20, 21. And when he Sowed, ſome Seeds fell by the way ſide, and the fowls came and devoured them up, Some fell upon ſtony places, where they had not much earth: And forthwith they ſprung up, becauſe they had no deepneſs of earth: But he that received the ſeed into ſtony places, the ſame is he that heareth the Word, and anon with joy receiveth it: Yet hath he not root in himſelf, but dureth for a while: for when Tribulation or Perſecution ariſeth becauſe of the Word, by and by he is offended. And they have alſo ſuch a Knowledge which directs, and acts them in many holy practices, as Herod enlightened by the Preaching of John the Baptiſt, did many things, Mark 6. 20. For Herod feared John, knowing that he was a juſt man and an holy, and obſerved him, and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly. It is then needful to enquire into the difference of this Knowledge, as it is in a perſon Regenerate, and one who is not ſo.

1. I will begin to examine the difference, in that Knowledge, which affects them with the things that they know. And, Firſt In General I will aſſign the reaſons, and cauſes, how, and why we come to be affected with the things which we know, by our knowledge of them. There are two things concur to this.

1. We are then affected with the things, which we know, when we look upon them, and conſider them not only as good, but as things, of which we are perſwaded, that they are good for us, and that they concern our ſelves, and make for our own ends, purpoſes, and deſires. Obſerve it in your own hearts when you will, and you ſhall find, that you paſs by many things, which tho' you know to be good, yet you regard them not. But when your Mind lights on any thing which it apprehends ſuitable to your preſent purpoſes, and deſires, then you are affected with it, and preſently ſeize on it. As it is not every Stone, tho' a good one, that will move, and draw the Iron after it, but the Loadſtone only, becauſe it hath a particular Affinity, Likeneſs, and Sympathy unto Iron in nature, and that ſtirs the Iron preſently: So is it as to the Objects of the Mind, it is not what is good, but what hath a ſuitableneſs to our thoughts, and deſires, and what we apprehend to be beſt for us, which ſtirs us. The Devils know the Blood, and Death of Chriſt to be the only Remedy againſt Sin, and its Guilt, and the only means to purchaſe the greateſt Good; but becauſe this is repreſented to them no way in relation to them, nor as concerning them at all, therefore they are not mov'd at the news of it. So that practical Knowledge is ſuch as convinceth, and perſuadeth the Mind that a thing is good, and beſt for us. But,

2. If beſides this Conviction by Reaſon, there accompany this perſuaſion a real taſt, reliſh and ſenſe of the ſweetneſs, goodneſs, and worth of the thing which we apprehend good for us, let in at our Underſtandings, ſo as we really find, taſt, and perceive it to be ſo, then we are ſtirr'd, and affected indeed with it. And where this is wanting, tho' there be a large Conviction that the things are good for us, yet ſince this is but from bare, and naked apprehenſions taken up from others, without our own taſting them to be ſo, this Conviction, tho' it may breed ſome lazy deſires, and faint wiſhes in us, yet none of them ſo ſtrong, as to be laſting. And therefore we ſhall find by experience, that if two things, whereof one hath leſs goodneſs, be preſented to us, yet if we have a real taſt, and ſenſe of the goodneſs of it let unto the Soul, it moves us more, than the naked relation, or conſideration of that thing, which is of greater worth, whereof we have not a taſt. As the ſight, or taſt of a piece of the meaneſt Bread, ſtirs an hungry man's Appetite, more than the empty Narrations of the greateſt Feaſts. And therefore ſtill you will find that all the Reaſons, and Motives which ſway with you, and effectually move you, may be reſolv'd into ſome Principle, or Concluſion, whereof you have had a real ſenſe, and taſt, and all the reaſonings built thereon move in the force, and power of it. And the reaſon of this is, becauſe indeed nothing moves us but realities, for our Wills, and Affections are real things, and full of weight, and therefore it muſt be a real taſt of the goodneſs of things, which moves them, and not meer Notions, and Pictures, and empty Deſcriptions of things by words. Such as is the Cauſe, ſuch will be the Effect, and therefore a meer Notional Knowledge will not work really upon us, but notionally only.

That

That Knowledge then which works upon us, hath a taſt, and real ſenſe of the things known joyn'd with it. And indeed God hath placed Wiſdom, and Underſtanding in men to ſupply that Office to the Will, and Affections, which the Tongue doth to the Appetite, and Stomach, to take a taſt of things, and to reliſh their ſweetneſs, and to diſcern what goodneſs is in them, and ſo to admit, and receive them. To be wiſe therefore, and to taſt, are ſignified by the ſame word in the Latine Tongue, viz. ſapere, and ſo in the Greek too ſome have tranſlated φρονεῖν, to ſavour or taſt, in Rom. 8. 5. For they that are after the fleſh, do mind the things of the fleſh: but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. Some interpret the word φρονοῦσι, do taſt, ſavour, or reliſh the things of the fleſh. And Elihu ſpeaking of knowing things, ſays, that the Ear tryes words, as the Mouth taſts Meats; Job 34 2, 3, 4. Hear my words, O ye wiſe men, and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge. For the Ear tryeth words, as the mouth taſteth meat. Let us chuſe to us Judgment: let us know among our ſelves what is good. And ſo taſt, and knowledge are joyned together, in Pſal. 34. 8. O taſt and ſee that the Lord is good: bleſſed is the man that truſteth in him. And taſting, and being enlightened, are alſo put together, Heb. 6. 4,5. For it is impoſſible for thoſe who were once enlightened, and have taſted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, and have taſted the good Word of God, and the Powers of the World to come. That is, who are ſo enlightened, as alſo to take in a reliſh of the goodneſs, and ſweetneſs of the things. This only is to be added, that there are ſome things whoſe goodneſs our underſtandings taſt immediately, as the pleaſures of the Body, which yet becauſe the Soul (where Judgment hath its Seat) receiveth them in, therefore the Soul by the Underſtanding judgeth them good, and ſo may be ſaid to taſt them, and this is Scientia Guſtus, a Knowledge of Taſt. There are other things, which the Judgment it ſelf immediately taſteth, as Honour, Credit, Revenge, &c. and finds a ſweetneſs in theſe, as our Senſes do in other Objects. And the reaſon why God hath given the Mind this power of taſting things, is, becauſe otherwiſe it could not come to know the ſweetneſs of things as they are in themſelves; as a man cannot be ſaid to know truly the ſweetneſs of Meat, unleſs he hath taſted it, becauſe till then he knows it not with that ſenſe which is made to receive the ſweetneſs of it, and diſcern it, and make report of it to the reſt. So a blind man is not ſaid to know Colours, unleſs he apprehend them as they are to be apprehended by their proper ſenſes, which is Sight, and ſo the Underſtanding taſts its Objects as well as the Senſes do. Chap. 1.

Now then to apply all this unto Spiritual Knowledge, as there is a goodneſs, and ſweetneſs in ſpiritual things, even the greateſt; ſo this is no way to be taſted, but by means of the Underſtanding, neither is the Soul ever to purpoſe affected with them, till it taſts their goodneſs, and ſweetneſs, 1 Pet. 2. 2,3. As new born Babes deſire the ſincere Milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby: If ſo be ye have taſted that the Lord is gracious. We are there ſaid to deſire, if ſo be, that we have taſted how good the Lord is, or otherwiſe our deſires are not ſtirred. And ſo the Apoſtle Paul prays for the Philippians, that Love may abound in them, ſo as to approve the things which are excellent, and with affectation to diſcern things that differ; and how was this to be; In Spiritual Knowledge, and Senſe, for the word is δοκιμάζειν, Phil. 1. 9, 10. And this I pray, that your Love may abound yet more and more in Knowledge, and in all Judgment: That ye may approve things that are excellent, that ye may be ſincere, and without offence till the day of Chriſt. In all Judgment, i. e. in all Senſe, that is, as truly, and really to perceive the goodneſs of things ſpiritual by a true, and proper ſenſe, and taſt, as Senſes have perception of their Objects. And therefore alſo that Knowledge which a Regenerate man hath of good, and evil, is called exerciſing of his Senſes; Heb. 5. 14. But ſtrong Meat belongeth to them that are of full Age, even to thoſe who by reaſon of uſe have their Senſes exerciſed to diſcern both good and evil. The word is διάκρισις, And ſo the ſight of God is joyn'd with a taſt of his Goodneſs, in Pſalm 34. 8. O taſt and ſee that the Lord is good: bleſſed is the man that truſteth in him. It is of this kind of Knowledge too that Chriſt ſpeaks to the Woman of Samaria; John 4. 10. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, If thou kneweſt the Gift of God, who who it is that ſaith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldeſt have asked of him, and he would have given thee Living Water. If thou kneweſt (ſaith he) the Gift of God, i. e. the Water of Life, which is known as Water uſeth to be by the taſt, and ſweetneſs of it, thou wouldſt have asked it. To this purpoſe alſo Solomon ſpeaks in Prov. 24. 13, 14. My Son, eat thou Honey, becauſe it is good; and the Honey-comb, which is ſweet to thy taſt: So ſhall the knowledge of Wiſdom be unto thy Soul: when thou haſt found it, then there ſhall be a reward, and thy expectation ſhall not be cut off. The knowledge of Wiſdom is both a ſweetneſs at the preſent, which rewards it, and hath an expectation of a future good, of which it ſhall not be diſappointed. Thus likewiſe in Iſaiah the Prophet, ſpeaking of that excellent Spirit of Wiſdom, which is in Chriſt, expreſſeth of him, that he ſhall be of a quick ſcent, or ſmell in the fear of the Lord; Iſa. 11. 3. And ſhall make him of quick underſtanding in the fear of the Lord, and he ſhall not judge after the ſight of his Eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his Ears; as it is in the Hebrew. And the Apoſtle ſpeaking of Spiritual things, expreſſeth that they have a ſavour, which goes along with them; 2 Cor. 2. 14. Now thanks be unto God which always cauſeth us to triumph in Chriſt, and maketh manifeſt the ſavour of his knowledge by us in every place.

CHAP. II.

How far Men unregenerate apprehend, and judge the Goodneſs of Spiritual things. How far it all comes ſhort of the Knowledge and Judgment which a holy Soul hath of them.

THESE things in general being premiſed, I now come more particularly by the application of theſe Generals, to enquire out the true difference of this Affecting Knowledge as to Spiritual things, in the Regenerate, and Unregenerate, ſo as to diſcern wherein true Sanctifying Knowledge, as it affects the heart in a different manner from any other, conſiſts.

1. Let us examine how far Unregenerate men apprehend, and judge Spiritual things to be good.

2. How far they judge them good for them.

3. How far they taſt them, and their goodneſs.

1. How far do Unregenerate men apprehend, and judge Spiritual things to be good? It cannot be denied but that they may in the general apprehend Spiritual things to be good, and the beſt things too. Thus much is implied in that Heathen Speech of Medea in the Poet, That ſhe ſaw, and judged other things to be better, than what ſhe practiſed. And Balaam's magnifying the bleſſed State of the righteous evidently argues the ſame thing; Numb. 23. 10. Who can count the duſt of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Iſrael? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my laſt end be like his. Now the apprehenſion of that good which manifeſts it ſelf in perſons truly godly, and how happy they are, and ſhall be, may affect wicked men with ſuch thoughts, and wiſhes, as Balaam had, to envy, and deſire their condition. And ſo on the contrary they may judge, and eſteem the ways of ſin, the worſe ways of the two, when in the general they are compared one with the other, and yet chooſe, and practiſe them for all that; knowing the Judgment of God, and that what they do deſerves death, and therefore that the things are evil, yet they will do them; Rom 1. 32. Who knowing the Judgment of God, (that they which commit ſuch things are worthy of death) not only do the ſame things, but have pleaſure in them that do them.

Mens aliud ſuadet, video meliora probeque,
Deteriora ſequor———
Ovid. Metamorph. Lib. 7.

Yet this for difference ſake is to be added even concerning their apprehenſion of the goodneſs of theſe things in the General, that it is one thing to to aſſent unto that goodneſs, which is ſaid to be in and is ſpoken of things, whilſt it is no otherwiſe repreſented than in a bare general propoſition, and another thing it is to aſſent to their goodneſs, when the things themſelves come to be preſented in real performances and enjoyment. An unregenerate man may, and oftentimes doth ſtrongly aſſent to all the goodneſs which is, or can be ſaid of ſpiritual things, whilſt it is but repreſented in a meer notion, and in expreſſion of words propounded in the abſtract, but when the things come to be acted, or enjoyed, he is unable to apprehend them as good. It is thus too in other inſtances, for take the verieſt coward in the world and commend, and ſet out true valour to him, and tell him what Noble and Heroick Actions the great Commanders of the World have done, and what a glorious thing it is to imitate them, he aſſents to all that is thus ſaid, or can be ſaid of them, and as truly joyns in magnifying all, as the Nobleſt ſpirit doth, yea and his ſpirit is much raiſed with this fair Idea of Heroick Vertue, wiſhing that he were like them, and might have the Honour of ſuch Atchievements. His mind is elevated, and ſtirred by the repreſentation, as well as the Nobleſt ſpirit. But let him be brought into the Wars, and let the leaſt of the like Brunts and Encounters, in which thoſe Hero's were engag'd, look him really in the face, his apprehenſions, and eſteem of the Excellence of valour, and of the glory of a Conqueror, ſinks and falls, and vaniſheth into baſe thoughts of ſaving his ſkin whole, tho' it be with ſhame. Such difference is there between our apprehenſion of the goodneſs of things conceived in the abſtract notion and meer Idea, and our thoughts of the ſame things, when they come to be acted. As the man in the Fable who wiſh'd for death, but when death came to him really appearing, he wiſhed him gone again. Chap. 2.

To apply this now to our preſent purpoſe, Take an unregenerate Man, and he will acknowledge the holy duties of the Law to be good. To ſanctifie the Sabbath in the ſtrictneſs of it, to have our ſpeeches ſavoury, to pray with our families, to contemn the world, to deny our ſelves, to be patient in afflictions, ſuch diſpoſitions, and actions as theſe whilſt viewed, and conceived in meer abſtract propoſitions, and in the notion, as you hear of them in Sermons, are accounted moſt amiable, excellent, and worthy, and ſo they are acknowledged, and you reſolve to do them, as wholeſome, and good Laws, when propounded in Parliaments, and viewed only as they are yet in black and white, are aſſented to, and applauded. But when any of theſe holy practices come really, and particularly to be done by you, or when they appear in the Lives of others in the concrete, any of you who are unregenerate want light to ſee, judge or acknowledge them to be good and excellent indeed, and in truth, and tho to the notional abſtract goodneſs of them as barely in the Theſis, your conſciences may and do ſtill aſſent, yet to the real goodneſs of them they do not, but they hate it, and fly in the face of it, or account it folly, and madneſs, and accordingly deſpiſe, and vilifie it. Thus alſo when the bleſſed condition of the Saints, and Heaven, and the glory of it is painted Lively, and ſet out to men in a quick repreſentation, and ſo they apprehend in the notion and Idea all thoſe glorious things which are ſpoken of that City of our God: Who deſires not (as Balaam did) to die the death of the righteous, if they might but go thither? But were it poſſible that an unregenerate man ſhould be admitted into Heaven, admitted (if I may ſo ſpeak) but upon tryal and liking, as ſome Monaſteries admit their Novices, yet when once thoſe pure and undefiled beams of light, which kindle Joy that paſſeth underſtanding in the ſpirits of Juſt men made pure, and perfect; when once I ſay thoſe Beams ſhould come to be darted upon the eyes of his underſtanding, and by thoſe Windows be let in upon the reſt of his Soul, he would not be able to behold them, he could not endure them, but would ſeek to ſhun them, more than the night-owl doth the day.

2. But if they could aſſent to their real goodneſs, as well as they did to it when appearing in the notion only, yet unleſs they be able to apprehend it thus to be truly good for them, that knowledge works not to any purpoſe. Tho a ſore eye may have ſight enough to judge the light in it ſelf to be good, and amiable, and that it is a pleaſant thing, yet it cannot judge it ſo for it ſelf,

for it vexeth it; ſo ſuppoſe an unregenerate man could aſſent, that indeed ſpiritual things, when really repreſented, were the beſt, yet he could not judge that they were the beſt for him. Tho upon conſideration he may think that to draw near to God, and to live upon communion with him, affords the trueſt pleaſure, yet his heart being carnal, and ſo not having any guſt of that ſpiritual pleaſure, he cannot judge it to be beſt for him. But Davids heart and ſenſe being ſpiritual he could ſay really, Pſal. 73. 28. But it is good for me to draw near to God: I have put my truſt in the Lord God, that I may declare all thy works. It is as if he ſhould have ſaid, I account it my preſent happineſs, and what is beſt for me now to do, and I can wiſh no other happineſs than to Live in the preſence and enjoyment of God, day, and night: But no unregenerate men have ſuch thoughts, and judgment, of which we have an inſtance in Balaam, whoſe Heart being carnal, and his Wiſdom ſenſual, tho' he Judg'd the State of the Righteous better in it ſelf, than his own, yet for the preſent while he could in this World enjoy the pleaſures of ſin, he deſired it not, becauſe indeed he knew not how he could find at preſent more comfort in that condition of the righteous, than in the pleaſures of ſin, and wages of unrighteouſneſs, 2 Pet. 2. 13, 14, 15. And ſhall receive the reward of unrighteouſneſs, as they that count it pleaſure to riot in the day-time: Spots they are and blemiſhes ſporting themſelves with their own deceivings, while they feaſt with you; Having eyes full of Adultery and that cannot ceaſe from ſin, beguiling unſtable Souls: An Heart they have exerciſed with Covetous Practices: curſed Children: Which have forſaken the right way, and are gone aſtray, following the the way of Balaam the Son of Boſor, who loved the wages of unrighteouſneſs. When Balaam indeed ſhould dye, and muſt then part with all theſe things in this World, which he lov'd, and admir'd, which are but for a ſeaſon, and muſt then receive death the wages of all; It is then he deſires the death of the righteous, and to poſſeſs their happineſs. Num. 23. 10. Who can count the duſt of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Iſrael ? Let me die the death of the Righteous, and let my laſt end be like his.

Now the reaſon of all this is, becauſe a man judgeth thoſe things beſt for him, which are moſt ſuitable to thoſe diſpoſitions, with which his Spirit is ſeaſoned, and which moſt anſwer his preſent deſires, purpoſes and aims. For that happineſs which we find in things ariſeth from their ſuitableneſs to us, and not meerly out of the goodneſs of the things themſelves. Therefore tho' we may apprehend the things in themſelves beſt of all; yet if we do not perceive them ſuitable to us we cannot judge them good for us; as the Cock in the Fable, who preferred a Barley-corn, before a Diamond, becauſe that he could eat, but the other could not feed him. Thus a Man who is Sick, tho' he knows that ſolid meat is Sweeter, and better to a Man in health, yet he cannot judge it to be ſo for him, as long as his Palate remains vitiated, and his ſtomach diſtempered. Now the Scripture tells us that the Wiſdom of all unregenerate men is thus deprav'd, Jam. 3. 15. This wiſdom deſcendeth not from above, but is Earthly, Senſual, Deviliſh, that all their perception, and judgment is ſeaſoned with nothing but Fleſh, and ſo vitiated, Rom. 8. 7. Becauſe the Carnal Mind is enmity againſt God: For it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. And now then it is no wonder if they judge the things of the Fleſh to be better for them, becauſe more agreeable to their corrupt ſenſes, and appetites.

Object. If now it be farther asked, and the Caſe put, and Query made, That tho' indeed a man unregenerate cannot apprehend ſpiritual things as Good for him in the condition wherein he is, yet knowing that to one whoſe Soul is reſtor'd to Health and Grace, Spiritual things are better than the pleaſures of ſin, he may therefore judge that ſo they would be to him if he was once renewed in his mind, and from this judgment of the thing he may come to be ſet on work to ſeek, and deſire it. As a man that is Sick, tho he cannot now judge meat to be beſt for him while he is ſo, yet he may judge that in Health it may be ſo, and ſo deſire to have it, when he ſhall be reſtored to that condition.

Anſw. To this I Anſwer, It is true that ſuch a Notional apprehenſion, and conviction he may have which may thus work, yet it is not ſtrong enough ſo to affect him, as to overcome the difficulties, and to ſweeten the uſe of the means, by which they may obtain that good, as in a regenerate man it doth. For tho' in the general, and abſtract Notion, they apprehend all which is mention'd in the objection, yet really, and truly, they do not affect the thing it ſelf, for when the means of grace come to be us'd, which ſhould as Phyſick reſtore them to that health, their judgments diſapprove, and diſlike even them, and they do not, nor cannot judge it beſt to uſe them conſtantly, and diligently. That Phyſick which ſhould expel the noxious humor, and recover them, they cannot get down, tho' they ſhould dye for it, becauſe their Palats and their Stomachs are both againſt it. In a word tho' they conceive ſpiritual things to be true, and good, and ſome deſires of poſſeſſing them may be ſtirr'd, yet when come to the point, and muſt uſe means to obtain them, then upon the tryal it appears that all their apprehenſion, and judgment doth not, nor cannot really affect them to purpoſe. For their minds diſallow diſapprove, diſtaſt, and fight againſt all the means of their own recovery, or of the acquiſition of theſe deſired good things, and both their Palats, and Stomachs, their Judgments, and Wills, riſe againſt the Means and Workings of Grace in them, and cannot but do ſo. They cannot be brought to get the healing Phyſick down, or to keep, and retain it, tho' they know that otherwiſe they muſt dye. The Wiſdom of their Fleſh is enmity againſt God, and his Law, and his grace, and all the means of it, Rom. 8. 7. and therefore, this wiſdom is death, becauſe it thus reſiſts the means of Life. Thus they cannot judge the uſe of the Means to be good for them, when really they come to uſe them, nay the very Light and Workings of the Spirit of God in their reaſonings, their reaſonings oppoſe 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. (For the Weapons of our Warfare are not Carnal, but Mighty through God to the pulling down of ſtrong holds) caſting down Imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience to Chriſt: And what is the cauſe why they do thus? Becauſe nothing can Judge, and Judging deſire the deſtruction of it ſelf, and therefore abhors any mixture of its contrary, and therefore fleſh, and corrupt Nature, which poſſeſſeth the Judgments of men unregenerate cannot paſs ſuch a ſentence, as to Judge the State of Grace better for it, ſo as to ſet him effectually on work to ſeek it, and to admit of it, for that would be to the ruine of it ſelf. As tho' Water be a baſer Element than Fire, yet when Fire comes to change it into it ſelf, the form of Water will hold its own, and make the utmoſt reſiſtance, and cannot but do it, ſo it is in this caſe too. Chap. 2.

A ſtronger Inſtance of what I have ſaid cannot be given than is to be found even in a Man Regenerate, who tho' he hath Grace begun in him, and knows, not notionally only, but taſtingly and really, the pleaſures of that ſtate to be greater, and better than thoſe of ſin, yet ſtill ſo far as he is unrenewed in his Judgment, and the Spirit of his mind, ſo far doth that fleſhly mind approve the ways of ſin as beſt, and the ways of Grace, as of leſs worth, and the unrenewed part in his Mind fights againſt the means of Grace in a Mans own Heart, and diſallows of them as if they were not beſt for him. How much more then muſt his Mind, and Judgment, who is nothing but Fleſh, and who never taſted that the other ſtate is better, and who never came in that full manner to aſſent unto this indeed, that the eſtate of Grace is beſt for him, how much more, I ſay, muſt his Judgment, and Heart fight againſt theſe things

3. Laſt of all, tho' notionally an unregenerate Man may be convinc'd that the other ſtate of Grace would be better for him, yet becauſe he wants a Judgment of taſte of the betterneſs of it, he cannot ſtrongly be affected to it, ſo as to leave thoſe things of which he hath always had ſo ſweet a taſte, in exchange. To prove this we need go no farther than the Inſtance of the Young Man in Mat. 19. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. And behold, one came and ſaid unto him, Good Maſter, what good thing ſhall I do that I may have eternal life? And he ſaid unto him, Why calleſt thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the Commandments. He ſaith unto him, Which? Jeſus ſaid, Thou ſhalt do no Murder, Thou ſhalt not commit Adultery,

Book IV. Thou ſhalt not ſteal, Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſs, Honour thy Father and thy Mother: and, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf. The Young Man ſaith unto him, All theſe things have I kept from my Youth up: what lack I yet? Jeſus ſaid unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and ſell that thou haſt, and give to the poor, and thou ſhalt have Treaſure in Heaven: and come and follow me. But when the Young Man heard that ſaying, he went away ſorrowful; for he had great poſſeſſions. He had a great conviction of the goodneſs, and excellence of Salvation, and he notionally knew it better than all the World, and not in it ſelf only, but for him if he could attain it, and therefore he comes earneſtly to make the queſtion, what ſhall I do to be ſav'd, and he comes with a ſeeming reſolution to do any thing which Chriſt ſhould enjoin, but yet when it came to the Tryal, he would not buy this eternal Life ſo dear, as at the price of all that he had in the World, becauſe he had not ſuch a real taſte of the pleaſure, and ſweetneſs of that Life as might prevail on him ſo to do. He had not (I ſay) ſuch a lively ſenſe of it, as ſhould be ſufficient to ſweeten the means (which yet he enquired for) that were neceſſary to obtain it, but he knew, and reliſh'd really the goodneſs of his Worldly enjoyments, and poſſeſſions, which was the reaſon that he could not find in his Heart to forego them, and that he preferred them above that Salvation, whoſe delights he had never yet really experienc'd. From this cauſe it was that all the apprehenſions, and deſires which he had of Eternal, tho' they wrought on him a little, yet in the iſſue came to nothing, he went away exceeding ſorrowful, for he had great poſſeſſions, which he lov'd better, and judg'd better for him than Salvation it ſelf. For it is not bare conceits, and notional apprehenſions of things abſent not yet attain'd, which can ſway more, or affect us more, than the real taſting of preſent pleaſures which are to be foregone. Our Wills, and Affections, being realities, and things full of weight, it muſt be a real apprehenſion, and ſenſe that can move, and ſtir them.

Object. But it will be further objected that it is ſaid of thoſe who fall away, and therefore were never regenerated, that they are not only enlighten'd, but that they taſte the World to come, Heb. 6. 4, 5. For it is impoſſible for thoſe who were once enlightned, and have taſted of the Heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, and have taſted the good Word of God, and the powers of the World to come. They have taſted the good Word of God, i. e. the goodneſs of thoſe things, which the Word reveals.

Anſ. To this I anſwer, that there is a twofold goodneſs of the things repreſented in the Word, which is reveal'd to us therein. The one is the good which comes by the things, the other is the goodneſs of the things themſelves. For as other things, ſo thoſe which are Spiritual too, have an intrinſecal, eſſential proper goodneſs, and excellency in their own nature ſevered from all the outward conveniencies, which proceed from them, and accompany them. Thus in Friendſhip there are the perſonal good qualities, and conditions of the Man, and there are beſides ſome outward benefits, which may happily be gotten by his friendſhip, as promotion to ſome deſir'd and expected honour, and dignity, or freedom from ſome fear'd evils, or ſome other ends, and uſe, which a Man may have of his Friend wherein he may ſtand him in ſtead. Thus alſo in Marriage there are the perſonal excellencies of the Wife, her Beauty, and the Goodneſs, and Amiableneſs of her Nature, and Carriage, and alſo her Vertues and Graces, which are inherent in her perſon, and there is alſo her Portion and Dowry, and the advantageous alliances which come with her: And ſo now to ſpeak to the preſent Inſtance, as there is the ſweetneſs of the Meat it ſelf, and the ſweetneſs of the Sauce which it is ſerved up in, ſo in the Word Spiritual things are with a double goodneſs propounded, and reveal'd to us. There are the good things which come by Chriſt through believing, as freedom from Hell, Pardon of Sin, Peace with God, and a happy condition ſpoken of, and promis'd with it, and we are told that we cannot have one without the other, but beſides this, there is alſo the internal excellence, the perſonal worth, the glory of the things themſelves, the proper goodneſs of them conceiv'd in their Spiritual Nature. Now ſince the Word ſets out both theſe kinds of Goodneſs to us, an Unregenerate Man may taſte of the one, but not of the other.

They

They may reliſh the ſweetneſs of the Sauce, with which they are diſh'd up, but not of the Meat it ſelf. In Sin there is the bitterneſs of the Sauce, that is, the direful effects, and concomitants of it, horror of Conſcience, Shame, fear of Puniſhment, and the Threatnings, and the Miſeries with which God hath Diſhed Sin up to all thoſe, who ſhall eat the Fruit of their doings, and this bitterneſs of Sin Wicked Men may, and do taſte, Jer. 2. 19. Thine own Wickedneſs ſhall correct thee, and thy Back-ſlidings ſhall reprove thee: know therefore and ſee, that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, ſaith the Lord God of Hoſts. But wicked Men never ſee, nor taſte the evil that is in Sin it ſelf, nor are they ſenſible of it, nor mov'd with it. They ſee not, nor abhor that evil in Sin, which God, and Holy Men do, which puts their Mouths out of reliſh with it for ever. For when that bitter Sauce is not taſted by the Unregenerate, when they have not the ſenſe of thoſe bitter effects in Sin; but the ſame Sin of which they were afraid, and ſhy of before, is preſented in the pleaſure of it without its former taſted bitterneſs, they fall to it as eagerly, and as much as ever. In Spiritual Duties likewiſe there is peace of Conſcience which accompanies the performance of them, and hence the thoughts of Men may excuſe, and pacifie guilty fears upon the doing of a Duty, as well as accuſe upon a neglect of it, or the Commiſſion of a Sin, Rom. 2. 15. Which ſhew the Work of the Law Written in their Hearts, their Conſcience alſo bearing Witneſs, and their Thoughts the mean while accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another. Now this Sauce of good Duties which ſatisfies the Gnawing Worm of Conſcience, an Unregenerate Man may reliſh, but to the Meat it ſelf, the goodneſs of the holy exerciſe he hath no mind, nor Stomach, but Chriſt on the contrary delighted in the Holy Work it ſelf, and found a ſweetneſs in it, John 4. 32, 33, 34. But he ſaid unto them, I have Meat to Eat that ye know not of. Therefore ſaid the Diſciples one to another, Hath any Man brought him ought to Eat? Jeſus ſaith unto them, My Meat is to do the Will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his Work. Nay farther, thoſe who are not true, and real Believers on Chriſt, tho' they find a ſweetneſs in his benefits, yet they ſee not his own proper excellencies, nor delight in his perſonal goodneſs. God ſets out to us in the Word, in, and with Chriſt, freedom from Hell, diſcharge from the guilt of Sin, and the Pardon of ſin, which is as the Sauce to the Bread of Life, and Heavenly Manna, Chriſt himſelf. Now thoſe who never arrive to true Faith, and Holineſs, having their Mouths embitter'd with the nauſeous Sauce of Sin, may find ſweetneſs in Chriſt, as to theſe good effects mention'd, and yet have no pleaſing ſenſe of his excellent Perſon; of the Joys of Communion with him, that reliſh of his Love, which the Church in Cant. 1. 2. ſays is better than Wine; of that taſte of the goodneſs of God in himſelf, of which David ſo much ſpeaks of Pſal. 34. 8. O taſte and ſee that the Lord is good: bleſſed is the Man that truſteth in him. And Paul intimates when he ſays that we do not only rejoyce in hope of the glory of God, but in God himſelf, Rom. 5. 2, 11. By whom alſo we have acceſs by Faith into this Grace wherein we ſtand, and rejoyce in hope of the Glory of God. And not only ſo, but we alſo joy in God, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom we have now received the Atonement.

Chap. 2.

Now in a word to ſhew you the reaſon of this difference I need only preſent to you this conſideration, that there is in an Unregenerate Man a Principle of Self-love, which ſeaſons his Palate, and his Judgment, and there's nothing more in him, but in a perſon Regenerate there is more, there is a new Divine Spiritual power of diſcerning Spiritual things put in, and ſuper-added both to his Judgment, and to the Self-love in his Heart. Now then, that Principle of Self-love makes Men Unregenerate capable of taſting the Goodneſs, and Sweetneſs of the Sauce, that is, thoſe Motives, and Arguments, which in the Word are drawn from the Good, or Evil which we ſhall get by Spiritual things, but there being a farther goodneſs, and ſweetneſs in the things themſelves, which is of a more Tranſcendent Nature (for they are good not only becauſe they bring us ſuch benefits with them, but they are firſt ſo in themſelves, and as they tend to Glorifie God) to reliſh this aright, a Principle beyond all that is natural in Men, a Principle that is congeneal to God, and his things, and ſo ſuited to them, is requiſite. Tho' this is to be added that a Regenerate Man having Self-love, yet rightly temper'd, taſts of both theſe kinds of ſweetneſs, which Spiritual things afford, for both Meat, and Sauce were made for him.

From hence alſo it will now appear by way of Inference, or deduction,

1. That even the affecting knowledge of an Unregenerate Man, which may a little ſtir, and warm his Heart, is not that true knowledge of Spiritual things which he ought to have, becauſe he knows not that true internal proper goodneſs which is in them; which is indeed to know the thing as it is to be known, which alſo is the Apoſtles meaning when he ſays that they are Spiritually diſcern'd, 1 Cor. 2. 14. But the natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are fooliſhneſs unto him; neither can he know them, becauſe they are Spiritually diſcerned, i. e. in that Spiritual goodneſs, and worth, which is in the things themſelves. For as it is in affections ſo it is in Knowledge, that they are not ſaid to be true, unleſs they be ſuitable to the Nature of thoſe things, which we affect, thus to Love a Man only for ſome advantage I may have from him, to love a Wife for her Portion, or to ſatisfie Luſt, is not Love, it is not ſaid to be true Love, becauſe it is not agreeable to that which in all theſe ought principally to be beloved, viz. their Perſonal goodneſs, and qualities. Thus neither is our knowledge true, unleſs we know that in the things, which is principally to be known of them, for till then the thing is not known as it is. As therefore we ſhewed that Unbelievers in their ſpeculative knowledge of Spiritual things could not be ſaid truly to know them, becauſe they know but the Pictures, not the things themſelves, ſo practically they know them not, when they know affectionately, only the accidental goodneſs, which comes by the things, and not the true proper goodneſs of the things themſelves.

2. It may be inferr'd that becauſe they do not taſte the proper goodneſs of Spiritual things, or becauſe they have a taſting knowledge of that goodneſs, therefore in this reſpect alſo they cannot be ſaid to have true knowledge. For here again, unleſs a thing is known by that knowledge which is proper to it, 'tis not known truly. A Man cannot be ſaid to know the ſweetneſs of Meat, who wants the power of taſting it, becauſe he is not able to know it with that ſenſe, which God hath appointed to receive it, and to make report of it to the reſt. A Man cannot be ſaid to know Muſick, and its charming harmony, who knows only the compoſure, but never heard a Tune, becauſe the hearing is the ſenſe which God hath made the Judge of it. And ſo tho' you may know there is a farther goodneſs in Spiritual things, than what only comes by them, yet if you taſte not of that goodneſs alſo you may be ſaid not yet to know it, becauſe you want the inward Spiritual ſenſe, which is homogeneal to them, which is proper to know, and judge of them, and which God hath appointed for that office.

CHAP. III.

That Men Unregenerate are utterly deſtitute of that Wiſdom, and Holy skill to do Good, which Men Regenerate have. Wherein this Wiſdom, or Holy Art conſiſts; prov'd that Ungodly Men want it.

HAving thus diſcours'd of the firſt part of practical knowledge, which influenceth Men with affections to Spiritual things, and having aſſign'd the difference of this Knowledge in thoſe who are Unregenerate, from that which a ſanctified mind hath: Let us now conſider the other part, which guides Men in the practice of Holy Duties, which is called Wiſdom to do good, as well as to love what is good, Jer. 4. 22. For my People is fooliſh, fooliſh, they have not known me, they are ſottiſh children, and they have none understanding: they are wiſe to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge. Chap. 3.

That we may the better underſtand this, we muſt in the generalconſider that to new, and Holy obedience, two things are requir'd.

1. That our Wills, and Affections, and the other Powers in us, which are as Inſtruments, and Tools to be imployed in it, be made fit for ſuch a buſineſs, and work; that they be made fit to pray, and to hear, and to ſanctifie the Sabbath, and God's Name alſo, in the worſhip of him, &c. Rom. 6. 13. Neither yield ye your Members as Inſtruments of unrighteouſneſs unto ſin: but yield your ſelves unto God, as thoſe that are alive from the dead; and your Members as Inſtruments of righteouſneſs unto God. Their being Inſtruments ſuppoſeth a fit diſpoſition in them for ſuch an uſe, and this fitneſs, readineſs, and preparedneſs to be uſed in ſuch ſervices is their proper Sanctification.

2. Beſides this fitneſs in them, there is required in the Mind, or Judgment, Wiſdom, and Skill to manage, turn and weild theſe Weapons right in the practice of holy duties, which is call'd Wiſdom to do good, and is neceſſary to direct us in the doing it. And by it we walk exactly, not as fools, but as wiſe, Eph. 5. 14, 15, 16, 17. Wherefore he ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ariſe from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall give thee Light See then that ye walk circumſpectly, not as fools, but as wiſe, redeeming the time, becauſe the days are evil. Wherefore be ye not unwiſe, but underſtand what the Will of the Lord is. There is a Light which we are to receive from Chriſt, needful to inſtruct us how to take our ſteps in due order; there is a Wiſdom requir'd to know how to guide our feet, and to walk, Eph. 5. 8. For ye were ſometimes darkneſs, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as Children of light. And this is called Practical Knowledge. I will make the thing more clear by ſome eaſie example; If a man would Fence aright, he muſt not only have fit Weapons which are not too heavy for him, and which are of a fit faſhion to be us'd, but he muſt have Skill alſo to know how to be able to weild them, wherein lies the main of that Art. If a man ſhould go to play on an Inſtrument, it is not neceſſary only that he ſhould have a hand, which is nimble, and quick, and apt to move faſt, and to fall readily on ſuch ſtops, which readineſs is gain'd by uſe, and exerciſe, and to this anſwers the Sanctification of the Will, and Affections: But he muſt have the Art and Skill alſo imprinted on his Fancy, and Underſtanding, which may ſtill upon all occaſions guide thoſe fingers aright, elſe he can never play well. And the excellency too, which men attain in their ſeveral Trades, comes from the excellency of their Fancies. Thus in Sanctification there is a holy Art, and Skill implanted in the Mind to direct the Will, and Affections in all the Acts of Obedience, and this we call Practical Knowledge.

Now to this Skill two things concur.

1. To know all the Rules, and Faſhion, and Manner of doing things aright. As when a man takes an Apprentice, he gives him Rules, and ſhews him how he ſhould handle thoſe Inſtruments, with which he is to work; but yet this is not knowledge enough; for a Scholar who skills not a ſtroke of the Mechanical work, and knows not how to turn his hand in it, may learn preſently all the Rules, and yet be as far off the Knowledge of the Trades as any other. Therefore,

2. There is required a Practical Skill, a ſlight, and cunning in the Fancy, and in the exerciſe of the hands, which uſe makes perfect. There is neceſſary ſuch a practis'd Art to know the difference of Wares at firſt ſight, or to know how to guide the hand in ſuch or ſuch buſineſſes, and to uſe Tools proper for the work.

That we may make application of all this to the purpoſe in hand. The difference between the practical Knowledge which is in a regenerate Man, and one who is not ſo, lies in this:

1. That an unregenerate Man wants the skill, and holy art, to perform Religious duties, tho' they may know all the rules of Practice as fully as the other, James 4 17. Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doth it not, to him it is ſin 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21. For if after they have eſcaped the pollutions of the World through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, they are again intangled therein, therein, and overcome, the latter end is is worſe with him than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of Righteouſneſs, than after they have known it, , to turn from the Holy Commandment delivered unto them. Rom. 2. 20. An inſtructer of the fooliſh, a teacher of babes, which haſt the form of knowledge and of the truth in the Law. Iſa. 58. 2. Yet they ſeek me daily, and delight to know my ways, as a Nation that did righteouſneſs, and forſook not the ordinance of their God: They ask of me the ordinances of Juſtice: They take delight in approaching to God. But a godly man beſides the knowledge of the rules and ways of righteouſneſs knows how to walk in them, he hath a particular Skill, and art of holineſs (which an unregenerate man wants) as a farther art infus'd into him to guide his heart in all the parts of a godly behaviour, and in the ſeveral paſſages of duties. He hath a Skill to diſcern the difference of Good, and Evil, as he finds or meets with either of them in his heart, and life, Heb. 5. 14. But ſtrong Meat belongeth to them that are of full Age, even thoſe who by reaſon of uſe have their Senſes exerciſed to diſcern both Good and Evil. He can diſtinguiſh true and good Wares from thoſe which are falſe, real Genuine Holineſs, from what is ſeemingly ſo, but counterfeit. Indeed men as to all Human Faculties, or Arts, get by uſe a Skill in them, beſides the Rules which they have Learn'd, but this art of Holineſs is not acquired by cuſtom, or exerciſe, but God puts it into a Godly Mans heart, as part of his Stock, the firſt day that he converts him, tho he may, and doth gain more of it afterward by exerciſe, ſo that, tho he Learns not more rules of holy living than he knew before, yet his Skill in praying, or in the performance of any other duty increaſeth, and this proves it to be a diſtinct thing from the meer knowledge of the rules themſelves. As for Prayer, let a man have never ſo many rules in his head, yet all theſe cannot help him to make an acceptable Prayer, but there is a farther Skill requir'd, call'd a Spirit of Prayer, which God only can infuſe, Zech. 12. 10. And I will pour upon the houſe of David, and upon the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, the Spirit of grace and of ſupplications, and they ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they ſhall mourn for him as one mourneth for his only Son, and ſhall be in bitterneſs for him, as one that is in bitterneſs for his firſt-born. Rom. 8. 26. Likewiſe the Spirit helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we ſhould Pray for as we ought: But the Spirit it ſelf maketh interceſſion for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. We know not how to Pray as we ought, we cannot make a Prayer, nor ſo much as frame one Petition; but it is the Spirit who teacheth, and helps us, by giving us this Skill, and he alone. And ſo for the Love of God too, tho' we may all know the Rules about it, yet we are ignorant of the Skill how to produce ſuch an Act of Love, and turn the Will in it, and guide it aright, till it be taught us by God, 1 Theſ. 4. 9. But as touching brotherly Love, ye need not that I write unto you; for ye your ſelves are taught of God to love one another. And if we cannot love one another without being thus inſtructed, much leſs can we love God himſelf: And therefore read through the Pſalms, and you ſhall ſtill find that David hath recourſe to God for this particular practical Skill, tho' he knew Rules enough already; and he asks of God to beſtow this Art upon him, as being the peculiar Prerogative of God's People, Pſal. 25. 4, 5. Shew me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths. Lead me in thy Truth, and teach me; for thou art the God of my Salvation, on thee do I wait all the day. He prays for inſtruction; Shew me thy ways, ſays he. Now what teaching means he, to have the Rules of godly walking only revealed to him? No, but to have a skill to walk, and to order his ſteps in his particular Actions: Lead me in thy Truth, (ſays he) in the way that I ſhould chooſe, as thou teacheſt thy Saints, and them only to do. V. 9, 12. The meek will he guide in Judgment; and the meek will he teach his way. What man is he that feareth the Lord? him ſhall he teach in the way that he ſhall chooſe. They only have this ſecret, and all others are ignorant of it; V. 14. The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he will ſhew them his Covenant. And their Light is ſuch as guides them in all their walking; Luke 1. 78, 79. Through the tender Mercy of our God, whereby the day-ſpring from on high hath viſited us, to give light to them that ſit in darkneſs, and in the ſhadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of Peace. God doth imprint this this skill in every Servant, and Apprentice which he takes, and he doth not ſo to any other. It is in our Indentures that he ſhould do ſo, for he hath bound himſelf by Covenant, Jer. 31. 33. But this ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael, After thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my Law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. And it is a skill which all the Miniſters can never teach you. Our Preaching may read Lectures to you, and fill your heads with Rules which you may be able to teach others too: But the Right Art of doing duties according to thoſe Rules, none can teach you but God. This particular Skill, or Wiſdom to do (for as all Practices of Trades lie in a skill of the Mind, ſo doth this alſo) all Unregenerate men want; Jer. 4. 22. For my People is fooliſh, they have not known me, they are ſottiſh Children, and they have none underſtanding: they are wiſe to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge. They are wiſe to do evil, they have working heads that way, and are perfect Maſters of that ſlight, and cunning, but to do good they have no practical knowledge at all, and that I take to be the meaning of the phraſe, Titus 1. 16. They profeſs that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and diſobedient, and unto every good work reprobate. They profeſs to know God, and ſo how to fear him, but are to every good work ἀδόκιμοι, that is, void of Judgment, for ſo the word ſignifies, and in that meaning it is taken, Rom. 1. 28. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do thoſe things which are not convenient. Εις ἀδόκιμον νοῦν, or to a mind void of Judgment were they abandoned. The Apoſtle in Titus 1. 16. ſhews the variouſneſs, or difference of their knowledge, from what is in a man godly, that tho' it be of practical things, yet it is not a practical knowledge which is able to guide them. And it is the meaning of the Holy Ghoſt, in Rom. 12. 2. And be not conformed to this World; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable and perfect will of God. Our minds muſt be renewed, εἰς τὸ δοκιμάζειν, to prove, and to make tryal of the Will of God, and to try how well we can do it. And that a Man may know the thing, and all that belongs to its Nature, and uſe, and yet be ignorant to do it, we have a common inſtance, for a Man may have all directions how to temper ſuch a potion, and what drugs ſhould go into it, but to diſcern what drugs are good, and to have the skill to temper them rightly together is quite another thing, and there is more requir'd to it, for a Phyſitian who can do the one, is unable to do the other, and therefore an Apothecaries buſineſs, and work is very different from his. Thus now, tho' you may know all the parts of a Prayer, and what is to be put into your Petitions, or thanksgivings, to render them acceptable, yet to know how to Temper your Prayers right, to diſcern true Spiritual deſires, which may be put in, and to diſtinguiſh them from ſuch as are carnal, and unlawful in your Hearts, which if mingled with the Prayer would ſpoil it, this is a diſtinct art, and is a true Chriſtians skill. A man who never was at Sea, nor ſaw a Ship in his Life may know all the art of Mariners, and rules of Navigation, which may carry a Man on any Voyage, for he may learn them at home by his own Chimney, and yet he would want that skill to guide a Ship, which a poor Sailer hath, who knows not ſo many rules as he. Thus a Man may be Learned in Divinity, and know all the rules of a Chriſtians duty, and practice, in all conditions of Life, and yet when he comes to put theſe Rules into action, he may be at a loſs how to ſteer his courſe aright in any one of them.

Object. But you will ſay do not Unregenerate Men know how to Pray? &c. Whence is it then that they can pray with ſuch apparent fervency, and can ſo freely ſpeak their minds in Prayer? Why, they put me down quite (will many a poor Soul ſay) in Zeal, and readineſs of expreſſion, and therefore they know how to make Prayers, as well as to give Rules.

Anſw. I anſwer there are two things in every duty, the inward work, and out-work, the in-ſide, and out-ſide of it, bodily exerciſe as the Apoſtle calls it, and Godlineſs which is the Carriage of the Heart in the Duty, the firſt is but little available, it is the ſecond that hath the force, and virtue in it, 1 Tim. 4. 8. For Bodily exerciſe profiteth little: but godlineſs is profitable unto all things, having having promiſe of the Life that now is, and of that which is to come. There is in a duty, as in the Law which commands it, the Letter, and the Spirit. There is in the Law the outward part of it, and the inward Spirit, and Life, and form of it, Rom. 7.6. But now we are delivered from the Law, that being dead wherein we were held that we ſhould ſerve in newneſs of Spirit, and not in the oldneſs of the Letter. And there is in a duty the external performance, which is the oldneſs of the Letter, and the Life, and warmth of the Heart, which is the newneſs of Spirit. Now to have gifts, and skill to perform the outwork, is nothing in compariſon, but the great, and difficult art is to guide the Heart aright in Prayer, in a Spiritual manner, ſo as God, who is a Spirit may accept it. This skill all Unregenerate Men in the World want, for they have but a form of Godlineſs, which is no more the thing it ſelf, than a Picture is a Man. Therefore the Apoſtle ſays in Rom. 12. 2. that we muſt be renewed to know that good, acceptable will of God, τὸ ἀγαθὸν that good, to know it, i. e. to be able to make ſuch an experiment, and tryal in performance as to produce a Prayer that ſhall be acceptable to God, which no Unregenerate Man can do. They may put in materials, as drugs, which are good, but they ſpoil all in the Tempering, mingling no Spirits with them, Or as a Painter may have skill to draw the Picture of a Man, but ſtill 'tis but the outſide, the inward Veins, and Nerves are not viſible in his Piece, or tho' he may figure them, yet he cannot Paint the Spirits, much leſs the motions, turnings and affections, the various poſtures, and carriage of the Soul in any action, for he wants that Divine skill, that plaſtick or formative Art, whereby God fram'd us in the Womb, and Drew, and Limn'd all theſe. Thus an Unregenerate Man may ſhaddow out all the externally appearing parts of a Prayer, but the inward vital parts he cannot form, the life, and the heat, and the ſeveral motions of the Soul Praying in Faith, he cannot draw, for he wants the art of the Spirit of God, who doth all this, in a Godly Mans Heart, when he Prays. And therefore to be able to produce ſuch an acceptable piece of work is aſcrib'd to knowledge, and light in the Soul, which is made peculiar to Believers, as being the work of the Spirit in them, Eph. 5. 8. For ye were ſometimes darkneſs, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as Children of Light, Heb. 12. 28. Wherefore we receiving a Kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may ſerve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear. The Word acceptably ſtill is us'd, and this acceptable ſervice chiefly lies in a holy skill to manage the mind, and Heart of a Man in the performance of every duty, and this skill is a peculiar Light which Unregenerate Men have not, and therefore know not how to produce the Spiritual ſecret motions of good duties, or the carriages of a Mans Spirit in them.

It is not enough neither to play the Holy Leſſon, and to ſtrike all the ſtrokes with all the Graces nimbly, and quickly, but it is requiſite to have skill to chuſe out good, and true ſtrings, ſuitable holy affections, and to have an ear to diſcern, when they Jar, or are flat, being not wound up high enough, (which Gods Ear regards, and takes notice of) and accordingly to tune the Heart aright. This art is proper only to a Holy Soul, and one Unregenerate is entirely defective in it.

CHAP. IV.

That Wicked Men wanting this true Wiſdom are Fools. This demonſtrated by conſidering the Nature of Wiſdom, of all the parts of which Ungodly Men are prov'd to be deſtitute.

Prov. 8. 4, 5, 6.

Unto you, O men, I call, and my Voice is to the Sons of Man. O ye Simple, underſtand Wiſdom; and ye Fools, be ye of an underſtanding Heart. Hear, for I will ſpeak of excellent things; and the opening of my Lips ſhall be right things.

HERE are ſome called Fools, and a Proclamation is made to them, and it is a word ſo diſgraceful, as I make no queſtion, that there are many here who thinking as they in Jer. 8. 9. Are not we Wiſe? will be deſirous to know who are meant. Unto all of us in our ſtate of Nature, Wiſdom proclaims this, for her Voice is to the Sons of Men, v. 4. Becauſe Men regard, and matter it not to be call'd Fool by one who is not Wiſe himſelf, therefore that they may be oblig'd to regard what is declar'd of them, Wiſdom it ſelf is brought in as making this declaration, v. 1. Doth not Wiſdom cry? and underſtanding put forth her Voice? Wiſdom with her own Voice Proclaims us all to be Fools.

Obſer. The Words then of the Text afford us this obſervation both of our ſelves, and other Men, that all by nature, or in the ſtate of Nature are Fools. This is the next thing of which I am to diſcourſe, in diſcovering how deprav'd Mens Judgments are by ſin, that their minds are emptied of all true ſolid Wiſdom, and are filled with nothing but folly. This is here aſſerted of all men in General, and it is eaſie to prove by an induction of particulars, that thoſe who of all others think they have reaſon to be excepted out of this Catalogue are yet included in it.

1. Learned Men, and thoſe who are the moſt skilled in Humane knowledge, and ſo are accounted the wiſeſt, as they make Wiſdom their Profeſſion, yet they are termed Fools, and 'tis aſſerted of them alſo, that in the end they prove themſelves no otherwiſe, Rom. 1. 21, 22, 23. Becauſe that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their fooliſh Heart was darkened. Profeſſing themſelves to be Wiſe, they became Fools: and changed the Glory of the uncorruptible God, into an Image made like to corruptible Man, and to Birds, and four-footed Beaſts, and creeping things.

2. If we conſider the moſt Politick, and Wiſeſt States-Men who can rule, and overturn Kingdoms by their Wits, yet all their deep Wiſdom is but folly, and comes to nothing, 1 Cor. 2. 6. Howbeit we ſpeak Wiſdom among them that are perfect: yet not the Wiſdom of this World, or of the Princes of this World, that come to nought.

3. If we look on the moſt civil ſober carriag'd Men who live free from the groſſeſt ſins, and profeſs Religion, and who are Virgins free from common pollutions, and can Pray, and Preach, yet theſe wanting Grace are termed fooliſh Virgins, Mat. 25. 3.

But again you will ask what Wiſdom doth he ſpeak of, and mean, and imply that we want, when he thus calls us all Fools, for there is much Wiſdom acknowledg'd in many other places of Scriptures to be in Unregenerate Men.

Book IV.

1. They are Wiſe enough in their Generation, Luke 16. 8. And the Lord commended the Unjuſt ſteward, becauſe he had done wiſely: for the Children of this World are in their Generation Wiſer than the Children of Light. That is, they are wiſer in their kind of wiſdom, but it is not the beſt Wiſdom. As the Crocodile is quick-ſighted on the Land, but dim-ſighted in the Water, ſo they in Earthly things are Wiſe enough, but this their Worldly Wiſdom is Fooliſhneſs in Gods account, 1 Cor. 3. 19. For the Wiſdom of this World is Fooliſhneſs with God: for it is written, He taketh the Wiſe in their own craftineſs. God ſpeaks this upon his own knowledge, for he knows their thoughts are vain, they think Godly Men to be Fools, 1 Cor. 2. 14. But the Natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are fooliſhneſs unto him; neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. But God, and his Saints know them to be ſo. Now all wiſdom is to be meaſured by God's Wiſdom, for primum in quolibet genere eſt menſura reliquorum, the firſt in every kind is the meaſure of all the reſt, and God is Primarily, and Originally Wiſe, 1 Tim. 1. 17. Now unto the King Eternal, Immortal, Inviſible, the only Wiſe God, be Honour and Glory, for ever and ever, Amen. Therefore what he eſteems fooliſhneſs, is certainly ſo.

2. They are wiſe enough to do Evil, Jer. 4. 22. But to do good they have no underſtanding. A man, who can ſpeak well to men, or hath a notable cunning head, to contrive, and bring about any Villany, becauſe his Wit lies that way, is yet very dull in any matter of Religion, and is utterly Ignorant how to Pray, or to do God any Service, which is requir'd of him, Rom. 6. 19. I ſpeak after the manner of men, becauſe of the infirmity of your Fleſh: For as ye have yielded your Members Servants to uncleanneſs, and to iniquity, unto iniquity; even ſo, now yield your members ſervants to righteouſneſs, unto holineſs.

3. They may be ſo wiſe as to know much in matters of Salvation, when yet they are not wiſe to Salvation, which is the true Wiſdom recommended to us by one who very well knew what it was, 2 Tim. 3. 15. And that from a Child thou haſt known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee Wiſe unto Salvation, through Faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus.

And now again you will ask how came we thus to be all fools. The Anſwer is eaſie, and ready; we were all born ſo, Job 11. 12. For vain Man would be Wiſe, though Man be born like a wild Aſſes colt. Which of all creatures is the moſt dull, and ſtupid But what! were we all made thus? No certainly, we are not fools of Gods making, for he created us in his Image, which eſpecially conſiſts in Knowledge, and true Wiſdom, Col. 3. 10. And have put on the new Man which is renewed in knowledge, after the Image of him that created him. How then hath Man who at firſt was Wiſe, become a Fool? Why truly Adam our great Grand-father play'd the fool by ſinning, which is the greateſt folly in the World, Prov. 5. 22. 23. His own iniquities ſhall take the wicked himſelf and he ſhall be holden with the cords of his Sins. He ſhall die without inſtruction, and in the greatneſs of his folly he ſhall go aſtray: And ſo Adam befool'd himſelf, and all his poſterity: Ay, but you will ſay, many tho' they play the fool once, yet they become wiſer by it. 'Tis true they do ſo, if they have any wit left, but Adam by ſinning quite loſt all that he had, and that juſtly, for his ſin was in coveting to get more knowledge than was meet for him, he would have been as a God, and ſo he was juſtly puniſh'd with the loſs of what he had, and aiming at the ſhadow he loſt the Subſtance. But you will ſay, Fooliſh fathers beget Wiſe Children, and therefore tho' he was a Fool, it will not follow of courſe, that we ſhould be ſo. I Anſwer yes it will, becauſe that Wiſdom was given him as a ſtock, and treaſure, to be kept for us all, and ſo loſing it, we of conſequence loſt it alſo.

But that we may farther and more particularly demonſtrate unto you the folly which is in wicked men, let us conſider what true Wiſdom is.

1. Wiſdom is more than knowledge, and then folly is more than Ignorance, and many are Witty who yet are not Wiſe. The Apoſtle makes this diſtinction between wiſdom and knowledge, 1 Cor. 12. 8. For to one is given by the Spirit, the word of Wiſdom; to another the word of Knowledge by the ſame Spirit; where by word is meant utterance, and by knowledge, a Man's being converſant about the truths, or falſeneſs of things, but wiſdom is con-

cern'd about their goodneſs, or profitableneſs. That is Wiſdoms property to enquire into, and diſcern what is beſt,or moſt advantageous,and that not in the general, but what is ſo to a mans ſelf; It is the part of a prudent Man (ſaith Ariſtotle) rightly to conſult about thoſe things, which are good and profitable to himſelf. So that as knowledge enlargeth it ſelf to all truths, and to what ever may be known to be good in the general, Wiſdom contents it ſelf with thoſe things which are profitable and uſefull; ſo Job ſpeaks of Wiſdom,as that which will make a man profitable to himſelf, Job 22.2.Can a Man be profitable unto God, as he that is wiſe may be profitable unto himſelf? As alſo Solomon adviſes a Man to be wiſe for himſelf, Prov. 9.12. If thou be wiſe,thou ſhalt be wiſe for thy ſelf:but if thou ſcorneſt,thou alone ſhalt bear it, That is,if thou have grace, and true Wiſdom,it will guide thee,as all true Wiſdom doth,to ſuch things only,as tend to thine own good,and benefit,and thou wilt be wiſe to thy ſelf.Now tho' unregenerate men have never ſo much knowledge,yet becauſe it enlightens them not to diſcern what is good, and profitable for them, but their Luſts carry them to what is hurtful, and pernicious, or which profits not in the latter end; therefore they are call'd fools, 1 Tim. 6. 9. But they that will be rich, fall into Temptation, and a ſnare, and into many fooliſh and hurtful luſts, which drown men in deſtruction and perdition. There we ſee fooliſh, and hurtful luſts are joyn'd together, as being one and the ſame. Chap. 4.

2. It is not things leſs profitable, or good for ſome particular ends only, that true Wiſdom ſeeks out for and inquires after, but that which is the chiefeſt Good, the general univerſal Good, which contains in it all true happineſs, and will ſtand a Man in ſtead at all times, and upon all occaſions. This is true Wiſdom to ſearch out, and purſue ſuch a Good as this. Thus (Ariſtotle ſays) He is abſolutely a prudent man who reaſons, and acts, about a common, or general end or Good, but he who only exerciſes himſelf about a particular one, is only prudent in ſome ſort or certain kind. A man may be a wiſe Soldier, able to lead an army,but that being but a particular end, and good, he may be a fool in other things; a man may be wiſe to get riches, or to ſcrew himſelf up into preferments, which are things profitable for a mans ſelf, but yet theſe ſerving only for a particular end, and whilſt a man is in this World, for they avail not at the day of death therefore even ſuch a man proves himſelf a fool in the end, that he made no better, nor more laſting proviſions for his happineſs, Jer. 17. 11. As the Partridge ſitteth on Eggs, and hatcheth them not:ſo he that getteth riches,and not by right,ſhall leave them in the midſt of his days, and at his end ſhall be a fool. But now grace and Godlineſs are profitable for all things,and that alſo at all times,1 Tim. 4. 8.For bodily exerciſe profiteth little: but godlineſs is profitable unto all things, having promiſe of the life that now is, and of that which is to come. Whether we dye or live,whatever condition we are or may be in,Grace will render us happy.This therefore is the true Wiſdom to ſeek grace,and the love,and favour ofGod above all things,this is true Wiſdom,and therefore call'd Wiſdom unto Salvation, 2 Tim. 3. 15. take therefore the pooreſt Chriſtian, the moſt Ignorant,and ſimple man,one who is a meer fool in all manner of Worldly buſineſs, yet if his mind be exerciſed in ſeeking after the chiefeſt good, and buſied about that one thing neceſſary, the ſaving of his Soul (which one neceſſary thing Chriſt calls the better part, Luke 10. 42. But one thing is needful. And Mary hath choſen that good part, which ſhall not be taken away from her.) He is become truly wiſe, tho' otherwiſe a fool. Tho he is a fool he ſhall not err in reſpect of holineſs, when God teacheth him, Iſa. 35. 8. And an high-way ſhall be there, and a way, and it ſhall be called the way of holineſs; the unclean ſhall not paſs over it, but it ſhall be for thoſe: the way-faring men,though fools, ſhall not err therein. Solomon on the contrary was a Wiſe man, and uſ'd his Wiſdom to find out what was that good for the Sons of Men, and he went over all pleaſures here below, but however he was befool'd in it, and he laid hold on Folly in doing ſo, Eccleſ. 2. 3. I ſought in mine Heart to give my ſelf unto Wine yet acquainting mine Heart with Wiſdom) and to lay hold on folly, till I might ſee what was that good for the Sons of Men, which they ſhould do under the Heaven, all the days of their Life. The Philoſophers alſo ſpent all their Brains in ſeeking out the chiefeſt happineſs for Man, but becauſe they miſt it, placing cing it ſome in Riches, ſome in Pleaſures, ſome in Honours, &c. Therefore herein they are proclaim'd Fools, Rom. 1. 22. Profeſſing themſelves to be Wiſe, they became Fools.

3. True Wiſdom as it finds the true, and moſt general good, ſo it directs to the beſt means for the attainment of this end, therefore Solomons ſays that Wiſdom is profitable to direct, Eccleſ. 10. 10. If the Iron be blunt, and he do not whet the edge, then muſt he put to more ſtrength: but wiſdom is profitable to direct. Now what are thoſe means? to believe in Chriſt, in the firſt place, and to love, and fear God, and to live in holy obedience, and to ſerve him ſincerely. And to make uſe of theſe means was the concluſion, to which Solomons Wiſdom in the end came, Eccleſ. 12. 13. Let us hear the concluſion of the whole matter; Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of Man. And accordingly God himſelf tells us, that this is Wiſdom, and underſtanding to keep the ſtatutes which he hath given to us, Deut. 4. 5, 6. Behold, I have taught you Statutes and Judgments, even as the Lord my God commanded me, that ye ſhould do ſo in the Land whither you go to poſſeſs it. Keep therefore and do them, for this is your wiſdom, and your underſtanding in the ſight of the Nations, which ſhall hear all theſe Statutes, and ſay, Surely this great Nation is a wiſe and underſtanding People. And ſo in Eph. 5. 17. Wherefore be ye not unwiſe, but underſtanding what the Will of the Lord is, Prov. 28. 7. Whoſo keepeth the Law, is a wiſe Son: but he that is a companion of riotous men, ſhameth his Father. He who knows the ways of Wiſdom then is convinc'd of the neceſſity of Chriſt, of Regeneration, of Faith in Chriſt, and to be ſtrictly Holy, and ſuch an one is Wiſe. But he who is ignorant of theſe and would ſearch out other means of his happineſs, is a Fool. When Solomon would find out the true cauſes of folly, and wherein it conſiſts, for that is the matter of his ſearch, in Eccleſ. 7. 25. I applied mine Heart to know and to ſearch, and to ſeek out Wiſdom and the reaſon of things, and to know the wickedneſs of Folly, even of Fooliſhneſs and Madneſs: when I ſay he would find out the Original, and nature of Folly, he ſays, ver. 29. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made Man upright; but they have ſought out many inventions. That is to ſay, Man hath been ſo fooliſh, as to ſeek other means to be happy, than what are appointed by God, and ſo are only true, and right, and effectual.

4. That wherein eſpecially Wiſdom conſiſts, is when a Man is enabled to chuſe that beſt end, and good, and the fitteſt, and moſt ſucceſsful means to obtain it. The chiefeſt part of Prudence lies in a due application to work, not only to conſult, for this Wicked Men can do, but to Judge what is beſt to be done, and to ſet about the doing it in the propereſt manner. Thus Solomon ſays, Prov. 13. 16. Every Prudent Man dealeth with Knowledge: but a Fool layeth open his folly. A wiſe Man worketh, or dealeth with Knowledge, that is, orders all his actions, and work by it, and keeps himſelf to this, as his Rule, Prov. 15. 2. The Tongue of the Wiſe uſeth Knowledge aright: but the Mouth of Fools poureth out fooliſhneſs. And ſo we are commanded to walk exactly according to Rule, Eph. 5. 15. See then that ye walk circumſpectly, not as fools, but as wiſe. The word is ἀκριβῶς, exquiſitely, exactly, ſo as not to ſwerve a tittle from the rule. A wiſe Man is enabled with skill to walk according to his pattern, but a Fool now cannot keep himſelf to any Pattern. Now then becauſe all Wicked men walk not according to the Rule of the Word, but reject Gods Commandments, therefore they are ſaid to be utterly deſtitute of all true Wiſdom, Jer. 8. 9. The Wiſe Men are aſhamed, they are diſmayed and taken; lo, they have rejected the word of the Lord, and what wiſdom is in them? And therefore Wiſdom cries to Men, as being Fools, and reproves them for not chooſing the fear of the Lord. Prov. 1. 20, 22, 29. Wiſdom crieth without, ſhe uttereth her voice in the ſtreets: How long, ye ſimple ones, will ye love ſimplicity? and the ſcorners delight in their ſcorning, and fools hate knowledge? For that they hated knowledge, and did not chuſe the fear of the Lord.

Chap. 5.

CHAP. V.

In what particulars the Folly of Unregenerate Men conſiſts. That they are uncapable of conſidering of things.

HAving thus deſcrib'd to you only in the general, wherein true Wiſdom conſiſts, I will come to ſome particulars wherein this folly of wicked men, or their want of Wiſdom conſiſts, and diſcovers it ſelf.

I. It conſiſts in an unability to conſider of things.

1. In an unability to reflect, and conſider on their own ways, and eſtates. Fools cannot turn the Eyes of their Minds inward, but as Solomom ſays, they run through the ends of the Earth, Prov. 17. 24. VViſdom is before him that hath underſtanding; but the Eyes of a Fool are in the ends of the Earth. As Beaſts, and Madmen, Children they make no inward remarks on themſelves, but paſs over their times without reflecting upon the griefs, or joys, which they have had. Their thoughts being diſpers'd and ſcatter'd cannot be call'd in, and home to themſelves, to conſider their condition, and to be intent on it. For ſtill as Wiſdom is wanting the reflecting power is wanting alſo. It is made one particular of folly not to conſider what it doth, Eccleſ. 5. 1. Keep thy Foot when thou goeſt to the Houſe of God, and be more ready to hear, than to give the ſacrifice of fools: for they conſider not that they do evil. And truly ſuch folly is there in the hearts of the Unregenerate; their Eyes look outward only to things abroad in the World, but they call them not in to view their own actions, and eſtates, and ſeldom, or never enter into any ſerious conſideration of them, Jer. 8. 6. I hearkened and heard, but they ſpake not aright: no man repented him of his wickedneſs, ſaying, VVhat have I done? every one turned to his courſe, as the Horſe ruſheth into the Battel. They are Madmen, and when they turn to the Wiſdom of the Juſt, then, and not till then they come to themſelves, as the Prodigal did. And indeed the chiefeſt part of Wiſdom Lies in knowing a Mans ſelf, and he would be a fool, who minded all buſineſs, which paſt in the World, whilſt he neglected his own.

2. A Fool is uncapable of conſidering the iſſues, and conſequences of things, and what will come of ſuch ways, and courſes which he takes, and what will be the end of them. Providence, and foreſight is the chiefeſt part of Wiſdom, Prov. 22. 3. A Prudent Man foreſeeth the evil, and hideth himſelf: but the ſimple paſs on and are puniſhed. A Wiſe Man knows the paths of Drunkards, whither they lead, and that he who lays hold on an Whoriſh Woman takes hold on Hell, and that in chooſing ſin he chooſeth Death, Prov. 8. 36. But he that ſinneth againſt me, wrongeth his own Soul; all they that hate me, love Death. And he knows that to walk in the high ways of Wiſdom is to depart from Hell beneath, but a Fool he knows not, nor conſiders this, Deut. 32. 28, 29. For they are a Nation void of Counſel, neither is there any underſtanding in them. O that they were wiſe, that they underſtood this, that they would conſider their latter end! Fooliſh Man will not conſider his latter end, and what condition he will be in at the day Death, and Judgment. An Adulterer who is led away, like a Fool, by his Luſt, never thinks what will be the ſad conſequence, and bitter fruits. Prov. 7. 21, 22, 23. VVith her much fair ſpeech ſhe cauſed him to yield, with the flattering of her Lips ſhe forced him. He goeth after her ſtraightway, as an Ox goeth to the Slaughter, or as a Fool to the Correction of the Stock: till a Dart ſtrike through his Liver, as a Bird haſteth to the Snare, and knoweth not that it is for his Life. But a Wiſe Godly Man ſees things in the cauſes, and foreſees the effects, he ſees the Puniſhment in the Sin, whilſt a Fooliſh Wicked People never conſider it, and know not the Judgment of the Lord, Jer. 8. 6, 7, 8, 9. I hearkened and heard, but they ſpake not aright: no man repented him of his wickedneſs, ſaying, VVhat have I done? every one turned to his courſe, as the Horſe ruſheth into the Battel. Yea the Stork in the Heaven knoweth her appoint- ed times, and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow obſerve the time of their coming, but my People know not the Judgment of the Lord. How do ye ſay, We are Wiſe and the Law of the Lord is with us? lo, certainly in vain made he it, the Pen of the Scribes is in vain. The Wiſe Men are aſhamed, they are diſmayed and taken; lo, they have rejected the Word of the Lord, and what Wiſdom is in them?

3. A Fool is unable to conſider fit times, and ſeaſons, and opportunities wherein things fall out to him, or are to be done by him. Indeed to conſider circumſtances is the chiefeſt thing in which Wiſdom conſiſteth, as it is ſaid of the Wiſemen, that they knew the times, Eſther 1. 13. Then the King ſaid to the Wiſe Men, which knew the times, (for ſo was the Kings manner towards all that knew Law and Judgment: Ungodly Men then are Fools who know not the times of their viſitation, who do not apprehend when it is the day of Grace, and when a time of Salvation comes, Jer. 8. 7, 8. Yea the Stork in the Heaven knoweth her appointed times, and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow obſerve the time of their coming, but my People know not the Judgment of the Lord. How do ye ſay, we are Wiſe and the Law of the Lord is with us, lo, certainly in vain made he it, the Pen of the Scribes is in vain. The Judgment of the Lord, that is, the ſeaſon of Faith, Repentance, and Converſion, the ſeaſon of averting Gods Wrath, and Vengeance from them. This they know not, but when God calls to Faſting, Weeping, and Mourning, they run out into all exceſs of Riot, and this is their great miſery, Eccleſ. 8. 6, 7. Becauſe to every purpoſe there is Time, and Judgment; therefore the miſery of Man is great upon him. For he knoweth not that which ſhall be: for who can tell him when it ſhall be? But he who is Wiſe ſhall know time, and Judgment, and ſo be ſafe. There are times wherein Heaven is offer'd to them, as there was a time when the Kingdom might have been ſetled on Saul, but they regard them not, as he did not conſider, and diſcern his opportunity, and ſo loſt it, 1 Sam. 13. 13, 14. And Samuel ſaid to Saul, Thou haſt done fooliſhly, thou haſt not kept the Commandment of the Lord thy God which he Commanded thee: for now would the Lord have eſtabliſhed thy Kingdom upon Iſrael for ever. But now thy Kingdom ſhall not continue: the Lord hath ſought him a Man after his own Heart, and the Lord hath commanded him to be Captain over his People, becauſe thou haſt not kept that which the Lord Commanded thee It was his Folly made him not diſcern it. But he who ſees his time, and opportunity, and ſtrikes in with it, Prov. 10. 5. He that gathereth in Summer is a Wiſe Son: but he that ſleepeth in Harveſt, is a Son that cauſeth ſhame. And therefore an Ant is reckoned a Wiſe Creature, but the Unregenerate are Fools in neglecting their ſeaſon of Grace. Thus alſo they know not the proper Seaſon of Duties, when to Pray, and when to Hear, &c. They know not, that in the firſt place they ſhould ſeek the Kingdom of God, and then next in order mind their Worldly affairs, and follow their callings, Mat. 6. 33. But ſeek ye firſt the Kingdom of God, and his Righteouſneſs, and all theſe things ſhall be added unto you. They therefore act all things raſhly, and confuſedly, and this is made the property of a Fool, when he enters into the Temple, and ſhould hear, then to fall a reading, or Praying, this is the Sacrifice of a Fool, becauſe out of ſeaſon.

4. A Fool is unable to make uſe of a rule in any particular caſe. Give rules to them, and ſee what abſurdities they will commit. Dum vitant vitia, in contraria currunt. While they avoid one error, they run into others of the contrary extream. You cannot by any direction teach a Fool to make a Croſs. Thus let an Unregenerate Man have never ſo much knowledge, and inſtruction, yet he is not directed by it in his particular courſe to bring forth actions pleaſing, and acceptable to God, as tho' you give a Fool the exacteſt relations of a way, yet when he comes to make uſe of them, and to take his journey, in every turning, or by-Lane he miſtakes, and bewilders himſelf, Eccleſ. 10. 3. Yea alſo when he that is a Fool walketh by the way, his Wiſdom faileth him, and he ſaith to every one that he is a Fool. A Fool when he walks in the way, all his inſtructions fail him, he may tell the way, and give it to others, but how to take it himſelf he knows not. Thus an Ungodly Man, tho' he is inſtructed by the Word, what the way is wherein he ſhould go, yet he will miſs it, for he wants the Spirit of God to ſay to him on all occaſions, this is the way, walk in it, which is promis'd to thoſe whom God loves, and takes care of, Iſa. 30.21. And thine Ears ſhall hear a word behind thee, ſaying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left, And as Solomon ſays the Wiſdom of the prudent is to know his way, Prov. 14. 8. The Wiſdom of the Prudent is to underſtand his way: but the folly of fools is deceit, not the way in general only, but his way, wherein he ſhould ſteer his courſe. And anſwerably the Apoſtle exhorts us to walk exactly, Eph. 5. 15. ἀκριβῶς, according to a rule. It is not Wiſdom to underſtand the will of the Lord only, but to be able to walk by that rule, for a Man may get rules, and yet not know how to turn his Heart, or hand to them. Chap. 5.

5. A Fool is ſtupid, and inſenſible, and lays not any thing to Heart. Fools cannot have ſtrong, or ſerious thoughts, for they cannot be intent on any thing, and therefore they are always Merry, and will Laugh even at the wagging of a Straw, Eccleſ. 7. 4, 5, 6. The Heart of the Wiſe is in the Houſe of Mourning; but the Heart of Fools is in the Houſe of Mirth. It is better to hear the rebuke of the Wiſe, than for a Man to hear the Song of Fools. For as the crackling of thorns under a Pot, ſo is the laughter of the Fool: this alſo is vanity. The Heart of the Wiſe is in the Houſe of Mourning, to ſorrow upon every great and juſt occaſion, but if a Fool lays any things to Heart, they are trifles, the loſs of a Bauble, or a fooliſh word ſpoken, but tell them that ſuch a Friend is dead, or that the Spaniards are on the Coaſt, and they are not at all mov'd. Denounce threatnings to an Adulterer, or Drunkard, and they will ſoon ſhake them off, and the moſt terrible things ſpoken in the Word of God ſink not at all into them, but they paſs on till they are puniſh'd at laſt, Prov. 22.3. A Prudent Man foreſeeth the evil, and hideth himſelf: but the ſimple paſs on and are puniſhed. They will lay the loſs of trifles to Heart, but not the loſs of Gods favour. They will be troubled for petty matters, whilſt they are not concern'd at Gods anger, nor the ſufferings of his People, nor the Miſeries, and ruins of the Churches of Chriſt abroad. They do not weigh, nor ponder in their minds, but forget the afflictions of Joſeph, drinking Wine in Bowls, Amos 6. 6. That drink Wine in Bowls, and anoint themſelves with the chief Ointments: but they are not grieved for the affliction of Joſeph. When God comes with Armies into their Countrey, or waſts it with Fire, or a Plague, ſtill they are careleſs as thoſe in Iſa. 42. 24, 25. Who gave Jacob for a ſpoil, and Iſrael to the Robbers? did not the Lord, he againſt whom we have ſinned? for they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his Law. Therefore he hath poured upon him the fury of his anger, and the ſtrength of Battel: and it hath ſet him on fire round about, yet he knew not; and it burned him, yet he laid it not to Heart. And indeed it is no wonder, that they lay not Gods Judgments to Heart, who make light of Sin, that deſerves, and brings them, Prov. 14. 9. Fools make a mock at ſin: but among the Righteous there is favour.

CHAP. VI.

That another Particular wherein their folly is manifeſt is in their falſe Judgments. They deceive themſelves in the eſtimate they make of things, and actions.

THE ſecond main thing wherein the folly of Unregenerate Men conſiſts is their falſe Judgments. In Judging and eſteeming of what is good, and profitable for themſelves they are deceiv'd by many falſe Rules. And folly, or falſe Judging of things is called in the general by Chriſt, and Paul, judging according to the appearance κατ' ὄψιν, that is, according to what things outwardly ſeem to be, John 7. 24. Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous Judgment. And by the Apoſtle it is ſtil'd Judging κατὰ πρόσωπον, πρόσωπον, according to the firſt ſhew, and ſemblance of things, the firſt bluſh, and view of them, 2 Cor. 10. 7. Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? If any Man truſt to himſelf, that he is Chriſts, let him of himſelf think this again, that as he is Chriſts, even ſo are we Chriſts. And again it is called by Chriſt Judging κατὰ σάρκα according to the Fleſh, John 8. 15. Ye Judge after the Fleſh, I Judge no Man after the Fleſh, that is, according to the outward Bark, and Rind, not piercing into the Marrow, nor ſearching the Soul of the thing within, the inward vertues, and qualities. Chriſt ſpeaks upon occaſion of their judging of him by his outſide, becauſe they ſaw him cloath'd with Fleſh, and hidden under the poor appearance of a Carpenters Son, encompaſs'd with the ſame infirmities that men are, overcaſt with diſgraces, and ſoil'd with Poverty, therefore thought of him, but as of an ordinary Man, and were offended at him, and his followers. And Paul alſo in that 1 Cor. 10. 7. ſpeaks to the Corinthians upon occaſion of their falſe Judging of Preaching which they eſtimated by flaunting, and outward eloquence, and becauſe Pauls Preaching was rude, and not handſomely dreſs'd up, tho' full of the depths of Wiſdom they contemn'd him. Thus an Unregenerate Man fooliſhly Judges according to the outward face of things, and ſo is deceiv'd, as a Countryman, who ſees the Sun, and thinketh it to be no bigger than a Platter, when as it exceeds the Earth in Magnitude, he Judgeth according to appearance, and not by rules of art, and ſo is miſtaken. Now the falſe rules by which men are guided in thus Judging are many.

1. They judge thoſe things beſt for them, which are preſent before them, and may preſently be enjoyed, tho' but a while, and are ſo inconſiderate as to prefer them to thoſe that are afar of, and out of ſight, and but in hopes, tho' infinitely better, and of eternal duration. They are ſo fooliſh as to prefer the Devils, and the Worlds preſent Pay above all God's Promiſes, and his recompenſe of reward. They act thus meerly out of folly, for Wiſdom only inableth a Man to ſee, and apprehend the goodneſs of things afar off, and out of ſight, but Fools, and Children, and Beaſts look only to what is before them, and preſent in their view. Take a Child, and look what he hath in his hand he will hardly be brought to part with it for all your promiſes, and hopes given him of ſomething better, unleſs you preſent it before him to exchange with him, for he wants Wiſdom to judge of the goodneſs of what he ſees not. Hence alſo it is always one fruit of folly, and weakneſs to be Impatient, and that it cannot ſtay for a thing, Wiſdom being wanting to content, and quiet the mind till the thing for which it longs is come, hence you ſee Children, and Fools whom nothing but preſent things will ſatisfie, cry till they ſee, and enjoy what they would have. So this ſame now, the preſent time ſways all Unregenerate Men, as it ſwayed, and prevail'd with Eſau, Gen. 25. 30, 31, 32. And Eſau ſaid to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that ſame red Pottage; for I am faint: therefore was his Name called Edom. And Jacob ſaid, ſell me this day thy Birth-right. And Eſau ſaid, Behold, I am at the point to die: and what profit ſhall this Birth-right do to me? He had a ſenſe of nothing, but what might ſatisfie his preſent needs, and deſires, and as for his Birth-right he thought he ſhould have no uſe of it till his Fathers Death, it was a thing to come, and a Type of Heaven, and ſo he ſells it. Thus do Wicked Men ſell Heaven, and purchaſe to themſelves eternal deſtruction to enjoy preſent pleaſures, or to avoid preſent ſufferings, 2 Tim. 4. 10. For Demas hath forſaken me, having loved this preſent World, and is departed unto Theſſalonica: Creſcens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia. There lay the Motive, and Inducement, he had preſent offers, and opportunities of Riches, and Preferments, tho' with the Shipwrack of a good Conſcience. Whereas Grace inableth a Man to bear preſent inconveniences, and to forbear preſent pleaſures, looking to things to come; ſo ſays Paul, 2 Cor. 4. 16, 17, 18. For which cauſe we faint not, but though our outward Man periſh, yet the inward Man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of Glory; While we look not at the things which are ſeen, but at the things which are not ſeen: for the things which are ſeen, are temporal; but the things which are not ſeen, are eternal. For this cauſe (ſays he) we faint not, tho' tho' our outward Man periſh, tho' our Credit decays, our Eſtate conſumes and our ſtrength waſtes, yet it is well enough with us as long as the inward Man is renewed. He Judg'd not according to the appearance, and outſide of things, and therefore tho' he ſuffer'd afflictions at preſent, yet he ſaw a Glory beyond them attending him, and that theſe light Afflictions wrought for him that far more weighty Glory, while he look'd not at the things which are ſeen, thus he Judg'd. There is the reaſon of all, While we look not at the things which are ſeen, but at the things which are not ſeen (ſays he) thus we judge of our Afflictions, and of the Glory which is to come. And after this rate he ſpeaks alſo in another place, Rom. 8. 18. For I reckon, that the ſufferings of this preſent time, are not worthy to be compared with the glory which ſhall be revealed in us. Chap. 6.

2. Fools are miſled to judge of things by the eaſineſs, or difficulty of attaining them, and they prefer things eaſie, before thoſe which are hard, and difficult. Fools are preſently diſcourag'd, if you tell them of Bugg-bears in the way, and ſo are Idle and Sluggiſh, and will not ſtir, Prov. 26. 13, 14, 15. The ſlothful Man ſaith, there is a Lion in the way, a Lion is in the ſtreets. As the door turneth upon his hinges, ſo doth the ſlothful upon his bed. The ſlothful hideth his hand in his boſom, it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth. A ſlothful Man is loth to bring his hand to his mouth; and every ſlothful Man is a Fool, v. 16. The ſluggard is wiſer in his own conceit, than ſeven Men that can render a reaſon. But wiſe Men knowing Wiſdom to be their ſtrength, are not diſcourag'd with difficulties, but dare attempt, and venture on great things, Eccleſ. 7. 19. Wiſdom ſtrengtheneth the Wiſe, more than ten mighty Men which are in the City. Prov. 21. 22. A Wiſe Man ſcaleth the City of the mighty, and caſteth down the ſtrength of the confidence thereof. Now to apply this to the purpoſe, unregenerate Men, becauſe the way to Hell is eaſie, they go with the ſtream of their own hearts, and the reſt of the World, and they ſail thither with a fair wind, and need not row much againſt the ſtream, and therefore they chuſe this as the eaſier way, but the way to heaven being difficult; and diſgraces, ſcoffs, the enmity and rage of the World, calamities and ſufferings being in that way, they ſay a Lion is there, and danger, and they will not ſtir a foot thither, Prov. 26. 13. They therefore decline thoſe ways all that ever they can: They ſay the Cities are all walled, which lie between them and Heaven, and that there are great and armed Enemies to ſtop them in their paſſage: Thus they will ſay to themſelves for diſcouragment, ſpeaking as the Spies did to diſcourage the Jews from going into Canaan, Num. 13. 28. Neverthleſs the People be ſtrong that dwell in the Land, and the Cities are walled, and very great: And moreover we ſaw the Children of Anak there. There are ſuch great luſts to be overcome (ſays the man to himſelf) which will require much Battering, and much Prayer, and Faſting muſt be us'd to caſt ſome Devils out, and ſome luſts are ſo ſweet, that there can be no ſuch thing, as parting with them, ſome are ſo ſtrong, that there is no throwing them, this is impoſſible to be done, and it is hard to require it, as the diſciple ſaid to Chriſt (when he told them, that they muſt deny themſelves all things for his ſake) Theſe are hard ſayings. They will therefore content themſelves with a common care of ſerving God, ſo much as they can perform with eaſe, and as will ſtand with their luſts. And as for ſtrictneſs of Sanctifying the Sabbath, praying privately, and conſtant keeping down every luſt, and fighting againſt it, and watching over the heart at all places, and times, theſe are hard ſayings to them, which they cannot bear, and ſo they are diverted, and put off from ſuch holy ways, and condemn ſuch ſtrictneſs as impoſſible to Fleſh, and Blood. This is their folly, for wiſdom is too high for a fool, and ſo he lets it alone as a thing out of his reach, Prov. 24. 7.

3. Fools Judge of things by their outward adornings, and as they are ſet out to ſhew, thoſe to be the beſt men, who have the gayeſt cloaths. As Children phanſie ſuch books to be beſt, which have the moſt Gays in them, and thoſe the beſt Horſes, which have the moſt Bells, and Trappings, ſo do Unregenerate Men Judge of themſelves, and others. Thus they Judge of other men, let a Man be never ſo holy, yet

Book IV. if poor, or disgrac'd in the World, or if he hath not great parts, they despise him, Eccles, 9. 15. Now there was found in it a poor wise Man, and he by his wisdom delivered the City; yet no Man remembred that poor Man. If the Messiah, if Christ himself come among them, yet if cloathed as a Carpenters Son, and meanly attended but by Fisher-men, tho' he speaks as never Man spake, and act as never Man did, yet they are offended at him. Our Saviour speaking to this false opinion had of him, and his Kingdom, says, The Kingdom of God comes not with pomp, so it is in the Original μετὰ παρατηρήσεως, but it is within you, Luk. 17. 20. And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the Kingdom of God should come; he answered them and said, The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation. So they think too, them the happiest Men, who are most rich, Psal. 10. 3. For the wicked boasteth of his Hearts desire and blesseth the covetous, whom the Lord abhorreth. They Judge them most happy, who have an affluence of earthly Good, who have fair Wives, who have Preferment, or Applause in the World, &c. Thus they will Judge of Sermons by the floridness of the Words, thus they will Judge of the Preacher by his voice, and way of delivery, and that he who makes most noise hath most Eloquence, and that a discourse is best which hath most flashing, flaunting Wit, as the Corinthians Judg'd of their teachers, 2 Cor. 10. 7. They Judg'd according to appearance, and because Paul was weak and rude in utterance, because he had not a Majestick presence, and Lofty way of speaking, they regarded him not, 2 Cor. 10. 10. For his letters (say they) are weighty and Powerful, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible. They prefer a tinkling Cymbal, him who makes a fine noise before him. How far is such a vain Spirit, from the Wisdom of a Man Godly, who as one who comes to a Feast, regards not the Musick but the Meat, so he comes to a Sermon not to please his Phansie, but to feed his Soul? And in all other things unregenerate men glory in vanity, and an empty shew, as Fools do in a new gay coat, or in a Rattle, or any thing which makes a noise. They rejoyce in the applause of the World, in a good Bargain, a fair House, more than in a good Ministry; in the glory of their town, and the state of their Magistrates, more than in the Holiness, Grace, and Gifts of their Ministers. Thus they have the property of a Fool, which is made to consist in glorying in outward things, 2 Cor. 11. 16. I say again, let no Man think me a Fool, if otherwise, yet as a Fool receive me, that I may boast my self a little.

4. Fools judge of things by the quantity, and not the quality, and worth of them. Thus they use to do both as to magnitude, and multitude, greatness, and number of things. If you offer a Fool, or a Child a small piece of Gold, and a bigger one of Silver, or two, or three pieces of Silver, he will chuse that which is biggest, or most, not what is most valuable. Thus do Unregenerate men judge by greatness; look which way the Great ones, the Rulers do go, look what Opinions they hold, what Judgment they are of, or what courses they take, the same they therefore approve. And as they judge of men thus, so also of their own performances. They think for the length, and breadth, and bulk of their duties to have them accepted, Isa. 1. 11. To what purpose is the multitude of your Sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord: I am full of the burnt-offerings of Rams, and the fat of fed Beasts, and I delight not in the blood of Bullocks, or of Lambs, or of He-Goats. When they imagined by reason of the number of their Sacrifices to be favourably received, To what purpose (says God) is your multitude of Sacrifices?

5. Things that are in appearance and shew like each other, tho' in worth and virtue differing, a Fool cannot distinguish. Brass and Gold, because both glister, and look of the same colour, both are alike to him. And thus is it with Unregenerate men, who taking common grace for saving grace, because there is a likeness, Civility and Good Nature for the Holy Divine Nature, Checks of Conscience for the Combate of Flesh and Spirit, judge that they are well enough as long as they find these things in themselves.

Chap. 7.

CHAP. VII.

Their Folly alſo appears in the Ill Choice which they make of things.

WE are next to conſider Mens Folly as diſcovering it ſelf in the choice of things: They are very earneſt and eager in the purſuit of what is of little or no importance, but neglect that which is the main, and greateſt concern.

1. They chuſe to do unneceſſary things in the firſt place, and neglect thoſe which are moſt neceſſary, and put them off to the laſt. Is not this the part of a Fool? If a man ſhould go to London to get a Pardon, or about ſome great Suit at Law, and ſhould in the firſt place ſpend the moſt, or chiefeſt of all his time in ſeeing the Lions at the Tower, the Tombs in Weſtminſter-Abby, or the Streets and Buildings of the City, or in viſiting Friends, and put the other off to the laſt, would he not be a Fool? Chriſt who was Wiſdom it ſelf judged it folly in Martha, to be buſie about many things, and to neglect the main, that one thing neceſſary. It is not neceſſary to be Rich, or Learned, or Great, tho' we have cauſe to bleſs God if we obtain them, but God's favour, and Chriſt, and Grace are abſolutely neceſſary; therefore, ſays Chriſt, Firſt ſeek the Kingdom of God, Mat. 6. 33. But ſeek ye firſt the Kingdom of God, and his Righteouſneſs, and all theſe things ſhall be added unto you. So he as Wiſdom directs us.

2. He is a Fool, who chuſeth to commit his Happineſs to uncertainties, rather than the greateſt certainty, which he might have. How fooliſh is that man, who makes a Bankrupt a Feoffee in Truſt for all his Eſtate, who can give him no ſecurity, but is likely to break, and run away, when he might have good ſecurity for all? Thus do all Unregenerate men, who truſt in uncertain Riches, in their Credit, and Preferments here, as their Happineſs, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Charge them that are rich in this World, that they be not high-minded, nor truſt in uncertain riches, but in the living God; who giveth us richly all things to enjoy. What is the Counſel which the Apoſtle kindly gives us, that we ſhould not truſt in uncertain Riches, which have wings, and are like to flie way to morrow, but in the Living God, who gives us all things richly to enjoy? There is a double oppoſition, Riches are not all-ſufficient, but God is he who gives all things, and that richly: Or if they were ſufficient, yet they are uncertain, but God is the Living God. This accordingly is a Motive made of eſtabliſhing a ſure Covenant, Iſa. 55. 3. Incline your Ear, and come unto me: hear, and your Soul ſhall live, and I will make an everlaſting Covenant with you, even the ſure mercies of David. I will (ſays God) make an everlaſting Covenant with thee, even the ſure mercies of David, which will never fail thee, as all other things will, which have wings, and will leave thee in the lurch.

3. He who provides not for all conditions, and all times which he is to run through, will be found to be a Fool in the end, and he to be the only wiſe man, who doth ſo. Therefore Chriſt called the Rich, man Fool, becauſe he thought indeed whilſt he lived he ſhould do well enough, having goods for many years; but ſuppoſe thou dyeſt this night (ſays Chriſt) what a miſtaken, diſappointed Fool wilt thou be? Then he is prov'd a Fool indeed, Luke 12. 19, 20. And I will ſay to my Soul, Soul, thou haſt much goods laid up for many years; take thine eaſe, eat, drink, and be merry. But God ſaid unto him, Thou fool, this night thy ſoul ſhall be required of thee: then whoſe ſhall thoſe things be which thou haſt provided? And ſo to the ſame purpoſe is Jer. 17. 9, 10. The Heart is deceitful above all things, and deſperately wicked, who can know it? I the Lord ſearch the Heart, I try the Reins, even to give every Man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings. However a deceitful Heart may flatter him, and make him preſume that he is happy in a preſent proſperous ſtate of things, yet when God comes to try him, and to make a change in his condition, he will prove him to be a poor deluded Fool. But he is call'd a Wiſe Man who makes proviſions againſt all events. Thus that Steward is ſaid to have done wiſely, who made himſelf friends, that when his Maſter ſhould turn him out of doors, might receive him, Luk. 16. 8. And the Lord commended the unjuſt Steward, becauſe he had done wiſely: for the children of this world are in their generation wiſer than the children of light. He did wiſely (ſays Chriſt) in his generation. And I ſay to you, Make you friends here of God, and Chriſt, and the Saints, ſpend thy Strength, Money, Credit, and all for them, that when you fail they may receive you, that you may be welcome to Heaven, when you are turn'd out here, v. 9. And I ſay unto you, Make to your ſelves friends of the mammon of unrighteouſneſs; that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlaſting habitations. That when you are turn'd out of Houſe, and Home, you may have ſtill a refuge, come what will, and can come, that when the Tower of your Earthly Greatneſs, and the Magazine of your Riches is taken, you may have God as a ſtrong Tower to run to, and be ſafe. Prov. 18. 10. The name of the Lord is a ſtrong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and is ſafe. Thus a Regenerate Man is truly Wiſe, who provides a refuge, which will ſerve him at all times, and in all eſtates, and ſo he can never be miſerable. Tho' all things be overturn'd he will ſtill fall on his feet, when as another Man ventures his all in a falſe, and deceitful bottom.

4. He who hath not the wit to chooſe a ſmall preſent inconvenience to avoid a greater for time to come, is a Fool, and he who can ſuffer a ſmall one thereby to prevent a greater is a Wiſe Man, 2 Tim. 2. 3, 7. Thou therefore endure hardneſs, as a good ſouldier of Jeſus Chriſt. Conſider what I ſay; and the Lord give thee underſtanding in all things. Endure hardſhip here a while (ſays he) labour a while, and Sow, expecting reward afterward, and becauſe Wiſdom only enableth to do this, therefore he adds, the Lord give thee underſtanding. This courſe Moſes took, who choſe to ſuffer rather than ſin, Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26. By faith Moſes, when he was come to years, refuſed to be called the ſon of Pharaohs Daughter; chuſing rather to ſuffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleaſure of ſin for a ſeaſon; Eſteeming the reproach of Chriſt greater riches than the treaſures in Egypt: for he had reſpect unto the recompence of the reward. But Wicked Men who love ſin, who regard iniquity in their hearts, chuſe iniquity, rather than affliction, Job 36. 21. Take heed, regard not iniquity: for this haſt thou choſen rather than affliction. He ſhrinks at a ſcoff rather than at being damn'd, and can be content, and ſuffer himſelf to be jeer'd out of Heaven, and hiſs'd out of Paradiſe.

5. He who in his bargains exchangeth away precious things for trifles, is a Fool, and indeed you uſe to call ſuch Fools Bargains, and a Fool, and a Child are eaſily cheated. Well, thus do Men ſell their time, which is their Money given them to purchaſe Eternity, and they ſell it for things unſatisfying, they ſell themſelves for nought, Iſa. 52. 3. For thus ſaith the Lord, ye have ſold your ſelves for nought: and ye ſhall be redeemed without Money. They ſell their right in Heaven for a Meſs of Pottage, as Eſau did, Heb. 12. 16. Leſt there be any fornicatour, or profane perſon, as Eſau, who for one Morſel of meat ſold his birth-right. And they ſell themſelves, as Ahab, to work wickedneſs. The pleaſures of ſin are their Wages, and they are content to ſell their Souls, and all to enjoy this World. Whereas he who made over all he had to buy the truths of Salvation, that ineſtimable Pearl is call'd a Wiſe Merchant-Man, Mat. 13. 45, 46. Again, the Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a merchant-man, ſeeking goodly Pearls: who when he had found one pearl of great price, he went and ſold all that he had, and bought it. But a Fool (ſaith Solomon) hath a price in his Hand, and no heart to it, Prov. 17. 16. Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool to get Wiſdom, ſeeing he hath no heart to it? He hath a good bargain offer'd him, and as it were pinn'd to his back, and yet paſſeth it by. Fools are eaſily cheated, and ſo is a Man who hath no Grace, by the Devil, if he hath heard a Sermon, and comes home with his heart full fraught with rich Pearls, and Treaſure, and full of the precious motions of Gods Spirit, the Devil comes, and puts Worldly cares in his head, and ſteals the Word away, and ſo cheats him, Mark 4. 15, 19. And theſe are they by the way-ſide, where the word is ſown, but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was ſown in their hearts. And the cares of this World, and the deceitfulneſs of riches, and the Luſts of other things entring in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful. Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

Their folly is alſo evident from the event, and iſſue of all their actions.

THE folly of Wicked Men is not only manifeſt in their falſe Judgment, and inconſiderate choice of things, but it is clearly apparent in the event, and iſſue of all their actions, which proves them to be Fools in the end. Jer. 17. 11. As the Partridge ſitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not: ſo he that getteth riches, and not by right, ſhall leave them in the midſt of his days, and at his end ſhall be a fool.

1. He who doth all things in vain, and ſo, that he will certainly loſe all his labour, is a Fool. It is for this reaſon the Apoſtle gives the Galatians that Title, becauſe they went about to invalidate, and fruſtrate all their labour in receiving, and underſtanding the truths of the Goſpel, and all their pains in ſuffering for the ſake of them, Gal. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4. O fooliſh Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that you ſhould not obey the truth, before whoſe eyes Jeſus Chriſt hath been evidently ſet forth, crucified among you? this only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Are ye ſo fooliſh? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the fleſh? Have ye ſuffered ſo many things in vain? if it be yet in vain. And thus do all Unregenerate Men, not prophane one only who take pleaſure in ſin, and bring forth fruit whereof they have reaſon to be aſham'd, Rom. 6. 21. What fruit had ye then in thoſe things whereof ye are now aſhamed? for the end of thoſe things is death. But the beſt of them, who profeſs Religion, and do many duties and ſuffer much for Chriſt, and have Lamps, and ſeem to watch for the coming of our Lord, yet they loſe the end of all their labour, and all proves vain for want of doing a little more, or going on a little further. They fall away at laſt wanting Grace in the Heart, and therefore thoſe Virgins who had not Oil in their Lamps, Mat. 25. are called fooliſh, becauſe tho' they waited the Bridegrooms coming, yet they had not Grace, nor principles in their Hearts. So to thoſe too who tell Chriſt, that they did many things in his name, yet all is in vain, becauſe they did it not to him. In vain are all your New Moons, and Obſervances, ſays God to thoſe in Iſa. 1. 13, 14. Bring no more vain oblations, incenſe is an abomination unto me, the new-moons and ſabbaths, the calling of aſſemblies I cannot away with, it is iniquity, even the ſolemn meeting. Your new-moons, and your appointed feaſts my ſoul hateth: they are a trouble unto me, I am weary to bear them. And themſelves complain, that they were diligent in their Religious performances, faſted, &c. to no purpoſe, Iſa. 58. 3. Wherefore have we faſted, ſay they, and thou ſeeſt not? wherefore have we afflicted our ſoul, and thou takeſt no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your faſt you find pleaſure, and exact all your labours. What was it render'd all their duties unavailing? Why they retain'd their old ſins, which ſpoil'd all. Such a Fool was Herod, who upon John Baptiſt's Preaching did many things gladly, but loſt all for an Herodias. Such a Fool was Jehu who tho' he had a zeal, yet ſpoil'd all his work for want of doing a little more. Such a Fool was Jehoaſh who walk'd in all Gods ways many years, and yet made Shipwrack in the Haven, and a ſmall matter it was which turn'd him from following the ways of God, in which he had made ſo good a beginning, he was mov'd only by the flatteries, bowings, and cringing of his wicked courtiers to him, 2 Chron. 24. 17, 18. Now after the death of Jehoiada, came the princes of Judah, and made obeiſance to the King: then the King hearkened unto them. And they left the houſe of the Lord

Book IV.

God of their Fathers, and ſerved Groves and Idols: and wrath came upon Judah and Jeruſalem for this their treſpaſs. Such Fools are they too, who run in a Race, and yet for want of dieting themſelves or Horſes, or taking a little more pains, loſe it, but the Apoſtle Paul is ſo Wiſe as to take care to do his buſineſs effectually, 1 Cor. 9. 24, 25, 26, 27. Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain. And every man that ſtriveth for the maſtery, is temperate in all things: Now, they do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible. I therefore ſo run, not as uncertainly: ſo fight I, not as one that beateth the Air: but I keep under my body, and bring it into ſubjection: leſt that by any means when I have Preached to others, I my ſelf ſhould be a caſt-away. He alſo who begins to build, and is not able to finiſh, is call'd a fooliſh builder, for all his work and charge is but in vain. Thus thoſe who ſet out fair in a profeſſion of Religion, and do many things, but go not on to perfection, of all fools they are the worſt. For others tho' in the iſſue they are wretched, miſtaken fools, yet whilſt they live here they enjoy the pleaſures of ſin, and are beloved of the World; But theſe forbear the moſt ſins, and endure much at Mens hands, and are hated for their profeſſion of Religion, which yet doth them no good, but proves vain in the end. They are like thoſe who have beſtowed much coſt in a ſickneſs, and yet dye at laſt for want of expending a little more, which would ſave their lives, or they reſemble thoſe, who after having been at great charges and trouble to commence, and carry on a Suit a Law, yet ſtarve their cauſe, and loſe it, becauſe they will not be at the expence of a little more Money in it.

2. He is a Fool in the event whoſe ſuppoſed happineſs proves his miſery. Thus is it with the Wicked, and God who delights to confound the Pride, and Glory of Men, makes them Wiſe, and Happy the backward way, as men ſay of Gains, Iſa. 44. 25. That fruſtrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad, that turneth wiſe men back-ward, and maketh their knowledge fooliſh. God makes all their boaſted knowledge fooliſhneſs, and when they uſe all wits, and counſels to make themſelves happy, miſery, and ſorrow, is the effect. God makes their own Counſels, and Ways to be their ruin. Prov. 5. 22. His own iniquities ſhall take the wicked himſelf, and he ſhall be holden with the cords of his ſins. Prov. 1. 32. For the turning away of the ſimple ſhall ſlay them, and the proſperity of fools ſhall deſtroy them. Thoſe courſes whereby they thought in their great Wiſdom to advance themſelves, are turn'd againſt them. Thus when Jeroboam thought to ſecure his uſurp'd Kingdom by ſetting up Golden Calves at Bethel, they prov'd his ruin. 1 Kings 12. 26, 27, 28, 29, 30. And Jeroboam ſaid in his heart, now ſhall the Kingdom return to the houſe of David: if this people go up to do ſacrifice in the houſe of the Lord at Jeruſalem, then ſhall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam King of Judah, and they ſhall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam King of Judah. Whereupon the King took counſel, and made two Calves of gold, and ſaid unto them; It is too much for you to go up to Jeruſalem: behold thy Gods, O Iſrael, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. And he ſet the one in Beth-el, and the other put he in Dan. And this thing became a ſin: for the people went to worſhip before the one, even unto Dan. Thus Ahaz when he thought that he did right in ſacrificing to the Gods of Syria, acted to his deſtruction as well as of all Iſrael, 2 Chron. 28. 23. For he ſacrificed unto the Gods of Damaſcus, which ſmote him: and he ſaid, becauſe the Gods of the Kings of Syria help them, therefore will I ſacrifice to them, that they may help me: but they were the ruine of him and of all Iſrael. Men by Lying, and unjuſt dealing bring themſelves into greater ſtraits, and do but ſteal a Card whereby to loſe the whole Game. They by their own ſubtle wicked tricks oftentimes ſo beſiege themſelves that they cannot eſcape, Hoſ. 7. 2. And they conſider not in their hearts, that I remember all their wickedneſs: now their own doings have beſet them about, they are before my face. you who plot againſt Gods Miniſters ſhall be taken in your own Nets, and God will confound you as he did all your fore-fathers, and your great Grand-ſire Satan, in all their plots. He thought by Crucifying Chriſt to have been quiet, and that very thing prov'd his undoing. Thus whilſt you dig to undermine the the Godly, the Earth falls on your own heads. The Egyptians thought themſelves Wiſe in following the Iſraelites through the Red-Sea, for they were on Foot, and themſelves had Chariots, and ſo they thought that God muſt deſtroy the Iſraelites alſo, if he brought the Sea in. But wherein they dealt proudly, and preſumptuouſly God was above them. Chap. 8.

3. He who is led with vain promiſes is a Fool, that feeds himſelf with what is not. Now even in matters of the World Wicked Men are apt to do ſo. They hearken to every thing but Gods Word, and believe any thing which will pretend to ſhew, and direct them unto a happineſs here, Pſal. 49. 11, 12, 13. Their inward thoughts is, that their houſes ſhall continue for ever, and their dwelling-places to all generations; they call their lands after their own names. Nevertheleſs, man being in honour, abideth not: he is like the Beaſts that periſh. This their way is their folly; yet their poſterity approve their ſayings. Selah. And yet thus in other things too they believe their own vain hearts in all that they tell them, Prov. 14. 15. The ſimple believeth every word: but the prudent man looketh well to his going. They will believe every Word which makes for them, nay they will promiſe themſelves ſafety, tho' they go on in thoſe ſins which lead apparently to ruin, Deut. 29. 19, 20. And it come to paſs when he heareth the words of this curſe, that he bleſs himſelf in his heart, ſaying, I ſhall have peace, though I walk in the imagination of mine heart, to add drunkenneſs to thirſt: the Lord will not ſpare him, but then the anger of the Lord and his jealouſie ſhall ſmoke againſt that man, and all the curſes that are written in this book ſhall lie upon him, and the Lord ſhall blot out his name from under Heaven. They will ſpeak peace to themſelves, when Kingdoms are a deſtroying, Jer. 6. 14. They have healed alſo the hurt of the daughter of my people ſlightly, ſaying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace. They promiſe themſelves Riches, and Honours, and that they will go to ſuch a City, and get wealth, when combuſtions are in the World, and God is bringing Judgments on the Earth. They promiſe themſelves the continuance of their pleaſures, Iſa. 56. 12. Come ye, ſay they, I will fetch wine, and we will fill our ſelves with ſtrong drink, and to morrow ſhall be as this day, and much more abundant. And for all this they will truſt their own word. And then they will take any ſlight evidence for Heaven, and believe, that every good word, and any work of civility, and moral good deed, give them a ſufficient title to the place.

We are next to conſider what effects this folly produceth in the hearts of Unregenerate Men, which indeed are innumerable.

1. They are aſham'd of nothing. Tho' you expoſe the unreaſonableneſs of their doings, and ſhew how ſenſeleſs they are in all their actions, yet they care not; tho' you make it appear that in the whole conduct of their lives they are void of true Wiſdom, tho' you expoſe them dreſs'd up in their Fools Coat, yet they have not the wit to diſcern it. They boaſt of that with which they are deſervedly reproach'd, and make their ſhame their Glory. Thus Men will triumph in their ſins, and glory in having been drunk themſelves, or in having made others ſo. They will boaſt of their deceiving, and going beyond others. They will glory in their Oaths, as a Genteel accompliſhment, and ſwear, and ſay they will ſwear. Thus they declare their ſins as Sodom, Iſa. 3. 9. The ſhew of their countenance doth witneſs againſt them, and they declare their ſin as Sodom, they hide it not: woe unto their ſoul, for they have rewarded evil unto themſelves. And what is their ſhame they publiſh as their glory, ſo far are they from being aſham'd of thoſe things, which ſhould cover them with bluſhes. Jer. 6. 15. Were they aſhamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all aſhamed, neither could they bluſh: therefore they ſhall fall among them that fall: at the time that I viſit them, they ſhall be caſt down, ſaith the Lord.

2. They are ſelf-will'd. Reaſon being down in them, wilfulneſs, and obſtinacy ariſeth in its room. They are reſolv'd in their lewd courſes, and will be Wicked only becauſe they will, John. 8. 44. Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the luſts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a lie, he ſpeaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it. Prov. 2. 13, 14, 15.

Who

Book IV.

Who leave the paths of uprightneſs, to walk in the ways of darkneſs : who rejoice to do evil, and delight in the frowardneſs of the wicked. Whoſe ways are crooked, and they froward in their paths.

3. They are inconſtant in all their actions, and as Fools, are driven ſometimes this way, ſometimes the other, as every wind turns, or a various humour prevails, Eccleſ. 5.4. When thou voweſt a vow unto God, defer not to pay it: for he hath no pleaſure in fools; pay that which thou haſt vowed. What in a good mood they purpos'd, in another humour they reſolve againſt, and will not do it. And as it is folly to do thus, God hath no pleaſure in ſuch Fools. When they have taken up purpoſes, they afterward meet with ſome reaſon, or other, of which they never thought, to make them alter them. They in one moment purpoſe to repent, to turn to God, and lead another courſe of Life, which the next moment they forget, or mind it not. Thus as Fools, ſemper incipiunt vivere, are always beginning to live well, but never do it, but are unſtable in all their ways, Jam. 1. 8. A double minded man is unſtable in all his ways.

4. Unteachableneſs is another property of Fools, They are always unteachable, therefore it is ſaid, Prov. 5. 23. He ſhall die without inſtruction, and in the greatneſs of his folly he ſhall go aſtray. Not that inſtruction is not given him, he dies not without it in that ſenſe, but becauſe he will never take it : and 'tis the greatneſs of his folly makes him do ſo.

It is one degree of Wiſdom to take good Counſel, though it be a farther degree to be able to give it : therefore Prov. 12. 15. He that hearkeneth to Council is Wiſe. But a wicked man will not hearken to Counſel; not to what God ſays, and the Word ſays, nor what the Rod of Affliction ſays : he knows not the meaning of blows neither, (as Fools and Beaſts do not) and therefore he is incorrigible, Prov. 17. 10. A reproof entreth more into a wiſe man, than an hundred ſtripes into a fool. He alſo is as little ſenſible of mercies, Deut. 32. 6. Do ye thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh people, and unwiſe? is not he thy father that hath bought thee? hath he not made thee, and eſtabliſhed thee? Nothing will reclaim a Fool; Bray him in a Mortar, his folly will not depart from him.

5. Confidence in his own way is the mark of a Fool. He thinks not only Gods Way Folly, 1 Cor. 2. 14. as ſeeing no reaſon, of Peoples deſiring Spiritual Sermons, and the ſincere Milk of the Word, nor of all the Spiritual practices godly Men live in, but accounts their lives Madneſs. But they are alſo confident in their own way, thinking it good. Prov. 14. 16. A wiſe man feareth, and departeth from evil: but the fool rageth and is confident. A Wiſe Man, feareth and departeth from evil; that is, ſeeing what will be the iſſue of ſuch courſes, being told of it he forbears: as David did when Abigail met him; but a Fool rageth and is confident, that is, is diſtempered in his paſſion, and reſolute in what he will do and goes on; for 'tis ſaid at the twelfth verſe There is a way which ſeemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death. Perſecuting Paul is therefore ſaid to be mad againſt the Church, i. e. confident as mad men are; and madneſs is but the exceſs of folly.

6. Fools ſtill follow their own minds as their guides in all they do. For Wiſdom being wanting, which ſhould be the guide, they muſt needs follow the next principle in them, which is their Luſts and Deſires; and look what they have a mind to do, that they will do, and will pleaſe themſelves in all, and are unable to deny themſelves, for they want reaſon to put into the Ballance ſomething that might over-rule their paſſion. Therefore all the delight of a Fool is to diſcover his Heart, he poureth it out, for he follows his own Heart in all his actions, Prov. 15. 2. The tongue of the Wiſe uſeth knowledge aright: but the mouth of fools poureth out fooliſhneſs. Prov. 18. 2. A fool hath no delight in underſtanding, but that his Heart may diſcover it ſelf. He hath no delight in underſtanding but to diſcover his Heart, that is, to follow his own humane inventions. Therefore Fools are always ſelf-willed, and ſo are wicked men alſo. They follow their Luſts in all, and are unable to deny themſelves of petty fooliſh deſires; in matters of greateſt conſequence for the Church or place he lives in, he will not deny himſelf a petty deſire and end, that is, a fooliſh one, and which he himſelf is aſhamed to manifeſt to others, ſhall ſway him more than a thouſand perſuaſions and reaſons. They will rather hazard Kingdoms, their Eſtates and Families than not have their Will and Luſts, as their malice on a Man they hate, &c. that fooliſh King would rather loſe his Kingdom, Life and all, than ſubmit to the King of Babel; becauſe forſooth the Jews would mock him; and how many hazard their ſouls, upon the ſame ground? So Herod values it not to cut John Baptiſts Head off; and what was his reaſon? a fooliſh one, his Oaths ſake, and for their ſakes about him. Fools are alſo ſelf-will'd, for Reaſon being down Will is up, ſo 1 Tim. 6. 9. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a ſnare, and into many fooliſh and hurtful luſts, which drown men in deſtruction and perdition. They will be rich, and ſo commit many fooliſh luſts. Run into baſe ways of ſaving, or getting Money, ridiculous to all that know them. The Luſts of their Father they will do, John 8. 44. Ye are of your father the devil, and the luſts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a lie, he ſpeaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it. Did they but follow Reaſon as their guide, their Wills might be wrought off, but they follow their Luſts, and ſo are obſtinate in their ways. Chap. 9.

one,

CHAP. IX.

The Uſes of the preceding Doctrine, That all Men ſhould examine themſelves, whether the ſigns of this folly are not in them, and conſider the miſery, and danger of ſuch a condition. How we are to become Wiſe.

Uſe. THE firſt Uſe is to all Men in the Eſtate of Nature that they would try and examine themſelves by all that hath been ſpoken. Whether they do not find in themſelves hitherto all want of this true Wiſdom, and hitherto to have been fools: let this be the beginning of Wiſdom in you, and the firſt fruit of it to conſider your eſtates, which Fools do not; and you that never yet knew your ſelves to be Unregenerate, but your ways are right in your own Eyes, of all Fools you are the worſt, there is more hope of a Fool than of ſuch, as Solomon ſays, Prov. 26. 12. Seeſt thou a man wiſe in his own conceit? there is more hope of a Fool than of him.

1. Conſider the miſery of that condition: for whilſt thou art in it, God can take no pleaſure in thee, he delights not in thee, Eccleſ. 5. 4. When thou voweſt a vow unto God, defer not to pay it: for he hath no pleaſure in fools; pay that which thou haſt vowed. God hath no pleaſure in Fools, and therefore will not communicate himſelf nor his ſecrets, nor give his Son in Marriage to them, unleſs they become wiſer. For who that is Wiſe would keep company with a Fool, or Marry a Fool, or tell his Mind to a Fool?

2. Conſider the danger of being in that eſtate, and of dying a Fool. Know that whilſt thou art ſuch thou canſt never enter into Heaven, and haſt no portion in that inheritance there; for Fools inherit not neither by Gods Laws nor Mans: and though you hope to go to Heaven as well as the beſt, yet this conceit of yours puts you but into a Fools Paradiſe, for Heaven is a Paradiſe was never made for Fools. Honour is not ſeemly for a Fool ſays Solomon, Prov. 26. 1. As ſnow in ſummer, and as rain in harveſt: ſo honour is not ſeemly for a fool, much leſs is; Heaven and to be a King, ſeemly for him, that is not all, but if thou art a Fool, Hell and Deſtruction is a preparing for thee, and thou art fit for nothing elſe, Prov. 26. 3. A whip for the horſe, a bridle for the aſs, and a rod for the fools back. that is fitter for him than Honour; Hell than Heaven: nay God will inſtead of delighting in thee, rejoyce and laugh at thy deſtruction, Prov. 1. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26. How long, ye ſimple ones, will ye love ſimplicity? and the ſcorners delight in their ſcorning, and fools hate knowledge? Turn you at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my ſpirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you. Becauſe I have called, and ye refuſed, I have ſtretched out my hand, and no man regarded; But ye have ſet at nought all my counſel, and would none of my reproof: I alſo will laugh at your calamity, I will mock when your fear cometh; as thou didſt make ſin a ſport, God will make thy torment a ſport to him.

Uſe 2. Of Direction how thou art to become Wiſe.

1. Apprehend and acknowledge that thou art a Fool, 1 Cor. 3. 18. that is the firſt leſſon, Wiſdom teacheth a Man, that ſo he may be Wiſe. Apprehend thy condition, go not on as a Fool, gaping and being careleſs, and thinking thy ways right when they are not: what ſays Agur, a Wiſe Man, when converted? Prov. 30. 2. Surely I am more bruitiſh than any Man, and have not the underſtanding of a man. And ſo Paul, for all his wit and learning confeſſeth, that he was fooliſh in all his ways; that all his ways were folly, Titus 3. 3. For we our ſelves alſo were ſometimes fooliſh, diſobedient, deceived, ſerving divers luſts and pleaſures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

2. Go to God to give thee Wiſdom to turn thy Heart, if any Man lack Wiſdom let him go to God for it, James 1. 5. If any of you lack wiſdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it ſhall be given him.

3. Go to God in Chriſt and for Chriſt, who is made Wiſdom to us as well as all other things, 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us wiſdom, and righteouſneſs, and ſanctification and redemption: therefore Iſa. 9. 6. He is called the mighty Councillor. As we became Fools in Adam, ſo we muſt recover our Wits by Chriſt, and by being born of him; and it is of all cures the greateſt to cure one who is born a Fool, therefore go to Chriſt, for none elſe can do it.

4. Turn to the Wiſdom of the Juſt. Luke 1. 17. It is ſaid, that John turn'd Men to the Wiſdom of the Juſt, Luke 1. 17. And he ſhall go before him in the ſpirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. Do thou turn to the Wiſdom of the Juſt; i. e. frame thy opinions according to the Word, and the opinion of Holy Men; lean not to thy own Wiſdom and Carnal underſtanding, thereby to judge of the ways of God, or truſt not to the opinions of Carnal Men; But come in, and ſubmit thy Judgment to the Wiſdom of God, and of good Men. He that is a Fool begins then to be Wiſe, when he apprehending himſelf to be a Fool, will liſten to what Wiſdom ſpeaks. Frame then thy judgment of the work of Grace, and of Holineſs, and of the worth of Grace; and what the way to Heaven is by what God ſays, and what thou ſeeſt Wiſe, and Holy Men profeſs and practice; what ſays God? Iſa. 8. 19, 20. And when they ſhall ſay unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar ſpirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter: ſhould not a people ſeek unto their God? for the living to the dead? to the law and to the teſtimony: if they ſpeak not according to this word, it is becauſe there is no light in them. Do thou go to the Law, and to the Teſtimony, and lean to the Commandment, think upon all occaſions, and in all ſtreights, my Wiſdom is to ſtick cloſe to it, and if I go aſtray, it is the greatneſs of my folly. Thoſe ways carnal reaſon ſees no reaſon for, yet do thou take Gods Judgment for them, and bring every thought into the Obedience of Chriſt. Know that the Scriptures are only able to make thee Wiſe to Salvation, take then their Council as David did, Pſal. 119. 24. Thy teſtimonies alſo are my delight, and my counſellors. Take Gods Judgment in what is beſt for thee, if he will have thee poor be content, lean not to thy own Wiſdom, as Solomon ſays, Prov. 3. 5. Truſt in the Lord with all thine heart: and lean not unto thine own underſtanding. Take alſo the Judgment of holy

The Corruptions of Reaſon.

CHAP. I.

That Reaſon in Man being corrupted by ſin, uſeth its ſtrength, and force to adviſe and contrive the ſatisfaction of his Luſts, whence it is that Reaſon which ſhould have acted for God, now acts for Sin, and Luſts.

Eccleſ. 7. 29.

Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright; but they have ſought out many inventions.

NOW I am next to ſpeak of the corruptions of Reaſon it ſelf: and to diſcover to you what great aſſiſtance, and manifold and ſeveral concurrences, and orders it gives to the Power and Kingdom of ſin within us.

And indeed however we may think that Reaſon in us fights againſt, and oppoſeth our Luſts; yet the truth is that but for carnal Reaſon, ſin would not know how to do, for as Reaſon of State doth all in Kingdoms, ſo Fleſhly Reaſon in us. No Man ſins, no Man goes to Hell without Reaſon.

Now the aſſiſtance Reaſon gives to ſin is double. Firſt, As a Counſellour, to adviſe to, and plot for the acting of it and ſatisfying its deſire, which out of this Text we ſhall ſpeak to.

Book V.

Secondly, As a Protector and defender of the Power and Kingdom of ſin, againſt all the aſſaults, and invaſions that the Word and Knowledge of God might make againſt it. This corrupt Reaſon doth, by gathering to it ſelf many carnal pleas for Mens bad courſes, and eſtates, as alſo by gathering up together all the diſcouragements and objections againſt the ways of Grace, that ever it can. As out of the 2 Cor. 10. 4. we ſhall have occaſion more largely to inſiſt on, he there comparing reaſonings λογισμὸς, to the ſtrong holds that are in a Kingdom to defend it, where all the Weapons and Armory lyes, and ſo indeed in reaſon doth the utmoſt ſtrength of ſin conſiſt.

Now firſt concerning that counſelling and plotting aſſiſtance, which Reaſon affords. This Text mentions it, and indeed lays the fault and the blame of the wickedneſs that is in Mans Heart to the reaſonings and inventions that are therein, and thereby chooſeth to expreſs their corruptions, and the cauſes of them:

The Word tranſlated here, Inventions, which indeed are acts of Reaſon, is the ſame with that in the 25. v. which they have tranſlated Reaſon, and the Septuagint tranſlate it λογισμὸς, and moſt Latin Interpreters ratiocinia, reaſonings. The word in the Hebrew is חשבונות, which ſignifies a cunning, artificial invention, as the ſame word is us'd 2 Chron. 26. 15. and his ſcope you may ſee to be to give the reaſon and cauſe of thoſe many villanies in Mens lives, and to ſee the depth of them; I ſaw all men corrupted and I ſearch'd out the reaſon and cauſe of that folly and wickedneſs, and depth of villany diſcovered to be in them, and it all lies in invention, in wily cunning wickedneſs, and (ſays he) this I found, that though God made Man upright in the Image of God at firſt, yet now being fallen, and deprived of that Image, and ſo of that bleſſedneſs in Communion with God: like Sharks caſt off by their Friends, and cut ſhort of that inheritance they were ordained for, they live by their wits, and that Reaſon which they have left, they uſe in manifold, and ſeveral ſinful practices. It leads them into many crooked ways and by-paths; they have ſought out many inventions.

Now for the proof of this, I will give you but theſe Arguments.

1. Man, you all know, is a reaſonable Creature, and as he himſelf was principally ordained for action, ſo to help him therein Reaſon was principally given him to guide, and ſteer him. So that as God works all things according to Counſel, Epheſ. 1. 11. In whom alſo we have obtained an inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him who worketh all things after the counſel of his own will: ſo as he hath a reaſon for every thing he doth, though he manifeſt it not, Job 33. 13. Why doſt thou ſtrive againſt him? for he giveth not account of any of his matters. So alſo man being created in the Image of God doth work all things according to Counſel alſo, and uſeth reaſon in all, ſuch as it is, for that is part of that Image of God which is a likeneſs to his Eſſence, which is not razed out.

And therefore 2. Now Man is corrupted, Reaſon ſtill remains, and is uſed in all. For ſin hath not made Man a Beaſt, he uſeth Reaſon in all his ſinful actions, otherwiſe they would not be ſins, and therefore in Man now fallen, the Eſtate of Nature is called a Kingdom, though of ſin, as truely as the other is a Kingdom of Grace. And every King muſt have his Privy Councillors to adviſe, and plot, and manage his affairs: and ſuch is Reaſon now unto ſin, as well as once it was to Grace. For ſin as it enters upon the ſame Territories and Poſſeſſions which Grace in Adam once had, ſo it keeps up the ſame form of Government for ſubſtance, and turns out no Officers, but all keep their former places. Our affections and Members are as the common Souldiers and People, ſo Rom. 6. 19. I ſpeak after the manner of men, becauſe of the infirmity of your fleſh: for as ye have yielded your members ſervants to uncleanneſs and to iniquity, unto iniquity; even ſo now yield your members ſervants to righteouſneſs, unto holineſs. Our Luſts are as Laws, and Axioms of State, and Reaſon, who was ſole Privy Counſellor afore, and maſter of all the Ports, and ſtrong Holds, keeps his place ſtill. Only as Sin hath gained the reſt to be for it, all our Luſts to be Laws of ſin, all our Members to be Weapons of Unrighteouſneſs, ſo Reaſon alſo to be a Counſellor and Plotter for ſin, and which is as true, and faithfull to that wicked purpoſe as ever it was before to God.

God. And therefore Pſal. 81. 12. to give a Man up to his Heart Luſts is all one as to give him up to his own Counſels, Pſal. 81. 12. So I gave them up unto their own hearts luſt: and they walked in their own counſels, and the Luſts of Sin are therefore called the Luſts τῆς διανοίας, Eph. 2. 2. Wherein in time paſt ye walked according to the courſe of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the ſpirit that now worketh in the children of diſobedience, even of Reaſon, and that diſcourſing Faculty within us. Chap. 1.

And in the 1 Cor. 4. 5. the Counſels of the Heart are there mentioned as thoſe things which ſhall eſpecially be diſcovered and judged at the latter day, 1 Cor. 4. 5. Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkneſs, and will make manifeſt the counſels of the heart: and then ſhall every man have praiſe of God.

Now Reaſon is gained to be for Sin.

1. By reaſon of that blindneſs I have diſcovered to be in it, to diſcern, and taſt of the goodneſs of things Spiritual, ſo to know them as to make deeper impreſſion of their goodneſs, than the pleaſures ſin propound, and thus knowing no better it muſt be for them.

And 2. By reaſon alſo of that Unbelief even of thoſe firſt Principles of Grace and Godlineſs; which it ſhould have recourſe unto in all our actions, and ſhould reaſon from them.

Now the firſt office of Reaſon is to adviſe and counſel upon all occaſions what is beſt to be done, with it a Mans Heart always adviſeth, and unto it are brought all deliberate actions to have Reaſons approbation and broad ſeal to them, ere they paſs to execution; and though indeed it hath loſt the power of ſole propounding, which in the eſtate of Grace it had, no affection ſtiring without it; yet all motions ſtill muſt have their grant from it, e're they get act into execution.

But ſelf-love being the Vice-roy, Lord Paramount in this Kingdom of ſin (for when God was depoſed from being our utmoſt end, our ſelves ſucceeded as next Heirs) therefore now the main and chief principle, that practical reaſon which guides us in our actions (for of that we ſpeak) is ſelf-love, and all the power and force that Reaſon hath, is turn'd, and bent to advance and ſet it up, to maintain and uphold its prerogative. And now then that ſelf-love is made a Mans utmoſt end, and is the Lord Paramount and chief Governour in this new erected Kingdom of ſin. Therefore Reaſon now muſt needs be guided by it on all occaſions. Therefore that Reaſon which now we conſult with and employ when we crave to do any thing, that practical reaſon (for of that I ſpeak, not of that reaſon whereby we diſpute, but of that reaſon only which is to and for a Mans ſelf,) all the force, counſel, and ſtrength Reaſon hath in us, bends it ſelf that way. And this brings me to the third Head.

That 3. Self-love being now become Mans ſole and utmoſt end in all he doth, God being depoſed, and our ſelves having ſucceeded as next Heirs, and ſo are become our ſelves Lord Paramount, and King in this Kingdom, therefore it muſt needs gain for it ſelf all that reaſon that is in us which is call'd practical, whereby we are guided in our actions, whereof we now ſpeak. For the definition of practical Reaſon, that guides us, is that which reaſons for ſome end: for as we work always for an end, ſo the reaſon which guides us in working, muſt reaſon to, and for that end. Therefore ſelf-love being made our utmoſt end, all the reaſon we have in us, (whereby we do any thing) is wholly turn'd for it, and hath its Eye on it, as the Marriner on the Compaſs, whereby to Steer, it reaſons wholly for it, and to it, and from it. For that which is a Mans end is that which always ſways a Mans reaſon when he comes to do any thing, ſo as by this means ſin hath gained all the reaſon which is in Men.

Idem eſt ultimus finis ad rationem practicam, quod prima principia ad rationem ſpeculativam. Aquinas, 1. 2. qu. 90. Art. 3.

CHAP. II.

How Reaſon affords all aſſiſtance to the encouragement of Sin. By what principles it is herein acted, and what Motives it uſeth.

THeſe grounds being laid you ſhall ſee the corrupt dealings of Reaſon in us, how it affords all its aſſiſtance for ſin, and firſt we will ſee what principles Reaſon is moſt effectually guided by. Now the firſt office of reaſon is to adviſe and counſel, upon all occaſion, what is beſt to be done, for with it the heart adviſeth upon all occaſions, and unto it are all deliberate actions brought to have reaſons approbation and broad ſeal ſet to them; now therefore when we come ſeriouſly to adviſe with Reaſon what is beſt to be done, whether we ſhould do this or that, refuſe this, or chooſe this; to what principles hath reaſon recourſe in the advice it gives; doth it go to the principles of the Word, and make them its Counſellors, as David did, Pſal. 119. 104, 105. to ſee what it judgeth of ſuch an action, or cauſe, or do the rules, the motives, the perſwaſions thereof prevail with reaſon? No, becauſe God is not a Mans end, nor do we believe the principles of his Word; but Reaſon now as corrupted, looks and adviſeth with a Mans own Heart, and conſiders what ends, what preſent deſires, or occaſions a Man hath: look how things do ſuit with our preſent occaſions, or conduce to our own ends, and ſeem to pleaſe our preſent deſires, thoſe corrupt reaſon, and fleſhly Wiſdom judgeth beſt. And theſe principles are the new inventions, which Men have ſought out. So that as the Holy Wiſdom of God, whereby he doth all he doth, looks into himſelf, for the reaſon of all his actions, and to nothing out of himſelf, and therefore he is ſaid to work all according to the counſel of his own will, his holy ends being the principles his Wiſdom is wholly ſwayed by in all, ſo as his Will is the rule of all Reaſon: ſo reaſon now having ſet up a Mans ſelf for its end, it looks for the reaſon of every thing in it ſelf, and judgeth not thoſe things to be beſt which are beſt in themſelves, but which are beſt for himſelf and his corrupt deſires, and the preſent conſtitution of his Heart, and condition.

As therefore whilſt God was a Mans end, as in the ſtate of Innocency, or when he becomes a Mans end, as in the eſtate of Grace, then all the particular directions God expreſſeth his Will in, become Laws, and Principles to conſult with in all a Mans actions; which he is ſure never to ſwerve from: and then all the motives which are drawn from God, which the Word lays down to perſuade us, become effectual reaſons to move us to any thing, for they had all reference, and relation to that firſt principle reaſon looks to, God being his utmoſt end. Now on the clean contrary, a Mans ſelf being become his utmoſt end, look how many corrupt deſires he hath to be ſatisfied and pleaſed, look how many by-ends he hath whoſe turns are to be ſerved, too many principles he hath which corrupt reaſon, fleſhly Wiſdom hath an Eye unto, according to which it guides you, and counſels you in all your actions. If the things you are to do be ſutable to them, it adviſeth you to put them in execution, to ſet upon them, and alſo all motives drawn from pleaſing your Luſts, and Ends become ſtrong reaſons, effectual arguments to perſuade you to do any thing. So that now I having told you, that all true principles of Godlineſs are extinguiſhed, you ſee the principles and reaſons which a Man in his actions is guided by, are Luſts, and by-ends, and motives drawn from them. Theſe are the principles you go by, with theſe Reaſon conſults, from theſe Reaſon argues upon all occaſions, when any thing is to be done by us. And therefore in Pſal. 81. 12. to be given up to their Luſts, and their own Hearts Counſels are all one, becauſe Reaſon in all conſults with Luſts.

To

To make this clear to you by inſtances out of the Word.

1. If Riches be a Mans End, what principle is that his reaſon in all his actions conſults with? Paul tells you it. 1 Tim. 6. 5. Perverſe diſputings of men of corrupt minds, and deſtitute of the truth, ſuppoſing that gain is godlineſs: from ſuch withdraw thy ſelf. They ſuppoſe that gain is godlineſs. That is, they lay that for a rule, a principle, that they adviſe with, and have recourſe to, and frame their actions by; however Men do not profeſs ſo much, yet this they lay for a ground, this they truly think, and believe; whereas ſays the Apoſtle, there is another principle we are guided by in all eſtates and conditions, that Godlineſs is great gain. Now this principle being laid in the Heart, when in a matter of unjuſt gain a Man comes to adviſe with his Reaſon, whether it be better to obey God, than get Money, whether it be better to increaſe Godlineſs, or his eſtate, to forſake, or leave off ſome practice of Godlineſs or loſe his eſtate; his Heart ſuppoſing gain better than Godlineſs, becauſe it ſuits with his deſires, and diſpoſition of his Heart more, this being his principle he lets Godlineſs go, as the young man in the Goſpel, and Demas did. Now there is the like reaſon of Honour, Pleaſure, &c. Chap. 2.

So alſo if a Man be to profeſs Godlineſs, and ſees he muſt take up ſome Religion, what principles doth reaſon conſult with, how far he ſhall ſhew himſelf in the cauſe, why he conſults with his own ends, Eccleſ. 7. 16. Be not righteous overmuch, neither make thy ſelf over-wiſe: why ſhouldeſt thou deſtroy thy ſelf? in the 15 v. he had named a ſhrewd Temptation that ſtumbles many in the World, v. 15. All things have I ſeen in the days of my vanity: there is a juſt man that periſheth in his righteouſneſs, and there is a wicked man that prolongeth his life in his wickedneſs. They ſee a Righteous Man periſh in his Righteouſneſs, trodden down, and oppreſſed, and a Wicked Man that prolongs his days in his Wickedneſs, and it is a means to ſave him. Two concluſions are drawn thence, the one by corrupt Reaſon, the other by the Spirit; what principle doth carnal reaſon then gather from it? It is this; Take heed, be not righteous over-much, nor over-nice, nor wiſer than the reſt of the World, ſays fleſh, why the principle which reaſon guides him by, is to preſerve himſelf whole by taking a moderate courſe, deſtroy not thy ſelf; he thinks that too much Religion would deſtroy his credit, &c. The other oppoſite concluſion the Spirit draws Eccleſ. 7. 17. Be not overmuch wicked, neither be thou fooliſh: why ſhouldeſt thou die before thy time? So that the principles men adviſe with, are themſelves, and their own Ends.

So when a Man hath his Enemy in his power to hurt him, the principle carnal reaſon conſults with, is quite different from what Godly reaſon is guided by.

When David had Saul in his power, what was David's principle his reaſon conſulted with? 1 Sam. 24. 6. And he ſaid unto his men, the Lord forbid that I ſhould do this thing unto my maſter the Lords anointed, to ſtretch forth mine hand againſt him, ſeeing he is the anointed of the Lord. The Lord forbid that I ſhould do this thing, how ſhall I do it and ſin againſt God? for God was his end. But what was Sauls principle which he would have conſulted with in the like advantage? If the queſtion had been askt whether it had been beſt in ſuch a caſe to kill David, what would Saul have thought; If a Man find his Enemy will he let him go well away? Saul thought in his reaſon he were a Fool that would do it. This was a principle in his Heart he ſhould have gone by.

So for pleaſing Men when they command one thing, and God another. This was the principle the Apoſtles in their Hearts ſtuck to and reaſoned from; It is better to obey God than Man, Acts 5. 29. but when the Jews were to move Pilate to Crucifie Chriſt, when he knew him to be a Righteous Man, what principle do they work upon, and from what do they draw their reaſon to move him? John 19. 12. And from thenceforth Pilate ſought to releaſe him: but the Jews cried out, ſaying, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæſars friend:

Book V.

friend: whoſoever maketh himſelf a King, ſpeaketh againſt Ceſar. If thou letteſt this Man go thou art not Ceſars friend, they knew that was an argument to Carnal reaſon, which would prevail.

And therefore now if you are to move a Carnal Man in any buſineſs, would you ſpeak reaſon to him ſo as to prevail, you muſt ſpeak to ſave Luſt, to ſave the End, that he hath in his aim, and purpoſe, for they are the principles in his Heart, and what is drawn from thence is effectual to move, elſe not. Thus when Balak would perſuade Balaam to curſe the People of God, what reaſon doth he uſe? Numb. 22. 16, 17. I will promote thee to very great Honour, and v. 37. And Balak ſaid unto Balaam, Did I not earneſtly ſend unto thee, to call thee? wherefore cameſt thou not unto me? am I not able indeed to promote thee to honour? am I not able to promote thee to honour? he ſpeaks reaſon to him, that ſuited, and was agreeable.

So when the Jews conſulted among themſelves, what they ſhould do with Chriſt, what was the prevailing reaſon and argument to put him to Death?

1. Say they, the Inheritance ſhall be ours, Luk. 20. 14.

2. Say they, all will believe in him, and the Romans ſhall come, and take away our Place, and Nation, and ſo we muſt loſe all, John 11. 48. If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him; and the Romans ſhall come and take away both our place and nation. And ſo in John 7. 4. Chriſts carnal friends there urge a carnal rule they went by of credit, to move him to Preach, John 7. 3, 4. and thus too when any man turns to God, what reaſon and arguments doth he find his Heart ſtick at moſt, what principles doth his reaſon argue from? I ſhall be caſt out of the Synagogue ſays one, that is the reaſon moved ſome, not to profeſs Faith in Chriſt, John 12. 42. Nevertheleſs, among the chief rulers alſo many believed on him; but becauſe of the Phariſees they did not confeſs him, leſt they ſhould be put out of the ſynagogue. I ſhall loſe my friends ſays another, my preferment ſays a third, and theſe are reaſons with them why they ſhould not turn to God. And on the contrary we ſee by experience, that the motives out of the Word, and which are reaſons drawn from the principles thereof move not, becauſe we believe not thoſe principles, but reaſon hath other it looks unto, and conſults with, viz. its own corrupt ends, and thoſe motives having no connexion with ſuch ends, therefore they move not, are no arguments to them, nay they are fooliſhneſs, 1 Cor. 2. 14. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are fooliſhneſs unto him; neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned; that is, he ſees no reaſon in them, becauſe the Principles they are drawn from, are not believed, for Reaſon is that which ſees the dependance and connexion of one thing with and from another.

But 2. This is not all that reaſon doth, but when a Man hath pitcht upon an end, to be acquir'd, Reaſon is farther employed to invent, and to look out for ſuch fit means whereby thoſe ends may be accompliſhed. Sin could do little, if it were not for the help of reaſon, for as the ſpeculative underſtanding when a thing is propounded to be proved, invent and ſtarts up mediums and notions to prove it, ſo the practical is ſet on work to find out ways and means, and to conſider what will beſt conduce to ſuch an end. And this office of corrupted reaſon is eſpecially meant here in this place, the devices and arts of the Heart, to bring ſinful enterpriſes to paſs, for he here means Nets and Snares, to catch Men, and theſe inventions are many, they are infinite, not to be numbred. Inſomuch as the way of a Serpent is on a Stone, ſo is the way of a Man with a Maid, full of infinite plots, Prov. 30. 19. and herein corrupt reaſon is exceeding witty, wiſer in their Generation than the Children of Light. How ready was the wit of a Woman Jezabel, when Ahab himſelf knew not what to do, how rational to take away, to get in Naboth's Vine-yard, to plot his Death? but that would not be enough, for had he been ſimply kill'd, his Son would inherit, but if he ſhould dye as a Traitor then his Goods ſhould be forfeited; ſee how ſhe plots it, 1 Kin. 21. 9, 10.

And

And ſhe wrote in the letters, ſaying, proclaim a faſt, and ſet Naboth on high among the people: And ſet two men, ſons of Belial, before him, to bear witneſs againſt him ſaying, Thou didſt blaſpheme God and the King: and then carry him out, and ſtone him, that he may die. Chap. 2.

How witty was Joſephs Miſtreſs, and ſudden to invent a way to be revenged on Joſeph, when he left his Coat with her, to turn the enticing to Adultery upon him?

How ſubtle were Daniels Enemies to plot againſt him, when he ſtood in their way? They knew they could charge him in nothing but in the matter of his God, and they knew him conſtant in Prayer: Therefore get this confirmed by the King that whoſoever put up any Petition to any but the King, ſhould be put to death.

What an invention was it that Simeon and Levi had to accompliſh their revenge upon the Men of Sichem, for the rape of Dinah, to have them all Circumciſed firſt, that ſo when they were ſore, they might fall upon them? Many and infinite are the inventions of corrupt reaſon to do miſchief.

3. Our Luſts uſe Wit and Reaſon to make compoſitions of pleaſures for them, to mingle a Spiced Cup of many ſweet ingredients, artificially compoſed, to improve creatures to the uttermoſt, ſo Solomon, uſed not only his power, but his wit alſo, to make inventions to pleaſe himſelf, Eccleſ. 2. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. I made me great works, I builded me houſes, I planted me vineyards I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits. I made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees. I got me ſervants, and maidens, and had ſervants born in my houſe; alſo I had great poſſeſſions of great and ſmall cattel above all that were in Jeruſalem before me. I gathered me alſo ſilver and gold, and the peculiar treaſure of kings and of the provinces: I gat me men-ſingers, and women-ſingers, and the delights of the ſons of men, as muſical inſtruments, and that of all ſorts. So I was great, and increaſed more than all that were before me in Jeruſalem; alſo my wiſdom remained with me.

4. Reaſon ſerves our Luſts, in diſcerning the fitteſt opportunity of accompliſhing our Luſts and Ends; ſo Herodias did who had watched how to do John a miſchief, Mark 16. 19. but finding Herod in a good mood, and ſo large in promiſing to give what ever was asked, ſhe takes the opportunity of craving John Baptiſts's Head, and it was ſuddenly thought of, for ſtraightway the Maid came in again, v. 25. ſo Prov. 7. the Adultereſs takes the opportunity of her husbands being abroad, ſo Mat. 26. 16. Judas ſought opportunity to betray Chriſt.

5. Men have inventions to conceal their ſins. So had Joſephs Brethren by his Coat, to conceal their ſelling their brother, and inventing a cunning lye with it: ſo had David in making Uriah drunk, to conceal his Adultery. As Men have arts to cover the deformities of their Bodies, ſo alſo of their Souls. Therefore their wicked ends in ſinning they ſtrive moſt to conceal.

Book V.

CHAP. III.

That Mans Reaſon which ſhould direct him in his actions, is deprav'd, and therefore miſguides him.

Pſal. 14. 1.

The Fool hath ſaid in his Heart, there is no God: they are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doth good.

I Have diſcovered unto you the Folly which is in Mens Hearts. The next which both theſe words, and my ſcope, (which is to go on to lay open the corruption of Mans Heart by Nature) preſents to be ſpoke of, is the vain reaſonings which accompany that Folly.

Now when I ſpeak of the vain reaſonings of Mans Mind, underſtand me not to intend the reaſonings or diſcuſſing and arguing of things in their ſpeculations, which in their ſpeeches, and diſcourſes, and writings they diſcover; for theſe are often right and true, though yet therein there are and may be infinite errours, which the Mind of Man is ſubject to, witneſs all the errours which the moſt of the World are divided and carried away with, which are infinite to reckon up. Only let this in the general be ſaid and acknowledged, that look what errours and vain reaſonings any Mans Mind Engenders, or is taken with, the ſame every Mans Mind would be if left to it ſelf, there being no more priviledge to exempt or free it from being prone to any errour, or falſe reaſoning in judgment, than to any ſin or errour in practice.

But I will limit my ſelf to thoſe falſe reaſonings which Men are led aſide by, and miſguided in their practice, and in their ways and courſes. For in theſe it is certain that every Man is guided by ſome reaſoning or other, though a falſe one; and the cauſe of all errours in the Life, is ſome errour in the Heart, Pſal. 95. 10. Forty years long was I grieved with this generation, and ſaid, It is a people that do err in their heart, and they have not known my ways. It is a people do err in their Hearts, for the practical underſtanding hath its reaſonings as well as the ſpeculative.

Now all reaſonings and diſcourſes of the mind are made up of two things. 1. Some general Principles or general Axioms, which the Mind takes for granted, and into which all its opinions, and apprehenſions and reaſonings of things may be reſolved. 2. Concluſions and conſequences derived and drawn out of them, and founded on them.

Anſwerably are thoſe vain reaſonings (whereby he is miſled in his courſe, of which only I ſpeak) made up; and conſiſt of vain and erroneous principles, and unbelief of the true ones which are the Foundation of a Godly courſe, which principles contrary to the true, are the grounds of all their evil courſes and ways.

Secondly, They are made up of falſe arguments, collections, and deductions which their minds gather to themſelves to ſtrengthen them in their evil courſes and eſtates.

Now as a foundation to ſpeak of the firſt, I have choſen theſe words, as wherein you have the Axle-tree whereon all wickedneſs is founded and turns; a fundamental Error in the firſt principle, of all piety, which is to believe there is a God, and what manner of God he is, which the fool here ſpoken of, doth not only not believe; but there is a poſitive principle and grounded apprehenſion of the contrary, a ſaying in the Heart there is no God.

And

And by the Fool here ſpoken of, is not meant ſome particular man only, but the Pſalmiſt's ſcope is to deſcribe the general corruption in all mankind, for ſo he goes on, Pſal. 14. 1, 2, 3. The Fool hath ſaid in his heart, there is no God: they are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doth good. The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men; to ſee if there were any that did underſtand, and ſeek God. They are all gone aſide, they are altogether become filthy: there is none that doth good, no not one, and ſo it is quoted by the Apoſtle, Rom. 3. 10. And he places Unbelief and Error in this main principle, as the foundation of all that corruption that follows, and therefore puts it in the forefront, and though it be but one of thoſe corrupt principles his mind by nature is poyſoned with, yet it is a moſt principal and fundamental one, for as God is the foundation, and prop, and ſhoarer up of all being in the World, ſo that there is a God, is the main Pillar whereon, in the Heart, all Religion ſubſiſts. And therefore theſe words will fitly ſerve, as a bottom, to a general diſcourſe of that unbelief, of all the firſt principles of Godlineſs, and contrary falſe principles which are in the Minds of all men; whence all errours in their Life proceed. Chap. 3.

To this purpoſe the Doctrine I raiſe is;

Obſer. That there is in the Hearts of all men, a ſecret unbelief, of the very firſt principles of true godlineſs; and not only ſo, but contrary ſayings and dictates of the Heart, which are the foundation of all corruption in their lives.

I will both explain and prove it. I will premiſe but theſe two conſiderations to make way.

1. That as in all matters of Knowledge; there are always ſome common and general truths, which are as a few Seeds of Light, which when ſown, and received into the Mind of them that begin to learn, do multiply in ſuch beginners underſtandings, and increaſe into many other Notions. Thus Scholars find it in all Sciences and Arts they Learn, that they meet with ſome general Truths, which virtually contain all particulars, and ſo alſo the Apoſtle tells you it is in the Doctrines of Religion, and you find it ſo, that there are certain Principles of the Doctrine of Chriſt, Heb. 6. 1. Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Chriſt, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith towards God. Now as it is ſo in the matter of the Knowledge of Religion, and the form thereof; ſo alſo in the matter of the practice and power of it. There are ſome general Principles, which if they have true and ſound rooting in the Heart, and practical underſtanding, they do mould and frame anew, and have influence into all their actions. One of which the Apoſtle clearly to this purpoſe intimates, Heb. 11. 6. But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him: for he that cometh to God, muſt believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him. He that will come to God, that is, part with ſin, and all the World, and all things in it, and joyn himſelf in Covenant to obey him alone in all things; there are two principles ſays he, muſt be riveted into his Heart firſt, viz. 1. That God is. 2. That he is a rewarder of them that ſeek him.

This you may alſo ſee in Popery and the myſtery of iniquity.

There are certain Principles both of the Doctrine and Practice of it. Certain Principles of the Doctrine of Antichriſt, and of the Oracles of Satan, (I call them ſo in oppoſition to thoſe of Chriſt) which if admitted and acknowledged, you thereby at once acknowledge all particulars in Popery to be true. Thoſe Principles are two; That the Church cannot Err, and that theirs is the true Church: for then all that Church teacheth muſt be aſſerted unto as true.

So alſo in the practice of their Religion, entertain but into your Heart an opinion of Merit, and Juſtification by works, &c. and it will ſet all in a Man, if throughly believed to abound in all the practices which their Religion dictates, ſuch power and influence hath one ſmall Principle in Mens Hearts, upon all their actions. But now on the contrary Luther ſeeing the heinouſneſs of ſin, and thereupon the unability of all in him to juſtifie him, this Principle being laid, and once admitted, he altered all his opinions and practices.

Book V.

Such power hath one Principle laid in ſpeculative or practical underſtanding, to alter a Mans Judgment, and Courſe. And thus now anſwerably is it. In the power and practice of ſinning in Mens Hearts and Lives, for which tho' there is little reaſon can be brought, yet the practical underſtanding wanting faith in ſome Principles, and being poyſoned ſecretly with the contrary, hence come all, and proceed all the aberrations of Mens Hearts and Lives, and into thoſe they may be reſolved. And as all Kingdoms have Fundamental Laws, which are as the Baſes, and Props, and Pillars on which all other Laws do reſt, and ſpring, as we ſee ours hath, and as all States have certain common Axioms of State, they guide all their Counſels by, and frame, and cut out all their projects unto, and which they never croſs or ſwerve from; ſo hath the Kingdom of Sin alſo fundamental Principles, whence all wickedneſs flows, and on which the Laws of ſin are founded, which when they are once overthrown, the Kingdom of ſin is diſſolv'd, ſo that as the foundation of all coming to God is a belief that God is, and that he is a rewarder of thoſe that ſeek him: ſo on the contrary, the foundation of all departing from God, is Unbelief of this and ſuch like principles; ſo ſays the Apoſtle, Heb 3. 12. Take heed, brethren, leſt there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.

And ſecondly, This is farther to be added. That thoſe firſt and common Principles of Piety and Godlineſs, come not to have intereſt and power in the Heart till they be believed. For that is the only right and true way of apprehending them. For they are all things not ſeen. For who hath ſeen God at any time, ſo as to be convinced fully there is a God, it muſt be done by Faith, ſo ſays the Apoſtle; in that place in the Hebrews, you muſt believe, as that God is, ſo that he will reward thoſe that ſeek him; you muſt have faith to rivet this throughly in your Minds, for it is a thing not ſeen, it is to come: and ſo that there is a Judgment for wicked Men, is a thing not ſeen, but to be believ'd by faith.

So then thoſe which are thus the firſt and common Principles of all true Piety, are no way apprehended truly, but by Faith, which is, as the Apoſtle ſays, the evidence or conviction of things not ſeen, and though they may be, and are known without faith, yet the Heart is not perſuaded of them till faith comes in, for as the principles of Arts and Sciences are not to be proved by Reaſon, but are ſuch as the Mind at firſt propounding aſſents unto, for elſe reaſon would have no bottom to reſt on, ſo theſe firſt practical active principles of Piety are not apprehended by reaſon, neither are they evident to the Mind at the firſt bluſh, for they are things not ſeen, and therefore if the Heart do truly aſſent to them, Faith muſt be wrought, which as an Optique Glaſs may repreſent them, and make them Viſible. For who hath ſeen God at any time? and that he will reward thoſe that ſeek him, and with how great a reward, is a thing to come, not yet ſeen? That he will render Vengeance to all that do evil, who ſees it, nay who ſees not the contrary? For all happens alike to all, Eccleſ. 9. 3. And therefore the Heart of Man is full of evil. Now therefore, though there is ſome knowledge of theſe things which may be wrought in the Minds of Men, yet if theſe principles become active, and guide them in their Lives, they muſt have faith to rivet and faſten theſe common known truths in them, Heb. 11. 6. He muſt believe that God is, &c. He muſt have faith to aſſent to that, if ever it draws his Heart to him.

CHAP.

Chap. 4.

CHAP. IV.

That the Reaſon whereof Man ſo much boaſts is ſo corrupt and falſe, that the firſt Principles of Religion, are not really believ'd by him. The demonſtrations of it.

NOW that which I am to demonſtrate is this, that theſe common firſt Principles are not believed by Men, but the Heart is more throughly perſuaded of the contrary, that Men ſay in their Hearts there is no God; though the Text inſtanceth only in that, yet it affords bottom to diſcourſe of all other the like principles, for this is the chief of all the reſt, and the other depend on this.

So that the Unbelief of the Heart, and the falſe principles of it, is that I mean to treat of; and I will firſt prove that there is in the Hearts of all men by Nature this unbelief, and then I will explain what it is. Firſt, I will give you demonſtrations, then reaſons of it, and firſt demonſtrations drawn from experience.

1. We find that when a Godly Man or any other hath any new ſerious ſtrong convincing demonſtration come into his Mind, that ſhews him more fully and clearly, there is a God, and a day of Judgment, he ſhall find ſomething in the Heart, that entertains ſuch a new thought as a ſtrange thing, as we uſe to do ſuch things we were in ſuſpence of afore. That as the Athenians ſaid, when Paul Preacht God and Chriſt to them, thou bringeſt ſtrange things to our Ears, ſo you may if you ſearch your Hearts diligently, hear them thus whiſpering, when in ſecret your Hearts are confirmed in a real manner in any of thoſe common truths. This may ſeem to be the meaning of Pſal. 58. 10, 11. The righteous ſhall rejoice when he ſeeth the vengeance: he ſhall waſh his feet in the bloud of the wicked. So that a man ſhall ſay, Verily there is a reward for the righteous: verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth, when there ſhall be, ſays the Pſalmiſt in the 10. v. an evident demonſtration of Gods Vengeance on the Wicked, and the deliverance of the Godly, by ſome hand upon them. This new demonſtration ſhall have this effect So that a Man even Carnal and others ſhall ſay, verily there is a reward for the Righteous, and doubtleſs there is a God that Judgeth the Earth. They are two common Principles, and commonly received in the notion, yet when there comes to be a real demonſtration of them indeed, Men begin to believe it as if they had not believed it afore, for ſo it comes in as a reſolution to a doubt, a determination of a controverſie, doubtleſs there is a God that judgeth the Earth.

2. When any Man is Converted to God, and comes to God, upon theſe common principles, yet theſe common principles which all take for granted, he learns over anew, as if he had never believed them, as if he had learned nothing yet, or at leaſt not as he ſhould do, he is fain to begin at Chriſt's-Croſs-Row again, to learn his Catechiſm, that old former perſuaſion that there is a God, and a Chriſt, and a Day of Judgment, he finds not to be a Foundation ſure enough of a Godly Life, but he lays every Stone anew. He eſtabliſheth his Heart in theſe Truths afreſh, in another manner, for though he knew the ſame things afore, and had ſome perſuaſion of them afore, and never doubted perhaps, or call'd them into queſtion, becauſe they were generally received by others yet now when theſe ſhall be made the great Beams in the building, and bear the weight of all, a Godly Life, when a Man builds all his hopes, ways, and concerns on them, he ſees the former perſuaſions before to be too weak and rotten, which afore he ſaw not, becauſe they were not put to any ſtreſs. Set Pins in a Wall, and let them hang never ſo looſely, yet if you hang no weight on them, they will ſeem to ſtand as firm as any, when as yet the leaſt jogg would ſhake, and throw down. So theſe principles were barely believed in the notion, and then they ſeemed as firm in their Hearts, as in the Godlieſt Mans Heart, but when a Man comes to part with all his pleaſures upon the hopes of pleaſures in Heaven, to give up all his Riches for Treaſures there, when this weight comes to be hung upon his perſuaſions, and belief of theſe Truths, he ſees he muſt get them rivetted in, and faſtned in by a new principle of Faith, and ſo he believes all theſe over anew. Though the things believed are the ſame, yet the ratio credendi, the ground of believing, (which is the form of Faith) the reaſon, and medium of apprehending the Truth is new. But now when he is converted to God, the ratio credendi, is a Light from the Holy Ghoſt preſenting them really to him, and as from God which Faith only apprehends, and which in certainty exceeds all the other. The other are but a Sandy Foundation, this Light only is the Rock, and therefore though in Rom. 1. 19, 20. the Apoſtle affirms that the inviſible things of God are clearly ſeen from the Creation, Rom. 1. 19, 20. Becauſe that which may be known of God, is manifeſt in them; for God hath ſhewed it unto them. For the inviſible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and God-head; ſo that they are without excuſe: yet in Heb. 11. 5,6. he ſays that all theſe are further and anew apprehended by Faith when a Man comes to God, Heb. 11. 5,6. By faith Enoch was tranſlated that he ſhould not ſee death, and was not found, becauſe God had tranſlated him: for before his tranſlation he had this teſtimony, that he pleaſed God. But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him: for he that cometh to God, muſt believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him. By it a Man muſt apprehend anew, that the Worlds were made, and that God is, and is a rewarder of them that ſeek him, for the other Knowledge would not be enough to perſuade the Soul effectually to come unto God, and to live to him.

3. When God leaves any Man to the doubting of his own Heart, and darkneſs of it, he finds he calls all theſe former principles of Truth into queſtion, and cannot by all arguments find his Heart eſtabliſhed in them. How many Men when Converted are exerciſed with doubtings whether there be a God, or a Chriſt, or a World to come? For when a Man begins to believe in earneſt, and to make theſe principles the grounds of a Godly Life then the darkneſs of the Heart diſcovers it ſelf, and not before. And the Devil ſtirs it up, knowing that hereby he undermines the foundation. Now I ſay theſe doubts were there always; only now they are diſcovered, and if theſe diſcover themſelves in a Man after he begins to believe, as uſually then they do: Then much more did they lurk and reign in the Heart afore, and how much more are they in thoſe that have no Faith to eſtabliſh their Hearts at all. When the ſhadow of the perſuaſion of theſe things was in the Heart, Unbelief fought not with it, but when the true ſubſtance of things hoped for comes in, then Unbelief is up in Arms, and a Man finds all thoſe ſhadows vaniſh.

Now there would not be no room, nor place, nor entertainment for ſuch objections, and though thrown in by Satan, yet they would not ſtick, unleſs there was much Unbelief, much matter to work upon.

4. Tho' ſuch doubts in the mind do not actually appear above Ground, nor muſter themſelves in the Field, yet the ſtronger any Man grows in Faith, the more he complains of Unbelief, Mark 9. 24. And ſtraightway the father of the child cried out, and ſaid with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief. For a Man finds theſe doubtings like Pioneers under ground at work, when all is fair above, Atheiſm and Unbelief are of all corruptions the moſt ſecret, and diſcovered only by the true apprehenſion, and through Belief of the contrary, and therefore the ſtrongeſt Chriſtians, and as Men grow in Grace, they diſcern theſe moſt. Therefore ſurely theſe are the fundamental bottom corruptions of all in a Mans Heart. As it is the cleareſt Light of the Truth, which diſcovers the Foundation of an error, and the Lines, where Error and Truth part, ſo it is the cleareſt Faith, that diſcovers Unbelief; and if Faith thus diſcovers it, then ſurely it is in all Mens Hearts though they ſee it not. It is for want of Faith, that the generality of Men think they have ſo little unbelief. Whereas if Men would build upon nothing, but ſure Earth, and firm Faith: they would find all the Earth above ground to be but made Earth, that would crack and ſink preſently. Chap 4.

And as the ſtrongeſt Chriſtians complain of it, ſo did Chriſt ſtill of all elſe complain of this concerning his Diſciples. Oh you of little Faith, ſays he, Luk. 12. 28. If then God ſo cloth the graſs, which is to day in the Field, and to morrow is caſt into the oven: how much more will he cloth you,, O ye of little faith? and if ye had but as much Faith as a Grain of Muſtard-ſeed, ſays he, Mat. 17.20. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Becauſe of your unbelief: for verily I ſay unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of muſtard ſeed, ye ſhall ſay unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it ſhall remove; and nothing ſhall be unpoſſible unto you. He ſpeaks it often in caſe of doubting the Power of God, and not of juſtifying Faith only, and ſo to Mary he ſays, if thou wouldſt believe but the Power of God, John 11. 40. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldeſt believe, thou ſhouldeſt ſee the glory of God? Thus God alſo complains of his People, Numb. 14. 11. And the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, How long will this people provoke me? and how long will it be ere they believe me, for all the ſigns which I have ſhewed among them? God ſpeaks it in caſe of doubting his power to ſubdue their Enemies. Now then that which God, and Chriſt, and ſtrongeſt Chriſtians complain of, is certainly in Mens Hearts.

5 If all theſe ſpeak it not; yet look upon Mens lives and actions, and the carriages of their Hearts in time of Trial and Temptation, when their belief in theſe principles is put to the ſtreſs.

1. Look upon Mens actions which are the moſt true interpreters and comments of their Hearts, as David ſays, Pſal. 36 1. The tranſgreſſion of the wicked ſaith in my heart there is no fear of God before his eyes; that is, it evidently argues it. However they profeſs they fear God, and think they do, yet their wickedneſs argues there is no fear of God. So I ſay, Mens actions argue there is no Faith of the firſt principles, either of promiſes or threatnings, which is the meaning of that place, Tit. 1. 16. They profeſs that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and diſobedient, and unto every good work reprobate. they profeſs they know God, and believe him, but in Works they deny him, that is, to be that God they ſeem to believe he is, and in Works they do it, becauſe their works argue they do ſo, and thoſe works proceed from ſomething within which denies it. for a Man is moſt ſerious in his conſtant action, quicquid operatur, operatur ut eſt, as it is in being, ſo is it in working; therefore if there was not a real principle within them which denied God, their works would not be the Works of Atheiſts. For upon the belief, and granting of ſuch, and ſuch Principles, ſuch and ſuch concluſions neceſſarily follow. They do ſo in other things, as God argues, Mal. 1. 6. A ſon honoureth his father, and a ſervant his Maſter: if then I be a father, where is mine honour? and if I be a maſter, where is my fear? ſaith the Lord of hoſts unto you, O prieſts, that deſpiſe my name: and ye ſay, Wherein have we deſpiſed thy name? If I be a Father where is my honour? that is, if you believed this heartily, as you profeſs you do, and as other Children believe theſe and theſe Men to be their Parents, you would demean your ſelves to me accordingly, you would ask my bleſſing every day, and call me Father Morning and Evening, you would have recourſe to me as to a Father, truſt me in ſtraits, and difficulties as a Father. So if you believe I am a Maſter, then where is my fear? How dare you daily do contrary to what I command, and that when Conſcience tells you, that you do ſo? If a Maſter ſays, go, his Servant goeth, if come, he cometh: But you leave undone what I command, and ſlight me in all: Certainly you do not believe that I am your Maſter, for then obedience of conſequence would follow, for to other Maſters whom you ſeriouſly make account to be ſo, ſervice, and obſervance doth follow, a Servant doth fear his Maſter, ſays God there. In a like manner God ſpeaks, Jer. 5. 21, 22, 23, 24. Hear now this, O fooliſh people, and without underſtanding which have eyes and ſee not, which have ears and hear not: fear ye not me? ſaith the Lord: will ye not tremble at my preſence, which have placed the ſand for the bound of the ſea, by a perpetual decree that it cannot the leaſt jogg would ſhake, and throw down. paſs it; and though the waves thereof toſs them ſelves, yet can they not prevail; though they rore, yet can they not paſs over it? But this people hath a revolting and a rebellious heart: they are revolted and gone. Neither ſay they in their heart, Let us now fear the Lord our God that giveth rain, both the former and the latter in his ſeaſon: he reſerveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harveſt. Fear you not me? will you not tremble every time you think of me? who have placed the Sand for the bound of the Sea, &c. you ſay you all believe this, why then, ſays God, will you not fear me? and ſo ſays he when you conſider that I am he that feeds you, and cloaths you, and give you Rain, and provide for you, that could when I would reſtrain the Rain; will you not love, and ſerve me? But, ſays God, you have rebellious Hearts, neither ſay you, let us fear the Lord who gives us Rain. To fear him is indeed a natural conſequence upon it, and they would do ſo if they believed it indeed, and in earneſt that they depended on him for all, for others you ſee who do ſo depend upon you, do fear and regard you, and therefore if you apprehended it indeed, you would fear me, but he tells them, they were a people without the underſtanding and belief of this, v. 21. and that ſeeing they did not ſee, that though they had ſome light into theſe principles, yet indeed they did not believe them, and ſee them by Faith, as Moſes ſaw God, and the Saints ſee him, for therefore they believe not, ſays Chriſt, becauſe they ſee not with their Eyes, John 12. 39, 40. Therefore they could not believe, becauſe that Eſaias ſaid again, he hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart: that they ſhould not ſee with their eyes, nor underſtand with their heart, and be converted, and I ſhould heal them.

6. So alſo, that in times of diſtreſs, when the Anchor ſhould ſtay the Ship as in a Storm, that then Mens Hearts fail them, though confident afore, this is a demonſtration of a natural unbelief in them; when troubles approach, or great ones threaten, then Men are afraid, and their Hearts are mov'd as the Leaves of Trees. Thus was it with the Diſciples, Mark 4. 40. And he ſaid unto them, Why are ye ſo fearful? how is it that you have no faith? It was want of Faith, Why are you ſo fearful? how is it you have no Faith? did not the Meſſiah go with you, it was becauſe they believed it not, that they were ſo afraid, that their Hearts fainted, as Jacob's did for the ſame reaſon, Gen. 45. 26. And told him ſaying, Joſeph is yet alive, and he is governour over all the land of Egypt. And Jacobs heart fainted, for he believed them not. Thus Mary who could believe that Lazarus ſhould riſe at the latter day, and all men elſe, yet that her brother ſhould riſe now preſently, ſhe knew not how to believe it, he might not have died indeed ſhe thought, but he was now four days dead and ſtunk, Joh. 11. 23, 24, 32, 39. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Thy brother ſhall riſe again. Martha ſaith unto him, I know that he ſhall riſe again in the reſurrection at the laſt day. Then when Mary was come where Jeſus was, and ſaw him, ſhe fell down at his feet, ſaying unto him, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died. Jeſus ſaid, Take ye away the ſtone. Martha, the ſiſter of him that was dead, ſaith unto him, Lord, by this time he ſtinketh: for he hath been dead four days. Her Faith now fail'd in this time of extremity, ſo alſo men can in their health, believe the Salvation of their Souls, and can truſt God for Salvation, it being a thing they are not preſently to enjoy, but let them be in a ſmall Worldly ſtrait, they diſtruſt God in it, and let them come to be ſick, then when their truſting God for Salvation comes to be preſent, they are as doubtful of that, as any thing elſe.

Now the reaſons of it are;

1. Mans Nature will believe nothing but what it ſees. So Mar. 15. 32. Let Chriſt the king of Iſrael deſcend now from the croſs, that we may ſee and believe. And they that were crucified with him, reviled him. Joh. 6. 30. They ſaid therefore unto him, What ſign ſheweſt thou then, that we may ſee, and believe thee? what doſt thou work? now the firſt principles are not ſeen, as no principles of Arts and Sciences are to be proved, for then reaſon would have no bottom to reſt on. And ſo now theſe firſt practical principles of Piety not being apprehended by reaſon, nor ſight, therefore Faith muſt be wrought, which is the evidence of things not ſeen. God is out of our ſight; who hath ſeen him at any time, his Judgments are out of ſight, Pſal. 10. 5. His ways are always grievous; thy judgments are far above out of his ſight: as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them. Hell and Heaven Men ſee not. But you will ſay, that the Apoſtle expreſſeth that his Godhead is clearly ſeen, Rom. 1.20. For the inviſible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; ſo that they are without excuſe, and wrath revealed from Heaven, Rom. 1. 18. For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven againſt all ungodlineſs, and unrighteouſneſs of men, who hold the truth in unrighteouſneſs. I anſwer, that all thoſe glimmerings are not of force enough to overcome the contrary darkneſs, no nor can the Word of God it ſelf do it, till Faith comes with its Optique Glaſs, and makes them real, and evident, and puts them out of queſtion, ſo as if ever they become active to guide our lives they muſt be apprehended by a new principle. Therefore it is written, Heb. 11. 6. He that comes to God, muſt have Faith to believe even that God, which yet is clearly ſeen ſo far, as to leave Men inexcuſable. Chap 4.

2. Theſe being ſuch tranſcendent things above our thoughts, there is a dulneſs in Man to believe them, and we cannot raiſe our thoughts ſo high. It is called a ſlowneſs of Heart in us, Luke 24. 25. Then he ſaid unto them, O fools, and ſlow of heart to believe all that the prophets have ſpoken! Inſomuch as Chriſt ſays, John. 5. 43. I am come in my Fathers name, and ye receive me not: if another ſhall come in his own name, him ye will receive; if another come in his own name, him you will receive, any but me you would accept. Wiſdom is too high, too far above, ſo out of reaſons reach, to believe it as it is to be believed, ſo that though the folly that is in us makes us believe every vain promiſe elſe of our hearts, every Fable, Prov. 14. 15. The ſimple believeth every word: but the prudent man looketh well to his going, we will not believe firm, and ſolid truths, Wiſdom is too high for a Fool, and Men are loth to extend their Eye-ſight to ſee ſo far off; it wearies, and dulls them, and therefore though we ſee we can ſcarce believe, though ſigns be wrought, John 12. 37. But though he had done ſo many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him.

3. Theſe ſpiritual Truths are contrary to a Mans Heart, and Ways, and Courſe; now ſelf-love being in the Mind and Underſtanding, it keeps it off from aſſenting to what it apprehends evil to it ſelf. Now to believe there is a God, and a Hell, &c. are contrary to it. For he is a Judge, and therefore Men liked not to receive the Knowledge of him, and believe him not, Rom. 1. 28. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do thoſe things which are not convenient: ſo 2 Theſ. 2. 12. this reaſon is given why they believed not, becauſe they had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs, 2 Theſ. 2. 12. That they all might be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs. As Love makes us credulous, 1 Cor. 13. 7. Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things, we believe good of thoſe we love, ſo ſelf-love renders us incredulous; therefore Chriſts ſays, though I tell you, you will not believe, Luke 22. 67. Saying, Art thou the Chriſt? tell us. And he ſaid unto them, If I tell you, you will not believe.

4. Unbelief was the chief of Mans firſt ſin, their firſt miſcarrying was not believing Gods Word, and therefore they eſpecially wounded our Nature with unbelief, and faith being extinguiſht, the contrary principles have come to poſſeſs the mind, 2 Cor. 4. 4. In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, leſt the light of the glorious goſpel of Chriſt, who is the image of God ſhould ſhine unto them. Satan hath power to blind their Minds with contrary Principles.

Book V.

CHAP. V.

What are the principles of Godlineſs which a wicked Man believes not.

NOW the main Principles of a Godly Life which the Heart of Man believes not, and the contrary Principles to them, which do ſway and prevail with the Heart are ſundry and diverſe.

1. We naturally believe not that there is a God; but the contrary, for this I produce not this place only, but the tenth Pſalm, where we have the ſame truth laid down, yea, and that as the ſpring and ſource of all thoſe villanies and oppreſſions, which there are reckoned up. He ſpeaks in that Pſalm of Great and Potent Oppreſſions and Politicians, who ſee none on Earth greater than themſelves, none higher than they; and think therefore they may impunè prey upon the ſmaller, as Beaſts uſe to do, and in the fourth verſe; This is made the root and ground of all that God is not in all his thoughts, Pſal. 10. 4. The wicked through the pride of his countenance will not ſeek after God: God is not in all his thoughts, the words are diverſly read, and all make for this ſenſe: ſome read it. No God in all his crafty preſumptuous purpoſes: others all his thoughts are, there is no God. The meaning whereof is not only, that among the ſwarm, and croud of thoughts that fill his Mind, the thought of God is ſeldom to be found, and comes not in among the reſt, which yet is enough for the purpoſe in hand; but farther, that in all his projects, and plots, and conſultations of his Heart, (the firſt reading of the words intends) whereby he contrives and lays the plot form and draught of all his actions, he never takes God or his Will into conſideration, or conſultation to ſquare and frame all accordingly; but proceeds, and goes on, in all, and carries on all, as if there were no God to be conſulted with. He takes not him along with him no more than if he were no God, the thoughts of him and his will ſways him not. As you uſe to ſay when a combination of Men leave out, ſome one, they ſhould adviſe with, that ſuch an one is not of their Counſel; is not in the plot: ſo nor is God in their purpoſes and adviſings, they do all without him. But this is not all the meaning, but farther, all their thought is, that there is no God. This is there made the bottom, the foundation, the ground work and reaſon of all their wicked plots, and injurious projects, and deceitful carriages, and proceedings, that ſeeing there is no God, or power above them to take notice of it, to regard or to requite them; therefore they may be bold to go on. That whereas Solomon ſays in that very caſe there is a higher than the higheſt regardeth it, Eccleſ. 5. 8. If thou ſeeſt the oppreſſion of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and juſtice in a province, marvel not at the matter: for he that is higher than the higheſt, regardeth, and there be higher than they. They think not ſo, v. 11. of that tenth Pſalm, He hath ſaid in his heart, God hath forgotten: he hideth his face, he will never ſee it.

Enemies on Earth he ſees none can do him any hurt, all his diſtreſſers he puffs at them, and then vainly imagining that there is no God, he thinks that he may go on preſumptuouſly, for, ſays he, I ſhall never be removed; and tell him of Gods Judgements, why if there be no God, what need he fear any, he is far enough out of their Gun-ſhot to reach him, they are far out of his ſight, v. 5. His ways are always grievous; thy judgments are far above out of his ſight: as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them. That is, he ſees them not, as we do not things that are high and far above us; and he wanting Faith, which is the Optique Glaſs of things not ſeen, he believes them not, and that he believes this great fundamental error, that there is no God, you may ſee by all his Thoughts and Ways, they declare that he thinks there is no God, that this is the ſum verdict they give in, they ſpeak and declare ſo much, and if this Principle be laid in mens Hearts (as you ſee it is) then no wonder that they are ſo wicked, for if there be no God, there is not, nor can be any ſin, and then no Judgment, and then Men may do what they will. Quod libet, licet his. As when there was no King in Iſrael every Man did what was good in his own Eyes, ſo when Men think there is no God, their own Luſts are their Laws, and Riches and Preferments their Gods, and gain in all theſe is all their Godlineſs. Chap. 5.

Or 2. If Men be ſenſible there is a God, and ſo come to have ſome reſpect to him in their actions, yet all thoſe glorious attributes wherein he hath repreſented himſelf to us, as Principles of our obedience to him, they believe not, indeed, and in truth, and this is the ground alſo of all their impiety.

1. They believe not really, that he is a God omniſcient, and ſees and regards us in all. Though Men profeſs this, yet when they come to commit ſecret ſins, their Hearts think not ſo, for contrary thoughts are the ground of their impiety. And this very thing God who ſearcheth the Hearts hath revealed to us the Antients of Iſrael, the Rulers in Iſrael, Ezek. 8. 9, 10, 12. And he ſaid unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here. So I went in, and ſaw, and behold, every form of creeping things, and abominable beaſts, and all the idols of the houſe of Iſrael pourtrayed upon the wall round about. Then ſaid he unto me, Son of man, haſt thou ſeen what the ancients of the houſe of Iſrael do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they ſay, The Lord ſeeth us not, the Lord hath forſaken the earth, who know God, and all his Attributes, they Sacrificed in ſecret to Idols, whilſt they profeſſed the true God openly; and what is the cauſe of this? God gives this as a reaſon, for they ſay, The Lord ſeeth us not. That thou ſhouldſt commit uncleanneſs in ſecret, thou wouldſt not do afore a child, or tell that lye, thou wouldſt not have diſcovered or known, is it not from this Principle emboldning thee; God ſees me not? would Gehazi have told that lye, which he did, if he had believed the Spirit of his Maſter went with him? would Men in ſecret lay plots to overturn Churches, and States, and Societies, to oppreſs Gods People, to advance themſelves, if they believed God to be Wiſer than themſelves, or that he did ſee them, and delighted to ſhew his wit in confounding them? Iſa. 29. 13, 14, 15, 16. Wherefore the Lord ſaid, Foraſmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear towards me is taught by the precepts of men: Therefore behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work amongſt this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: for the wiſdom of their wiſe men ſhall periſh, and the underſtanding of the prudent men ſhall be hid. Wo unto them that ſeek deep to hide their counſel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they ſay, Who ſeeth us? and who knoweth us? Surely your turning of things upſide down ſhall be eſteemed as the potters clay: for ſhall the work ſay, of him that made it, He made me not? or ſhall the thing framed ſay of him that framed it, He had no underſtanding? God ſpeaks there of thoſe that did profeſs him, and call upon him, v. 13. Wiſe Men whom God would confound in their Plots, v. 14. The Wiſdom of the Wiſe ſhall periſh, for v. 15. they digged deep to hide Counſel from the Lord, their Gun-Powder-Plots and Underminings are in the dark, and they look round about them, and they diſcern none that ſees them, and therefore they ſay, Who ſees us, and who knows us? Pſal. 10. 11. He hath ſaid in his heart, God hath forgotten: he hideth his face, he will never ſee it. Pſal. 94. 7. Yet they ſay, The Lord ſhall not ſee: neither ſhall the God of Jacob regard it.

2. If Men believed the Greatneſs and Soveraignty of God, and power of his Wrath, would they fear the fury of the oppreſſour daily, as God complains, Iſa. 51. 12, 13. them that can kill but the Body, yea, that cannot do that neither long, or often, for he is one that ſhall die, and then have no longer power to hurt, and he before may have his Horns cut ſhort, may be blaſted and wither as the Graſs, and his Spirit cut ſhort, ſo as where now is the fury of the oppreſſors, wilt thou fear him ſays God there, and doeſt thou forget the Lord thy Maker? Who hath power to kill Body and Soul, who dyes not, feareſt thou not to fall into the hands of the living God? Iſa. 51. 12, 13. I, even I am he that comforteth you: who art thou, that thou ſhouldſt be afraid of a man that ſhall die, and of the ſon of man which ſhall be made as graſs? And forgetteſt the Lord thy maker, that hath ſtretched forth the Heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth? and haſt feared continually every day, becauſe of the fury of the oppreſſour, as if he were ready to deſtroy? and where is the fury of the oppreſſour? if thou didſt believe his Greatneſs thou wouldſt fear him; for what doſt thou fear the Oppreſſor? if thou hadſt but as ſtrong and deep apprehenſions of his power over thee, as thou haſt of a powerful Enemy, thou wouldſt not fear a poor weak man more than God. But that thou forgetteſt thy Maker, thou wouldſt not do it. For if one greater than thy oppreſſour comes, that is able to oppreſs both him and thee, thou would ſlight even him, whom but now thou fearedſt, and ſlight him as much as thou didſt God before.

3. Men do not believe he is ſo great and terrible a God as they profeſs him to be; For would they then come with looſe, irreverent, ſcattered and careleſs thoughts into his preſence, and offer the Sacrifice of Fools, if they believed he were in Heaven, and they on Earth; That is, that there were ſuch a diſtance and infinite diſproportion between God and them, would they offer the Blind, the Lame; ſuch Prayers as neither their underſtandings are intent upon, nor their affections? If they believed he were ſo great a King, and his name ſo dreadful, they would not come into his preſence ſo negligently, you would not do thus to your Governours, ſays God, Mal. 1. 8. And if ye offer the blind for ſacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and ſick, is it not evil? offer it now unto thy governour, will he be pleaſed with thee, or accept thy perſon? ſaith the Lord of hoſts, that is, if you believed my Greatneſs as you believe their power and Soveraignty over you, you would bring other Hearts, and Sacrifices into my preſence.

And in Ezek. 5. 3. God puts them in mind of his Greatneſs to rectifie this their ſlighting of him, implying therefore neceſſarily thereby, that the want of the belief of this was the cauſe of their careleſs, and irreverent Worſhip, Ezek. 5 3. Thou ſhalt alſo take thereof a few in number, and bind them in thy skirts.

So alſo in Iſa. 5 13. (as I ſhew'd under the laſt Head) the reaſon why Men fear the fury of Great Men, when they oppreſs them, or command one thing, and God another: is, becauſe they forget his greatneſs, and believe it not, who art thou, ſays God there, who feareſt the fury of the oppreſſour, who yet is but a Man, who can therefore but kill the Body? and a mortal man too that muſt dye, as well as thou, and it may be before thee, or who however hath no longer power after his death to hurt, and whoſe power may be blaſted ere he dies, or if not, yet his fury may ceaſe towards thee; and his Spirit be cut ſhort; for ſays God there, where is the fury of the oppreſſour? that is, thou ſeeſt it comes to nothing often, and that all their threats vaniſh; why is it then ſays God thou forgetteſt me, thy Maker? Who therefore am able to deſtroy all that is in thee, both Body and Soul, for I made both, who am the great God who hath ſtretched forth the Heavens, &c. when I tell thee I am he that comforteth thee, and will back thee, and bid thee not fear, v. 12. How comes it thou feareſt them more than me? It is becauſe thou forgetteſt me, and my greatneſs, for therefore he puts them in mind of it; and that it is ſo, it is evident: For if one whom thou apprehendeſt greater than thy oppreſſour, who is able to over-rule, and oppreſs both him and thee, ſhould but ſay as much as God doth, thou wouldſt dread thy former oppreſſour no longer, and therefore this ſhews that thy fearing him is becauſe thou believeſt not Gods Greatneſs.

4. If they believe that God doth ſee and is able to puniſh, yet Men think him a God ſlack, and careleſs and regardleſs of their ways, and not ſo certain, and ſure, and juſt an avenger, as they profeſs he is, that is another Principle in their Hearts, which is a ground of their impiety, 2 Pet. 3. 4, 9.

And

And ſaying, Where is the promiſe of his coming? for ſince the fathers fell aſleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. The Lord is not ſlack concerning his promiſe, (as ſome men count ſlackneſs) but is long-ſuffering to us-ward, not willing that any ſhould periſh, but that all ſhould come to repentance. Chap. 5.
God deferring his coming to puniſh, Peter ſays that God herein is not ſlack, as men count ſlackneſs, implying that Men indeed do think ſo, and they interpret his long ſuffering ſlackneſs, and they ſay in their Heart God, will neither do good nor evil, as if he regarded nothing, Zeph. 1. 12. And it ſhall come to paſs at that time, that I will ſearch Jeruſalem with candles, and puniſh the men that are ſettled on their lees; that ſay in their heart, The Lord will not do good, neither will he do evil. Hence they think, that they may do what they will for all him; for as they look for little good from him, but only in the Creatures, ſo they look for little hurt from him, he will do neither, ſay they. And hence now their Hearts come to be ſet upon evil, Eccleſ. 8. 11. Becauſe ſentence againſt an evil work is not executed ſpeedily; therefore the heart of the ſons of men is fully ſet in them to do evil. This Principle is not only the ground why they venture upon many evil acts again and again, but of a bent and reſolute and fixed purpoſe in mind ſtill to go on in evil courſes, ſo in Pſalm 10. when the ſinner had often ſinned, and had heard nothing of it. He thought God regardleſs, he hath forgotten it, ſaith he, Pſal. 10. 11. and as he hath done ſo he will do, and he will never requite it, he minds not theſe things.

5. Men think in their Hearts that God is like to them, that if he be ſuch a God of Judgment as it is ſaid he is, certainly it is to thoſe, that are different from him; but certainly he is a God of the ſame mind and judgment with us, and look what pitch of Obedience and Religion pleaſeth us, pleaſeth him alſo. He is not ſo ſtrict as Men make him; ſo Mal. 2. 17. they reaſoned and put this Dilemma on him, which ſtrengthned them in their courſes, Mal. 2. 17. Ye have wearied the Lord with your words: yet ye ſay, Wherein have we wearied him? When ye ſay, Every one that doeth evil, is good in the ſight of the Lord, and he delighteth in them; or, Where is the God of judgment? they ſay, every one that doth evil is good in the ſight of the Lord, that is, though a Man doth evil, i. e. is given to ſome ill courſe, be a Worldling, or a Drunkard, or a Swearer now and then, yet God is not ſo ſtrict a God as you make him, he may be in his favour for his good meaning, for God looks to the Heart: Or if not ſo, (for 'tis a Dilemma) where is the God of Judgment? that is, either he is a God thus favourable, or elſe, not ſuch a God of Judgment ſo holy, and ſo ſevere as you Prophets make him. For we ſee not, nor find him to be ſo; where is the God of Judgment? The truth is, you have wearied him, ſays the Prophet, that is, tir'd out his Long-ſuffering which he hath been exerciſing all this while; ſo in Pſal. 50. The very ground, and ſpring of that prophaneneſs and lewdneſs in the Hypocrites Heart and Life, (who thought though he was an Adulterer and a Slanderer, yet he pleaſed God by his Sacrifices) was this thought, (ſays God) that I was like to thee, Pſal. 50. 21. Theſe things haſt thou done, and I kept ſilence: thou thoughteſt that I was altogether ſuch an one as thy ſelf: but I will reprove thee, and ſet them in order before thine eyes. That is, thou thoughteſt me a God, who if he were to live and converſe on Earth, would ſuite himſelf with thee, juſtifie thy courſes, and approve all well.

6. Men Naturally believe not the Word of God, neither the Promiſes nor Threatnings of it. It was the ground of the firſt ſin that ever was committed, Hath God ſaid you ſhall dye? Gen. 3. 1. he made a queſtion of it to her, and ſhe began to ſtagger, becauſe a Creature ſubſiſt, and yet call Gods Word into queſtion, and therefore ſhe thought ſhe might eat and live alſo. And as it was the ground of the firſt ſin, ſo of all ever ſince; for if Men believed the Word, and Writs we ſerve upon their Conſciences here out of the Word; (when they know themſelves) as they do the Writs that come out of Courts, and Attachments from the King, or others; it would make them fear and tremble, and put a ſtop to their courſes. Would the Swearer be ſo loud if in earneſt he believed God will not hold him guiltleſs that takes his name in vain? Would Men be Covetous, be Fornicators, Drunkards, &c. if they believed that the wrath of God comes upon ſuch?

The Rich Man in Hell, Luk. 16. whoſe Brethren lived in the boſom of the Church, and heard Moſes Read and Preacht: and all the Promiſes and Threatnings which in Deut. 28 and elſewhere are made, yet he feared they would come to Hell; why ſays Abraham they have Moſes and the Prophets, to tell them, and teſtifie to them aforehand, a cloud of Witneſſes more likely to perſuade than if one ſhould come from the Dead. But they would not be perſuaded, the Rich Man thought by them, for he had woful experience of it in himſelf, for when Abraham ſays, Let them hear them, nay, ſays he, but if one come from the Dead they would repent. Nay, ſays Abraham again, if they believe not Moſes and the Prophets, neither will they be perſuaded by one riſing from the Dead. The reaſon Men Repent not is becauſe they are not perſuaded. Luk. 16. 31. And he ſaid unto him, If they hear not Moſes and the Prophets, neither will they be perſuaded though one roſe from the dead. The word is πειθήσονται, that ſame word is uſed to expreſs the perſuaſion of Faith whereby we believe things are, Heb. 11. 13. Theſe all died in faith, not having received the promiſes, but having ſeen them afar off, and were perſuaded of them, and embraced them, and confeſſed that they were ſtrangers and pilgrims on the earth. Having ſeen the promiſes afar off, they were firſt perſuaded, that is, of the truth and reality of them, and then applied and embraced them, now then his Brethren would not ſo much as be perſuaded of the truth of the Threatnings, and Moſes and the Prophets would not ſink into them. Thus Chriſt alſo tells the Jews. John 5. 46, 47. For had ye believed Moſes, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how ſhall ye believe my words? Ye believe not Moſes his Writings (ſays he) not in earneſt, ſo as to be guided by them. The cauſe of all the murmuring in the people of Iſrael ſo often, and that they hearkened not to his voice, and deſpiſed the promiſed Land was, they believed not Gods Word, nor the truth and faithfulneſs of it, Pſal. 106. 24, 25. Yea, they deſpiſed the pleaſant land: they believed not his word: but murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the Lord, and they in Heb. 4. are made a Type of all Unregenerate Men, who believe not the promiſes of Heaven, for ſtill you ſhall find their Unbelief there mentioned, and they failed not only in the application to themſelves that they ſhould not enter, but of the truth it ſelf the ſerioufneſs of Gods meaning in it, as appear'd by the ſtory. You know who it was, even wicked Ahaz; who refuſed a promiſe and a ſign when it was offered him, Iſa. 7. 10, 11, 12, 13. The reaſon was he was loth to take that courſe of truſting and depending upon a promiſe, to go that way to work, he not only diſtruſted but refuſed Gods bond, would not take it, though God offered a ſign and ſeal to it; and as for promiſes ſo for threatnings, how do men ſlight them? Jer. 17. 15. where is the Word of the Lord? Let it come now, as alſo in Iſa. 5. 19. That ſay, Let him make ſpeed, and haſten his work, that we may ſee it: and let the counſel of the holy One of Iſrael draw nigh and come, that we may know it. A parallel place to it, let him make haſte that we may ſee it, they ſpeak it in a daring deſperate Unbelieving manner, he hath threatned long, let him come, we would fain ſee it once. Thus that oppreſſor too in Pſalm 10. 5. behaves himſelf; as for Gods Judgments, of all elſe he fears them leaſt, they are far out of ſight, ſo as he can't ſee them, and if he doth, they ſeem ſmall as ſtars do, he cannot believe they are ſo great.

6. Men believe not that there is a World to come, wherein evil men ſhall be puniſht and godly Men rewarded, nor a day of Judgment, nor a Reſurrection. You think you believe all theſe things, well enough, they are in your Creed. Martha ſhe profeſſed ſhe knew her Brother ſhould riſe in the Reſurrection of the laſt day, John 11. 24. Martha ſaith unto him, I know that he ſhall riſe again in the reſurrection at the laſt day, but yet Chriſt ſaw her Faith ſtaggering, in the truth of this indeed and in truth, elſe he would never have after that profeſſion poſed her ſo in her Creed, and Catechiſed her again, in this this general article, whoſoever liveth and believeth in me ſhall never dye, believeſt thou this? v. 25, 26. Jeſus ſaid unto her, I am the reſurrection and the life: he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet ſhall he live; and whoſoever liveth, and believeth in me, ſhall never die. Believeſt thou this? ſhe had ſaid it even now, and yet Chriſt asks her again if ſhe believed it, though had ſhe believed it, ſhe would not have thought her Brother could not be raiſed now, becauſe he ſtank; Chriſt tells her, that ſhe did not believe it, as he had ſaid and intimated to her, v. 40. yet ſhe had ſome faith. How much more is this true in Wicked Men, whoſe not believing the World to come is the cauſe they take out their fill here? That ſpeech of the Jews, Iſa. 22. 13. Let us eat and drink for to morrow we ſhall die, is interpreted and applied by the Holy Ghoſt to the Reſurrection, 1 Cor. 15. 32. If after the manner of men I have fought with beaſts at Epheſus, what advantageth it me, if the dead riſe not? Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we die, becauſe they denied that in their Hearts, and any life hereafter, therefore they thought it was beſt to take it out here, and that it was folly to do otherwiſe. Thus alſo the Rich Man did, who is put in mind of this his Atheiſm in Hell, Luke 16. 25. But Abraham ſaid, Son, remember that thou in thy life time receiveds thy good things, and likewiſe Lazarus evil things, but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. Remember thou receiveds thy good things in thy life time; that is, all the good things thou didſt look for, or expect. And he acknowledgeth as much in that he would have Lazarus go, and teſtifie to his Brethren that there was another World, and a place of Torment. He knew the want of belief of this brought him thither, and therefore preſcribes it as a remedy to prevent their coming; and this in like manner in Mal. 3. 14. is made the cauſe of their neglect of holy duties and ſeeking God, You ſay it is in vain to ſerve God, and what profit is there in keeping his Ordinances? there is no reward for the Righteous, nothing to be got by it, they could ſee none here, and much leſs did they look for any hereafter, what good will it then do us? ſay they, and now therefore we call the proud happy, ſay they, and the preſumptuous that carry the World afore them, and for whom the World was made, ſeeing happineſs is only to be had here, and that wicked Men are advanced, v. 15. and they ſeeing this, they ſaid in their Hearts there is no reward, and thought there was none to come neither. And yet they ſcarce diſcern'd their unbelief of this future ſtate (as many ſuch ſpeeches are to be interpreted) for they ſaid, wherein had they ſpoke againſt God, v. 13. Your words have been ſtout againſt me, ſaith the Lord: yet ye ſay, What have we ſpoken ſo much againſt thee? Chap. 5.

And that this is a principle in Mens Hearts that guides them thus, and that alſo upon the ſame ground, is evident by that of Solomon in Eccleſ. 9. he had ſhewn in chap. 8. how that the wicked are rewarded with the work of the Righteous, that the Righteous are unproſperous, and è contra, and in v. 2. of chap. 9. How here one event was to all, Eccleſ. 9. 2. All things come alike to all, there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked; to the good, and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not: as is the good, ſo is the ſinner; and he that ſweareth, as he that feareth an oath. And he ſays there was no greater evil than this, for the event and iſſue of this Gods dealing was, that thereby the Hearts of the Sons of Men was full of evil and madneſs, whilſt they live, and it is the occaſion they go ſo many of them to Hell when they dye, and why becauſe Gods dealing thus engenders ſuch thoughts as theſe, that whilſt a Man lives there is hope indeed of ſome good and happineſs, but in the World to come there is no recompenſe to Godly courſes, which they expreſs by this proverb; that a living Dog is better than a dead Lion, v. 4. For to him that is joyned to all the living, there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion, that is, the meaneſt condition of men here is better than the beſt hereafter, they have then the beſt hereafter, ſo as they had rather be a ruſtick clown now, than a King in Heaven, they have no knowledge of hereafter and knowing they ſhall dye, think 'tis beſt taking it out here. They believe there is no reward hereafter, unleſs it may be, to be ſpoken well of for a while, they ſaw that, but no other, and that is ſoon forgotten, forgotten, and therefore they are ſet upon evil here, and here they prepare only for this World, and this though they know they ſhall dye, not young Men only who may hope to live long, but old Men alſo, when they know they cannot live long, and have a foot in the Grave, yet they are moſt worldly; whence is it; is it not from this principle that they think not of any reward beyond this World, which Gods dealings confirm them in? I have known thoſe perſons who have had this diſtinct thought in their minds, that let them but have their pleaſure here, and let God keep Heaven to himſelf, ſo he would not damn them. Thus that Cardinal ſaid, that he would not loſe his portion in Paris for that in Paradiſe.

Did we believe but theſe firſt principles as we do other things of like nature in this World, we would be other Men; did we believe there were another World after this, in which we muſt live for ever, as all profeſs they do, men would not take up their reſt here, they would not lay out all their Money, that is, their endeavours, time, and care, upon the ſetling and aſſuring a happy condition here, and ſpend no thoughts or time to provide all neceſſaries and friends in the World to come. We ſee that Men who believe they ſhall ſhortly go into another land, ſend their goods thither, and care not how things go at home, as you do not, when you know you are to remove into another Houſe, and your Landlord hath given you warning. And yet now God gives you warning by ſickneſs to diſlodge from this World, why do you not then look out for another Houſe and better Habitation, why are your thoughts, and care ſtill employ'd to repair the decayed Houſe, which you are leaving. But the truth is, men believe it not, ſo Solomon tells us, Eccleſ. 3. 21. Who knoweth the ſpirit of man that goeth upward, and the ſpirit of the beaſt that goeth downward to the earth? which is not the ſpeech of an Atheiſt, but of Solomon complaining that none believe it or know it, but think all befalls a Man and a Beaſt alike; Mens works ſhew, that they do not heartily believe death, and Judgment, for if Men did believe the ſhortneſs of their time to get Grace in, when they are old, as Men believe the ſhortneſs of the time when the Sun grows low, they would not defer, to make their calling ſure; did men believe that all the Seed they ſow to the Spirit, all the prayers they make, and good they do, will come up again in a full crop of reward at the great Harveſt of the World, and that as they Sow they ſhall Reap, as Husbandmen do believe, when they caſt their Corn into the ground, they would ſow fewer ſins and more good duties, and more good ſpeeches, but men think all caſt away, becauſe it comes not up preſently, Mal. 3. 14. Ye have ſaid, It is vain to ſerve God: and what profit is it, that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hoſts? If men believed that in parting with credit, wealth, &c. they ſhould have an hundred fold, as they believe if they put their money out, and venture it with ſuch a Company they ſhall gain half in half; if men believed this as the other, they would certainly venture all for Heaven; if men believed evil times were coming, and that theſe times would cauſe judgments, (as you believe Winter will come when Summer is gone, and ſo lay up proviſion and provide Winter ſuites) you would provide for ſuch a great, and terrible day.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VI.

Some objections anſwered. In what ſenſe it may be affirmed that all wicked Men are Atheiſts. That wicked Men are wanting in giving a heart aſſent to the firſt Principles, and fundamental truths of Religion, as well as they are defective in the application of them to themſelves.

THere are ſome objections, which may be urg'd againſt the Truth of the Doctrine, which I have deliver'd, which I now come to anſwer.

Object. If theſe ſayings were in Mens Hearts, then all Men ſhould be Hereticks and Atheiſts; and beſides, do not all profeſs the contrary Principles, yea and not only ſo, but aſſent to and contend for all thoſe, particular truths which are deduced out of them, and zealouſly defend all thoſe branches of our Religion which ſpring from them?

To all which I briefly anſwer;

Firſt, Whereas you ſay all ſhould be Hereticks; I anſwer, that there is a twofold Atheiſm and Hereſie, one direct and profeſſed conceived and expreſſed in ſo many words contrary to theſe principles, and there are few ſuch; but then there is an Atheiſm is indirect, and manifeſted but by way of conſequence, when that is yielded to by the Heart, which overthrows what a Man hath own'd, and aſſented to in his mind; and ſo many deny God in their works, 2 Pet. 2.1 But there were falſe prophets alſo among the people, even as there ſhall be falſe teachers among you, who privily ſhall bring in damnable hereſies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themſelves ſwift deſtruction. So as what in words they yielded unto, they in deed and in truth deny again. We may ſay in this caſe as Divines do of Papiſts, who though in words they do profeſs Chriſt, and aſſent to all the Articles of the Creed, yet withal they admit and hold ſuch opinions to uphold their curſed practices, as do deny him to be come in the Fleſh, 1 Joh. 4. 3. And every ſpirit that confeſſeth not that Jeſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is not of God: and this is that ſpirit of Antichriſt whereof you have heard that it ſhould come, and even now already is it in the world, and therefore their aſſenting to this truth that Chriſt is come in the Fleſh, doth not free them from being Antichriſts, and to be juſtly called ſo, yea, and as juſtly as the Jews are: for they do ſtrip him of all the ends he came into the World for. Thus though Men aſſent to this truth in direct terms propounded, that there is a God and a World to come, yet ſeeing they yield to ſuch courſes as cannot ſtand with a true aſſent thereto, therefore they may be termed Atheiſts and Hereticks in that ſenſe, as the Papiſts are called Antichriſt, who are they that in Rev. 11. 1. are to tread down the Holy City forty months, and poſſeſs the outward Court of the People, that is, the profeſſion of the Church. They are notwithſtanding called Gentiles, Rev. 11. 2. But the court which is without the temple leave out, and meaſure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city ſhall they tread under foot forty and two months.

And whereas ſecond, It is ſaid Men profeſs theſe principles; I anſwer, there is ſuch an aſſent given to theſe truths as ſhall cauſe a Man to profeſs them, for that you do being carried away with the common cry of all thoſe you live amongſt; as they believed for the ſaying of the Woman, John 4 39. ſo you take take them for granted and never queſtion, being brought up in them and taught to ſay ſo, and becauſe they are univerſally received; juſt ſuch an aſſent it is as the Turks have to their Alchoran, and therefore as they, ſo we profeſs theſe things as true; and look as the ſtream riſeth no higher, than the Fountain, ſo doth this aſſent, as it is engender'd by common opinion in Mens minds, ſo it ariſeth to common confeſſion. But now when a Man ſhall be put upon all thoſe practices, which are the neceſſary conſequences of thoſe principles, to alter all a Mans Courſe and Life upon theſe grounds that there is a God, and that he is a rewarder of thoſe that ſeek him, herein Men fall ſhort, for theſe principles have not intereſt enough in the Heart to prevail ſo far.

And therefore thirdly, As from common opinion, and general conſent Men receive theſe principles, they do in like manner aſſent to all the branches of Religion which ſpring from them, to all the conſequences of ſpeculation, and doctrine which are thence deduced, and think them true for their concatenation, and linking together, and harmony, and correſpondency one with another, and ſo out of thoſe principles contend for them, and accord to them, reaſon for them, and ſay if theſe be true, then are theſe likewiſe. As many Mathematicians do for Copernicus Demonſtrations which were framed and rear'd upon this that the Earth moves and the Heavens ſtand ſtill, wherein yet he makes all the Phenomena of Sun, Moon and Stars good upon that ſuppoſition, and yet the firſt principle it ſelf not being fully believed nor prov'd and evidenced to a Mans mind, but the contrary, a Man would not venture or hazard much upon the truth of them all; no more will Men for the truth they profeſs they believe, becauſe they ſtagger in their belief of the principles themſelves, which are to be apprehended by faith, and then all that are built on them, are ſo too. But otherwiſe men will not dye for them, and hold them faſt as their lives, and part with all for them, nor do they frame their lives to them, ſo as though they yield to all the conſequences of them of ſpeculation and doctrine, yet not of practice, which thoſe put them upon.

Object. 2. But you will in the ſecond place further object, That Men will ſay, they have laid their Ears to their Hearts, but yet they never heard them ſay ſo, they never had ſuch diſtinct contrary thoughts come into their minds, ſurely if there were ſuch principles and ſayings which do thus guide all their lives, they ſhould know them, but on the contrary, thoughts that there is a God &c. do often fill their minds, and are frequent with them and come in when they are about to ſin.

I anſwer, That Men may verily think they believe theſe things and perceive no contrary thoughts, and yet indeed do not believe them, nay the contrary ſayings ſhall yet be the chief engines that do turn their Hearts about, and all the Wheels of them.

For 1. There is a clear inſtance of it in John 5. 45, 46, 47. Do not think that I will accuſe you to the Father: there is one that accuſeth you, even Moſes, in whom ye truſt. For had ye believed Moſes, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how ſhall ye believe my words? The Jews they thought they believed Moſes well enough, for Chriſt ſays they truſted in him, and thought his writings the Word of God, ſo as they put confidence in them, yet ſays Chriſt it is evident you do not believe his writings, for you would then believe me alſo, but becauſe that cannot ſtand with your Luſts and greatneſs, you will not do it, v. 44. How can ye believe which receive honour one of another, and ſeek not the honour that cometh from God only? The conſequences therefore of believing Moſes writings they yield not unto, as indeed wanting true belief of them, and of their truth.

And ſecondly, You muſt know that theſe principles of Atheiſm, diſcover not themſelves in direct oppoſite thoughts much, which you may take notice of;

of; for they ſay little to the contrary, of the great Truths of Religion, but work underhand to the contrary; you hear them not diſputing againſt the truth in the Schools, of your ſpeculative underſtandings, no there the Word of God is heard, and they are ſilent there, but at the Court of the Heart, there they plot and act, and procure all acts that paſs, all a Mans deeds to be clean contrary, Theſe poſſeſs the Ears of the will, and affections, and ſo ſlily guide all, and carry all afore them. And herein lies the very depth of the Hearts Deceitfulneſs, which Jer. 17. the Prophet ſays no man can know. They ſay in their Hearts there is no God, 'tis added, in the Heart, to note out the ſecrecy of it. Why but you will ſay, if they be ſo prevalent, we ſhould know and diſcover them: I anſwer, the Heart is deceitful who can know it? Chap. 6.

For thirdly, Yet further to clear this to you, you muſt know, That the firſt principles whereby our minds are guided in judging of things, are ſeldom or never drawn out into actual thoughts by themſelves, ſo as you may view them alone. And if in any thing the hearts deceitfulneſs is diſcover'd it is in this, that all things ſhould be thus carried in the Heart, and yet the chief Agents and Principles never appear.

For firſt, thoſe firſt principles wherewith our minds being fully poſſeſſed, are guided by them, are ſeldom or never drawn forth and formed into explicite diſtinct actual thoughts; ſo as to conſider them apart by themſelves, and yet implicitely, they have a hand in all a Mans actions, ſo as a Man hence comes ſeldom to take notice of them. For example now, this is a common principle; even Children are guided by, That the whole is greater than one part; therefore bring half an Apple to a Child, and a whole one, to chuſe, and he takes the whole, and refuſeth the half, his Mind being guided by that principle; and yet he hath not that thought drawn out by it ſelf, that the whole is bigger than the half, therefore I will chuſe it; yet that is in his mind that doth it. So now this is a principle that all the World in ſinning is guided by, that there is no God, but the meaning is not, that when Men ſin, they have ſuch an actual explicite diſtinct thought by it ſelf, no, and yet but for ſuch an one in the Heart Men would never ſin. Even alſo as Men that ſpeak Latin, the rules they make it by, they ſeldom think of them, and yet one that heard them, would ſay ſurely their minds are guided by ſuch rules in all: So when Men produce ſuch deformed actions of ſin and wickedneſs, though they have not this thought ſtill in their eye and view, There is no God, &c yet he that ſees their actions would ſay, that all theſe actions argue ſuch principles to be in their Hearts; they are inbred there, and by them Men are guided in all, ſo as if you would reſolve all your actions into their firſt principles you would ſay it were ſo. So when in Pſal. 10. 4. it is ſaid as ſome read it, that all his thoughts are, there is no God, the meaning is not that he actually thinks explicitely of nothing elſe, but virtually all his thoughts are ſo. So as theſe principles are as a ſpring in a Watch, which moves leaſt it ſelf, yet the force of it doth all: Movet, Quum ipſum ſit immobile.

And ſecondly, As firſt principles move thus unſeen, ſo the acts of unbelief alſo. For as the acts of Faith are moſt ſecret, and yet moſt ſtrong and powerful, ſo are the acts of unbelief: Faith being the bottom and foundation of all Graces, it lies like an Anchor under Water, or as a Foundation under Ground; as it is of things not ſeen, ſo alſo it ſelf is a thing leaſt ſeen, and diſcerned, and is moſtly ſeen but in the effects, and ſo therefore it is diſtinguiſhed and diſcovered to us in the Word. How many do believe, and yet we diſcern no faith in them? how do we Walk by it, Live by it, Pray, Preach, Work in our callings by it, ſo as all good works are the fruits of it, and yet we have not diſtinct immediate thoughts of juſtifying faith in all theſe? Nothing ſo ſecret as the acts of Faith, what a do is there among Godly men what ſhould be that act that juſtifies, and what ſhould be the ground of it, &c. and yet all have it, and yet it is not diſcerned: Now as it is in the bottom grace of all the reſt, ſo it is in the bottom corruption of all the reſt, unbelief, it is the root of all, and therefore it is under ground, it doth all, hath an influence into every action, and yet we diſcern it not, but we ſee ſuch a thing is in our Hearts rather by the effects, than otherwiſe, as we do faith alſo, and the bottom of corruption, is much leſs diſcernable, than the foundation of Grace; for Grace is light, and diſcovers it ſelf, but corruption is darkneſs, and if the Heart be deceitful who can know it? then certainly, what lyes at the bottom of all is leaſt diſcernable, and ſo unbelief doth.

Why but you will ſay, we have many diſtinct thoughts to the contrary, viz. that there is a God, many conſiderations which aim to curb us, becauſe there is a God, and a Hell.

I anſwer, 1. That as in a believer, there often come in a thouſand objections againſt his Faith, and his Heart is filled with doubting thoughts, and to his thinking with nothing elſe, when yet ſecretly Faith works in all its actions againſt them, and the acts thereof which are not diſcerned, do prevail with his Heart ſtill to go on to obey God, and cleave to him, and to fear him, more than all thoſe doubts that keep a noiſe, can prevail to the contrary.

I have told you of an eſtate of Men, who walk in darkneſs, and have no light, yea Souls that will complain that they call all into queſtion, whether there be a God, or the Scriptures be true, or themſelves in Gods favour, and they have no thought in view, but ſuch as cauſes them to doubt of all theſe, and yet even they walk more cloſely with God in ſuch an hour, than when they are freed from all theſe, and thereby they ſhew that they believe theſe truths, even when they ſeem to deny them, which they could not do, but that faith, and the principles of it work the moſt ſtrongly in them. When Faith ſays leaſt, it often doth moſt.

So on the contrary in Men whoſe Hearts are fill'd with many convictions from the light of nature, and the Word, that there is a God, and a Hell, and ſuch thoughts Glare in their Eyes, yet ſecretly the unbelief of all theſe prevail, and have a greater Hand in their Hearts, and they by reaſon of the other more glaring Light diſcern it not.

But you will ſay how can theſe two ſtand together in the Heart? I anſwer you out of this Pſalm; This you may ſee in this very Pſalm, the Pſalmeſt confidently affirms, that wicked Men ſay there is no God, you ſee in the 1. v. Now becauſe men would object, and ſay, how can that be; have not Men knowledge that there is a God, and many ſerious thoughts about him? yes, ſays he v. 4, 5. he makes there the objection himſelf, and ſays, they have, and that ſuch knowledge, as aws them and terrifies them often, there is their fear, for God was in the Generation of the Juſt. So even the Gentiles knew God, when yet they glorified him not as God, and therefore the Apoſtle adds, that the fruit of all this was only to leave them without excuſe. So that though there be ſuch light and ſparkling thoughts in the mind, yet it is not ſo powerful as the contrary darkneſs and unbelief, which doth not only ſtand together with it in the ſame Heart, but prevails more than it, and ſtill they are corrupt for all that, the one, viz. the Knowledge of the Principles of the Truth only ſo prevails, and wins but ſo much ground as to give warning of the contrary deteſtable falſhoods, ſo as they ſhall be without excuſe, and therefore it ſpeaks loudeſt, for it can do nothing elſe but ſpeak, but the other doth all, and gives Law to the Man.

But you will ask; may two ſuch contradiſtinct Principles be in the Mind at once?

I anſwer yes; yea and the Pſalmiſt himſelf affirms ſo much in this fourteenth Pſalm, For when as he had ſaid in firſt verſe, That the Fool ſays in his Heart there is no God, he notwithſtanding by way of prevention of this very very objection grants that they have knowledge, and many ſad and ſerious thoughts and apprehenſions of God and his Wrath, ſo v. 4, 5. Have all the workers of Iniquity no knowledge? who eat up my people as they eat bread, and call not upon the Lord. There were they in great fear: For God is in the generation of the righteous. Have they no knowledge? There is the Objection: Yes, ſays he, there is their fear, for God is in the Generation of the Juſt; that is, God diſcovers himſelf to their Conſciences, not in his Works only, but in his people, whom they oppreſs, and in his Ordinances, which in their Congregations they are converſant about, and that fears, and aws their Conſciences often; yet ſo, as ſtill this knowledg doth not exclude, but that in their Hearts the contrary principles remain ſtill, and ſway them, whence all their corrupt actions ſpring. For according as theſe two contrary principles have place in their Hearts, accordingly have they contrary effects in their Hearts alſo for theſe principles of Atheiſm, having the chiefeſt intereſt, and being deeplier rooted, do ſtill guide, and ſway all in the Heart; but the other have not that firm rooting in the Heart, ſo as to ſway all in it, yet prevail ſo far as to make them without excuſe, Rom. 1. 20. and to awe them in their evil courſes, to which end they are plac'd there. And becauſe theſe contrary ſerious apprehenſions of the God-head cannot prevail, therefore they are more clamorous than the other, and ſeem to be more buſie, and make moſt noiſe, being oppoſers of the other and conteſting againſt them, and yet are oppreſſed by the darkneſs in the Heart, and therefore do ſeem to cry loudeſt. Chap 4.

If then there be in the Heart ſuch unbelief of theſe firſt principles, then when any Man is converted to God, a Man muſt have a new work of Faith wrought in him, a new peculiar light from God whereby to apprehend, and to aſſent to theſe firſt principles anew, as if he had never yet believed them. You that live in the boſom of the Church, you take all theſe things for granted, and think you need learn them no more, you having learnt them at firſt; but I tell you, when Faith once comes into your Hearts, theſe ordinary common things you knew before, are all new to you, and you give a new aſſent to them. So ſays the Apoſtle, Heb. 11. 6. He that cometh to God muſt believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of thoſe that ſeek him, and what kind of Faith doth he ſpeak of there, wherewith he that cometh to God muſt believe thoſe generals, he ſpeaks of that Faith which is peculiar to Gods Elect, whereby the Juſt do live, to work which is a work of power, as great as to create the World. This I prove to you, by the coherence and ſcope of the Apoſtle. In the 10th chapter, he had ſaid at the 38, and 39. v. that the Juſt do live by Faith, and that they that want it do draw back, but we are not ſuch, for ſays he, we are of them that believe to the ſaving of the Soul, and then after a general definition of it, he ſhews what acts this Faith puts forth, he tells you that by this ſaving faith, we do not only believe in Chriſt for Salvation, but by it we alſo believe the World was made, v. 3. by it we believe that God is too, v. 6.

But you will further object that it is not unbelief, of the generals, and firſt principles that wicked Men fail in or want, which is the cauſe of the corruption in their lives. For James ſays of him that hath no works, that he believes there is a God, and ſo do the Devils; James 2. 17, 18, 19. Even ſo Faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. Yea, a man may ſay, Thou haſt faith, and I have works: ſhew me thy faith without thy works, and I will ſhew thee my faith by my works. Thou believeſt that there is one God; thou doeſt well: the devils alſo believe and tremble. But they fail in not applying by Faith theſe generals, to believe and reſt on God as their God. They believe there is a Hell, but they fail in not believing and applying the threatnings to themſelves that they ſhall go thither, as in Rom. 1. 32. Who knowing the judgment of God, (that they which commit ſuch things are worthy of death) not only do the ſame, but have pleaſure in them that do them. Rom. 2. 1. Therefore thou are inexcuſable, O man, whoſoever thou art that judgeſt: for wherein thou judgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelf; for thou that judgeſt doeſt the ſame things. He knew in general the judgment of God, but thought he ſhould eſcape it.

For

Book V.

For anſwer many things are to be conſidered and laid together.

1. That indeed it is moſt true, that beſides a bare naked belief of the generals, ſpecial faith and application is to be made, and therein lies the very life of faith; whereby I believe not only that there is a God but I believe in God. 'Tis the Papiſts errour to think otherwiſe; and therefore there are three things required to Faith, 1. To underſtand the promiſe; but that is not enough that they know them, but 2. It is neceſſary to aſſent to the truth and goodneſs of them, and 3. Then to embrace them or apply them to themſelves, Heb 11. 13. Theſe all died in faith, not having received the promiſes, but having ſeen them afar off, and were perſwaded of them, and embraced them, and confeſſed that they were ſtrangers and pilgrims on the earth. For as ere any concluſion can be drawn in reaſoning, there muſt be a major and a minor Propoſition, ſo to make up the act of Faith, and to bring forth thoſe holy fruits, which are the conſequences and concluſions of it in mens lives, that Faith may be a working Faith, it is neceſſary there be an application of generals to themſelves.

2. It is alſo true that wicked men do more commonly and more eaſily give ſome kind of aſſent to the generals, as that all ſuch and ſuch threatnings are true, when they cannot endure application, no not the thoughts of it, but ſelf-love comes between, and ſhelters the blow with ſelf-flattery, and ſome forc'd ſhift or other, to exclude it ſelf out of the general, and therefore James expreſſeth their faith rather by the general, than otherwiſe, to believe there is a God, &c. for without application ſuch generals work not, yet wicked men do fail in the belief of the general, For

2. Though that applying act of Faith is neceſſarily required, and is a farther thing, yet it is the truth and ſtrength of our aſſent to the general, that hath the great influence, into our lives to draw forth ſuch concluſions of practice. My meaning is, it is the belief of the general which hath the chief ſtroak in ſetting men a work. For as in reaſoning, the chief weight of the concluſion depends on the major, and the truth of it, though a minor is required, ſo alſo here in the working of faith, though application of generals is neceſſary, yet the main thing that ſtirs the Heart is the particular application. But yet though that applying ſpecial act of faith is required neceſſarily, and is to be added to the general, yet ſtill it is the ſtrength and truth of my belief of the general, that hath the main, and great influence, and ſtroke in the Heart to ſet it on work, and which draws out the application, even as the concluſion tho' it depends upon the minor propoſition, yet eſpecially on the major as the foundation of it. Yea and the ſtrength of my apprehenſion of the truth and goodneſs of God and his Promiſes in the general, is partly, nay mainly the cauſe of the particular act of application, and much helps to draw the Heart to ſeek God, and to truſt him; yea and the cauſe why men come not truely in to ſeek and ſerve God, is becauſe they fall ſhort in believing his Goodneſs, Mercy and Wrath, ſuch as indeed they are, in the general notion of them, Heb. 11. 6. Therefore what ſays the Pſalmiſt? Pſal. 9. 10. And they that know thy name will put their truſt in thee: for thou Lord, haſt not forſaken them that ſeek thee. Thoſe that know thy name, that is, truely apprehend and believe, what a Gracious, Juſt, Merciful, Powerful, All-ſufficient God thou art, and able to make them happy, they will truſt in thee, and the reaſon Men do not is, they fail in the general Knowledge and Faith of this; therefore the name of God, i. e. the Mercy that is in him, is the main ground of Faith, becauſe Mercy and Redemption is with him, Pſal. 130. 4, 7. But there is forgiveneſs with thee: that thou mayeſt be feared. Let Iſrael hope in the Lord: for with the Lord there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption. did men believe it ſtrongly enough, as they did who ſaid we have heard that the Kings of Iſrael are merciful Kings, they would put Ropes about their Necks, and ſubmit themſelves.

CHAP. VII.

Chap 4.

That the truth of Faith aſſenting unto the firſt general principles of Religion, which wicked men want, hath a great influence on practical Godlineſs, where they are ſincerely and heartily believed.

THAT the truth of Faith believing things in the general hath the main influence, may many ways be evidenced.

1. There is ſomething in that which the Papiſts urge, namely, that the Scriptures uſually expreſs ſaving faith, by that act of it whereby we believe but the generals, though they make uſe of it to a wrong end, namely to ſhew that to believe things in the general, without application, is enough to Salvation, which is moſt falſe. But yet thus much may be thence gathered; That general Faith hath a great influence in believing, and the workings of the Heart, ſo Peter's faith is expreſſed by a belief in the general that Jeſus was the Son of God, and Chriſt tells him that was the rock he would build his Church upon, Mat. 16. 16, 17. And Simon Peter anſwered and ſaid, Thou art Chriſt the Son of the living God. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Bleſſed art thou, Simon Barjona: for fleſh and bloud hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. So in Acts 8. 37. And Philip ſaid, If thou believeſt with all thine heart, thou mayeſt. And he anſwered and ſaid, I believe that Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God. So Chriſt Cathechiſeth Mary in the belief of the generals, John 11. 26. And whoſoever liveth, and believeth in me, ſhall never die. Believeſt thou this? and ſhe expreſſeth her Faith again in this, v. 27. She ſaith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God, which ſhould come into the world. For their firm and ſtrong and full aſſent to theſe generals, was a great cauſe of coming and cleaving to him and following of him, as our beſt Divines interpret theſe ſpeeches.

2. We find by experience, that when men come to make uſe of their faith in any particular buſineſs, weakneſs of aſſent to the general, and doubting of the greatneſs of Gods power, and mercy, in the general, is ſecretly the thing as much ſtuck at as any thing elſe. So David call'd the Promiſe it ſelf into queſtion, All Men are Liars, Samuel and all. Thus when they were put to it for Victuals, Can God prepare a Table in the Wilderneſs, ſay they, Pſal. 78. 19. Yea, they ſpake againſt God: they ſaid, Can God furniſh a table in the wilderneſs? ſo alſo when that Man did not believe that there ſhould be ſuch plenty of corn, why, ſays he, if God ſhould make Windows in Heaven it could not be, 2 Kin. 7. 2. Then a lord on whoſe hand the king leaned, anſwered the man of God, and ſaid, Behold, if the Lord would make windows in heaven, might this thing be? And he ſaid, Behold, thou ſhalt ſee it with thine eyes, but ſhalt not eat thereof.

And on the contrary we find that in difficulties, that which chiefly bore the ſtreſs, hath been belief in general, though not excluding the other. So in Abraham's Faith, after he believed Gods willingneſs to make good the promiſe of Iſaac and of Chriſt in him, he conſidered God able to do it, Rom. 4. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21. (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations) before him whom he believed, even God who quickeneth the dead, and calleth thoſe things which be not, as though they were: who againſt hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations; according to that which was ſpoken, So ſhall thy ſeed be. And being not weak in faith, he conſidered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadneſs of Sara's womb. He ſtaggered not at the promiſe of God through unbelief; but was ſtrong in faith, giving glory to God: And being fully perſwaded, that what he had promiſed, ſed, he was able alſo to perform. A God that quickneth the Dead, that is eſpecially noted. Therefore Chriſt alſo asketh the blind-men, whether they believed his ability to heal them, Mat. 9. 28. And when he was come into the houſe, the blind men came to him: and Jeſus ſaith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They ſaid unto him, Yea, Lord. He put that queſtion, becauſe he knew it ſtuck moſt there, yea, and when men are afflicted with the greatneſs of their ſins, that mercy which whilſt they ſaw not the hainouſneſs of ſin they preſumed ſo much on, now they ſtick at, as thinking their ſins greater. So Cain did, Gen. 4. 13, 14, 16. And Cain ſaid unto the Lord, My puniſhment is greater than I can bear. Behold, thou haſt driven me out this day from the face of the Earth: and from thy face ſhall I be hid, and I ſhall be a fugitive and vagabond in the Earth, and it ſhall come to paſs, that every one that findeth me ſhall ſlay me. And Cain went out from the preſence of the Lord, and dwelt in the Land of Nod on the Eaſt of Eden. We find, that, ſtill as new convictions of things in the general come in, that ſtill as they are enlarged, and a man hath farther inſight into them, accordingly a Mans Heart is affected and ſet on work, when a Man comes to have large apprehenſions of the greatneſs of God (as Job had when God revealed himſelf) of the day of Judgment, of Eternity, theſe mightily carry on the Heart, though I confeſs never without application, for I do not exclude it. When Moſes ſaw God, and when Job ſaw him, and when Iſaiah ſaw his Glory, this ſight made great impreſſions, and as thoſe apprehenſions were enlarged, ſo were their Hearts alſo. Thus alſo the more convictions of Gods Mercy in pardoning a Man hath, the more is ſpecial Faith ſtrengthen'd. So as I ſay belief in the general hath that great and ſtrong influence upon our Hearts, and Actions.

4. Hence it is certain, that Unregenerate men fail in their aſſent to the general, whereby they believe the greatneſs of Gods Mercy and All-ſufficiency, and of his wrath, and not only in applying theſe things to themſelves. Though therein I confeſs they mainly fail alſo, for ſelf-love ſteps in and flatters them they ſhall eſcape, and with ſhifts and diſtinctions Wards the Blow.

For 1. If they believed there were a Hell and another World, and the vaſtneſs of Eternity, and greatneſs of Gods wrath, and of God himſelf, as they ſeem to do at leaſt, they would not truſt to ſuch ſlender grounds why they think they ſhall eſcape, it would make them willing to have their eſtates ſearcht to the bottom, it would make them wary, and fearful upon what Bridge they ventured to paſs over that dreadful lake, whereinto if they fall, they are plunged all over for Eternity, and they would not venture on the rotten grounds of civility, and formal performances which breaks and cracks in the midſt, in the end, under thoſe that truſt to them.

If they believed a World to come, which within few years they muſt enter into, as Noah believed that within an 120 years the Floud ſhould come, it would make them fearful, as it did him, and move them to prepare an Ark, as he did, though ſo long before, Heb. 11. 7. By faith Noah being warned of God of things not ſeen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the ſaving of his houſe; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteouſneſs which is by faith, but as they believed not the Floud, ſo nor do men now another World, or if they believed there was a Heaven (which if they ſo ſeriouſly thought they were not ordained for Hell, they do withall believe was prepared for them) if I ſay they did know and believe in the general but the leaſt part of what they profeſs they know of it, what manner of men would they be in all holineſs? Which argues their belief fails in the general; yet had they but the Devils faith, they would behave themſelves otherwiſe, for they tremble when they think of God, but theſe do not.

The 2d. Demonſtration that they fail not in the application only, but the general, is, that when the application is made as clear to them as the general, yea, yea and more, yet they are not moved, but deny the concluſion: Come to Drunkards or Adulterers that live in their ſins, ask them if they believe, 1 *Cor.*6. 9,10,11. that no ſuch ſhall inherit the Kingdom of God, till they be waſhed and ſanctified, 1 Cor. 6.9,10,11 Know ye not that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither Fornicators nor Idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abuſers of themſelves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners ſhall inherit the Kingdom of God. And ſuch were ſome of you: but ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified, but ye are juſtified in the name of the Lord Jeſus, and by the Spirit of our God. And ask them if ſuch be not ſome of them, and you are not yet waſh'd, but wallow in theſe ſins as the ſow in the mire, and this application is ſo evident as it cannot be denyed. Now the concluſion muſt neceſſarily follow, unleſs there be a failing in the aſſent of the mind to one of thoſe propoſitions. Now the application that they are ſo, is undeniable, therefore the moſt fault and failing is in not believing the general, viz. that all ſuch ſhall go to Hell, till they be waſh'd; neither do they aſſent to the greatneſs of the miſery of men there in Hell. Chap. 7.

But you will Object, that James deſcribing the Faith of the Unregenerate, ſays they believe in the general. Thou believeſt that God is, ſo do the Devils and Tremble, James 2. 19. Thou believeſt there is one God; thou doeſt well: the Devils alſo believe and tremble. I anſwer, 1. It is true that men do ordinarily more eaſily, give ſome kind of aſſent to the generals, than make application of them, for that is a further and a harder work to fleſh and blood, as appears in all the threatnings, to which till they be applyed they ſeem to aſſent, and therefore James chuſeth to expreſs to us the common faith of men, by general belief without application. Yet. 2. That general faith is not true, and ſuch as it ought, for he tells them, it is a dead Faith, when it works not. Were it a living, true aſſent to the general, it would not lye in the brain, and not ſtir at all, but it would work ſome way; For even the faith of Devils works trembling, which thine doth not, ſo ver. 20. know, ſays he, thy faith is a dead Faith, it works not, v. 20. But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead? The fault is not only that 'tis a general faith, but that it is but a dead faith. And therefore. 3. You muſt know, that thoſe acts of belief in a Regenerate man, whereby he believes there is a God, that the promiſes and threatnings are true, though but in the general, do ſpring from a new work of faith, from the ſame work and habit that juſtifying Faith doth ſpring from, becauſe that root that the other belief ſprings from is dead, therefore it brings forth no fruits, no works; but in a godly man there is a living root and faith, therefore in the Heb. 11. 6. when he ſays, he that comes to God muſt believe that he is, what faith ſpeaks he of but that faith which is peculiar to Gods elect, whereby the Juſt do live? which I prove by the coherence and Scope of the Apoſtle, from the 38, 39. ver. of the 10. chap. Where he had ſaid the Juſt do live by faith, which faith thoſe that draw back have not, and wanting do draw back, but we are of thoſe that believe to the ſaving of the Soul. He ſpeaks then of living, ſaving Faith, and then after a general definition, wherein he ſhews you that all things to be believed are the objects of it, he Inſtances, 1. In believing that the World was made, *v.*3.2. That God is v. 6. So that the eye of faith ſtands us not inſtead only to ſee Jeſus Chriſt, and to apply him, and the promiſes of Salvation, but even alſo to help us to believe as we ought the very general principles laid down in the Word, to believe that there is a Jeſus Chriſt, and a God, and ſuch promiſes, for it is Faith, whereby we live and ſo whereby we perform all the acts of Spiritual life.

And as tis an act of life to ſee and diſcern our meat, and to diſcern the goodneſs of it as well as to eat and digeſt it, ſo it is an act of ſpiritual Life to believe in general that God is, and that his promiſes are true: as well as to apply them, Heb. 11. 13. Theſe all died in Faith, not having received the promiſes, but having ſeen them afar off, and were perſwaded of them, and embraced them, and confeſſed that they were ſtrangers and pilgrims on the earth. By faith they are ſaid to have ſeen the promiſes: and that is an act of faith. 2. To have been perſwaded of the truth of them, and both there are but general acts, whereby they believed that theſe were ſuch promiſes, and that they were true; and then, 3. they embraced them, that is, laid hold of them for themſelves, joyned their ſouls to them, which is that ſpecial act of faith, yet ſo as the other two were branches of the ſame root, acts of the ſame faith, and where the firſt two are in truth, they are alſo.

But you may object againſt this truth, that there are common notions in the hearts of all men, apprehenſions enough that there is a God, ſo as to aſſent to it, as by the hearing of the Word, ſo by ſeeing his Works, wherein the Characters of his Eternal God-head, are clearly ſeen and evidently appear, Rom. 1.20. For the inviſible things of him from the Creation of the World are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and God-head; ſo that they are without excuſe: What need is there then of a new work of faith to convince men of it? or how can it be the object of Faith, ſeeing faith is of things not ſeen.

For Anſwer, Even the Schoolmen themſelves do acknowledge, that though it may by reaſon be proved there is a God, and though it is clearly ſeen, yet that theſe muſt be apprehended by faith alſo.

Aquinas ſecunda ſecundæ. Qu. 2. Art. 4.

1. Becauſe thoſe common notions implanted in mans mind, though theſe ſparks be much encreaſed, by addition of many Reaſons and Arguments out of Gods Works and Word, and made a great blaze; yet they are not of force to expel the contrary darkneſs that is in the Heart, and Atheiſtical principles of unbelief, which are engendred there: Now that they cannot expell it, is evident, for unbelief is a corruption in Nature, and therefore is rooted out by nothing, but by its contrary Faith; till therefore that peculiar work and light of Faith comes, the other prevails not. The other is but of force to make men inexcuſable, as it did the Romans, Rom. 1.20. but to take away the evil heart of unbelief, which cauſeth us to depart from God, this light of Nature though never ſo advanced, cannot: But he that comes to God, and is drawn to him muſt believe that he is, by a new act of faith.

2. Though Adam ſaw God in his Works and extraordinary Revelations more fully than all mankind, by thoſe common notions and all the helps added to it, can do, yet for all that he principally ſaw God by a ſpiritual, light if not of faith, yet ſuch as was over and beſides the other. So as ſuppoſe there had been no Creature made but himſelf, no Veſtigium or Footſtep of God to be ſeen in any thing; yet by faith immediately, he would have known, and apprehended him, ſo as though Adam could have proved by reaſon, that the World was made by God, yet he firſt believed it above and beyond reaſon. For God intended Faith to be, though not the Sole, yet the great and principal Light, and means to apprehend theſe things by, and only added the other as helps, to add ſome more weight to the ballances, when faith had firſt caſt it; that faith might give a reaſon of things, he appointed the other as Star-light to accompany the greater light of faith; now then though there be in the heart common notions put in by God, whereby to ſee and argue out of his Works and Word that there is a God, yet the main light is wanting, and till that light Adam loſt ariſe in the heart again, (as it doth, we being no leſs compleat, in the ſecond, as in the firſt Adam) the natural darkneſs of the Heart is not expelled, but men ſtray and depart from God, and know not whither they goe, and all the light that is, or can be added to the common notions in a mans natural Eſtate, all the arguments that are brought into the mind out of Gods Word and Works, are but as ſo many Stars in a dark night. Though there be many of them, yet they diſpel not the darkneſs, till the light of faith come.

An

'An evident inſtance of this we have in Eccleſiaſtical Story, where a 'whole Council of Biſhops laboured with a Philoſopher to convince him of 'the firſt Principles of Religion, and they could not by arguing convince him 'of them, but a poor man ſtanding by, after all rehearſing them in a bare 'Narration, God giving him a new Principle of Faith, he aſſented immediately. Chap. 7.

And whereas it was in the ſecond place objected, that Faith is the evidence of things not ſeen, and therefore if the God-head be clearly ſeen by the light of nature, in his works, it is not the object of Faith, I anſwer 1. That God is of himſelf inviſible, and what the World was made of, the Apoſtle tells you is not ſeen, Heb. 11. 3. Through faith we underſtand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, ſo that things which are ſeen were not made of things which do appear, only God hath made himſelf viſible two ways.

1. The one more mediately in his works, and to the light of nature, which is more dim and weak and brokenly, and but by way of arguing by conſequence. So as there is yet a neceſſity of ſeeing him farther and more clearly by Faith, and immediately, as revealed in his Word, whereby we ſeeing him who is inviſible, (as it is ſaid of Moſes, Heb. 11. 27. By faith he forſook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured as ſeeing him who is inviſible.) We ſee by a farther light, that there is a God, and how great and glorious, and thereby have that inſight into him, which the light of nature coming both to his Word and Works could never have attained.

2. I anſwer, that though the ſame God is evidenced by theſe common principles and further the Word to them, yet the ratio formalis credendi, which is the Form and Eſſence of Faith, is not the ſame, i. e. the ground of believing it and manner of repreſenting it is not the ſame in the one and other. As thoſe that never ſaw the King, but have read his Proclamations and ſeen his Palace and Attendants believe there is a King, but yet not after that manner that Courtiers do who ſtand before him, and ſee his face every day. Such difference is there between the aſſent of the natural Man out of the Word and Works, and of a Believer, that there is a God. Believing Moſes by Faith ſaw God who is inviſible.

Book V.

CHAP. VIII.

The Uſes. We ſhould employ all our Wit and Reaſon for God. What need we have that Chriſt ſhould be made Wiſdom to us. How uſeful rational Gifts are in the Church. We ſhould not wonder at the ſpringing up of Hereſies. We ſhould not harbour nor give them entertainment.

Uſe 1. IF Carnal Reaſon in us is thus gain'd to take ſins part, to be for it, and helpful to it; Let us conſider then what a great engagement it is on any of us who have Wit and Parts, and Abilities of Mind to turn to God, that they may not be uſed againſt him. If Men of Wit and Learning are not good, they will have more ſinful inventions than other men. Thus a Traitor if he be Witty and Politique, proves the moſt dangerous. Reaſon as it makes you capable of ſinning, (for Beaſts by the want of it are limited to a few objects) ſo it enlargeth Affections to ſin, and aſſiſts to find out means for the accompliſhment. Thou who art a cunning witty ſinner wilt in Hell curſe thy Brain, as well as thy Heart for ruining thee. It was Solomons Wit which undid him. And knowledge perverteth many Men, Iſa. 47. 10. For thou haſt truſted in thy wickedneſs; thou haſt ſaid, None ſeeth me: thy wiſdom and thy knowledge, it hath perverted thee; and thou haſt ſaid in thine heart, I am, and none elſe beſides me.

Uſe 2. By this corruption of reaſon, thus perverting Mens Minds, and turning their beſt Wiſdom into Folly, we ſee how much need we have, that Chriſt ſhould be made Wiſdom to us, that we may be truly wiſe to purpoſe, to all the ends of our Salvation. We are naturally Fools, and it is that reaſon to which we truſt, of which we ſo much boaſt, and in which we pride ourſelves, which befools us. Would we be cur'd of this our folly, we muſt go to Chriſt for inſtruction, for his being Wiſdom to us is the only remedy which can help us againſt the vain and fooliſh reaſonings of our own Hearts.

Uſe 3. Is Reaſon in Men ſo much deprav'd and all its acts turn'd to a wrong way and uſe? We ſee then how uſeful in the Church of Chriſt ſuch gifts are that are rational, and which may encounter with the Carnal reaſonings of Wicked Men. Which Reaſonings becauſe they are the ſtrong holds wherein they fortifie themſelves, there are but two ways of opening the Gates upon them, either to break them open, or to pick the locks, and make a new Key to the Wards. Now anſwerably there are two gifts in the Church. There are ſome ſons of Thunder, who come with a mighty Wind, and carry all before them, and break open the doors of Mens Hearts. Others they go about to pick the Wards, by convincing them, and beating them from their ſtrong holds. If you would catch Rabbets, you find it neceſſary not only to lay Nets, but to get them out of their holes. If you would catch Fiſh you do not only lay Nets, but beat with poles, to drive them out of their lurking places in the Banks. Thus to catch Mens Souls alſo (as Chriſt ſays he would make his Diſciples Fiſhers of Men) it is needful not only to uſe motives, and exhortations, but by ſtrength of arguments to drive them out of thoſe Carnal Reaſonings, wherein they conceal and ſtrengthen themſelves.

Uſe 4. We ſee what need Miniſters have of the Almighty aſſiſtance of God in their Preaching; conſidering that they are to encounter with, and overthrow ſo mighty and potent an enemy as carnal reaſon is. Chriſt told his Diſ-

Diſciples that they were to bear witneſs of him, when he was abſent, John 15. 27. And ye alſo ſhall bear witneſs, becauſe ye have been with me from the beginning. They upon it began to be full of ſorrow, John 16. 6, 7. But becauſe I have ſaid theſe things unto you, ſorrow hath filled your heart. Nevertheleſs, I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will ſend him unto you. For they thought it an impoſſible task for them poor ignorant Fiſhermen, to overturn the World, and to perſuade Men that their Eſtates were naught, and to believe in a Crucified Man abſent, whom they ſaw not. This was a ſtory which the Athenians hooted at as ridiculous. But for their comfort he tells them that his Spirit ſhould accompany them, to convince the World of ſin, &c. to convince that is, to overcome their carnal reaſon, and gain-ſaying, for ſo the Word ſignifies, and this as he brought it in for the comfort of the Apoſtles, ſo of all Miniſters to the end of the World. It had been folly and madneſs, elſe, for any Man to have attempted to be a Miniſter. But ſuch extraordinary help had the Apoſtles from Chriſt that it is ſaid Men could not reſiſt the Wiſdom and the Spirit by which they ſpake, Act. 6. 10. And they were not able to reſiſt the wiſdom and the ſpirit by which he ſpake. As he had Wiſdom to convince them, ſo if he had not had the Spirit to have gone with it they had reſiſted, for while we bring reaſon only, reaſon can oppoſe it. Let us weave our Nets never ſo cloſe, a cunning wicked Man will find holes to get out at: except the Holy Ghoſt comes down, and ſtops all. We have need of much Wiſdom to know Mens ſtarting holes, as Saul ſaid concerning David, 1 Sam. 23. 22, 23. Go, I pray you, prepare yet, and know and ſee his place where his haunt is, and who hath ſeen him there: for it is told me that he dealeth very ſubtilly. See therefore, and take knowledge of all the lurking places where he hideth himſelf, and come ye again to me with the certainty, and I will go with you: and it ſhall come to paſs, if he be in the land, that I will ſearch him out throughout all the thouſands of Judah. Thus too the Hearts of Men are very deceitful, and cunning, and Miniſters have need of a great deal of Wiſdom to ſearch out all their windings, & turnings, and this they can never do unleſs the Wiſdom of the Spirit of God aſſiſts them. Chap. 8.

Uſe 5. We may hence derive a demonſtration for the truth of our Religion and profeſſion thereof. There is no truth of the Goſpel, but all the Reaſon in a Man is againſt it, and yet we ſee Carnal Men are forced to ſtoop to it. It is contrary to their Wills, and contrary to their Reaſons: and it is a queſtion which is ſtrongeſt in them and yet they yield. It is an argument whereby Paul proves his Apoſtleſhip; That the Weapons of our warfare ſays he, are not Carnal, but mighty through God, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God, to the pulling down of ſtrong holds, caſting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Chriſt. We do not War after the Fleſh, that is, we do not take in the help of Carnal Reaſon, and what may pleaſe the Fleſh and draw it in as a party to join with us, as all other falſe Religions do, as Mahometiſm which accommodates it ſelf, to the diſpoſitions of all ſorts, and ſo allures them; and as Popery alſo doth, which ſtroaks and pleaſeth corrupt nature; but the Goſpel goes clean contrary, and croſſeth it, and yet prevails and conquers where it comes; which is a ſign God is with it. Therefore ſays Paul, Our Weapons are mighty through God, which appears in this that they caſt down ſtrong holds, and ſo when you ſhall ſee a Man that is Wiſe, ſtrong, that hath much to plead and ſay for his Carnal Natural Eſtate, that could vye learning and civil righteouſneſs and outward priviledges with the proudeſt: when you ſhall ſee ſuch an one come and have all his books (that I may ſo allude) in the Market place, and make open profeſſion that he was deceived and miſled, and that he yields to the power of Religion which the Wiſe of the World account fooliſhneſs, it is a mighty demonſtration of the truth of the Goſpel, when a Man who had Wit and Parts, and an opportunity of riſing by them, renounceth them all for Chriſt, it is a great evidence of the truth, and power of religion, why elſe doth doth Paul ſo often tell the ſtory of his converſion, how ſtrong he was in the other way, and could have ſaid as much for Phariſaiſm, and the Jews Religion, as the beſt of them. He was not a Fool in that Sect, for he profited in it more than any, and he was ſtrong in his way, for he thought verily he ought to perſecute the Goſpel of Chriſt, and yet God turned him. And this amazed them all, they knew not what to ſay to it, that ſo ſtrong a Town as this ſhould yield and be forced to do ſo. It half perſuaded Agrippa to come in and yield up his Keys alſo, and Feſtus had no put-off but this; Too much learning hath made thee mad, ſays he to Paul. And on this account it was that Paul ſo Triumphs, where are the diſputers of this World with all their reaſons? 1 Cor. 1. 20. Where is the wiſe? where is the ſcribe? where is the diſputer of this World? hath not God made fooliſh the wiſdom of this world? and thus did Luther Triumph, when he ſaid that that Pen ſhould ſtrike off the Popes Triple Crown from his head.

Uſe 6. Let us not be offended, if Hereſies ariſe, and oppoſitions againſt the truth, and thoſe backt ſtrangely too, ſeeing there are ſuch mighty reaſonings in their Hearts. Some opinions in Popery a poor believer would think ſo groſs, that ſurely nothing could be ſaid for them, as worſhipping of Images, Juſtification by our own righteouſneſs and merit of good works; who that hath a clear eye of faith, and hath ſeen his eſtate could imagine any thing, could be found out to colour ſuch groſs errours as theſe? But yet read Bellarmine, read the Jeſuites, and what fair tales do they tell for themſelves? that as the Scripture foretold, they have not only deluſions, but ſtrong deluſions, 2 Theſ. 2. 11. And for this cauſe God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould believe a lie: ſuch Deluſions as catch not Fools, and ſilly Women, but the Great and the Wiſe of the World. That it is foretold by Chriſt that if poſſible, the Elect ſhould be deceived, Mat. 24. 24. For there ſhall ariſe falſe Chriſts, and falſe prophets, and ſhall ſhew great ſigns and wonders, inſomuch that (if it were poſſible) they ſhall deceive the very elect, ſhould probabilities be brought; and ſo likewiſe Semipelagianiſm, how ſtrongly is it backt? Popery being but Childiſhneſs to it; what Armies of places of Scripture cunningly perverted, what reaſons, what harmony is there in the plot of it, what depths, though depths of Satan? as the Apoſtle ſays, Rev. 2. 24. But unto you I ſay, and unto the reſt in Thyatira, As many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they ſpeak, I will put upon you none other burthen.

Uſe 7. We may from hence ſee the mighty Wiſdom of Jeſus Chriſt, who knows all theſe reaſonings, and will fully ſilence and confute them all at laſt, which all the Learning, all the Wit this World hath, could never do; ſtill it is ſaid of Chriſt that he knew their reaſonings, John 6. 61. When Jeſus knew in himſelf, that his diſciples murmured at it, he ſaid unto them, Doth this offend you? Luke 5. 22. But when Jeſus perceived their thoughts, he anſwering ſaid unto them, What reaſon ye in your hearts? How did he non-plus the Phariſees, when he was here on Earth, that they would ask him no more queſtions? The Enemies of the Goſpel think to out-face us, and to out-reaſon us, and think they have the victory, but at the latter day he will come on purpoſe to convince all the World, Jude 14,15. He will then at once cut aſunder all controverſies, and eaſily decide them, and diſcover the ſecret intents, and reaſonings of the Heart. Then he will anſwer all Mens cavils and objections againſt his Ways, and his Children, whoſe lives they thought to be madneſs and folly. Then he will convince them that their Eſtates were naught, that they are juſtly damned, which now they will not acknowledge, and he will then ſend them to Hell convinced, and will ſo ſilence them that they ſhall not have a word to ſay, and tho' they now cavil at the Word, yet then they ſhall have nothing to reply, againſt him, but ſhall be ſtruck perfectly dumb, Mat.

Mat. 22. 12. Annd he ſaith unto him, Friend, how cameſt thou in hither, not having a wedding garment? And he was ſpeechleſs. And then Chriſt will deal by reaſon with them, and not with power only, and therefore their judgment is called but rendring a reaſon, 1 Pet. 4. 5. Who ſhall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead. It is in the original, vicked men now think ſtrange at the Saints, as ſeeing no reaſon for what they do, and are ſtrengthen'd in their own Ways, thinking reaſon to be on their ſide, therefore they ſhall have a reaſon at laſt ſufficient to anſwer all their's, Iſa. 41 21. Produce your cauſe, ſaith the Lord; bring forth your ſtrong reaſons, ſaith the king of Jacob. Job 38. 3. Gird up now thy loins like a man; for I will demand of thee, and anſwer thou me. Chap 8.

Uſe 8. Is to ſearch into your Hearts to find out this unbelief, which is the ground and bottom of all corruption in you, when you look on your lives, you ſee groſs ſins committed, when you look into your Hearts you find ſtrong luſts up, and warring in your Members, and it is well you ſee them, and find any conteſting againſt them. But how durſt theſe Luſts be ſo bold, unleſs they were ſecretly back'd, and encourag'd by the ſupream power, viz. the Atheiſtical Principles in the Heart, which are the abettors of them. Therefore dig, and ſearch ſtill into your Hearts, and reſolve all into their firſt principles, and you will find it true that Atheiſm, and unbelief are at the bottom. And this know, the more you ſee this experimentally true, the more you grow in Grace. To ſee that Luſts are ſins is not ordinary, but to ſee theſe Springs, and Abettors of all Luſts is a degree further. And alſo take notice of the deceitfulneſs of your Hearts, which lies in this that there ſhould be ſo much ſeemingly in it for theſe principles, and yet the contrary do all. So now every ſtud in this building muſt become new, theſe main Foundations muſt be laid new, viz. to believe that God is, that he is Merciful, that he is All-ſufficient, that his promiſes are true, All things muſt become new. Nature brings not one ſtud, that is able to bear the weight of a Godly Life, none of the old will ſerve, and he only is converted to God, who experimentally hath learnt over the Articles of our Chriſtian Profeſſion.

Uſe 9. Let us be humbled for this Atheiſm, and unbelief which by nature is in all of our Hearts? of all corruptions what can be greater; therefore 'tis called the Evil Heart of Unbelief Heb. 3. 12. Take heed, brethren, leſt there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God. Of all Traitors we account Jeſuites the worſt, becauſe they deny the Kings Supremacy, and indeed the very opinion is Treaſon and therefore the Law is againſt them for their very Profeſſion. Now Titus 1. 16. They profeſs that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and diſobedient, and unto every good work reprobate, ſuch is unbelief that denies God, ſo that unbelief in effect ſays there is no God, or at leaſt denies his Juſt, and Royal Titles; now indeed although you profeſs not ſo much with your Mouth, but come to Church and profeſs all we would have you, yet this in your Hearts do ſhew as there are Church Papiſts and Jeſuites, ſo there are Church Atheiſts. I find that for the Atheiſm in Mens Hearts God expreſſeth himſelf moſt provoked and weary of the Sons of Men. So Mal. 2. 17. Ye have wearied the Lord with your words: yet ye ſay, Wherein have we wearied him? When ye ſay, Every one that doth evil, is good in the ſight of the Lord and he delighteth in them; or, Where is the God of judgment? you have wearied me ſaith the Lord, and ye ſay, wherein have we wearied him? Why ſays he, ſearch your Hearts, and you ſhall find, for you ſay, Where is the God of Judgment? So your Words have been ſtout againſt me, you ſay, it is in vain to ſerve the Lord, that is, you believe not that there is a God, who is a rewarder of him that ſeeks him. So alſo Iſa. 7. when Ahaz would not truſt God, and take a ſign and promiſe of him, what ſays the Prophet? v. 13. Is it a ſmall thing thing for you to weary men, but will you weary my God alſo? It tires out his patience exceedingly. It is called ſpeaking againſt him, Pſal. 78. 19. Yea, they ſpake againſt God: they ſaid, Can God furniſh a table in the wilderneſs?

Uſe 10. You may hereby ſee how little nature brings to the great work of Grace, and what a diſtance is between the one eſtate and the other, for if we believe not the firſt principles as we ſhould, but muſt have a new principle to apprehend them with, ere we come to God, then there is an infinite incapacity of the Work of Grace, for if you go to teach men any ſcience, if they deny the firſt principles, there is no hope, contra negantem principia non eſt diſputandum; now we deal with Hearts that ſecretly do deny the principles on which all our motives and perſuaſions to holineſs are grounded, and ſo rooted by denying them, that till by a new work of Faith they apprehend them, we ſhall never work upon them.

There are two principles in the Heart at once; that there is a God, and that there is none; and accordingly there are differing concluſions and effects, and that according to that intereſt and place they have in the Heart; the one is rooted in corrupt nature, namely that there is no God, and therefore you ſee all actions ſwayed by it, the other, viz. that there is a God, is put in to give warning as a Prophet, and to make them without excuſe, and is weak, and hath no power, ſtroke, nor authority in the Heart, which liſtens not to it, it endeavours to extinguiſh it. So as if a Man come to be converted, a new Principle of Faith muſt be wrought to apprehend all theſe things ſtrongly and powerfully, ſo as to prevail againſt, and overcome the contrary, or elſe the Heart is never changed.

Uſe 11. Are there any here troubled with thoughts of Atheiſm, with objections againſt the truth of Scripture, and of our Religion? Wonder not at it, think not therefore your caſe deſperate, or ſuch as no Mans is, for I tell you, all Men by Nature are Atheiſts, and that doth but diſcover it ſelf in thy haſte, which lies hid in all Mens Hearts. For every ſin a Man commits ariſeth from ſuch a principle, and they diſcover it in their Works, but in thee it diſcovers it ſelf in thy thoughts. To thee this Devil of Atheiſm takes a ſhape and appears to affright thee, but in other Men this Devil rules and reigns in their Hearts and Lives. He only appears not to them, that is all the difference.

Others profeſs there is a God, and find no doubts in them, but ſhew they believe it not in their Lives. Thou profeſſeſt thou canſt not believe there is a God in thy thoughts, yet look to thy courſe, and thou ſheweſt that thou believeſt there is one (for uſually the Devil troubles none with thoſe thoughts but ſuch as have true Faith wrought) for doſt thou not walk fearful of ſin, or of omitting of any duty? Art thou not careful to come to every Ordinance? Why if thy Heart did not ſecretly believe there were a God, and ſtrongly too, theſe conſiderations would not come from thee, and therefore let ſuch look to their lives, and practices, and not to the inward exerciſes of their Spirits.

Uſe 12. If the Heart be thus poſſeſſed with Atheiſm and Unbelief, take heed of admitting doubts, and ſuffering them to lye unanſwer'd in the Heart, for they ſecretly weaken faith, and back and ſtrengthen the other party, Mens Hearts are apt to gather doubts from the diſpenſation of things in the World, that all falls alike to all, that the wicked proſper, David had well nigh his Faith ſtruck up with this objection, Pſal. 73. 2, 3. But as for me, my feet were almoſt gone: my ſteps had well nigh ſlipt. For I was envious at the fooliſh, when I ſaw the proſperity of the wicked. But make known ſuch doubts, and get anſwers to them, for in ſuffering them to harbour in the Heart, you conceal Jeſuites that deny the Kings Supremacy.

Uſe

Uſe 13. We may ſee what need there is of coming often where God is known, into the Aſſembly of the Saints, where he is ſpoken of, Worſhiped and Served, for God appears in the generation of the Juſt, in their Lives, Speeches, and in his Ordinances, ſo that if an Unbeliever comes in he is convinced God is among them, 1 Cor. 14. 24, 25. But if all propheſie, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all: and thus are the ſecrets of his heart made manifeſt; and ſo falling down on his face, he will worſhip God, and report that God is in you of a truth. Let us Pray often, and Meditate often, and renew acquaintance with God, for all theſe leave deep impreſſions of a God upon the Mind behind them. Let us obſerve his Providence in the World, and See, and ſtudy his Wiſdom, Power, &c. For all theſe are means to ſtrengthen in us the Principles which are contrary to Atheiſm and Unbelief. Chap. 8.

Uſe 14. If any of you be free from ſuch thoughts bleſs God, for ſuch are in thy Heart God might hold thee to thy Catechiſm to thy A, B, C. all thy days, that when thou ſhouldſt be taken up with thinking how to ſerve and pleaſe him, and how to make it ſure that he is thine, that ſo thou mayeſt be going on to perfection, God might exerciſe thee and ſuffer thee to be poſed and non-pluſt, and to ſtumble at the Principles, whether there be a God or no, ſo he doth deal in many a Soul, and believe it, there is matter enough in thee for this.

Uſe 15. Wonder not if Men in time of Trial forſake the Truth, and that they are ſuch Children toſſed too and fro with every wind of Errour, willing to embrace every opinion, and aſſent not to wholeſome Words. Conſider they aſſent not indeed and in truth to the firſt principles, and if they be not rivetted into them, how ſhould they ſtick to the truth, when as all truth hangs on them?

The VANITY OF THOUGHTS: Being an inſtance of the abounding ſinfulneſs in one faculty of the Soul, the Cogitative: whereby the ſinfulneſs in the reſt may be eſtimated.

JER. 4. XIV.

How long ſhall thy vain Thoughts lodge within thee?

CHAP. I.

The Text opened. The Subject ſet out; VIZ. the ſinfulneſs of the thoughts in the Imaginative, or Muſing Power of the Soul. That thoughts are ſins.

IN theſe words he compares the Heart unto ſome houſe of common reſort, made as it were with many and large rooms to entertain and lodge multitudes of Gueſts in; into which, before Converſion, all the vain, light, wanton, profane, diſſolute thoughts, that poſt up and down the World, (as your thoughts do) and run Riot all the day, have free, open acceſs, the heart keeps open houſe to them, gives them willing, chearful welcome, and entertainment; accompanies them, Travels o're all the World for the daintieſt pleaſures to feed them with; lodgeth, harbours them. And there they, like unruly Gallants, and Royſters, lodge, and revell it day and night, and defile thoſe rooms they lodge in, with their loathſom filth and Vomit. How Long, ſays the Lord, ſhall they lodge therein? Whilſt I, with my Spirit, my Son, and train of Graces, ſtand at the door and knock, Rev. 3. 20. and cannot find admittance: from all which filthineſs, &c. the Heart, this Houſe muſt be Waſhed; waſh thy Heart from Wickedneſs, ſo it follows. Waſh'd, not ſwept only of groſſer evils (as Mat. 12. 43. the houſe, (the unclean ſpirit re-enters into) is ſaid to be ſwept of evils that lay looſe and uppermoſt) but waſh'd and cleanſed of thoſe defilements which ſtick more cloſe, and are incorporated and wrought into the Spirit. And 2. thoſe vain and unruly gueſts muſt be turned out of doors, without any warning, they have ſtaid there long enough; too long; How long? ſays our Prophet, and the time paſt may ſuffice; as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, they muſt lodge there no more. The houſe, the ſoul is not in converſion to be pull'd down, but only theſe gueſts turned out; and though kept out they cannot be, they will ſtill enter whilſt we are in theſe houſes of clay, yet lodge they muſt not: If thoughts of anger and revenge come in, in the morning or day time, they muſt be turned out ere night, Let not the Sun go down upon your wrath, Epheſ. 4. 26. For ſo you may come to lodge yet a worſer gueſt in your heart with them: Give not place TO THE DEVIL (ſo it follows) who will bring ſeven worſe with him. If unclean thoughts offer to come to bed to thee, when thou lyeſt down, let them not lodge with thee. To conclude, it is not what thoughts are in your hearts, and paſs through them; as what lodging they have, that doth difference your repentance: Many good thoughts and motions may paſs as Strangers thorow a bad mans heart; and ſo likewiſe multitudes of vain thoughts may make a thorow-fare of a Believers heart, and diſturb him in good duties, by knockings and interruptions, and breakings in; but ſtill they lodge not there, are not foſtered, harboured.

My ſcope in our ordinary courſe hath been to diſcover the wickedneſs and vanity of the heart by nature: In the heart we are yet but in the upper parts of it, the underſtanding, and the defilements thereof, which are to be waſh'd out of it, and the next defilement, which in my broken order, I mean to handle, is that which is here ſpecified, The Vanity of your Thoughts: For the diſcovery ſake of which only, I choſe this Text, as my ground; That is it, therefore, which I ſhall chiefly inſiſt upon. A Subject which, I confeſs, would prove of all elſe the Vaſteſt, ſo as to make an exact particular diſcovery of the Vanities therein. To travel over the whole Creation, and to take a ſurvey, and give an account of that Vanity abounds in all the Creatures, was (as you know) the task of the Wiſeſt of men, Solomon; the flower of his Studies and Labours: But the Vanity of our Thoughts are multiplyed as much in us, and more. This little World affords more varieties of Vanitie, than the Great. Our thoughts made the Creatures ſubject to Vanity, Rom. 8. 20. therefore themſelves are ſubject to Vanity much more. In handling of them I will ſhew, 1. What is meant by Thoughts. 2. What by Vanity. 3. That our Thoughts are vain. 4. Wherein that Vanity doth conſiſt, both in the general, and ſome particulars.

Theſe Sermons were preached in the year 1629 in the courſe of my Lectures at Cambridge. The general ſubject whereof being the defilements of the underſtanding, I had diſpatched, many other parts of the defilements thereof. Each as entire and diſtinct ſubjects, ſuch as this, as namely the falſe reaſonings in the ſpeculative and practique underſtanding. The falſe principles of Atheiſm, unbelief, &c. which are the Spring and Foundation of all our ſinful actings: ſo as this diſcourſe when formerly Printed was but one particular piece, taken out and ſevered from thoſe other.

First, What is meant by Thoughts, as they are the intended ſubject of this diſcourſe.

'Tis true, that by thoughts the Scriptures do comprehend all the internal acts of the mind of man, of what faculty ſoever, all thoſe reaſonings, conſultations, purpoſes, reſolutions, intents, ends, deſires, and cares of the mind of man, as oppoſed to our external words and actions. So Iſa. 66. 18. All acts are divided into thoſe two, I know their Works and their Thoughts: What is tranſacted within the mind, is called the thoughts; what thereof do manifeſt themſelves, and break out in actions, are called Works. And ſo Gen. 6. 5. Every imagination of the thoughts (omne figmentum) that is, all the Creatures that the mind of man frames within it ſelf, either purpoſes, deſires, &c. (as the margin of our Tranſlation obſerveth;) or as in Ezek. 11. 5. All that cometh within the Mind: And ſo we vulgarly uſe and underſtand the word [thoughts] in ſuch a Latitude.

Latitude. To remember a man, is expreſſed by this, to think of him, Gen. 40. 14. And to have purpoſed a thing, we ſay, I thought to do it. To take care about a buſineſs, is to take thought, 1 Sam. 9. 5. And the reaſon, why all in mans heart may thus be called the thoughts, is, becauſe indeed all affections, deſires, purpoſes, are ſtirred up by thoughts, bred, fomented, and nouriſhed by them: no one thought paſſeth, but it ſtirreth ſome affection of fear, joy, care, grief, &c. Now although they are thus largely taken, yet I intend not to handle the vanity of them in ſo large a ſenſe. Chap. I.

But ſtrictly, that which now is intended by me, is the confuſed vanity or ſinfulneſs of the cogitative; Muſing, thinking power, in the Soul preſcinded and abſtracted, or ſevered apart from all the other. The ſinfulneſs whereof, I here give as one inſtance for all, that is, to be found in the underſtanding, or other faculties.

And confining my ſelf to this ſort or kind of thoughts only, I know not how to give a deſcription of them, other than thus. That they are thoſe more ſimple conceipts, apprehenſions, meditations, which the underſtanding, by the help of, and through its conjunction with the fancy frameth unto and within it ſelf.

Firſt, By thought I mean ſuch as the Scripture termeth the talkings of our minds with the things we know, Prov. 6. 22. the parleys, enterviews, chattings, diſcourſings, which the mind hath with the things let into it; with the things we fear, with the things we love or any way affect. For all theſe things our minds make their companions, and our thoughts hold them diſcourſe, and have a thouſand conceits about them; this in this argument I mean by thought.

Secondly, As for the proper ſeat of theſe thoughts. Solomon compares the faculties of the Soul, unto ſeveral Chambers of the belly, ſome there are more outward, ſome more inward: In every mans heart there is a Reaſoning power, whereby we deliberate and diſcuſs of things we are to do: and ſo there is a ſecret Cabinet or Privy-Council Chamber, wherein the moſt intimate grounds and Principles that move us, or conclude us in and to our own actings, do ſit cloſe at it day and night, which are termed the Intents and Councils, or deliberative thoughts of the Heart. But then there is beſides, a common entertaining room, a Preſence-Chamber (as in Princes Courts we term it) left empty for all comers, for the common Croud and Multitude of confuſed thoughts that may or will come in, whether they have ſerious buſineſs or not; that come only to ſee, or ſpeculate, and behold, and talk; and chat of this, and that: Or if you will, this faculty is the common Exchange of the Soul, and accordingly lies more outward, in reſpect of the other; and the ſcituation thereof, is in the borders, between the Dominions, proper to the underſtanding or purely intellectual nature, and the inward ſenſes: And ſo pays contribution to both, entertains both. It is the fancy or imaginative faculty ſo far as it is joyned with the underſtanding, and the underſtanding with it. Fancy in Apes and ſuch Creatures as come near unto reaſon, is in them devoid of reaſon but in man is Participativè rationalis, by participation it is reaſonable. In man you have the cleareſt experience of its workings in dreams, fancy being as the Moon that Rules and Predominates in the night, and accordingly the Phantaſms or ſhadows thereof appear to us as real, when the Sun of reaſon that rules the day is down and ſet: For otherwiſe we have the ſame Images and Phantaſms of things that flye up and down in our minds in the day, that do in ſleep; and when we are awake, and reaſon is up, the underſtanding continually forms in the fancy, and by the help of fancy, a thouſand thouſands of thoughts within and to it ſelf: All our talkings within our ſelves are the actings of reaſon in this Work-houſe, viz. that faculty of fancy. So then the thinking, meditating, muſing, power in man, which ſuggeſteth materials for deliberations, Prov. 20. 27.

liberations, and conſultations, and reaſonings; which holds the objects till we view them, which entertaineth all that come to ſpeak with any of our affections, is that ſubject we are upon.

Thirdly, Which the mind frames within it ſelf. So the Scripture expreſſeth their Original to us, and their manner of riſing, Prov. 6. 14. Frowardneſs is in his heart, and (fabricatur) he forgeth miſchief, as a Smith doth his Iron, Hammers it out: And the thoughts are the materials wrought in this Forge,our thoughts work upon all the things which are preſented to us, the mind begetting ſome thoughts, and imaginations or other on them. And thus as luſts, ſo thoughts are conceived, James 1. Iſa. 59. 4. They conceive miſchief, and bring forth iniquity, and hatch Cockatrice eggs, and weave Spiders webbs. And verſe 7. he inſtanceth in thoughts of iniquity, becauſe our thoughts are ſpun out of our own hearts; are eggs of our own laying, though the things preſented to us be from without.

Fourthly, I add which the mind, in and by it ſelf, or by the help of fancy, thus begets and entertains. I ſay by the help of fancy, for the underſtanding vieweth its own conceptions in that Glaſs, and there are no thoughts or likeneſs of things at any time in our fancies, but at the ſame time they are in the underſtanding alſo, and reflected unto it: And likewiſe the underſtanding makes uſe of the fancy therein,to Picture and Pourtray forth its own apprehenſions and conceipts, and ſo to ſpeculate them thereby, as when two Looking-glaſſes are placed oppoſite, and nigh each to other, look what ſpecies appears in the one, do alſo in the other.

And this latter clauſe [within our ſelves] I add to ſever them from ſuch thoughts as are injected,and caſt in,only from without,which are Children of anothers begetting, & often laid at our doors:ſuch as are Blaſphemous thoughts caſt in by Satan, wherein if the ſoul be meerly paſſive, (as the word Buffeting implies, 2 Cor. 12. 7.) they are none of your thoughts, but his; wherein a a man is but as one in a room with another, where he hears another ſwear and curſe, but cannot get out from him; ſuch thoughts, if they be only from without, defile not a man. For nothing defiles a man, but what comes from within, Mat. 15. 18, 19. Otherwiſe ſuch thoughts or luſts as the heart hath begotten upon it by the Devil, as thoughts of uncleanneſs, &c. Wherein though he be the Father, yet the Heart is the Mother and Womb, and therefore accordingly affect the heart, as natural Children do: Theſe are ours as well as Satans, and by that we may diſtinguiſh them from the other, namely, when we have a ſoft heart, and inward love unto them, ſo that our hearts do kiſs the Child, then they are our thoughts, or elſe when the heart broods upon thoſe eggs,then they are our thoughts,though they come from without.

Though this is to be added, that even in thoſe thoughts, wherein the Soul is paſſive,and which Satan caſts in,which we do no ways own,wherein he raviſheth the heart, rather than begets them on us, that if there be not any conſent to them in us, then it is but a Rape, as in Law the like violence is ſaid to be. I yield thoſe thoughts are puniſhments often of our thoughts, of our ſuffering them to wander; as Dinah, becauſe ſhe went out of curioſity to view the Daughters of the Land, was taken and raviſh'd, which though againſt her will, yet it was a puniſhment of her curioſity: Or elſe they are the puniſhment of the neglect of good motions of the Spirit; which reſiſting, we thereby grieve him; and ſo he deals with us, as we with our Children, ſuffers us to be Scared with Bugbears, and to be vexed by Satan, that we may learn what it is to neglect him, and harbour vanity.

Secondly, Let us ſee what vanity is, take it in all the acceptations of it. It is true of our thoughts that they are vain.

1. It

1. It is taken for unprofitableneſs. So Eccleſ. 1. 2, 3. All is vain, becauſe there is no profit in them under the Sun, ſuch are our thoughts by nature, the wiſeſt of them will not ſtand us in any ſtead in time of need, in time of temptation, diſtreſs of conſcience, day of death or judgment, 1 Cor. 2. 6. All the wiſdom of the wiſe comes to nought, Prov. 10. 20. The heart of the wicked is little worth, not a peny for them all; whereas the thoughts of a godly man are his Treaſure: Out of the good Treaſure of his heart he brings them forth. He mints them, and they are laid up as his riches, Pſal. 138. 17. How precious are they? he there ſpeaks of our thoughts of God, as the object of them, thy thoughts, that is, (of thee) are precious. Chap. 1.

2. Vanity is taken for lightneſs. Lighter than vanity, is a phraſe uſed Pſal. 62. 9. and whom is it ſpoken of? of men: and if any thing of them be lighter than other, it is their thoughts which ſwim in the uppermoſt parts, float at the top, and are as the ſcum of the heart; when as all the beſt, wiſeſt, and deepeſt, and ſolideſt thoughts in Balthazar a Prince, were weighed, they were found too light, Dan. 5. 17.

3. Vanity is put for folly. So Prov. 12. 11. Vain men is made all one with men void of underſtanding: Such are our thoughts. Among other evils which are ſaid to come out of the heart, Mark 7. 22. ἀφροσυνη is reckoned as one, fooliſhneſs, that is, thoughts that are ſuch as mad men have and fools, nothing to the purpoſe, of which there can be made no uſe, which a man knows not whence they ſhould come, nor whither they would, without dependance.

4. It is put for inconſtancy and frailty, therefore vanity and a ſhaddow are mad Synonyma's, Pſal. 144. 4. ſuch are our thoughts, flitting and periſhing, as bubbles, Pſal. 146. 4. All their thoughts periſh.

Laſtly, they are vain, that is, indeed wicked and ſinful. Vanity in the Text here, is yoaked with wickedneſs: and vain men, and Sons of Belial are all one, 2 Chron. 13. 17. And ſuch are our thoughts by nature, Prov. 24. 9. The thought of fooliſhneſs is ſin. And therefore a man is to be humbled for a proud thought, Prov. 30. 32. For ſo laying hand on the mouth is taken, as Job. 39. 37. for being vile in a mans own eyes.

And becauſe this is the ſenſe I chiefly muſt inſiſt on, in handling the vanity of the thoughts, and alſo men uſually think that thoughts are free; I will therefore prove this to you, which is the only Doctrine raiſed, that Thoughts are ſins.

DOCT. That thoughts are ſins.

1. The Law judgeth them, Heb. 4. 12. rebukes a man for them, 1 Cor. 14. 25. and therefore they are tranſgreſſions of the Law: and ſo alſo did Chriſt rebuke the Phariſees for their ill thoughts, Mat. 9. 4. which argues the ſpiritual excellency of the Law that reacheth thoughts.

2. Becauſe they are Capable of pardon, and muſt be pardoned, or we cannot be ſaved, Act. 8. 22. which argues the multitudes of Gods compaſſions, ſeeing thoughts are ſo infinite.

3. They are to be repented of, yea repentance is expreſſed, as to begin at them. So Iſa. 55. 7. Let the unrighteous man forſake his thoughts; and a man is never truly and thoroughly wrought on, (as 2 Cor. 10. 4. 5.) till every thought be brought into Obedience; which argues that they are naturally rebellious, and contrary to grace And this alſo argueth the Power of grace, which is able to rule and to ſubdue ſo great an Army as our thoughts are, and command them all, as one day it will do, when we are perfectly holy.

4. They

Book VI.

4. They defile the man : and nothing defiles but ſin, Mat. 15. 15, 16, 17. Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts; theſe defile the man.

5. They are an abomination to the Lord, who hates nothing but ſin, and whoſe pure eyes can endure to behold no iniquity, thus Prov. 15. 16. look as good Meditations are acceptable, Pſal. 25. ult. ſo by the rule of contrary, bad are abominable.

6. They hinder all good we ſhould do, and ſpoil our beſt performances. Vain thoughts draw the heart away in them, that when a man ſhould draw nigh to God, his Heart, by reaſon of his thoughts, is far off from him, Iſa. 29. 16. A mans heart goes after his covetouſneſs, when he ſhould hear, as the Prophet there ſpeaks, becauſe his thoughts thus run. Now nothing elſe but ſin could ſeparate, and what doth eſtrange us from God, is ſin, and enmity to him.

7. Our thoughts are the firſt movers of all the evil in us. For they make the motion, and alſo bring the heart and object together; are Panders to our luſts, hold up the object till the heart hath plaid the adulterer with it, and committed folly. So in ſpeculative uncleanneſs, and in other luſts, they hold up the Images of thoſe Gods the mind creates, which the heart falls down and Worſhips; they preſnt credit, riches, beauty, till the heart hath Worſhipt them, and this when the things themſelves are abſent.

CHAP. II.

The ſinfulneſs of thoughts. 1. Negatively. In relation unto thinking of what is good.

TO come now to thoſe particulars wherein this vanity or ſinfulneſs of the thinking, meditating power of the mind (as it hath been limited conſiſts.

Firſt, I will diſcover it regard of thinking what is good, how unable and loath, &c. it is to good thoughts; and ſecondly in regard of the readineſs of it to think ef evil and vain things.

For the firſt,

Firſt in a want of ability ordinarily, and naturally to raiſe and extract holy and uſeful conſiderations and thoughts from all ordinary occurrences, and occaſions; which the mind, ſo far as it is Sanctified, is apt unto. A heart Sanctified, and in whoſe affections true Grace is enkindled, out of all Gods dealings with him, out of the things he ſees and hears, out of all the objects are put into the thoughts he diſtilleth holy, and ſweet, and uſeful meditations: and it naturally doth it, and ordinarily doth it, ſo far as it is Sanctified. So our Saviour Chriſt, all ſpeeches of others which he heard, all accidents and occurrences did ſtill raiſe and occaſion in him Heavenly meditations, as we may ſee throughout the whole Goſpels: When he came by a Well, he ſpeaks of the Water of life, John 4, &c. Many inſtances might be given; He in his thoughts Tranſlated the Book of the Creatures, into the Book of Grace, and ſo did Adams heart in innocency: his Philoſophy might be truly termed Divinity, becauſe he ſaw God in all; all raiſed up his heart to thankfulneſs and praiſe: So now in like manner our minds, ſo far as they are Sanctified, will do. As the Philoſophers Stone turns all Metals into Gold; As the Bee ſucks honey out of every flower, and a good ſtomack ſucks out ſome ſweet and wholſome nouriſhment out of what it takes unto it ſelf; ſo doth a holy heart, ſo far as Sanctified, convert and digeſt all into ſpiritual uſeful thoughts; this you may ſee Pſal. 107. ult. That Pſalm gives many inſtances of Gods providence, dence, and wonderful works which he doth for the Sons of men; as deliverances by Sea, where men ſee his wonders: deliverances to Captives, &c. and ſtill the foot of theSong is,*Oh that men would therefore praiſe the Lord for the wonderful works he doth for the Sons of men.*Now after all theſe inſtances, he concludes, that though others paſs over ſuch occurrences with ordinary ſlight thoughts, yet ſays he, The righteous ſhall ſee it, and rejoyce: that is, extract comfortable thoughts out of all, which ſhall be matter of joy, and who ſo is wiſe will obſerve theſe things, that is, makes holy obſervations out of all theſe; and out of a principle of Wiſdom he underſtands Gods goodneſs in all, and ſo his heart is raiſed to thoughts of praiſe, and thankfulneſs, and obedience. Now compare with this the 92. Pſalm made for the Sabbath; where in imitation of God, who that day viewed his works, we are, on our Lords day, ſtill to raiſe holy, praiſeful thoughts out of them to his Glory, which he that penned that Pſalm then did, verſe 1. and 2. now verſe 5. How great are thy works! &c. A brutiſh man knows not, nor will a fool underſtand this: that is, an Unregenerate man being a beaſt, and having no ſanctified principle of wiſdom in him, looks no further than a Beaſt into all the Works of God, and occurrences that paſs; looks on all bleſſings as things provided for mans delight by God, but he extracts not holy,ſpiritual and uſeful thoughts out of all, he wants the art of doing it. Chap. 2.

If Injuries be offered us by others, what do our thoughts diſtil out of thoſe wrongs, but thoughts of revenge? We meditate how to requite it again. But ſee how naturally Davids mind diſtills other thoughts of Shimei's curſing, 2 Sam. 16. 11. God hath bidden him, and it may prove a good ſign of Gods favour, God may require good for it. When we ſee judgments befall others, our minds are apt to raiſe ſevere thoughts of cenſure againſt our Brother, as Job's friends did. But a godly man whoſe mind is much Sanctified, raiſeth other thoughts out of it, Prov. 21. 22, Wiſely conſiders, &c.

So when outward mercies befall us, the next thoughts we are apt to have, is to project eaſe by our wealth, thou haſt goods for many years: and when judgments befall us,we are apt to be fill'd with thoughts of complaint, and fears,and cares how how to wind out again.But what were the firſt thoughts Job had upon the news of the loſs of all? God hath given, and the Lord hath taken, bleſſed be the Lord for all.

Such thoughts as theſe (which all opportunities hint unto) a good heart is apprehenſive of, and doth naturally raiſe for its own uſe. So far Barren as our thoughts are, ſo far vain.

Secondly, the vanity and ſinfulneſs of the mind appears in a lothneſs to entertain holy thoughts, to begin to ſet it ſelf to think of God and the things belonging unto our peace; even as loth they are to this as School-boys are to go to their Books,or to buſie their minds about their leſſons,their heads being full of play; ſo loth are our minds to enter into ſerious conſiderations, into ſad,ſolemn thoughts of God, or death, &c. Men are as loth to think of death, as thieves of the Aſſizes and Execution; or to think of God as they are of their Judge. So to go over their own actions in a review of them, and read the blur'd Writing of their hearts, and to Commune with them, at night in the end of the day, (as David did, Pſalm 119, 59.) men are as loth to do this, as School-boys are to Parſe their Leſſons, and the falſe Latins they have made, Job. 21. Depart from us, ſay they in Job unto God, from their thoughts they meant it, for it follows, we deſire not the knowledge of thy ways: They would not think of him, or know them by their good wills; and therefore our minds like a bad ſtomach, are nauſeated with the very ſcent of good things; and ſoon caſt them up again, Rom. 1. 28. They like not to retain the knowledge of God. Let us go and try to wind up our Souls, at any time, to holy meditations, to think of what we have heard, or what we have done, or what is our duty to do, and we ſhall find our minds like the pegs of an inſtrument, ſlip between our fingers, as we are a winding them up,and to fall down ſuddenly again, ere we are aware of it: Yea, you ſhall find, our ſpirits will labour to ſhun what may afford occaſion to ſuch thoughts, even as men go out of the way, when they ſee they muſt meet with one they are loth to ſpeak withal; Yea hence 'tis, that men dare not be alone, for fear ſuch thoughts ſhould return upon them. The beſt ſhall find a gladneſs, for an excuſe, by other occaſions to knock off their thoughts from what is good: Whereas in thinking of vain, earthly things, we think the time paſſeth too faſt, clocks ſtrike to ſoon, hours paſs away ere we are aware.

Thirdly, The vanity and ſinfulneſs of the mind appears in the godly, that though they entertain good thoughts, yet the mind is not, will not be long intent on them. Some things there are, which we are, and can be intent upon, and accordingly dwell long upon them, and therefore in Job 17. 11. The thoughts are called the poſſeſſions of the heart, (ſo it is in the Original, and noted in the margin) ſuch thoughts as are pleaſing, the heart dwells on them; yea ſo intent are we often, that they hinder our ſleep: as 'tis ſaid of wicked men, they cannot ſleep for multitude of thoughts, Eccleſ. 5. 12. So, to deviſe froward things, Solomon ſays, a man ſhuts his eyes, that is, is exceeding attentive, poreth upon his devices about them; for ſo a man doth uſe to do, to ſhut his eyes when he would be intent, and therefore it is ſo expreſſed. But now let the mind be occupied and buſied about good things, and things belonging to our peace, how unſteady is it? which things ſhould yet draw out the higheſt intention of the mind. For the more excellent the Object is, the ſtronger our intention ſhould be. God is the moſt Glorious Object our minds can faſten on, the moſt alluring: The thoughts of whom therefore ſhould ſwallow up all other, as not worthy to be ſeen the ſame day with him. But I appeal to all your experiences, if your thoughts of him be not moſt unſteady, and are, (that I may ſo compare it) as when we look upon a Star thorow an Optick glaſs, held with a palſie ſhaking hand: It is long ere we can bring our minds to have ken of him, to place our eyes upon him, and when we have, how do our hands ſhake, and ſo loſe ſight ever and anon.So whilſt we are in never ſo ſerious talk with him, when all things elſe ſhould ſtand without, and not dare to offer entrance, till we have done with him, yet how many chinks are there in the heart, at which other thoughts come in? And our minds leave God, and follow them, and go after our covetouſneſs, our credit, &c. as the Prophets phraſe is, Ezek. 33. So when we are hearing the Word, how do our minds ever and anon run out of the Church, and come in again, and ſo do not hear half, not a quarter, that is ſaid? So when we are at our callings, which God bids us to be converſant about with all our might, Eccleſ. 9. 10. yet our minds like idle truants, or negligent ſervants, though ſent about never ſo ſerious a buſineſs, they go out of the way to ſee any ſport, run after the Hares that croſs the way, follow after Butter-flies that buzz about us.

And ſo when we come to pray, Chriſt bids watch to prayer, Mark 13. 33. which is ſpoken, as if we were at every door bid to place a guard that none come in and diſturb, and knock us off.But how oft doth the heart nod,and fall aſleep, and run into another World, as in dreams we do? Yea ſo naturally are diſtractions to us,when we are buſied about holy duties,that as excrements come from men, when very weak and ſick, ere they are aware of it, ſo do Worldly thoughts from us; and we are carryed out of that ſtream of good, our mind was running in, into ſome by-creek ere we are aware of it.

Fourthly, the vanity of the mind in our thoughts appears, in regard of good things, that if it doth think of them, yet it doth it unſeaſonably. It is with your thoughts as with your ſpeeches, their goodneſs lies in their placing and order, order, Prov. 25. 11. If fitly ſpoken, they are as Apples of Gold in pictures of Silver. And as a man is to bring forth actions, ſo thoughts in due ſeaſon; as thoſe fruits, ſo the buds ſhould come out in ſeaſon, Pſalm 13. Now the vanity of the mind appears in thinking of ſome good things, ſometimes unſeaſonably; When you are praying, you ſhould not only have no worldly thoughts come in, but no other than praying thoughts. But then haply ſome notions of, or for a Sermon will come readily in: So in hearing, a man ſhall often have good thoughts that are utterly heterogeneal to the thing in hand; So when a man is falling down to prayer, look what thing a man had forgotten, when it ſhould have been thought of, will then come in, or what will affect a man much comes in to divert him, and whirle his thoughts another way. This miſplacing of thoughts (ſuppoſe they be good) is yet from a vanity of the mind; did thoſe thoughts come at another time, they would be acceptable: We find our minds ready to ſpend thoughts about any thing, rather than what God at preſent calls unto. When we go to a Sermon, we find we could then ſpend our thoughts more willingly about reading, or haply ſearching our hearts; unto which at another time, when called to it, we ſhould be moſt unwilling to. We could be content to run wild, over the fields of meditations and miſcellaneous thoughts, though about good, rather than to be tyed to a task, and kept in one ſet path. Chap. 2.

In Adam and Chriſt no thought was miſplaced; but though they were as many as the Stars, yet they marched in their courſes, and kept their ranks. But ours as Meteors dance up and down in us. And this diſorder is a vanity and ſin, be the thought materially never ſo good. Not every one that hath the beſt part muſt therefore firſt ſtep up the Stage to Act, but take his right Cue. In Printing let the letters be never ſo fair, yet if not placed in their order, and rightly Compoſed, they marr the ſenſe. Souldiers upon no terms ſhould break their ranks: ſo nor ſhould our thoughts, Prov. 16. 3. There is a promiſe to a Righteous man that (as ſome read it) his thoughts ſhall be ordered.

And ſo much for the firſt part, The privative ſinfulneſs in our thoughts in reſpect of what is good.

Book VI.

CHAP. III.

The poſitive Part of this ſinfulneſs laid open in four particulars.

NOW ſecondly, I proceed to diſcover that poſitive vanity which appeareth in our thoughts in regard of what is evil. And here it is not to be expected, nor indeed can it be performed by any man, to reckon up the ſeveral particularities of all thoſe vain thoughts which run through mans heart; I will inſiſt only on ſome more general diſcoveries, to which, many more particulars may be reduced for an eſſay of the reſt.

Firſt, the vanity of them diſcovers it ſelf, in that which Chriſt calls, Mar. 7. 22. ἀφροσύνη, fooliſhneſs: that is, ſuch thoughts as mad men have and fools; which fooliſhneſs is ſeen both in that unſetled wantonneſs and unſtayedneſs of of the mind in thinking; that like quick-ſilver it cannot fix, but as Solomon ſays, Prov. 17. 24. A fools eyes are in the hands of the earth, are gariſh, and run up and down from one end of the earth to the other, ſhooting and ſtreaming, as thoſe Meteors you ſee ſometimes in the Air. And though indeed the mind of man is nimble and able thus to run from one end of the earth to another, (which is its ſtrength and excellency) yet God would not have this ſtrength and nimbleneſs, and metal-ſpirit ſhewn in curvetting and tumbling, (as I may call it) but in ſteady directing all our thoughts ſtraight on to his Glory, our own Salvation, and the good of others; he gave it this nimbleneſs to turn away from evil, and the firſt appearance of it. As we are to walk in Gods ways he calls us to, ſo every thought as well as every action is a ſtep: and therefore ought to be ſteady, Make ſtraight ſteps to your feet, ſays the Apoſtle, Heb. 22. 13. turning not to the right hand, nor to the left, until we come to the journeys end of that buſineſs we are to think of. But our thoughts, at beſt are as wanton Spaniels, who though indeed they go with and accompany their Maſter, and come to their journeys end with him in the end, yet do run after every Bird, and wildly purſue every flock of ſheep they ſee. This unſteadineſs, it ariſeth from the like curſe on the mind of Man, as was on Cain, that it being driven from the preſence of the Lord, it proves a Vagabond, and ſo mens eyes are in the ends of the earth.

This fooliſhneſs or ἀφροσύνη is alſo ſeen in that Independence in our thoughts, they hanging (oft) together as ropes of ſand, this though we ſee more evidently in dreams, yet not only then, but when awake alſo; aud that when we would ſet our ſelves to be moſt ſerious, how do our thoughts jangle and ring backwards? and as wanton Boys, when they take Pens in their hands, ſcribble broken words that have no dependence: thus do our thoughts. And if you would but look over the copies thereof, which you write continually, you would find as much nonſenſe in your thoughts, as you find in mad mens ſpeeches. This madneſs and diſtemper is in the mind ſince the fall (though it appears not in our words, becauſe we are wiſer,) that if notes were taken of our thoughts, we ſhould find thoughts ſo vagrant, that we know not how they come in, nor whence they came, nor whither they would. But as God doth all things in weight, number and meaſure, ſo doth his Image in us, ſo far as it is renewed. And, by reaſon of theſe two, the folly, unſetledneſs, and independence of our thoughts, we bring our thoughts uſually to no iſſue, to no perfection, but wilder away our time in thinking (as you uſe to ſay) of nothing; and what Seneca ſpeaks of mens lives, that as Ships that are toſt up and down at Sea, it may be ſaid they have been toſſed much, but ſailed nothing; The like in this reſpect may be ſaid of our thoughts: Or as when men make imperfect daſhes, and write nonſenſe, they are ſaid to ſcribble, they do not write: So in theſe follies and independencies, we wilder and loſe our ſelves, we do not think. Chap. III.

But 2. On the contrary, if any ſtrong luſt, or violent paſſion be up, then our thoughts are too fixed and intent, and run in ſo far into ſuch ſinful objects, that they cannot be pul'd out again, or any way diverted or taken off: which is another Vanity. For our thoughts and our underſtanding part was ordained to moderate, allay, and cool, and take off our paſſions, when they are a plying over; to rule and govern them. But now our thoughts are themſelves ſubjected to our affections, and the like fuel put under them, do but make them boyl the more. And although our thoughts do firſt ſtir up our fears, joys, deſires, &c. yet theſe being ſtirred up once, chain, and fix, and hold our thoughts to thoſe objects, ſo, as we cannot looſen them again. Therefore ſays Chriſt to his Diſciples, Why are you troubled, and why do thoughts ariſe in your hearts? For perturbations in the affections cauſe thoughts like fumes and vapours to aſcend. Thus if a paſſion of fear be up, how doth it conjure up multitudes of gaſtly thoughts which we cannot conjure down again, nor hide our eyes from? But which like Ghoſts do haunt us, and follow us up and down where ever we goe, ſo as a man runs away purſued by his own thoughts; the heart meditates on terrour, As Iſa. 33. 18. So when ſorrow is up, how doth it make us ſtudy the croſs that lights upon us? which to forget would be an eaſe unto the mind. But a mans paſſions make his thoughts to con it, and to ſay it by heart, over and over again, as if it would not have us forget it. So when love and deſire is up, be the thing what it will, we are taken with, (as preferment, credit beauty, riches,) it ſets our thoughts a work to view the thing all over, from top to toe, (as we ſay) to obſerve every part and circumſtance, that doth make it amiable unto us: as if a Picture were to be drawn of it. So when joy is up, we view the thing we rejoyce in, and read it over and over, as we do a Book we like and we mark every tittle, we are punctual in it: yea, ſo inordinate are we herein, as often we cannot ſleep for thinking on them. Eccleſ. 5. 12. Abundance of riches will not ſuffer him to ſleep for the multitude of thoughts in his head. ſpeaking of a man who is covetous: How do thoughts trouble the Belſhazzers and Nebuchadnezzars of the World? Dan 4. 19. ſo Prov. 4. 16. They ſleep not unleſs they have done miſchief; If their deſires remain unſatisfied, they do diſturb their thoughts like froward Children by their crying: ſo as, often theſe which men count free (as the moſt do thoughts) do prove the greateſt bondage and torment in the earth unto them, and do hinder ſleep, the nurſe of Nature, eat out, and live upon the heart that bred them, weary out the ſpirits, that when a man ſhall ſay (as Job 7. 13.) My bed ſhall comfort me, by putting a parentheſis to his thoughts, and ſad diſcourſes which he hath when awake, yet then they haunt a man; and as ver. 14. terrifie him. A man cannot lay them aſide as he doth his Cloaths: and when men die they will follow them to Hell, and torment them worſe there; your thoughts are none of the greateſt executioners there, even the worm that dies not.

Thirdly, The vanity of the mind appears in curioſity, a longing and itching to be fed with, and to know (and then delighting to think of) things that do not at all concern us. Take an experiment of this in Scholars (whoſe chief work lies in this ſhop) how many precious thoughts are ſpent this way? in curioſity of knowledge, as appears by thoſe the Apoſtle often rebukes, that affect, (as 1 Tim. 6. 4, 20.) oppoſitions of ſcience falſly ſo called; curioſities of knowledge of things they have not ſeen. So Coloſ. 2. and 1 Tim. 4. 7. he calls ſuch iſſues of mens brains, they dote on, old wives fables: becauſe as fables pleaſe old wives, ſo do theſe their minds, and of that itch they have in them: even as women with child, in their longings, content not themſelves with what the place affords, or the ſeaſon, with what may be had; but often long after Book VI. after ſome unheard-of rarity, far fetcht, or, it may be, not at all to be had: Thus men not contenting themſelves with the wonders of God, diſcovered in the depths of his Word and Works, they will launch into another Sea, and World of their own making, and here they ſail with pleaſure; as many of the School-men did in ſome of their ſpeculations, ſpending their precious wits in framing curious webs out of their own bowels.

Take another inſtance alſo in others, who have leiſure and parts to read and underſtand much, they ſhould ballaſt their hearts with the Word, and take in thoſe more precious words, wiſdom, and ſound knowledge contained therein to profit themſelves and others, and to build up their own ſouls, or ſuch ſtudies whereby they might be enabled to ſerve their Country, but now what do their curious fancies carry them unto, to be verſed in, but Play-books, jeering Paſquills, Romances, fained ſtories, which are the curious needle-work of idle brains; ſo as they load their heads with Apes and Peacoks feathers, in ſtead of Pearls and Precious ſtones; ſo as a man may ſay as Solomon, Prov. 15. 14. The heart of him that hath underſtanding ſeeketh knowledge, but the mouth of fools feeds on fooliſhneſs. Fooliſh diſcourſes pleaſe their ears to hear, and eyes to read: all theſe being but purveyors (as it were) for food, for the thoughts: which like Camelions live on Air and Wind.

To leave them, how do others out of meer curioſity to know and pleaſe their thoughts, liſten after all the news that fly up and down the World; ſcum all the froth that floats in fooliſh mens mouths, and pleaſe themſelves only with talking, thinking, and hearing of it?

I do not condemn all herein: ſome, their ends are good, and they can make uſe of it, and do as Nehemiah did, who inquired how things went at Jeruſalem to rejoyce with Gods People, and mourn with them, and pray for them; ſo theſe, if to know how to faſhion their Prayers accordingly: But I condemn that curious itch that is in men, when it is done but meerly to pleaſe their fancies; which is much delighted with new things, though they concern us not; ſuch the Athenians were, Act. 17. 21. How do ſome men long all the week till they hear of ſuch and ſuch events and iſſues, and make it a great part of the happineſs of their lives, to ſtudy the State more than their own hearts, and affairs of their callings? who take actions of State as their Text to ſtudy the meaning of, and to preach on where-ever they come. I ſpeak of thoſe that yet lay not to heart the miſeries of the Church of Chriſt, nor help them with their prayers, if at any time they happen.

The like curioſity is ſeen in many, in deſiring to know the ſecrets of other men, which yet would do them no good to know, and who do ſtudy mens actions and ends, not to reform, or do good to them, but to know them, and think and muſe thereof, when alone, with pleaſure; this is curioſity, and properly a vanity of the thinking power, which it mainly pleaſeth.

This is indeed a great ſin, when much of mens moſt pleaſing thoughts are ſpent on things concern them not. For the things we ought to know, and which do concern us, are enough to take up all our thoughts alone, neither ſhall we have any to ſpare: and thoughts are precious things, the immediate fruits and buds of an immortal nature; and God hath given us power to coyn them, to the end, to lay them out in things that concern our own good, and of our neighbours and his own glory; and thus not to ſpend them is the greateſt waſte. Examine what Corn you put to grind, for God ought to have toll of all, Prov. 24. 8. He that deviſeth evil ſhall be called a miſchievous perſon, not always he that doth a miſchievous action, but that deviſeth it: and verſe 9. he aggravates it à minori, for, (ſays he) every thought is ſin ; and then a combination and conſpiracy of wicked thoughts is much more. Chap. 3.

But 4. there is a worſe vanity than this, and that is intimated, Rom. 13. ult. Taking thought to fulfil the luſts of the fleſh, πρόνοιαν ποιεῖσθαι [To make projects for it.] For thoughts are the Caterers for our luſts, and lay in all their proviſion, they are they that look out where the beſt markets are, the beſt opportunities for ſinning in any kind, the beſt bargains for credit, for preferment, for riches, &c. For example, would a man riſe ? his thoughts ſtudy the art of it, men frame their own ladders to climb withal, invent ways how to do it, though often it proves, as to Haman, their own Gallows. Would they be rich? what do they ſtudy ? even all cheats and tricks of the Cards, (as I may ſo ſpeak) that is, all the cunning tricks of the world, all the ways of oppreſſing, defrauding, and going beyond their brethren, ſo to pack things in all their dealings, that they themſelves ſhould be the winners, and thoſe that deal with them, the loſers. Iſa. 32. 7. it is ſaid, That the Inſtruments of the churliſh are evil, and he deviſeth wicked devices to deſtroy the poor. Would a man undermine his oppoſite, as one that ſtands in his light, and who hinders his credit? he'll dig and fall a pioning with his thoughts, (which are his engines) in the night dig a pit, as the Scripture phraſe is, and dig deep to hide his counſel, to blow his adverſary up in the end, and ſo as he ſhall not know who hurt him : and this is worſe than all the former, this ſtudied artificial villany. The more deviſing there is in ſin, the worſe : therefore the fact about Uriah, not ſo much that of Bathſheba, is objected againſt David, becauſe he uſed art in it ; he took thought for it, but in the matter of Bathſheba, thoughts took him.

CHAP. IV.

A Fifth, and more Eminent Particular, in which the poſitive ſinfulneſs of Thoughts is ſeen: Speculative acting over ſins in thoughts: In many inſtances the great Vanity and Sinfulneſs thereof.

A Fifth is the repreſenting or acting over ſins, in our thoughts and imaginations, perſonating thoſe pleaſures by imagination, which at preſent we enjoy not really, faining and imagining our ſelves to act thoſe ſinful practices we have not opportunity outwardly to perform: ſpeculative wickedneſs Divines do call this, which to be in the power of imagination to do, is evident to you by your dreams; when fancy plays its part moſt, and to allude to what the Prophet ſays, makes us believe we eat when we are an hungry, to drink when our ſouls are thirſty, Iſa. 29. 8. But I mean not to ſpeak of the power and corruption of it, as in our dreams: it were well if, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of Drunkenneſs, that this ſpeculative wickedneſs were only in the night. But corrupt and diſtempered affections do caſt men into ſuch dreams in the day, and when they are awake, they are then (to borrow the Apoſtles expreſſion) filthy dreamers, Jude 8. that defile the fleſh, even when awake When their luſts wanting work, their fancy erects to them a ſtage, and they ſet their imaginations and thoughts their ſeveral parts, to entertain their filthy and impure deſires, with ſhews and plays of their own making, and Reaſon and the intention of their minds, ſit as ſpectators all the while to view with pleaſure, till their thoughts inwardly act over their own unclean deſires, ambitious projects, or whatever elſe they have a mind unto.

So vain and empty is the heart of man become, ſo impatient are our deſires and luſts of interruption in their pleaſures, ſo ſinful and corrupt.

Firſt, vain and empty it appears to be in this; for take all the pleaſures of ſin, when they are never ſo fully, ſolidly, really and ſubſtantially enjoyed, they are but ſhadows, a meer out-ſide and figure, as the Apoſtle calls the world. It is opinion of imagination that caſts that varniſh of goodneſs upon them, which is not truly in them. So Felix and Bernices pomp is termed πολυφαντασία, but now this ſpeculative enjoying of them only in imagination, the pleaſing our ſelves in the bare thoughts and imaginations of them, this is but a ſhadow of theſe ſhadows, oh that the ſoul ſhould Ixion like embrace and commit adultery with clouds only! this is a vanity beyond all other vanities, that maketh us vainer than other creatures who though ſubject to vanity, yet not to ſuch as this.

Secondly, it argues our deſires to be ſtrangely impatient, to be detained from, or interrupted of their pleaſures. When the ſoul ſhall be found ſo greedy, that when the heart is debarred or ſequeſtred from thoſe things it deſires, and wants means or opportunites to act its luſts, that as not being able to ſtay, it will at leaſt afore hand enjoy them in imagination, and in the interim, ſet fancy to entertain the mind with empty pictures of them drawn in its own contemplations.

3. In this reſpect, that they appear alſo to be exceeding ſinful and corrupt; an outward act of ſin, it is but as an act of whoredom with the creature, when really enjoyed: But this is Inceſt, when we defile our ſouls and ſpirits with theſe imaginations and likeneſſes which are begotten in our own fancies, theſe being the children of our own hearts.

And

And yet (my brethren) ſuch contemplative enjoying of pleaſures and acting over of ſins the mind of man is full of, as will appear in many particulars. Chap. 4.

Firſt, look what comforts men have at preſent in their poſſeſſion and at command, what excellencies or endowments, men love to be alone to ſtudy, and think of them, and when they are ſequeſtred from the preſent uſe and employment of them, yet they will then be again and again recounting and caſting of them up, taking a ſurvey of their happineſs in them, applauding their own hearts in their conditions. And as rich men that love money, love to be looking on it, and telling it over; ſo do men to be ſumming up their comforts and priviledges they enjoy, which others want; as how rich they are, how great, how they excel others in parts and gifts, &c. Oh how much of that precious ſand of our thoughts runs out this way! Thus he in the Goſpel, he keeps an audit in his heart; Soul (ſays he) thou haſt goods laid up for many years. So Haman, Eſther 5. 11. takes an Inventory of his honours and goods, he talks of all the glory of his riches, and all the things wherein the King had promoted him. So Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 4. 30. as it may ſeem, he was alone walking and talking to himſelf like a fool, ſaying to himſelf, Is not this the great Babel which I have built by the might of my power, for the glory of my Majeſty?

And as thus upon their comforts, ſo alſo upon their excellencies, as their learning, wiſdom, parts, &c. Men love to ſtand looking upon theſe in the glaſs of their own ſpeculation, as fair faces love to look often and long in Looking-glaſſes: which, as it ariſeth from the ſelf-flattery is in men; ſo alſo that they might keep their happineſs ſtill freſh and continued in their eye; which thoughts, when they raiſe not up the heart to thankfulneſs to God, and are not uſed to that end, but are bellows of pride; they are vain and abominable in the eyes of God: as appears by Gods dealing with thoſe forementioned; for to the one he ſays, Thou fool, this night; the other, whilſt the word was in his mouth (giving him no longer warning) he ſtrikes with madneſs, and brutiſhneſs: and Haman, you know, was like a Wall that ſwells before it breaks, and falls to ruine and decay.

Secondly, This ſpeculative enjoying of pleaſures, and acting over ſins thus in fancy, doth appear in regard of things to come; which when we have in view, or any hopes of, mens thoughts go forth afore to meet them; oh with how much contentment do mens thoughts entertain their deſires; with vain promiſings and expectations afore-hand of their pleaſures, that are in view and in poſſibility to be enjoyed! So they in Iſaiah wind up their hearts to a higher pin of jollity in the midſt of their cups, in that their hearts thought and promiſe them, To morrow ſhall be as to day, and much more abundant, Iſa. 56. 12. So they, Jam. 4. 13. they ſay with themſelves, We will go to ſuch a City, and continue there a year, and get gain. When men riſe in a morning, they begin to fore-think with much delight, what carnal pleaſures they have the advowſon and promiſe of, that day or week; as to go to ſuch company, and there be merry; to go ſuch a pleaſant journey, enjoy ſatisfaction in ſuch a luſt, hear ſuch news, &c. And thus as godly men live by faith in Gods promiſes, Hab. 2. 4. Iſa. 38. 16. By theſe men live, and this is the ſpirit of my life, ſaith Hezekiah, even what God hath ſpoken, ver. 15. So do carnal men live much upon the promiſes of their own hearts and thoughts afore-hand; (for to this head of vain thoughts, theſe vain promiſes are to be reduced, Pſal. 49. 11. Their inward thought is, their houſes ſhall continue for ever) what pleaſure almoſt is there, which a man makes much account of, but he acts it firſt over in private in his own thoughts? And thus do men fooliſhly take their own words and promiſes; and ſo befool themſelves in the end, as Jeremy ſpeaks, Jer. 17: They take up before-hand in their thoughts upon truſt, the pleaſures they are to enjoy, even as ſpend-thrifts do their rents, or Heirs their revenues before they come of age to enjoy their Lands, that when they come indeed to enjoy the pleaſures they expected, either they prove but dreams, as Iſa. 29. 6. they find their ſouls empty; or ſo much under their expectation, and ſo ſtale, as they have little in them; ſo that there ſtill proves more in the imagination, than in the thing: which ariſeth from the vaſtneſs and greedineſs of mens deſires, as the cauſe hereof; for that makes them ſwallow up all at once. As Hab. 2. Enlarging his deſires as hell, he heaps up all Nations, ſwallows them up in his thoughts. So an ambitious Scholar doth all preferments that are in his view.

Thirdly, this ſpeculative wickedneſs is exerciſed in like manner towards things paſt, in recalling (namely) and reviving in our thoughts the pleaſure of ſinful actions paſſed; when the mind runs over the paſſages and circumſtances of the ſame ſins long ſince committed, with a new and freſh delight; when men raiſe up their dead actions long ſince buried, in the ſame likeneſs they were tranſacted in, and parley with them, as the Witch and Saul did with Satan in Samuels likeneſs. And whereas they ſhould draw croſs lines over them, and blot them out through faith in Chriſts Blood, they rather copy and write them over anew in their thoughts with the ſame contentment. So an unclean perſon can ſtudy and view over every circumſtance paſſed in ſuch an act, with ſuch a perſon committed; ſo a vain-glorious Scholar doth repeat in his thoughts an eminent performance of his, and all ſuch paſſages therein as were moſt elegant. And thus men chew the cud upon any ſpeech of commendation uttered by others of them. And all this even as a good heart doth repeat good things heard or read, with the remembrance alſo of what quicknings they had in ſuch and ſuch paſſages, and with what affections they were warmed, when they heard them; or as a godly man recalls with comfort the actions of a well-paſt life, as Hezekiah did, Lord I have walked before thee with a perfect heart; and thereby do alſo ſtir and provoke their hearts to the like temper again: So on the contrary, do wicked men uſe to recall, and revive the pleaſingeſt ſinful paſſages in their lives to ſuck a new ſweetneſs out of them: Than which nothing argues more hardneſs and wickedneſs of heart, or provokes God more. For,

Firſt, it argues much wickedneſs of heart, and ſuch, as when it is ordinary with the heart to do thus, is not compatible with grace: for in the 6. of the Romans, verſe 12. the Apoſtle ſhews that a good heart uſeth to reap no ſuch fruit of ſinful actions paſt; But what fruit had you of thoſe things whereof ye are now aſhamed? The Saints reap and diſtill nothing out of all thoſe flowers but ſhame and ſorrow, and ſad ſighs: when Ephraim remembred his ſin, he was aſhamed and repented; and canſt thou in thy thoughts, fetch a new harveſt and crop of pleaſure out of them again and again?

Secondly, it argues much hardneſs of heart: nothing being more oppoſite to the truth and practice of repentance. The foundation of which is to call to mind the ſin with ſhame and ſorrow, and to recall it with much more grief, than ever there was pleaſure in the committing of it: and whoſe property is to hate the appearance of it, and to enflame the heart with zeal and revenge againſt it. And hereby God is exceedingly provoked, our hearts are thereby embrued in a new guilt, we thereby ſtand to, and make good our former act of ſinning, and by our remembring it with pleaſure, we provoke God to remember it with a new deteſtation of both of us, and it, and ſo to ſend down new plagues; who, if we recal it with grief would remember it no more: we ſhew, we tkae light to rake in thoſe wounds we have given Chriſt already. To view the ſins of others with pleaſure, Rom 1. ult. is made more than to commit them: But much more to view and revive our own with a freſh delight: and therefore know that however you may take delight here to repeat to your selves your old sins, yet that in Hell nothing will gall you more, than the remembrance of them; every circumstance in every sin will then be as a dagger at thy heart. This was the rich mans task and study in hell, to remember the good things he had received, and his sins committed in the abuse of them. And if godly men here be made to possess the sins of their youth with horrour, as Job, and to have them ever afore them, as David, how will wicked men be continually affrighted with them in hell? whose punishment is in a great part set forth to us, by this, Psalm 50. 20. I will set them in order before thee. Chap. 4.

Fourthly, the fourth thing wherein the speculative vanity appears is in acting sins upon meer imaginary suppositions: men feign and contrive to themselves, and make a supposition to themselves in their own thoughts, first of what they would be, and thereupon what they would do. Men create fools paradises to themselves, and then walk up and down in them; as, if they had money enough, what pleasures they would have; if they were in such places of preferment, how they would carry themselves. To allude to that Absolom said, 2 Sam 15. 4. Oh if I were a Judge in the Land, I would do this or that, &c. doing this with a great deal of pleasure, almost as much as those that really enjoy them. This may well be the meaning of that Psalm 50. 18. where of the hypocrite (who outwardly abstains from gross sins) 'tis said that he consenteth with the thief, and partaketh with the adulterer, namely, in his heart and fancy, supposing himself them, and so desires to be doing what they do. Thus take one who is naturally ambitious (whom both nature, parts and education have all made, but a Bramble, never to rule over the trees, and hath fixt in a lower sphere, as uncapable of rising higher, or being greater, as the earth is of becoming a Star in Heaven, yet) he will take upon him in his own heart; feigning and supposing himself to be, and then to act the part of a great Man, in his own thoughts erect a throne, and sit down in it; and thinks with himself what he would do; if a King or the like. So take a man that is unclean, but now grown old, and a dry tree, and so cannot act his lust as formerly, yet his thoughts shall supply what is wanting in his strength or opportunity. And he makes his own heart both Bawd, Brothelhouse, Whore, Whore-monger; and all: so a man that is naturally voluptuous, loves pleasures, but wants means to purchase them, yet his inclinations will please themselves with the thoughts of what mixture and composition of delights he would have; he will set down with himself his Bill of fare; how he would have, and (if he might wish) his cup of pleasure mingled, what ingredients put into it. So a man that is revengeful, and yet wants a sting, he pleaseth himself with revengeful thoughts and wishes, and will be making invectives and railing dialogues against him, he hates when he is not by. A man in love, in his fancy, he will court his Paramour, though absent, he will by his imagination make her present, and so frame solemn set speeches to her.

In a word, let mens inclinations and dispositions be of what kind soever, and let the impossibilities and improbabilities be never so great of being what they desire; yet in their fancies and thoughts they will discover themselves what they would be. Totumque quod esse desiderant sibi apud semetipsos cogitationibus depingunt, men will be drawing Maps of their desires, calculating their own inclinations, cut out a condition of life which suits their hearts, and they please themselves therewith: and there is no surer way to know a mans natural inclination, than by this.

The great vanity and folly hereof in three things.

First, as great a folly as any other, imitating children herein; for is it not childish to make clay-pies, and puppets? what else are such fancies as these?

Book VI. and to be as Children acting the parts of Ladies and Miſtreſſes, and yet ſuch Childiſhneſs is in mens hearts.

2. And ſecondly, a vanity alſo, becauſe a man ſets his heart on what is not: the things themſelves are not, if a man had them, Prov. 23. 5. but to pleaſe themſelves with ſuppoſitions is much more vain.

Thirdly, This argues the greateſt incontentation of mind that may be, when men will in their own thoughts put themſelves into another condition than God ever ordained for them.

CHAP. V.

The uſes. That we ought to be humbled for the ſinfulneſs in Thoughts. Motives thereof. Their Hainouſneſs. Their Number.

Uſe 1. HAving diſcovered the vanity of your thoughts and your eſtates thereby, be humbled for them. This I ground upon Prov. 30. 21. Where Agur teacheth us to humble our ſelves as well for thoughts as actions. If thou haſt done fooliſhly in lifting up thy ſelf, or if thou haſt thought evil, lay thy hand upon thy mouth. Now as ſmiting upon the thigh is put for repentance, and ſhame, and ſorrow in Ephraim, Jerem. 31. 19 ſo is laying the hand upon the mouth put for great and deep humiliation, as arguing full conviction of ones guilt, Rom. 3. 19. Every mouth muſt be ſtopped. Having nothing to ſay; nor to plead and excuſe, that thoughts are free, and it is impoſſible to be rid of them, &c. but as Ezekiel 16. 56. To and remember to be confounded, and never to open thy mouth more! to be vile, and not to anſwer again, as Job 39. 27, 28. this is to lay thy hand on thy mouth, that is, to humble thy ſelf.

And indeed there is much cauſe, for your thoughts they are the firſt begotten, and eldeſt Sons of Original ſin, and therefore the ſtrength of it, as Jacob called Reuben the firſt born; Yea alſo, and the Parents and begetters of all other ſins, their brethren. The firſt plotters and contrivers, and Achitophel, in all the Treaſons and Rebellions of our hearts and lives; the bellows and incendiaries of all inordinate affections; the Panders to all our luſts, that take thought to provide for the ſatisfying thereof; the diſturbers in all good duties, that interrupt and ſpoil and fly-blow all our Prayers, that they ſtink in the Noſtrils of God.

And if their hainouſneſs will nothing move you, conſider their number, for they are continually thus: It is they which makes our ſins to be in number more than the ſands: not a minute, but as many thoughts paſs from us, as in a minute ſands do in an Hour-glaſs. Suppoſe they be in themſelves, but as Farthing-tokens, in compariſon of groſs defilements: yet becauſe the Mint never lies ſtill, ſleeping or waking, therefore they make up the greateſt part of that Treaſure of Wrath which we are a laying up: and know that God will reckon every farthing, and in thy puniſhment bate thee not one vain thought. And that God looks upon our thoughts thus, ſee but the indictment he brings in againſt the old World; which ſtands ſtill upon record, Gen. 6. When he there pronounced that heavy Judgment of deſtroying the old World, doth he alledge their Murthers, Adulteries, and groſs defilements chiefly as the cauſe? Their thoughts rather. Which becauſe ſo many, and ſo continually evil, provoked him more than all their other ſins. Go down therefore into thy Heart, and conſider them well, to humble thee, to make thee vile, and if in one room ſuch a treaſure of wickedneſs be found laid up, what in all thoſe other Chambers of the belly, as Solomon calls them? conſider them to humble thee, but not ſo as for all this their multitude to diſcourage thee, as in relation to the pardon of them. For God hath more thoughts of mercy, in him, than thou haſt had of rebellion. Pſal. 40. 5. Thy thoughts to us-ward, (ſpeaking of thoughts of mercy) are more than can be numbred. Thou beganneſt but as yeſterday to think thoughts of Rebellion againſt him, but his thoughts of mercy have been from everlaſting, and reach to everlaſting: and therefore in Iſa. 55. v. 7. having made mention of our thoughts, Let the unrighteous man forſake his thoughts, and he will have mercy on him; becauſe this objection of the multitude of them might come in to diſcourage men from hopes of mercy, therefore purpoſely he adds, He will multiply to pardon; and to aſſure us that he hath thoughts of mercy to out-vie ours of ſin, he adds, for my thoughts exceed yours, as Heaven doth the Earth. Chap. 5.

Let us make for ever conſcience of them; ſo Job did, Job 31. 1. I made a Covenant with mine eyes, why ſhould I then ſo much as think upon a Maid? Solomon gives in eſpecial charge, Above all keeping keep thy heart, Prov. 4. 23.

Firſt, Thou art to keep the Lords day holy, thy ſelf unſpotted of the World. To keep thy brother, to keep all the Commandments, but above all to keep thy heart, and in it thy thoughts: for this is the Great Commandment, beaauſe it extends it ſelf (as the foundation) unto them all: for as in the ſame Commandment where Murther is forbidden, a malicious thought is alſo, and ſo of the reſt; So in keeping the thoughts thou virtually keepeſt all the Commandments: as Original ſin is ſaid to be forbidden in all the Commandments, ſo are the thoughts taken order for in all.

Secondly, Out of it are iſſues of life; So it follows, thoughts and affections are the ſpring, ſpeeches and actions the ſtream: as are our thoughts, ſuch are our affections; for theſe are the bellows: ſuch alſo our Prayers, ſuch all. For thoughts are in the ſoul as the ſpirits in the body, they run through all, move all, act all.

Thirdly, If you look to God, our thoughts are that ſpot of ground which he proclaims himſelf ſole Lord of, and makes it one of his greateſt titles, that he knows them, and judgeth them. Kings attempt to rule your Tongues, to bind your Hands, and rule your Actions; but God only your thoughts. By them we chiefly Sanctifie him in our hearts, by them we walk with God; and ſhall we not make conſcience of them?

Fourthly, If you look to the work and power of grace, wherein lies it, but in bringing every thought into obedience, 2 Cor. 11. 4. This is the glory of our Religion above all other in the World: Wherein lies the difficulty of it, the ſtrictneſs of it, what makes it ſo hard a task? but the obſerving and keeping the thoughts in bounds: wherein lies the difference between ſincere hearted Chriſtians and others? but the keeping of our thoughts, without which all Religion is but bodily exerciſe. Papiſts may mumble over their Prayers, hypocrites talk, but this is godlineſs.

Fifthly, If we look to things we have a care of, then alſo of theſe. If we have a care of ſpeeches, becauſe Chriſt hath ſaid we ſhall anſwer for every idle word; why not alſo for the ſame reaſon, ſhould we have a care of thoughts? which are the words of the mind, only they want a ſhape, to be audible to others, which the tongue gives them, for which you muſt anſwer as well as for Book VI. for words, Heb. 4. 12. 1 Cor. 4. 5. Again, if you be careful what Companions you have, and whom you lodge in your houſes, and who lie in your boſoms, then much more of your thoughts which lodge in your hearts, which are not yours, but Gods houſes, built for himſelf, and for Chriſt and his word to dwell in: ſeeing alſo the things you think of, have the moſt near intimate fellowſhip and converſe with you. And therefore when you think of the Word, it is ſaid to talk with you, Prov. 6. If you be careful of what you eat, becauſe ſuch blood you have, &c. then be careful what you think: thoughts being Pabulum animæ, as Tully calls them. Thy words did [I eat] ſays Jeremiah, ſpeaking of meditating on it.

Sixthly, If you look to the iſſue of all: what ſhall be the ſubject of that great inqueſt at the Day of Judgment? the thoughts and counſels, 1 Cor. 4. 5. And after the Day of Judgment mens thoughts ſhall prove their greateſt executioners: what are the cords God laſhes you with to all eternity? your own thoughts. Thoughts accuſing, whereby you ſtudy over every ſin; and every one will be as a dagger. The Hypocrites torment, is to meditate terrours, Iſa. 34, 18. to ſtudy Gods wrath, and the Saints bleſſedneſs, and their own ſins and miſery.

But you will ſay what are the Remedies againſt theſe vain Thoughts?

The firſt is to get the heart furniſhed and enriched with a good ſtock of Sanctified and Heavenly knowledge in ſpiritual and Heavenly Truths: For a good man (ſaith Chriſt) hath a good treaſure in his Heart, Mat. 13. v. 35. that is, he hath all graces: and ſo many precious truths which are as Gold in the Ore, which his thoughts, as the Mint, do coin and beat out, and which words bring forth. A good man, out of the good treaſure of his heart, brings forth good things. If therefore there be not mines of precious truths hid in the heart, no wonder if our thoughts coin nothing but droſs, frothy vanities: for better materials, which ſhould feed the mind, are wanting. Therefore Solomon ſaith, Wicked men forge, mint, or hammer wickedneſs, Prov. 6. 14. ſo Junius reads it. Or if men have ſtore of natural knowledge, and want ſpiritual uſeful knowledge, to themſelves; although in company with others, they may bring forth good things in ſpeeches, yet when alone, their thoughts run not on them. For this take a place of Scripture, Deut. 6. 6, 7. which Scripture ſhews that laying up the Word in the heart, and being much converſant in it, and getting knowledge out of it, is an effectual means to keep our thoughts well exerciſed when we are alone, for the end why thoſe words of the Law are commanded to be laid up in the heart, ver. 5, 6. is as to teach them to others, ſo, to take up our thoughts when we are moſt retired, and alone, and when a man can do nothing but barely exerciſe his mind, in thinking; for when a man is a riding, or walking, or laying down, and riſing up, (which are often and uſually our moſt retired times for thoughts, and are wholly ſpent in them, and many ride alone, and lie alone, &c.) yet then ſaith he, thou ſhalt talk of the Word: which command he that is alone cannot do with others, therefore the talking there meant, is not only or wholly λόγῳ προφορικῷ, outward conference with others (though alſo intended as occaſion of talking with others is given) as to talk to thy bedfellow of it, and to thy companion: but ſuppoſe thou haſt none, yet then to talk of it to thy ſelf, for thoughts are λόγοι ἐνδιάθετοι talkings of the mind; and ſo comparing Prov. 6. 22. with this place (which will fitly interpret it) it appears; for Solomon exhorting to the ſame duty of Binding the Word to the heart, uſeth this motive which is the fruit thereof, That when thou awakeſt, it ſhall talk with thee, that is, by thy thinking of it, it will talk with thee when thou and it are alone: So as thou ſhalt not need a better companion, it will be putting in and ſuggeſting ſomething.

Secondly, Endeavour to preſerve and keep up lively, holy, and ſpiritual affections in thy heart,and ſuffer them not to cool;Fall not from thy firſt love, nor fear of, nor joy in God; or if thou haſt grown remiſs, endeavour to recover thoſe affections again. For ſuch as your affections are, ſuch neceſſarily will your thoughts be; and they incline the mind to think of ſuch or ſuch objects as will pleaſe them, rather than of other; therefore ſays David, Pſal. 119. 97. How do I Love thy Law! it is my meditation day and night. It was his love to it made him think of it ſo frequently. So Mal. 3. 16. Thoſe that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name, are joyned: For what we fear we often think of, and alſo, uſe to ſpeak of often; therefore it is added,they ſpake one to another; fear made them think much of his name, and thinking of it made them ſpeak of it: ſuch affections, ſuch thoughts: and ſuch ſpeeches, as they both are. And indeed thoughts and affections are ſibi mutuo cauſæ, the mutual cauſes of each other: Whilſt I muſed, the fire burned, Pſal. 39. So that thoughts are the bellows that kindle and enflame the affections: and then if they are enflamed, they cauſe thoughts to boyl, therefore men newly converted to God, having new and ſtrong affections do with more pleaſure think of God. Chap 5.

Thirdly, Of all apprehenſions elſe, get thy heart poſſeſſed with deep,ſtrong, and powerful apprehenſions and impreſſions of Gods Holineſs, Majeſty, Omnipreſence, and Omniſcience. If any thoughts be of power to ſettle, fix, and draw in the mind of man, they are ſuch thoughts of God. What is the reaſon that the Saints and Angels in Heaven have not a vain thought to eternity, not a wry look? His preſence fixeth them,their eye is never off him. Take a wanton,gariſh,looſe ſpirit, let him be but in the preſence of a Superior whom he fears and reverenceth, and it ſobrifieth and conſolidates him. Job made therefore conſcience of his thoughts, that he durſt not look a-wry, Job 31. 1, 2. becauſe God ſees it, ſaith he. This drew in and faſtened Davids thoughts, Pſal. 139. from the 1. ver. to the 12th. he manifeſts what continual apprehenſions he had of Gods Greatneſs, Majeſty and Omnipreſence, and what effect had this? When I awake I am before thee, ver. 17. Look what objects they are, as have moſt ſtrong and deep impreſſions in the mind, of thoſe things when a man awaketh he thinks firſt. Now ſuch ſtrong impreſſions had Davids thoughts of God, that ſtill when he awaked, he was with him; and therefore we find this by experience, to be a means to avoid diſtractions in prayers, to enlarge a mans thoughts in his preparations before, or at the beginning, with a conſideration of Gods attributes and relations to us: and it will and uſually doth make us ſerious.

Fourthly, Eſpecially do this when thou awakeſt, as David did there, when I awake I am ſtill with thee: to prevent wind which ariſeth from emptineſs, men uſe to take a good draught in the morning, which the ſtomach feeds on; ſo to prevent thoſe vain, windy, frothy thoughts the heart naturally ingenders, and which ariſe from emptineſs; firſt fill thy heart with the thoughts of God; Go down into his wine-cellar. Obſerve it when you will, when you firſt open your eyes, there ſtand many ſuitors attending on you, to ſpeak with your thoughts, even as Clients at Lawyers doors, many vanities and buſineſſes; but ſpeak thou with God firſt, he will ſay ſomething to thy heart, will ſettle it for all day: And this do before the crowd of buſineſs come in upon thee. Of ſome Heathens it is ſaid,that they Worſhip that as their God, for all day, which they firſt ſee in the morning; ſo it is with the Idols of mens hearts.

Fifthly, Have a watchful eye, and obſerve thy heart all day. Though vain thoughts will crowd in, yet obſerve them,let them know that they paſs not unſeen; if a man would pray aright, he muſt watch alſo, who comes in and who goes out: where ſtrict Watch and Ward is kept, and Magiſtrates obſervant, the Marſhal and Conſtable diligent to examine vagrant perſons, you ſhall have a few ſuch there; that ſuch ſwarms of vagrant thoughts make their rendevous, and paſs, is becauſe there is not ſtrict watch kept.

This is in a manner all thou canſt do, for they will paſs however, but yet complain thou of them, whip them, and give them their Paſs.

Sixthly, Pleaſe not thy fancy too much with vanities and curious ſights, this engenders vain thoughts; therefore Job ſays, Chap. 31. ver. 1. That he made a Covenant with his eyes, leſt he ſhould think of a Maid, Prov. 4. 25. Let thine eyes look right on.

Seventhly, Be diligent in thy calling; and what thine hand finds to do, do it, with all thy might, as it is Eccleſiaſtes 9. 10. that is, putting to all the intention and ſtrength of the mind, that may be, in it. Let all the ſtream run to turn about thy Mill; the keeping thy thoughts to that Channel, keeps them from overflowing into vanity and folly, 2 Theſ. 3. 11. Thoſe that labour not are buſie-bodies. And 1 Tim. 5. 13. Idle wandring, περιέρχοι, they are not called ἀργοὶ, idle as ſimply, becauſe not buſie about what they ſhould, but περιεργοι, as intent on things they ſhould not; they go from houſe to houſe: ſo their bodies do, becauſe their minds do wander, having no centre. When David walked alone, what extravagancy did his ſpirit run into? Let the ground lie fallow, and what weeds will there ſoon grow in it? God hath appointed us our callings to entertain our thoughts, and to find them work, and to hold them doing in the interims, between the duties of his Worſhip, becauſe the ſpirit and thoughts of men are reſtleſs, and will be buſied ſome way. As therefore Kings keep thoſe men that have active ſpirits in continual imployment, leſt their heads ſhould be working and plotting miſchief: So did God appoint even in Paradiſe the active ſpirit of man, a calling to keep him doing. God hereby hedgeth in mans thoughts, and ſets them to go in a narrow lane, knowing that if they are unconfined and left at liberty, they would like wild Aſſes ſnuff up the wind, as Jeremy ſpeaks, Jer. 2. 24. Only take heed of encumbring thy mind with too much buſineſs, more than thou canſt graſp. It made Martha forget that one thing neceſſary, being cumbred with many things, Luke 10. 4 this breeds cares, μέριμναι, which diſtracts the mind (ſo the word ſignifies, ἀπὸ τῦ μερίζειν) as dividing it, and ſo cauſe wandring thoughts nothing more, ſo that the mind is not it ſelf. For this weakens it, enervates it, and brings a vanity, Ex. 18. 18. ſaid Jethro to Moſes, when encumbred with buſineſs, Thou wilt fade away as a leaf; out of which the moiſture is dryed up, even that juyce which ſhould be left, for good duties will be exhauſted. As dreams come through multitude of buſineſs, Eccleſ. 5. 3. ſo do a multitude of thoughts from a cumber of buſineſs.

Eighthly, In thy calling, for the ſucceſs therein, Commit thy ways to God, Prov. 16. 3. Commit thy way unto the Lord, and thy thoughts ſhall be eſtabliſhed, or ordered: that is, kept from that confuſion and diſorder. And thoſe ſwarms of cares, which others are annoyed with. And thereby thy aims may be as well accompliſhed: a few thoughts of faith would ſave us many thoughts of cares and fears, in the buſineſſes we go about; which prove therefore vain, becauſe they forward not at all the buſineſs we intend. When ſuch waves toſs the heart, and turmoil it, and the winds of paſſion are up, if a few thoughts of faith come into the heart, they calm all preſently.

BOOK VII.

The Corruption, and Defilements of Conſcience.

Tit. 1. 15.

Unto the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving, is nothing pure: but even their mind and conſcience is defiled.

CHAP. I.

That Conſcience is falſe in the performance of its office. It Indulgeth ſome ſins, tho' it be ſevere againſt others, It tells a Man but part of his duty. It is very ſcrupulous of obſerving its own Traditions, while it neglects the Inſtitutions of God. It urgeth only Carnal Motives. It invents Arguments to juſtifie a Sin.

IF there be any thing good in Man it is his Conſcience, which yet the Apoſtle pronounceth defil'd. How the light of Natural Conſcience hath no true goodneſs in it, I have before ſhewn. * And how all the acts of it fall ſhort of Grace; I have in another treatiſe of the differences between Natural Conſcience and True Grace, demonſtrated. † Now here only I ſhall ſhew the poſitive defilements of Conſcience in ſome particulars, and ſhall frame the demonſtration from the falſe, and corrupt carriage of it in its office, and abuſe of its power committed to it. Which power tho' it be from God, (as the authority of all Magiſtrates is) yet being ſeated in, and committed to a corrupt and defiled faculty, as Conſcience is here in the Text ſaid to be, it proves falſe to God, and tho' it be from God, and is his Book VII. Officer, yet it is not for him, nor true to him, as it ought, and as true Grace is, which is Gods Image.

1. Conſcience is exceeding partial in its office, in winking at, and Indulging ſome Sins, which are favourites of the Heart, and great with it: when it will be exceeding ſtrict and ſevere againſt thoſe of the lower ſort, and Rank, and by a ſhew of Juſtice and Severity againſt them, colour its countenancing of thoſe other. Thus we find Sauls conſcience exceeding ſtrict in a matter of the Ceremonial Law, 1 Sam. 14. 34. And Saul ſaid, Diſperſe your ſelves among the People, and ſay unto them, Bring me hither every man his Ox and every man his Sheep, and ſlay them here, and eat; and ſin not againſt the LORD in eating with the Blood. And all the people brought every man his Ox with him that night, and ſlew them there. But his Conſcience never ſcruples to eat Gods People as bread (as David ſpeaks, Pſal. 14. 4.) to kill fourſcore, and five of Gods Prieſts, to ſeek the blood of David an Innocent man, his Conſcience, though ſo ſqueamiſh in other things, yet never ſtrains at all this, tho' he is rebuk'd for it by his own Son again and again. The Phariſees they alſo mightily pretended Conſcience, Mat. 27. 6. And the chief Prieſts took the ſilver pieces, and ſaid, It is not lawful for to put them into the treaſury, becauſe it is the price of blood. And yet it was the ſame money which theſe Hypocrites gave unto Judas to betray that blood. Thus Conſcience, which is Gods Vicegerent, and betruſted with the execution of his Laws, as to ſome of them will be very ſevere, in others Lax. It ought to be as Gods mouth, and ſpeak truly, and faithfully, but on the contrary it is like thoſe Prieſts of whom God complains, Mal. 2. 7, 8, 9. For the prieſts lips ſhould keep knowledge, and they ſhould ſeek the Law at his mouth: for he is the meſſenger of the LORD of hoſts. But ye are departed out of the way: ye have cauſed many to ſtumble at the Law: ye have corrupted the Covenant of Levi, ſaith the LORD of hoſts. Therefore have I alſo made you contemptible and baſe before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial in the law. It is partial in the Law, and will become a Judge of the Law, not a Judg according to Law. It will urge the Statute againſt ſome ſins, and turn them out of their places, but it will not look on the Statutes, which are in force againſt other ſins, but wink at them, and ſuffer them to hold their places ſtill. Thus a meer natural Conſcience will be partial in its actings, when Grace, and a ſanctified Conſcience, will not do thus, but urgeth the Law indifferently, and judgeth impartially, and will let no ſin eſcape. We truſt (ſays Paul) that we have a good Conſcience, for we deſire to live well in all things, Heb. 13. 18. Pray for us: for we truſt we have a good Conſcience, in all things willing to live honeſtly.

Now the reaſon why a natural Conſcience is thus unequal, is becauſe of its defilement, it is out of order, and humorous, as a ſtomach which is longing, & craving for ſome kind of meat, and loaths other, tho wholeſome; and why doth it ſo, but becauſe it is foul? Or cuſtom makes Conſcience to be thus unequal, when a ſin hath never been committed by a man before Conſcience will fly in the face of a man for it, but a ſin which a man practiſes every day, and with which Conſcience is made familiar, it will let alone, and ne're trouble the man for it. And on the contrary, a duty which a man hath cuſtomarily perform'd, if he neglect it, Conſcience will much trouble him for it, but as to one, which hath been long neglected, it will be quiet. Many ſuch reaſons may be given of theſe falſe and partial dealings of Conſcience, and God acting mens Conſciences by a common providence, gives them more ſcope for one ſin than another, as he ſees cauſe, and therefore ſome men, make no Conſcience of ſwearing, talking lewdly, Sabbath-breaking, &c. when yet they will ſtartle, at Murther, Stealing, Adultery, and Perjury. But now in the government which God exerciſes over a Godly mans Conſcience, his Vicegerent is punctual to exerciſe the whole of its Commiſſion, and will check the man for every ſin, Gods deſign being to ſave him from all ſin, and to have an uniform Obedience from him.

2. The

2. The corrupted Conſcience is partial in telling a man what is his duty, and herein it is unjuſt to God, as well as in the former inſtance. For it will be content, and let a man alone quietly, tho' he neglects the greateſt part of that obedience, and ſervice which he ows unto God. It will wink, and take no notice, nay is well enough ſatisfied, tho' God hath but half his due. It is like that Steward, who was ſo unjuſt to his Maſter, that when an hundred pound was owing to him, bid the Creditor ſet down fifty, and croſſed the debt, when but half of it was paid. Thus Conſcience will excuſe a man of half the debt due to God, and accept the payment of a part for the whole. If the man prays, and performs the Ceremony of that Service, Conſcience will be contented, tho' he do it never ſo lazily, and in a moſt careleſs, and perfunctory manner. It will be content with the meer bodily Service, tho' the Soul hath little, or no part in it, and therefore tho' Gods name is not Sanctified in the performance; yet it will excuſe, and give an acquittance for the payment of the duty. If the man hath but pray'd to day, it is no great matter how he did it, and his Conſcience gives him a diſcharge of having done the Work. Thus they in Malachi offer'd the Lame, and the Blind, and yet their Conſciences were never troubled for being ſo defective, Mal. 1. 8, 9. And if ye offer the blind for ſacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and ſick, is it not evil? offer it now unto thy governour, will he be pleaſed with thee, or accept thy perſon? ſaith the LORD of Hoſts. And now I pray you, beſeech God that he will be gracious unto us: this hath been by your means: will he regard your perſons? ſaith the LORD of hoſts. Nay they wondred, that they ſhould be charged with deſpiſing of God, or any neglect of him, ver. 6, 7. A ſon honoureth his father, and a ſervant his maſter: if then I be a father, where is mine honour? and if I be a maſter, where is my fear? ſaith the LORD of hoſts unto you, O prieſts, that deſpiſe my name: and ye ſay, Wherein have we deſpiſed thy name? Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar; and ye ſay, Wherein have we polluted thee? In that ye ſay, The Table of the LORD is contemptible. Now God reckons this a great corruption in Conſcience, and therefore he calls them deceivers, and cheaters, who dealt thus with him, ver. 14. But curſed be the deceiver, which hath in his flock a male, and voweth and ſacrificeth unto the LORD a corrupt thing: for I am a great King, ſaith the LORD of hoſts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen. This kind of Conſcience Saul had, who deſtroy'd only the lean kine, and yet pleads that in doing ſo he had done the will of the Lord, and thought he deſerved a diſcharge, 1 Sam. 15 9. But Saul and the people ſpared Agag, and the beſt of the ſheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly deſtroy them: but every thing that was vile and refuſe, that they deſtroyed utterly. Now what is the reaſon that Conſcience acts thus deficiently in its duty? Why truly it is becauſe its light falls ſhort of Gods Glory, and Holineſs, and therefore thinks any thing good enough for him, and that a ſmall matter will ſerve him. It was upon this principle that the Iſraelites thought they could ſerve God ſufficiently well, for they imagin'd they could perform the outward Service, and thought any thing would pleaſe. No, ſays Joſhua, he is a holy God, too holy for you to pleaſe with ſuch your Services, Joſhua 24. 19, 21. And Joſhua ſaid unto the people, Ye cannot ſerve the LORD; for he is an holy God: he is a jealous God, he will not forgive your tranſgreſſions, nor your ſins. And the people ſaid unto Joſhua, Nay, but we will ſerve the LORD.

Chap. 1.

But now a good Conſcience is faithful to God, and will refuſe ſuch broken, and crack't pieces, for payment, and calls for whole Mony, for a whole Sacrifice, entire Services, and Spiritual, Lively Prayers. It knows that the Law is ſpiritual; and the Light of a good Conſcience is ſpiritual too, and therefore calls for ſpiritual Sacrifices. And tho' it may give allowance for failings, as God himſelf doth, yet it will have good and currant mony, and God muſt be Worſhipped in Spirit, and in Truth, or elſe it accounts not the duty done.

Book VII.

3. A corrupted Conſcience will be often exceedingly ſcrupulous of its own Traditions, and the Traditions of Men, when it is Lame and Negligent in things which the Word enjoins. It will be exact to keep a Man to its own private Edicts and Orders, when it lets the publick Statutes be broken. Thus the Phariſees were very nicely wary of eating with unwaſhen hands, when they laid aſide the Commandments of God, as Chriſt tells them, Mar. 7. 6, 7, 8, 9. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, Well hath Eſaias propheſied of you hypocrites, as it is written. This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. Howbeit, in vain do they worſhip me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. For laying aſide the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the waſhing of pots and cups: and many other ſuch like things ye do. And he ſaid unto them, Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition. And thus perſons Popiſhly affected prefer Holy-days before the Sabbath, and account to eat Fleſh on a Friday a greater ſin than uncleanneſs. Thus Hypocritically ſcrupulous were the Jews, who would not at the time of the Paſſovers approaching enter into Pilates Hall, leſt they ſhould be defil'd, John 18. 28. Then led they Jeſus from Caiaphas unto the hall of Judgment: and it was early, and they themſelves went not into the judgment hall, leſt they ſhould be defiled: but that they might eat the paſſover. Yet this was a thing which was never forbidden even by the Ceremonial Law, which doth not make the coming into any Heathen Houſe a defilement, and yet when they ſcrupl'd this which was never prohibited neither by the Moral nor Ceremonial Law, they made no Conſcience of ſhedding the Innocent Blood of Chriſt. And thus you ſhall ſee Men now to be very ſcrupulous about the obſervance of any old order or humane cuſtom, or any thing which they have vow'd to perform, or in the practice of which they have been educated, whilſt they will not be much careful about the neglect of the great things of the Law; and thus they will act out of a Principle of Conſcience alſo. They will take more care not to eat before the Sacrament, than to prepare for the receiving of it. Thus Conſcience is exceedingly corrupt in taking exactly its own Taxes and Impoſitions, whilſt it ſuffers Gods cuſtoms to be ſtolen.

4. A corrupt Conſcience will make uſe of arguments drawn from ſelf-intereſt, and its luſts, and urge carnal motives to perſuade the Man to do a good action. It uſeth not right, but fleſhly means to make the duties of Religion paſs freely, and to get them currantly down. Whereas it is the office of a good Conſcience not only to perform the holy action, but to ſtir a Man to do it upon holy grounds, and reaſons, not only to propound duties as Gods commands, but to offer motives from God to perſuade us to diſcharge them. But now a corrupt Conſcience, tho' it propoſeth a right thing to be done, yet preſſeth the doing it from wrong principles, and arguments, and tho' the matter is good, yet it gets the Enemies voices to bear, and carry it out. That God may have his due, it gathers his Rents, but yet forceth the payment of them by violent courſes. It frightens the man to give in his Arrears, by threatning to ſue him out to an Arreſt. It drives him on to his duty only by terror, and repreſenting God as cruel, of a Tyrant, which wrongs God as much, as if the dues were not paid. For even in common converſe among Men, when the thing mov'd for a Man might be a kindneſs to him, yet the motioning of it for him may be in ſuch a manner, as to do him a real injury. It may be mov'd upon conſiderations ſo prejudicial, as to make him wiſh that it had never been propounded, and to move him to chooſe rather that he had not obtain'd, than to get it ſo. The motives may prove diſadvantageous, when the thing to be done would be a kindneſs. It is in this manner that a corrupt Conſcience wrongs God by urging us to do our duty to him, by carnal arguments, by ſuch reaſons only as ſtir and prevail with corrupt nature, by urging us with fear and trouble of mind, with the ſhame and miſery which will unavoidably follow, if ſuch a ſin a ſin be committed, or ſuch a duty is not done. It will make uſe of, or ſtrike in with ſuch reaſons as theſe only, to keep us from a ſin, or to put us upon the duty, or if it propounds other arguments as the glory of God, and conſiderations drawn from his love, yet it offers them but for faſhions ſake. For it being its office to propound what is ſuggeſted to it, it may and doth ſometimes lay ſuch reaſons as theſe before the Man, yet for ſhew rather than ſo as to prevail. Look as a perſon intereſted who promiſeth to propound, and recommend many to a place of office or truſt, ſome he offers to the choice but faintly, and as knowing beforehand that they will not pleaſe the company, and as ſuch too, that he is not hearty for; but when he comes to others he not only propounds them, but preſſeth earneſtly and zealouſly for them: thus Conſcience will put in Holy and Spiritual motives among the reſt, but the ſtreſs and emphaſis is put upon thoſe which are Carnal, which will work with fleſh in the Man. Spiritual Motives are like Wooden Ordnance brought out for ſhew only, but thoſe which are charg'd and let off are ſuch as are ſuited to corruption, and whoſe Bullets will pierce, and ſtrike, and ſink into ſelf-love, and the heart is not mov'd till their force comes. And the reaſon is becauſe Conſcience being corrupt it ſelf theſe arguments are moſt ſuitable to it. Theſe arguments of the Law it underſtands well enough, and therefore as Men uſe ſuch reaſons as are ſuitable to their Brains, and which they naturally invent, and of which they are apprehenſive: ſo natural Conſcience will not employ Spiritual arguments or motives, becauſe it naturally doth not engender them, and not ſuiting its Mold they ſeldom come in, but the Carnal Motives and Arguments do, and theſe Weapons it can weild, when the other are too ſtrong and heavy for it. And it finds alſo, that having to do with fleſh, nothing but ſuch agreeable motives will take with it, and therefore directing its ſpeech to the Heart, that it may prevail, it ſpeaks in the Fleſh's Language of reward or puniſhment. In a word a corrupt Conſcience always deals by way of Bribery, or Flattery, or Threatning, and therefore is corrupt, tho' the duties which it propounds be good. Chap. 1.

5. As Conſcience uſeth motives drawn from ſome Luſts, or other in the Heart to inforce its injunctions, and to make them to be obey'd, ſo to gratifie theſe Luſts again, Conſcience will join with them to colour and countenance ſuch actions which are done chiefly out of Luſts, and ill ends. Some conſideration of Conſcience, or other will be found out to help them, and make them out to be acts of Conſcience. So when Herod was about to commit that great ſin of Killing John the Baptiſt, which he did chiefly to pleaſe Herodias, and thoſe who were with him, and that againſt his Conſcience too, yet Conſcience it ſelf ſtrikes in to help the action forward, and ſeeing his ſinful Will would have it done, ſuggeſts his Oath to him, as a thing to be made Conſcience of. And therefore it is ſaid that he did it for his Oaths ſake, Mar. 6. 26. And the king was exceeding ſorry, yet for his oaths ſake, and for their ſakes which ſat with him, he would not reject her. He made Conſcience of his Promiſe and Oath, forſooth, in it. Thus Conſcience joyn'd with his Luſts to help forward a wicked act againſt Conſcience. Thus alſo Sauls Conſcience told him that he ought not to Sacrifice till Samuel came, and yet to pleaſe the people he did it, becauſe they began to be ſcatter'd from him, 1 Sam. 13. 11. And Samuel ſaid, What haſt thou done? And Saul ſaid, Becauſe I ſaw that the people were ſcattered from me, and that thou cameſt not within the days appointed, and that the Philiſtines gathered themſelves together to Michmaſh: But yet Conſcience would come in with ſome conſideration which might warrant it, and he would pretend at leaſt, that he could not find in his heart to go to War before he had pray'd, v. 12. Therefore ſaid I, the Philiſtines will come down now upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made ſupplication unto the Lord: I forced my ſelf therefore, and offered a burnt offering. So that now if Conſcience can but find out ſome little conſideration to humour and pleaſe it, it, it will be ſatisfied with the act, and gives its Warrant for it, tho' it be groſs, and tho' ſinful Luſts are the Actors and Managers of the whole Affair, ſo to combine and joyn in acts of higher Treaſon againſt God.

6. Corrupt Conſcience will be brib'd to find out Arguments, and to plead (which is yet more) in juſtification of actions utterly unlawful. And is not that a corrupt Judge which juſtifies the Wicked? This is Conſcience, which not only like a corrupt Lawyer may be fee'd and hir'd to plead an ill cauſe, and find out ſome Law or other for it, (as they who Crucified Chriſt would not do it without a colour of Law, John 19. 7. The Jews anſwered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, becauſe he made himſelf the Son of God.) But it is an ill Judge which is brib'd to give Sentence for a Wicked Cauſe to Juſtifie it. Thus all true Judgment is ruin'd when it is ſwayed and carried wholly by Affection; Perit omne Judicium, cum res tranſit in Affectum; and hence men call Evil Good, and Good Evil, Iſa. 5. 20. Wo unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkneſs for light, and light for darkneſs; that put bitter for ſweet, and ſweet for bitter. And we ſee in many inſtances that Conſcience by reaſon of the defilement which is in it, is ready to prove the lawfulneſs of a ſinful action by falſe Arguments, when the heart is once inclin'd to the Sin. Thus a Man newly come out from Heatheniſm, and having his heart yet touched and warped toward his former Idols and Idolatrous practices, and bearing ſome reverence to the rites of his old ſuperſtition, would comply with the Gentiles in a part of their Worſhip, (as eating in the Idols Temple) tho' not in the whole of it. And tho eating things Sacrified to Idols in the very Temple was as flat Idolatry as could be, and prov'd to be ſo by the Apoſtle Paul, 1 Cor. 10. 14, 15. yet ſome, to hold a fair correſpondency with the Heathen, or to avoid Perſecution, would find out ſome ſhuffling reaſon or other to maintain their doing ſo. What Arguments did their Conſciences find out, that an Idol was nothing in the World, and that therefore whatever they did about it was but frivolous, and inſignificant. 1 Cor. 8. 4. As concerning therefore the eating of thoſe things that are offered in ſacrifice unto idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one. But ſome did ſtumble at the practice, as having a Conſcience of the Idols, and ſo being convinced that what they did in reſpect to it touch'd upon Idolatry, 1 Cor. 8. 7. And yet as for thoſe perſons their Conſciences were apt to be confirm'd in ſuch a practice by the example of others, and they were ready to join with any Argument that might give them confidence to do it. This the Apoſtle refers to, 1 Cor. 8. 10. For if any man ſee thee which haſt knowledge, ſit at meat in the idols temple, ſhall not the conſcience of him which is weak be emboldened to eat thoſe things which are offered to idols? And if when Conſcience is only weak it may be thus defiled and perverted, much more when it is wholly corrupt, as in Wicked Men, much more will they take encouragement from any invented reaſons of their own, or example of others, to practiſe that to which they are inclin'd, and will ſtrive to faſhion their opinions to their Luſts, and mould them anſwerably; and therefore a corrupt Conſcience is afraid to have more light admitted into it for its better information, whereas a Godly Soul gives it ſelf up to God to be inſtructed by him.

CHAP. II.

Chap. 2.

That Conscience is corrupt in respect of that false peace, which it speaks to a Man, when there is indeed no peace to him, it sooths a man always with thoughts of peace, without first giving him any trouble of Mind. It speaks peace not from Christs Blood, and Righteousness, but from its own righteousness and good Works.

ANother effect which Natural Conscience hath in Unregenerate Men about what is good, and which bears a resemblance to what is in the Regenerate, is peace of Mind, and excusing themselves. We will now examine what the actings are of Unregenerate Mens Conscience, in this respect, and make it appear to be greatly corrupt in doing this its Office.

1. It speaks peace to the Man, when there is no reason or ground for it, and when there is no solid peace in the Soul, as God says there is not in any Wicked Man; Isa. 57. 21. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked. And therefore tho' the deprav'd Conscience may calm, and lay asleep the disquiets and tumults of the Mind, yet this peace of natural Conscience is rather a not being troubled, than true peace, ease rather than peace. Thus a Man in Debt thinks all is well, if he hears of no suit entred against him, no Serjeant to attack him, no Writ out for him, but all this is only quietness from being troubled, not peace with his Adversary. But a Godly Mans Conscience is not only at peace, but it hath peace with God through Faith, Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being justified, By Faith we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. A Godly Mans Conscience receives an acquittance (which it hath to shew) from Christs Satisfaction, and Gods receiving the Atonement, Rom. 5. 1, 11. compared: By Faith we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. And not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now receiv'd the Atonement. But an Unregenerate Conscience never receiv'd this, nor can the Ungodly produce such an acquittance, and indeed they never seek after it.

2. It is not a peace which comes after a War, after an apprehension of their being Enemies unto God, and then reconcil'd to him through Christ. No, but they usually have always been at peace, and know not what Spiritual trouble of Mind is. Thus Paul when in the highest Malice and Persecution against the Church, was undisturbedly at rest in his own Mind, having never apprehended what it was to sin against God, nor the greatness of his Wrath, Rom. 7. 9, 10. For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died. And the commandment which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death. All their peace is but a stupid security, such as they had in Hos. 7. 2. And they consider not in their hearts, that I remember all their wickedness: now their own doings have beset them about, they are before my face.

3. As it is quietness rather than peace, so the effects of it answerably are rather negative than affirmative, and tho' they are not troubled at the thoughts of God, nor with the sad apprehensions of his Justice and Wrath, yet all this doth not cause them to rejoice in God. Their false peace of Conscience doth doth not bring in their greateſt comforts, as true peace in a godly man doth, Rom. 5. 11. Having peace with God (ſays he) we joy in God. And 2 Cor. 1. 12. For our rejoycing is this, the teſtimony of our Conſcience that in ſimplicity and godly ſincerity, not with fleſhly wiſdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our converſation in the world, and more abundantly to you-wards. A godly mans peace in the thoughts of Gods favour brings him in abundance of joy. I uſe to ſay, natural Conſcience is a killing Witch, not an healing one, and tho' it can give real troubles, and wounds, yet it can never afford inward, healing joys. The Letter kills, ſays the Apoſtle, the power of it that way is real, and greater, than to make alive, 2 Cor. 3. 6. Who alſo hath made us able miniſters of the New Teſtament, not of the letter, but of the ſpirit: for the letter killeth, but the ſpirit giveth life. It hath more power given it to deſtruction, than to edification. It gives ſuch torments when it accuſeth, as all the good, or evil things in this World cannot counterpoiſe. But the comfort which it gives in excuſing is weak, and faint, and negative only. It keeps the Heart quiet, that it may enjoy outward comforts of life without diſturbance, and that is all the comfort which it affords.

4. The peace which natural Conſcience pronounceth is not from the true foundation, from reconciliation with God by Chriſts Blood, and Juſtification by his Righteouſneſs, but it derives its peace and quiet from doing, from good Works, from ſome duties perform'd. It builds its peace upon theſe, becauſe 'tis ſatisfied, and pleas'd with doing what is requir'd. It gives you out a Quietus eſt, upon the plea of your own Righteouſneſs, and having done what the Law demands. This was the peace, and ſatisfaction of mind which the young man had, who pronounced peace to himſelf from what he had done, Matth. 19. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20. And behold one came and ſaid unto him, Good maſter, what good thing ſhall I do, that I may have eternal life? And he ſaid unto him, Why calleſt thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the Commandments. He ſaith unto him, Which? Jeſus ſaid, Thou ſhalt do do murder, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, Thou ſhalt not ſteal, Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſs. Honour thy father and thy mother, and, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf. And the young man ſaith unto him, All theſe things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet? Thus a natural man will not fetch his ſentence of diſcharge from the Court of Faith, but of Works: But a Regenerate man derives his comfort, and joy from believing, Rom. 15. 13. Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the holy Ghoſt. And ſaith having firſt ſprinkled the blood of Chriſt on the Conſcience purgeth it from the guilt of ſin, Heb. 9. 14. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit, offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your conſcience from dead works, to ſerve the living God. Heb. 12. 24. And to Jeſus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of ſprinkling, that ſpeaketh better things than that of Abel. It is the voice of that blood in the Conſcience which ſpeaks thoſe good things to a man, and ſprinkleth the Conſcience it ſelf, and purgeth it from dead works, even thoſe, which the man truſted in before, ere the Conſcience can ſpeak true peace. But natural Conſcience ſpeaks peace out of its own Court as a Judge, whereas it ſhould pronounce it but as a Witneſs, which having received the ſentence out of the Court of Faith, may then ſet its hand to it, and confirm it. It may indeed out of its own Court excuſe a man in regard of ſuch a particular fact, as Abimelechs Conſcience did, Gen. 20. 4, 5. But Abimelech had not come near her: and he ſaid, Lord, wilt thou ſlay alſo a righteous Nation? Said he not unto me, She is my ſiſter? and ſhe, even ſhe her ſelf ſaid, He is my brother: in the integrity of my heart, and innocency of my hands have I done this. But it cannot juſtify the man; as Paul ſays, that tho' his Conſcience know nothing of evil by him, but judg'd him to be as touching the Law blameleſs, yet he profeſſeth that he was not hereby juſtified, but he waited for that ſentence out of another Court of free Grace, and to be pronounced on the the account of Chriſts ſatisfaction, and of his Righteouſneſs, and Gods Imputation of it, and faiths receiving, and applying it, Phil. 3. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. Though I might alſo have confidence in the fleſh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might truſt in the fleſh, I more: Circumciſed the eighth day, of the ſtock of Iſrael of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Phariſee: Concerning zeal, perſecuting the Church; touching the Righteouſneſs which is in the law, blameleſs. But what things were gain to me, thoſe I counted loſs for Chriſt. Yea doubtleſs, and I count all things but loſs for the excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord: for whom I have ſuffered the loſs of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Chriſt. And be found in him, not having mine own righteouſneſs, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, the righteouſneſs which is of God by faith. Chap 3.

CHAP. III.

That a natural mans Conſcience is very corrupt, and plays falſe in the reſiſtance which it makes againſt ſin, what conflicts between the light of Conſcience, and luſts, Unregenerate men may have. The difference of this from the conflict in a Godly mans heart againſt ſin, ſet out as to the cauſes of the Combat, the Quarrel it ſelf, and the Iſſue of the Fight.

I Come now to thoſe other effects of natural Conſcience, which have exceeding much affinity with the moſt inward workings, and efficacy of Grace it ſelf in the Heart of the Regenerate.

1. A natural Conſcience cauſeth an inward Conviction, Combat, and Strife in the heart againſt ſin. It fights againſt it, and raiſeth a reluctancy and diſplicency of it. Thus Darius was diſpleas'd with himſelf for his ill and unjuſt act in condemning Daniel to be caſt into the Lyons Den, Dan. 6. 14. Then the King when he heard theſe words, was ſore diſpleaſed with himſelf, and ſet his heart on Daniel to deliver him: and he laboured till the going down of the Sun, to deliver him. Thus Herod too was troubled for his raſh Oath, and found a reluctancy in his Conſcience to the Murther of John the Baptiſt. Matth. 14. 7, 8, 9. Whereupon he promiſed with an Oath, to give her whatſoever ſhe would ask. And ſhe being before inſtructed of her mother, ſaid, Give me here John Baptiſts head in a charger. And the King was ſorry: nevertheleſs for the Oaths ſake, and them which ſat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her. Now Unregenerate men finding in themſelves ſuch an oppoſition againſt greater, and more enormous crimes, they vainly imagine that this is the true conflict between fleſh, and ſpirit in them, and take it for that renowned Battle, (and it is indeed the moſt renowned Battle in the World, that ever was fought) which is ſaid to be only in a Regenerate man; and we find it Recorded, Rom. 7. 21, 22, 23. I find then a law, that when I would do good, evil is preſent with me. For I delight in the law of God, after the inward man. But I ſee another law in my members, warring againſt the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of ſin, which is in my members. Gal. 5. 17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh: and theſe are contrary the one to the other; ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would. And ſo like are the impreſſions of theſe two contrary principles, that Unregenerate men reading theſe two Chapters are preſently ready to phancy that they find the very ſame within them. And yet a ſenſible difference there is which the experience of all Saints finds, eſpecially they who before converſion have had active, buſy Conſciences, which have ſtriven with them, and fought many a ſtout Battle in their Hearts. And yet when that new principle of Grace hath come into the Field, they have found the courſe and order, and array of the fight clean alter'd from the former. Like unto Rebekah, (who found two Children ſenſibly fighting in her Womb) they cry out in a ſurpriſal of aſtoniſhment, Why am I thus? as ſhe did, Gen. 25. 22. And the children ſtruggled together within her: and ſhe ſaid, If it be ſo, why am I thus? And ſhe went to enquire of the Lord. She wondered at it, and was amaz'd what it ſhould mean, as never having heard, that any other Women bearing Children, were ſo affected, who though they might feel Children ſtir in their Womb, yet not two together ſo as they did. Thus when Godly men come to have experience of two contrary wills, two contrary luſtings about the ſame object, ſuch a diviſion in the Heart as cannot be match'd, or parallell'd by any inſtance elſe; they wonder at it, and enquire into the meaning of it, as ſhe did. And this they often perceive even in their firſt quickening, when grace begins to ſpring within them. Such an inſtance Auſtin gives us in the ſtory of his own Converſion, where ſpeaking of what he felt in his heart when he was firſt turned to God, and of the differing and divided pulſe of his heart towards ſin, which he found in the firſt ſymptoms of his Converſion, his Words are memorable to this purpoſe, I found (ſays he) two Wills; the one, the old Will, which I had before to ſin, the other a new Will; the one carnal, and the other ſpiritual; which fought within me one againſt another, and by their diſcord divided my Soul, and ſo (ſays he) I underſtood by my own experience that which I had read before, viz. the manner how the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit. He had ſuch a new experiment of the manner of it, as he never had before.

Voluntas autem nova, quæ mihi eſſe cœperat, ut te gratis colerem, fruique te vellem, Deus, ſola certa jocunditas, nondum erat idonea ad ſuperandam priorem vetuſtate roboratam. Ita duæ voluntates meæ; alia vetus, alia nova; illa carnalis, illa ſpiritualis, confligebant inter ſe, atque diſcordando diſſipabant animam meam; ſic intelligebam meo ipſo experimento id quod legeram, quomodo caro concupiſceret adverſus ſpiritum, & ſpiritus adverſus carnem. Auguſt. Confeſſ. Lib. 8. cap. 5.

And now to ſet out theſe two Battles, and the differences of them, would require a large Field of diſcourſe. To ſhew you the difference in reſpect,

1. Of the Cauſes,
2. Of the Quarrel,
3. Of the Combatants,
4. Of the iſſue and event of the conteſt,
5. Of the continuance of it, would make a large ſtory, and you have heard it from others.

1: As that firſt, That in the conflicts of Conſcience in Unregenerate men, Conſcience which is but one faculty fights againſt all the other faculties, which are wholly for ſin. But in the fighting of ſpirit againſt fleſh in a godly man, the ſeat of the War, and Battle is in every Faculty of the Soul, and all Faculties are divided between themſelves as it were into ſeveral Armies. Thus Light in the mind fights againſt Darkneſs there, and Grace in the Will, againſt the remainders of ſin in it.

2. The natural Conſcience in men Unregenerate fights but againſt the outward Wings of the Army of ſin, againſt groſs ſins; but grace fights againſt the whole Army, and all the Battallions of it, againſt the whole Body of ſin, and againſt all ſins of what kind ſoever, it fights not only againſt ſome great reigning luſts, but againſt both ſmall, and great, againſt all inward corruptions, and againſt ſpiritual luſts, as well as groſſer defilements. Tho' this indeed is to be added concerning this difference, that the Combat is moſt diſcernable (even in Regenerate men) in regard of conflicting with groſſer evils, and luſts, tho' it be as ſtrong, and as real in regard of ſpiritual luſts. Thus poiſon, and the blood, and ſpirits, fight as ſtrongly in the Head, and Brain, tho' the contrariety of them is more diſcern'd in the Stomach, where it makes a man more more ſenſible, and ſick. And therefore Paul when he would repreſent this Combat to the ſenſe and experience of a Chriſtian, and ſo as he might moſt clearly diſcern it in himſelf, he points him to view it in the Law of his Members fighting againſt the Law of the mind. Which he calls ſo, becauſe tho' that fight is as to all luſts, yet eſpecially thoſe of the members, bodily luſts. Chap. 3.

3. Divines make theſe two Combats, viz. that in an Unregenerate mans Conſcience, and that in a Sanctified heart, to differ in the event. In this Combat Grace ordinarily gets the Victory whenever any ſet Battle is Fought, but in that fight between natural Conſcience, and a corrupt Heart, the Weapons of Conſcience are in the end Blunted, and beaten back to its own head, and the Victory goes on ſins ſide, which is all the difference Arminius ſeems to acknowledge.

4. Theſe two Combats differ as to the continuance of them. This of Grace againſt ſin laſts all a mans Life, and grows ſtronger and ſtronger, on Graces part, as the houſe of David waxed ſtronger, and ſtronger, but Sauls houſe weaker; but the Combat of Conſcience ceaſeth in the end, and as Gods ſpirit Leaves off ſtriving with men, ſo doth Conſcience alſo. Thus Conſcience is like a perſon, who lives in a bad Society, where the Government ſways the worſe way; and who, tho' a long time he conteſted, yet being but one man, and overborn by numbers he is wearied at laſt, and ſees he can do no good, and ſo is quiet. Thus Conſcience in Unregenerate men is at laſt overpower'd, by all the other corrupt faculties, and affections which are againſt it, and ſo it is beaten clear out of the Field, and men in the end are all given up to a reprobate or injudicious mind, for ſo the word, ἀδόκιμος ſignifies, Rom. 1. 28. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do thoſe things which are not Convenient.

5. When the act of ſin comes to be done, then the reluctance which natural Conſcience cauſeth, doth ceaſe, and the Will is not only overcome to do it, but overcome by it. Tho' whilſt the ſinful act was in conſultation, and the object afar off, there might be oppoſitions rais'd; yet when the luſt, and the object come to embrace each other then the will is wholly drawn out, and allured, and ſets it ſelf to work out all the pleaſure which it can out of the ſin. All the impreſſions of unwillingneſs which Conſcience makes are before the act comes to be done, and are ſeen in the ſad reflections after the commiſſion, but when the thing is to be done, the Will comes wholly off to it. As a man who is to do a kindneſs for another, tho perhaps at firſt he ſomewhat ſticks, and deliberates, yet when he doth it, he doth it heartily without any reluctance, his heart is wholly in it, and he doth it as a kindneſs; ſo doth the Will to gratify a luſt come off entirely and fully to it. And therefore in regard of the act it ſelf, and the inſtant time wherein it is committed, Unregenerate men are ſaid to ſin with full conſent. And therefore they are ſaid to be overcome by their corruptions, 2 Pet. 2. 20. For if after they have eſcaped the pollutions of the World through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, they are again intangled therein, and overcome; the latter end is worſe with them than the beginning. For tho' they ſtrive a while, yet in the iſſue, when the ſin is to be acted, they perfectly conſent, and ſo are overcome, and their Hearts ſubdued to the luſt, and they therefore may be ſaid to fall totally into the ſin. But in a godly man the inward ſtrife continues even in the very act of ſinning, and there is an inward man in the Heart, and Will, which is never overcome, and therefore the Apoſtle Paul in the deſcription of this Combat in Rom. 7. uſeth the preſent tenſe when he ſpeaks of the oppoſition of both Combatants, ver. 15, 16, 17. For that which I do, I allow not: for what I would, that I do not; but what I hate, that do I. If then I do that which I would not, I conſent unto the law, that it is good. Now then, it is no more I that do it, but ſin that dwelleth in me. It is not I that do it, but ſin which dwelleth in me, i. e. at that preſent time when I do it; ſhewing that in the very act when it is doing, and comes to execution, there is a will reſiſts, and a reluctancy in his renewed nature. There is an [I] which can ſay that it had no hand in it.

6. The oppoſition which Conſcience makes tho' it reſtrains the act, yet it weakeneth not the inward power of the Luſt by a contrary luſting. A Man ſtanding with a Cudgel in his hand over a Dog who hath Meat ſet before him, tho' he may keep every Member of him in awe from ſtirring towards it, yet he cannot abate his hunger, nor leſſen his deſire to it, and ſo it is here in this caſe. And the reaſon is, becauſe the Government of Conſcience is Extrinſecal, Forc'd and Tyrannical. Tho' it be a principle within a Man, yet it is Extrinſecal in its working on the Will and Affections, for it ſtamps not on them any inward natural inclinations to what it dictates. Therefore the power of its Government is ſeen in reſtraining outward acts, and gainſaying inward Luſts, and ſpeaking againſt them, but never raiſing up an Army of contrary deſires againſt them; but ſo Grace doth, being an intrinſecal natural principle in the deſires themſelves. The Combat is therefore eſpecially expreſs'd by contrary luſtings, Gal. 5. 17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh: & theſe are contrary the one to the other: ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would. And ſo the deſires of the Fleſh are weaken'd by contrary deſires in a Godly Man. Conſcience indeed by terrors damps the deſires of ſin, and alſo by checks it may divert deſires which riſe, and keep them from parlying with their objects, as Parents may reſtrain Lovers from ſpeaking together, but their Loves they cannot abate or quell, or put contrary deſires or antipathy into them. Thus Conſcience tho' for a time it may keep the Will and the Luſt from holding a correſpondence, yet it cannot produce in the will an hatred of it, or averſe inclinations to it.

7. In the Combat where Grace is, this oppoſition in deſires, and this weakening of deſires to ſin, may be diſcerned in and from the very firſt riſing, and ſetting forth of the deſire: But in the other the Luſt ſpringeth up in its full ſtrength, only Conſcience meets it in its march, and diverts it or drives it in again. But where Grace is ever at the firſt riſing of a Luſt, the Will breaks it ſelf into a contrary and oppoſite deſire that Watches the deſires of ſin, and benums them, and fore-ſlows them in their proceedings. To clear this difference further by a Similitude or two.

1. When you throw a Bowl out of your hand that hath no Bias in it, tho' it runs never ſo directly to the Mark, yet a contrary Bowl may meet with it, and beat it back again. Or rather a Bowl that wants a Bias to order its Motion may be diverted, or ſtopt, or fore-ſlowed by an impediment which it meets with after it is thrown out of a Mans Hand, and ſo may a natural Mans Deſires and Luſts after they ariſe, and are caſt out by the Will, with its full force, meet with conſiderations of Conſcience, which it being watchful oppoſeth againſt them, and ſo thoſe Deſires may be diverted or taken off. But in a Regenerate Mans Will there is an inward and innate Bias, by which the deſire put forth is hindered at its firſt ſetting out, that it cannot move ſo fully as elſe it would. The deſire carries with it a contrary Bias attending upon it, that corrects and ſlackens it at its firſt ſetting out, all the way throughout. Thus hath the renewed Will a contrary Bias, which puts forth a contrary act to retardate the deſires of ſin ere checks of Conſcience meet with them.

2. Or ſecondly more plainly, a Man throws a round Hoop out of his Hand fairly and directly, and with all his ſtrength, which yet running from him may by ſome rub it meets with, be ſtopt or fall, or come back again, when it was thrown out of his Hand with his full ſtrength. But if at the ſame time that a Mans caſts it from him, if as it is going out of his hand, he gives it a contrary jerk, and impreſſeth a contrary Impetus upon it towards him; there being two contrary motions impreſſed upon it by the Hand which caſts it forth; as it will go forth of it ſelf, ſome ſmall diſtance, ſo it will come back again of it ſelf, for the Hand as it threw it out, pull'd it in again. So when the Will of a Regenerate Man puts forth a deſire to Sin, yet at the ſame inſtant the ſame Will retracts it, and puts forth a contrary deſire, ſo as the other is Lam'd, and corrected in its firſt riſing, and therefore often comes back again, by reaſon of the contrary deſire which it carries with it. The inward Bias brings it back again. It hath ever a contrary impreſſion ſtampt upon that deſire to the ſin which weakens it. And this is one affection which Paul expreſſeth that he found to be in his Heart in this Combat, Rom. 7. 21. That when he would do good, evil was preſent with him. As his Will ſent forth deſires to good, ſo the ſame Will as readily and as inſtantly ſent forth deſires to evil which hinder'd that good; therefore he ſays it is then preſent, when I would do good, and ſo on the other ſide when his Will exerted deſires to ſin, it had contrary deſires to good, which hinder'd him from ſinning with a full Will. The ſame Will thus breaks it ſelf into contrary motions contradictory each to other. Chap. 3.

And the reaſon how this comes to paſs is, becauſe Grace and Sin as they dwell in the ſame Will, and not in ſeveral Rooms, but the ſame, and are contrary and never mix, ſo they are alike active, and never reſt. And therefore no ſooner can a Luſt creep out of its hole, but a contrary act of Grace is put forth with it. It is up in Arms as ſoon as ſin, and as ſoon comes forth into the Field. It is preſent with the Man then, at the ſame time, and ſets forth with it, and from its firſt ſetting out oppoſeth it. And hence Luſts are often call'd back again, not ſo much by the oppoſition which Conſcience makes, meeting with them, as by the contrary deſires ſent out after them, and with them, by the Will.

8. Luſt may be moſt furious, and commit moſt outrages, when the natural Conſcience is ſtrongeſt and moſt up in Arms, and makes the ſtouteſt oppoſition, as in thoſe who ſin againſt the Light of Conſcience, and againſt the Holy Ghoſt. When Conſcience is moſt loud and clamorous, their Luſts yet rage moſt, and go againſt it. Conſcience and Luſt may be both up together in an Unregenerate Man. But now on the contrary in one Regenerate, ſo much as Grace is up, ſo much Luſt muſt needs be down, as in two Scales by how much the more one is up the other is depreſt. And therefore when Grace is kept up, and a Man walks in the Spirit, he fulfils not the Luſts of the Fleſh, that is, falls not into outward acts of ſin, Gal. 5. 16. This I ſay then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye ſhall not fulfil the luſt of the fleſh. And the reaſon which the Apoſtle gives is this, becauſe Grace and Corruption are oppoſite as two contraries, v. 17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh: and theſe are contrary the one to the other; ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would. They Luſt one againſt another. And therefore when Grace is in its heat and courage, and the Army of it kept in its aray, thoſe impreſſions which it makes prevail, and muſt needs do ſo.

CHAP. IV.

What is come both to the ſtrivings of natural Conſcience againſt Sin, and the conflict of Grace againſt it in a Regenerate Man. To find out the true difference between them, we muſt conſider the Cauſe and Ground of the Quarrel, and the Weapons with which it is manag'd.

THO' all theſe things, and many more be true, yet that we may come more narrowly to ſearch out the immediate, and fundamental difference between the Combat of Grace againſt Sin, and that which only Natural Conſcience maintains againſt it, I will firſt ſhew what is common to both.

1. This muſt be yielded and granted as common to both, that not Grace only, but Natural Conſcience alſo, when the pulſe thereof beats ſtrongly, may and doth cauſe a commotion and a combuſtion againſt an act of ſin in the whole Man. The whole Man may be diſquieted, diſturb'd and mov'd againſt it. For a paſſion of fear, a paſſion of horrour (which kind of Storms Conſcience can raiſe about ſin) we find in other things do move, and make impreſſion upon the whole Man, and cauſe a quelling, a recoyling, and a faultring to be in the whole Heart, when a man is about to do a thing. And ſuch a diſturbance may Conſcience raiſe in the whole Man, when a Man is about to commit ſome kind of ſin, as in the caſe of Murther, and the like, when horror ſeizeth upon the whole Man.

2. And Natural Conſcience may create this diſturbance in the Will, as well as in other faculties. It may cauſe a great unwillingneſs to commit a ſin, not only a remiſsneſs, but a diſplicence and reluctancy, and Heart-riſing againſt it, ſo as the Man ſhall not ſin with a full conſent of Will. Thus Darius was diſpleas'd with himſelf for the Injuſtice and wrong which he did to Daniel, Dan. 6. 14. Then the king when he heard theſe words, was ſore diſpleaſed with himſelf, and ſet his heart on Daniel to deliver him: and he laboured till the going down of the ſun to deliver him. Thus Herod was exceeding ſorrowful, and griev'd, that he ſhould put ſo holy a Man as John the Baptiſt to death, Mat. 14. 9. And the king was ſorry: nevertheleſs for the oaths ſake, and them which ſat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her. And grief hath alway a reniſus voluntatis, a reſiſtance of the Will to accompany it. For when the underſtanding is ſtrong againſt a thing, it doth cauſe ſome ſtand in the Will, and a bearing of it back more or leſs, that a Man cannot be ſo fully willing as elſe he would. There is no ſin which any Man commits, but ſome inconveniences preſent themſelves, and they will take ſomewhat off from the Wills eagerneſs.

3. This Commotion which Conſcience makes ſhall be intenſe and great. It will ſtrike up the Drum, eſpecially, when Conſcience is awakened, and cauſe as great an Alarm, as great an uproar, clamour, and noiſe, and hurley Burley, as Grace ſhall do.

4. Conſcience will not only alarm the Man before, but alſo in ſome meaſure in the very act it ſelf, and while it is doing; ſo as the impreſſion which which is made upon the whole man, and on the will ſhall not be worn out, but continue in the commiſſion of the act : So as all the Will is not overcome by the ſin and the pleaſure of it, but bears off, and is grieved, and abates ſomething of that full delight which would otherwiſe be in it, and which if his will was wholly, and altogether, in the ſin, he might find. Thus it was in Herod who when he gave command for the abovementioned Murther, was exceeding ſorrowful. So as theſe are not to be aſſign'd as the exact differences of this Combat, for that there may be a conviction in the whole man againſt ſin both in an Unregenerate, and a holy Soul. Chap. 4.

In what then ſhall be put the true difference?

1. The ground of the quarrel againſt ſin is to be conſider'd. As it is not dying which makes a Martyr, but the cauſe, ſo not every reſiſtance againſt ſin argues Grace, but the ground, and cauſe of it. Now what is the cauſe of this War in a gracious Heart, you ſhall know beſt if you ſearch into the thoughts, and conſultations of the Leaders, for they ſet the Armies on fighting. Obſerve diligently therefore what thoughts run through thy underſtanding, and what apprehenſions they are which thou haſt about ſin, that cauſe this adoe in thy Heart. Obſerve whether thy firſt thoughts be of the evil of ſin in it ſelf, the fooliſhneſs, the hainouſneſs, the contrariety of it to Gods Holineſs, and his Law ; the unkindneſs which is in it to God, and Chriſt, the injury, and wrong that is in it to God, who is ſo good both in himſelf, and to thee. Obſerve whether thy quarrel againſt ſin begins principally upon ſuch thoughts as theſe. Or is the Original of thy being angry with ſin the inconveniencies which attend upon it in this World, or in that which is to come ? Do the threatnings annexed to the Law, and the Wrath of God as offended, only occaſion this commotion ? Then tho' this oppoſition to ſin be on the whole man, yet it is not the Combat of Grace.

2. As the ground of the quarrel is thus narrowly to be ſearch'd into, ſo the Weapons alſo with which they fight. The Motives, and Arguments which are us'd by the Leaders to ſtir up the heart againſt ſin are to be conſidered. Motives drawn from ſelf, and proportion'd to ſelf, are the Weapons which ſtrike and pierce through the whole man ; and tho' the whole man be mov'd againſt ſin, yet when it fights but with ſuch Weapons, I may ſay the Weapons of its warfare are carnal which awakens, and rowzes ſelf in a man, and then that ſtirs, and moves the whole army.

3. This commotion in Unregenerate men is maintain'd wholly by Logical diſputes, and Arguments, and Motives to work the Heart againſt ſin, and while the pleading laſts, the Heart is exaſperated a little, but no longer. 'Tis only while the Combatants are in the Field. But the heart-riſing, and oppoſition of a godly man tho' it be whetted, and ſharpened by ſuch arguments, yet it hath a farther principle, and that is, a natural inbred antipathy, an innate, habitual contrariety, and enmity which works in the man at the firſt view of a ſin : as a commotion is wrought in a Lamb at the ſight of a Wolf, or in a Lyon at the Crowing of a Cock, and is natural, and real. And therefore it is quick, and up when a man is taken on the ſudden, and before he muſters up thoughts, or arguments, his heart riſeth at the firſt view of the ſin. Yea and therefore ſometimes when motives drawn from Heaven, and Hell, and many ſuch conſiderations would not have been effectual to keep a man from a ſin ; yet then this inward antipathy withholds him, Chriſt backing it in the Heart. So that a man can ſay, I cannot do it, not ſo much becauſe of ſuch and ſuch conſiderations, but becauſe I cannot, for my renewed nature will not let me. As a man loves out of ſympathy beyond what reaſon ſuggeſts, ſo he hates out of antipathy too. There is a ſeed within which cannot ſin, a ſeed from Chriſt which hath an enmity to ſin the ſeed of the Serpent, pent. 1 John 3. 9. Whoſoever is born of God, doth not commit ſin; for his ſeed remaineth in him: and he cannot ſin, becauſe he is born of God. Gal. 5. 17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh: and theſe are contrary the one to the other; ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would. And we have an Inſtance in Joſeph, who by reaſon of Grace in his Heart could not do that ſin to which he was tempted, Gen. 39. 9. There is none greater in this houſe than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me, but thee, becauſe thou art his wife: how then can I do this great wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God? There is a ſeed within that cannot ſin. And thus Paul aſſerts of himſelf, and others Regenerate, 2 Cor. 13. 8. For we can do nothing againſt the truth, but for the truth. I cannot do ſuch a holy duty, is the voice of nature, but I cannot, ſin is the voice of a Divine nature in a man. I muſt not ſin for theſe or theſe reaſons, is the voice of Reaſon and Conſcience. I muſt not ſin, works in the Heart of a natural man, but the holy nature's I cannot ſin, acts in one Regenerate. It is the voice of the new nature in him, like to what was in Eſther, when ſhe ſaid to Ahaſuerus, Eſther 8. 6. For how can I endure to ſee the evil that ſhall come unto my people? or how can I endure to ſee the deſtruction of my kindred? A σόργη, an innate pious affection wrought in her this cannot, a not being able to bear it. A man may have many reaſons not to murther his enemy, becauſe he muſt not do it, but a man cannot kill his Child, he cannot find in his heart to do it, for a Fathers nature withholds him. And it is ſaid of the Regenerate part, that it cannot ſin, as of the Sun, yet it cannot mingle with darkneſs, as of the fire, that it cannot but reſiſt Water, as God cannot lye, ſo his Image remaining ſuch cannot ſin.

4 In an Unregenerate man terrours of Conſcience and impreſſions of wrath, and the ſmart of ſin felt in the Conſcience, or the inconveniencies by which a man hath been hurt, or with which he is threatned in his thoughts, thoſe fight againſt the pleaſures of ſin in him. But in a godly man delight in the Law, and in God, and Communion with him, and the impreſſion of the ſweetneſs which he hath taſted therein, fights againſt, and countervails the pleaſures of ſin. And therefore Paul ſpeaking of this Combat puts it upon delighting in the Law, Rom 7. 21, 22. I find then a law, that when I would do good, evil is preſent with me. For I delight in the law of God, after the inward man. And ſo Solomon ſays that knowledge, when it is pleaſant to a man, keeps him from evil, Prov. 2. 10, 11. When wiſdom entreth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleaſant unto thy ſoul, diſcretion ſhall preſerve thee, underſtanding ſhall keep thee: When the holy man is tempted to ſin, his having recourſe to thoughts of God, and of his love, and his own duty, and what Communion he hath had with God, bring a freſh preſent delight which fights againſt the delights of ſin, and ſo puts the heart out of taſt, that it cannot reliſh it.

5. Conſcience works this commotion in Unregenerate men by the way of fear, but Grace works it by the way of hatred againſt ſin. Accordingly Paul ſays of himſelf, Rom. 7. 15. For that which I do, I allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate that do I. And there is a real, and ſenſible difference between fear of ſin, and hatred of it. And you will diſcern it, if you have recourſe to the temptation in which you have been when fear ſeiz'd on you, and to that temptation when hatred of ſin roſe in you, you will find that both fear, and hatred ſtir the whole man, but differently. If a man hath on a ſuddain a ſword drawn with the point bent toward him, this ſtirs up fear, and that cauſeth a commotion in the whole man to avoid it, but bring the ſame man to a place where ſo many Toads are, and this cauſeth a commotion in the whole man to eſchew them, but the commotion is different from the other, for it is out of an inward loathing, and abhorrency which he hath of them. Now thus differently affected are natural men, and godly men about ſin, when preſented to them. Men whoſe Conſciences are not enlightned, or have not been ſcar'd, they can handle the Sword, when in the Velvet Scabbard, but when Conſcience preſents death in the point of it, and draws it out of the Scabbard, this cauſeth fear, and that fear raiſeth an inward perturbation in the whole man. But now ſuch a fear is not all the cauſe of that reluctancy which a godly man finds in his heart againſt ſin, but there is an inward diſlike, and loathing, and irreconcileable hatred. He hates ſin, and would always do ſo, and carefully avoid it, tho' the conſequent miſery, and torment, and hurt which it doth, could be ſeparated from it. As tho' a man thinks, and knows, that the Toad cannot ſting him to death, nay that it cannot any way hurt him, if the poiſon could poſſibly be taken out, yet he would hate it out of an antipathy. The Lyon is mov'd at the Crowing of a Cock, and yet the Cock cannot hurt him, yet he is mov'd, and ſhudders at it, becauſe he hates the noiſe. Oor, to expreſs it by another ſimilitude, a Child ſees a fir'd-coal, there is a Commotion of fear when his little finger ſhall but come near it, but if it be brought to a Toad there is a Commotion of hatred. Thus whilſt Conſcience views fire in the coal, the Flames of Hell in the ſin, when any ſtrong temptation carries on the heart to it, there is a Commotion of fear in, and near the acting of the ſin, but this is differing from the Commotion of loathing, and hatred, which a godly man hath. For fear is but a paſſion, and ſoon over, and the conviction of ſin raiſed by it is as tranſitory, and the Combat againſt ſin, therefore ceaſes as ſoon as the fear is blown over. But hatred is conſtant, and tho' it works more ſtilly, and calmly, yet more ſtrongly, and is more laſting; and ſuch is the Conviction of Regenerate men. Hatred works againſt all, or any having to do with ſin, againſt all dealings with it of what kind ſoever, ſo as not to touch it, nor ſo much as to ſee it, as a man cannot endure not only to handle, but not to look on a Toad. But a man who is but afraid of a coal can endure to ſee it, tho' he cannot bear to carry it in his hands, and thus Unregenerate men can rowl ſin in their thoughts, view it with pleaſure in their unclean Phanſies, and act it in imagination, tho' their Conſcience works againſt the outward acting of it. And when the fire is gone out of it, then they can bear to touch it. When the ſenſe and ſmart of ſin is out of their Conſciences then they can freely, and boldly defile themſelves with it. As familiarity with the moſt ſavage Wild Beaſts, as Bears and Tygers, will take away the fear of them tho' at firſt a man was afraid, ſo a man by degrees wearing off the fears, and horrours of his Conſcience grows bold with thoſe ſins, at which he firſt trembled, after a while he is familiar with them; but where there is a hatred of ſin in the heart this familiarity increaſeth hatred, and therefore a mans ſpirit in the end riſeth moſt againſt thoſe ſins, into which he ofteneſt falls. Chap. 4.

6. And hence ſixthly, (which will afford another diff-rence, or at leaſt help us to diſcern the former) Natural Conſcience will cauſe a conviction in the heart againſt ſins which a mans own ſelf is to commit, and the guilt whereof will redound to his perſon, becauſe ſelf-love ſtirs up fear, and that ſtirs the man. But Grace will work as great an heart-riſing and Commotion againſt the ſins of others, the guilt whereof will not redound to him. For ſenſe of guilt is from Conſcience of a mans own, not of anothers ſin, tho' indeed, Conſcience out of Pride, or becauſe of the reflection which it makes, that the ſin becomes his, if he doth not tell the man of it, may make a man reprove another for ſin. But Grace riſeth againſt ſin in others, and is afraid leſt another ſhould offend, ſwear, blaſpheme, &c. He is afraid of Oaths in others as well as of blaſphemous thoughts in himſelf, & he loaths them as much. He is one who fears an Oath, Eccleſ. 9.2. All things come alike to all, there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked; to the good and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not: as is the good, ſo is the ſinner; and he that ſweareth, as he that feareth an Oath. An Oath ſtartles him, as if a piece of Ordinance were let off behind him. Thus Job fear'd the ſin of his Sons, as well as his own, Job 1. 5. And it was ſo when the days of their feaſting were gone about, that Job ſent and ſanctified them, and roſe up early in the morning, and offered burnt offerings according to the number of them all: for Job ſaid, It may be that my ſons have ſinned, and curſed God in their hearts. Thus did Job continually. Thus Lots righteous Soul was vexed at the abominable ſins of Sodom, 2 Pet. 2. 7, 8. And delivered Juſt Lot, vexed with the filthy converſation of the wicked: (For that righteous man dwelling among them, in ſeeing and hearing, vexed his righteous ſoul from day to day, with their unlawful deeds.) And the reaſon why a Regenerate man is afraid of the ſins of others as well as of his own, is becauſe his fear of ſin ariſing from the hatred which he bears to it, which is general to ſin as ſin, and not as his ſin only, he is therefore afraid of the ſins of all men, as well as of his own.

CHAP. V.

What great difference there is between that regret to ſin which Unregenerate men have under convictions of natural Conſcience; and that unwillingneſs to ſin which is in a godly man.

THat I may farther clear, the difference between the ſtrife which is in a Regenerate mans heart againſt ſins and oppoſition which only natural Conſcience makes; I come now to conſider what is that unwillingneſs to ſin, which men Unregenerate may expreſs to have, and how much it is different from that inward averſion which a godly man hath to Sin.

The Will is the Eſpecial Center, and Seat of this War, and therefore it is expreſs'd by luſting, Gal. 5. 17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh: and theſe are contrary the one to the other; ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would. And the more the Will is in a ſin, the greater is the aggravation. This therefore is made the aggravation of Ephraims ſin in the matter of Jeroboams Calves which he Commanded them to Worſhip, that they went willingly after this wicked Commandment, Hoſ. 5. 11, 12. Ephraim is oppreſſed, and broken in judgment: becauſe he willingly walked after the Commandment. Therefore will I be unto Ephraim as a moth; and to the houſe of Judah as rottenneſs. And it is urg'd againſt the Phariſees by Chriſt, that they would ſin, John 8. 44. Ye are of your father the devil, and the luſts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a lie, he ſpeaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it. And ſo as a heightning of their guilt, who Apoſtatize, it is ſaid, that they ſin wilfully after the knowledge of the truth received, Heb. 10. 26. For if we ſin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſins.

Now in Regenerate men there may be ſome ſtrife in their Wills againſt ſin; ſo as their Wills may bear off, and they have ſome remiſsneſs, and reluctancy, as in Herod, and Darius. So as it may be truly ſaid there is ſome unwillingneſs by reaſon of Conſcience in many ſins. When indeed Conſcience is paſt feeling, then wicked men Sin with greedineſs, and their Wills are wholly let out in the Sin, and yet not before, Eph. 4. 19. Who being paſt feeling, have given themſelves over unto laſciviouſneſs, to work all uncleanneſs with greedineſs. But to clear this farther to you.

1. Conſider that there is a double unwillingneſs, or averſeneſs in the Will to things preſented to it, as alſo a double willingneſs, for the diſtinction is applicable to both, and therefore we will uſe one part of the diſtinction of the one, and the other part of the other.

1. There

1. There is a willingneſs per ſe, i.e. a direct,innate,full inclination, and going out of the Will to a thing ſuitable to it; when the Will is of it ſelf carried to an Object for it ſelf. Chap. 5.

2. There is an unwillingneſs per accidens, an accidental unwillingneſs, Indirect, and by the by, when there is ſome inconvenience annexed to the thing which we deſire, which the mind apprehending is made leſs willing, than otherwiſe it would be. Thus it was in the young man in the Hiſtory of the Goſpel, whoſe will of it ſelf was fully ſet upon the World, and the pleaſures of it, as things which were ſuitable to him, and yet when Chriſt told him that he could not enjoy Heaven, and them both together, this cauſed ſome ſorrow, and unwillingneſs in him, and took off his mind ſomewhat from them, yet ſo as in the iſſue he followed the innate ſwinge of his Will, and heart, tho'with ſome mixture of unwillingneſs, but it was only an accidental unwillingneſs, Matth. 19. 21,22. Jeſus ſaid unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and ſell that thou haſt, and give to the poor, and thou ſhalt have treaſure in Heaven: and come and follow me. But when the young man heard that ſaying, he went away ſorrowful: for he had great poſſeſſions. And thus a wicked mans heart is of it ſelf fully for ſin, wholly for ſin, and the pleaſures of ſin,as ſuitable to his deſires. Well but there are inconveniencies which attend upon ſin, and which Conſcience repreſents as inſeparable from it, the fearful conſequences which follow upon it,ſuch as ſhame, miſery, Hell,and Damnation. This takes off the edge of the Will ſomewhat, that it cannot be ſo keen towards ſin,and it makes a ſtand in the diverſe motions of the Will, which otherwiſe were going out to ſin, with a full propenſion, and without any reluctancy. And ſo in wicked men there may be alſo ſome willingneſs to good, but it is ſo only accidentally, not for goodneſs ſake,but for ſome pleaſing conſequences which follow upon it,which may candy, and ſweeten it when for itſelf it is not lik'd.

Now ſuch a mixture of a direct willingneſs for ſin, joyn'd with ſome accidental unwillingneſs to it, makes not the Combat of Fleſh, and Spirit, for then the moſt of men would have it in them. For there is no action which a mans heart is ever ſo fully for; but ſome inconveniencies make him leſs willing. And indeed all this may rather be ſaid to make a man leſs willing, than otherwiſe he ſhould be, but not indeed, and really unwilling. Thus Water whoſe direct courſe, and ſtream is to run one way, may have (as in Mills) ſome bar, that ſtops, and hinders, and takes off ſome of the ſtream, but it turns it not the contrary way.

And that this part of an Ungenerate mans will, which is unwilling, is not againſt ſin,appears by this, that he wiſheth thoſe inconveniences, and impediments remov'd,that his Will might fully, and wholly pour out it ſelf to the ſin. He is vexed rather at the Impediments, than at the ſin, and thinks he, if there were no Conſcience, nor no Hell, I might then ſin freely.

But now the Combat in a godly man is occaſioned between two direct Wills, that which is of it ſelf for ſin, and that which is of it ſelf, and directly againſt ſin. He is like a needle between two Load-ſtones, and there is an inward inclination which carries him both ways, and therefore it is ſaid the Law of the Members fights againſt the Law of the Mind, i. e. one inclination, in him againſt another inclination Romans 7. 23. But I ſee another law in my members, warring againſt the Law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of ſin, which is in my members. But unregenerate men in all their lothneſs to ſin are but as Iron, which is but by ſome external accident detain'd, and fore-ſlowed in its motion towards the Loadſtone. And therefore notwithſtanding this accidental unwillingneſs they are ſtill ſaid to ſin with a full conſent, becauſe they wiſh thoſe inconveniencies remov'd, which make them unwilling. When the Iron is detain'd the hand which holds it ſhall find the Inward drawing power, and the inclination, as ſtrong as if it were let go. Thus tho' an Unregenerate man is kept from ſin, yet his inward Bent is to it, and if the fear'd inconveniences were remov'd, the will of it ſelf would be wholly for it.

2. That the difference of theſe two Wills ſo directly contrary may be more fully underſtood, we will compare theſe contrary motions of the Will, with all other diverſe kinds of motions of it whatſoever which may be thought of, or which Man is capable of.

1. There may be in the ſame Man two direct deſires to contrary things, but then they are not ſeated in the ſame Appetite, neither are they indeed contrary, but ſubordinate each to other. As for example the natural Appetite may crave Meat when a Man is hungry, when yet the reaſonable Appetite, or his Will guided by Reaſon, may be bent upon ſome buſineſs to be done, which ſhall put off his eating, yet theſe are not ſeated in the ſame Will, neither are they contrary, unleſs this natural Appetite Rebel, and make impreſſions upon the reaſonable Will, ſo as to hinder it in its deſires, for otherwiſe they are ſubordinate, as in Chriſt when he was an hungry and yet he refrain'd eating, becauſe it was ſweeter Meat and Drink to him to Convert a Soul, John 4. 31, 32, 33, 34. In the mean while his diſciples prayed him, ſaying, Maſter, eat. But he ſaid unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of. Therefore ſaid the diſciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat? Jeſus ſaith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his work. There were two deſires in him, but yet ſubordinate, and not in the ſame Appetite. And ſo it was in Chriſt too when nature abhorr'd Death and ſhrunk at it, and yet he ſubmitted his Will to God, even unto Death.

2. A Man may have a mixed Will to the ſame thing, i. e. he may be willing, and ſome unwillingneſs be mixed with it, but then the one is only accidental. A Man Wills the ſaving of his goods directly, but a ſtorm comes, and he throws them over-board to ſave his Life, this willingneſs to loſe his goods is only accidental. Water running with a full ſtream in its natural courſe may be interrupted by windings as in Rivers, or ſtopt part of it, as in Mills, ſo as the current is not ſo full and ſtrong as elſe it would be.

3. Or thirdly, a Man may have a divided Will, and both directed to contrary objects. Thus Paul was divided between two, and was in a ſtrait, and knew not what to chuſe. He had a deſire to depart, and to be with Chriſt, and a deſire to ſtay here on Earth, and to glorifie Chriſt, Phil. 1. 21, 22, 23, 24. For to me to live is Chriſt, and to die is gain. But if I live in the fleſh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I ſhall chooſe I wot not. For I am in a ſtrait betwixt two, having a deſire to depart, and to be with Chriſt; which is far better: Nevertheleſs to abide in the fleſh, is more needful for you. Yet theſe deſires in him, tho' carried contrary ways, did not fight one againſt another, and therefore they were not truly contrary, but agreed in the ſame love of Chriſt being the ground of both; ſo that he did not in that manner deſire to live with Chriſt, as withal that deſire ſhould riſe up againſt the other, ſo as to wiſh it expelled, and not to be at all. Becauſe tho' the ſtreams went different ways, yet they had but one ſpring viz. love to Chriſt, which was ſhewn different ways. The objects were incompatible, but the deſires not contrary. It is like a ſtream dividing into two Channels, and yet meeting in one at firſt. Thus alſo a Wicked Mans Will is of it ſelf carried to Prodigality, and alſo to Covetouſneſs, that he is in a ſtrait and knows not which to chuſe, yet ſo as ſelf-love is the Ground and Spring of both. So that to put all together, the ſame Will may be carried to contrary objects with contrary acts, and to the ſame object with contrary acts. But now the two Wills in a Regenerate generate Man are every where directly contrary, ſo that he cannot do the things which he would, Gal. 5. 17. Chap. 5.

1. There is not only a mixture of an accidental unwillingneſs, as in a Man in a ſtorm, who caſts out his goods, but there is a direct unwillingneſs to ſin.

2. And this unwillingneſs is in the ſame Will; not in two appetites ſubordinate, but in the ſame Will contrary to it ſelf, and there are two parties in it, which fight one againſt the other, as the Law of the fleſh, and the Law of the mind are ſaid to do, Rom. 7. 23. But I ſee another law in my members, warring againſt the Law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of ſin, which is in my members.

3. And theſe are not contrary only in regard of two ſeveral Objects, as a man may Love covetouſneſs, and prodigality at the ſame time, but hate neither, but they are two contrary acts one to the other, ſeeking to deſtroy each other. They luſt one againſt another, ſays the Apoſtle, and the one would deſtroy the other. A godly man hates not only the pleaſure of ſin, but hates his love of it, and abhors himſelf for loving it in any degree.

4. Which is more, there are contrary Wills directly thus contrary towards the ſame Object; and then, ſays Aquinas, Wills are contrary, when in eodem, & circa Idem, when in the ſame, and about the ſame thing. To love the pleaſures of ſin for themſelves, and yet to hate them at the ſame time, and to hate his very loving them, theſe are contrary acts about the ſame Object. Here is not only a divided ſtream meeting in one Channel; but a contrary ſtream running in the ſame Channel, having two contrary Springs, which would be a Miracle in Nature, a Paradox which Ariſtotle would have hiſs'd out of the Schools, and it is a Riddle indeed to all but godly men. Adam in Paradiſe had experience of no ſuch contrary acts, nor Chriſt, nor have the fallen Devils, nor the Angels in Heaven, nor wicked men, tho' never ſo much enlightned, but only a godly man; and therefore wonder not, if you underſtand it not, tho' it be told you, for there is no inſtance like it, by which to make it plain. And the reaſon is becauſe in no other caſe a man hath, as it were, two men, and two Wills in him. Toward all other Objects he hath but one ſelf, but here he hath two, a New man and an Old man, which have contrary Wills. Bring two men to the ſame thing, and the one may hate it, and the other love it, for the ſame thing which each ſee in it, becauſe they are two men; and now a godly man hath as it were two men in him, and therefore hath ſuch contrary motions in the ſame Will toward the ſame thing, and of ſuch contrary motions no inſtance can be given in the Will of any reaſonable Creature towards any kind of objects, but only in this Will of a Regenerate man, and in his Will, only toward ſin and Grace.

AN Unregenerate Man's Guiltineſs BEFORE GOD

In Reſpect of SIN and PUNISHMENT.

BOOK VIII.

Of the Inclinations and Luſts which are in the Will and Affections, after Things Fleſhly and Sinful.

EPHES. iv. 22.

That you put off ----- the old Man, which is corrupt in deceitful Luſts.

CHAP. I.

The Words of the Text explained. That to compleat the Deſcription of our natural Sinfulneſs, the Poſitive Part, which conſiſts in Luſts, is to be conſidered, as well as the Privative, which is the want of all that's good.

HAving diſpatched the firſt Part of the poſitive original Sinfulneſs of Man's Nature, which is the Depravation of the Mind in all the Powers of it, Underſtanding and Thoughts, Judgment, Conſcience and Reaſon; I come now to diſcourſe of the Corruptions of the Will and Affections, which are Luſts: which that they are another Part of the Sinfulneſs of our Nature, will appear from the Words, and the Coherence of them.

For firſt, The main thing here ſpoken of by the Name of the Old Man, is no other than the Subject we have in hand, viz. that ſinful Nature of the old Man contracted from his Birth.

And Firſt, That the Sinfulneſs of our Nature is principally and directly meant in that Phraſe, is evident out of this Place.

Book VIII

1. Becauſe he oppoſeth it to the New Man. Now by New Man, as the Apoſtle doth in ver. 24. explain himſelf, is meant that Integrity, Righteouſneſs and Holineſs of Nature, which is called God's Image, like that created by God at firſt, and which renews not the outward Life only, but the moſt inward Room of the Mind; Ver. 23, 24. And be renewed in the Spirit of your Mind; And that ye put on the new Man, which after God is created in Righteouſneſs, and true Holineſs. Therefore that old Man that is exhorted to be put off, by Law of Oppoſition, is meant that oppoſite Corruption of Nature that came in the room of it; which muſt therefore be put off, (as he exhorts) that this may be put on; which whilſt it reſides in the Nature of Man, it hinders his renewing, and the Image of God from coming in. Theſe two therefore are two contrary things, which are converſant about the ſame Subject, to wit, Man's Nature.

2. It appears from the Scope of the Words and their Coherence, in ver. 21. If ſo be that you have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the Truth is in Jeſus. He exhorts not to an outward Reformation of their Converſe only, but to that Truth and Sincerity of Sanctification, which the Doctrine and Power of Grace in Chriſt teacheth, and worketh in all true Chriſtians; If ſo be, ſaith he, ye have learned the Truth as it is in Jeſus. Which doth not, as other Doctrines of Philoſophers, &c. teach you to put off the Evils of your outward Converſe only, and to put on a new Converſation over an old Nature, as a Sheep's Skin over a Woolviſh Nature; he that doth no more, falls ſhort of that Truth of Grace which Chriſt requires: But it teacheth principally to put off the old Man, as the Cauſe of all the Evils in the outward Converſe; and that is his meaning, when he ſaith, As concerning the outward Converſe, put off the old Man, without which it is impoſſible to reform the Converſe. Now if by the old Man, had been meant the outward Converſe only, (as ſome would) his Exhortation had fallen ſhort of that Truth of Sanctification, to which he urgeth them: therefore by old Man, Corruption of Nature muſt needs be meant, as a diſtinct thing from the former Converſe, and differenced from it, as the Cauſe from the Effect. And ſo,

3. Where the ſame Exhortation is uſed by the ſame Apoſtle, it is evidently expreſſed, as in Col. 3. 9, 10. Lie not one to another, ſeeing that ye have put off the old Man with his Deeds; and have put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledg, after the Image of him that created him. And therefore it is ſo to be underſtood here; for the one is an Explication of the other.

Secondly, In the ſecond Place: That that Sinfulneſs of our Natures, contracted from our Birth, is principally meant in that Phraſe, the reaſon of the Name Old Man, as given by Divines, doth evidence. For Sin is called the old Man, becauſe it is the Image of, and contracted from the firſt, and therefore old Adam; as he is called in compariſon of Chriſt, whoſe Image the new Man is, 1 Cor. 15. 45, 49. And ſo it is written, The firſt Man Adam was made a living Soul, the laſt Adam was made a quickning Spirit. And as we have born the Image of the earthy, we ſhall alſo bear the Image of the heavenly. It is the old Man, becauſe we have had it ſo long, even from our Births; though alſo all the further Corruption, which it hath been a growing to, and hath been added by actual Sin, is alſo meant here, as the word φθειρόμενον (as Piſcator notes) implies: for it is not ſaid φθάρτον, corruptum, but continually corrupting; tho all the Parts of Corruption it hath at firſt, and that in the whole Man.

Thirdly, For therefore it is called the old Man, becauſe it is ſeated in the whole Man, it is ſpread over all the Faculties and Powers of Man.

Now that whereby the Apoſtle deſcribes this old Man to us, is that Part of its Corruption which we have in hand, namely, Inclinations to what is evil: For if you ask, what manner of thing the old Man is? he tells you, 'tis nothing but Corruption: And if you ask wherein this Corruption doth conſiſt? he anſwers you, By this which is the moſt ſenſible Part of it, which Divines call Poſitive, viz. Inclinations to Sin: for that is his meaning, when he ſaith, It is corrupt in Luſts deceitful.

The

The Text thus opened, doth diſcover to us, that the Corruption of Man's Nature is not meerly privatively to be expreſſed, but alſo poſitively; that is, that Man's natural Sinfulneſs lies not only in that there is no Inclination to what is good, but further, that all our Inclinations are ſet wrong, and going out of the Way which is good, to what is evil, which is a further thing and a diſtinct Part: and that is all we mean by that we call the poſitive Part. Now that which I intend to do about this Subject, is to prove and demonſtrate theſe things concerning it. Chap. 1.

I. That to the full Deſcription of our Natures Sinfulneſs, there are required to be conſidered theſe two diſtinct Parts of it, a Privative and a Poſitive.

II. That this Poſitive Part is nothing but Luſts ſet wrong, Inclinations aberring, and inclining us out of the way; which I will ſhew to be truly and properly Sins, and wherein their Sinfulneſs conſiſts.

III. Then I will ſhew the exceeding great Sinfulneſs of Man's Nature in regard of them.

1. In regard of their Extenſion, both in regard of Subject and Object; in that all the Inclinations that are in all Faculties, are out of the way, and carried on to Evil; and alſo that there is no Evil, which in Man's Nature there is not an Inclination unto.

2. In regard of their Parts, which is an Averſeneſs in Inclination to what is good, and Enmity againſt it, as well as Inclination to Evil.

3. In regard of its Degrees; their Inclination is not only a Fitneſs to Evil, but a Readineſs; not only a Readineſs, but a Greedineſs, &c.

I. To begin with the firſt, which is the Foundation of the reſt, viz. That to make up the full Deſcription, there are required to be conſidered two Parts, a Privative and Poſitive: That is, though indeed take it metaphorically and abſtractly in its own Nature, it is but a bare Privation, as all Sin is; and ſo to define it, it were enough to ſay, that it is a want of what is good; yet morally conſidered, and as in our Natures and Inclinations, which are a poſitive Subject; ſo there are two diſtinct Evils to be conſidered in it, to make up the full Deſcription of it; that is, God looking on our Natures and Inclinations as corrupted, and reckons two diſtinct parts of Sin againſt us there, the one is meerly privative, viz. that our Inclinations are not carried on to what is good, and that they are taken off from him; the other as importing ſomething poſitive, which is the bent of theſe Inclinations to what is evil. As for example, He that labours to expreſs all the moral Evil that is in Pride, and ſays no more of it, but that it is a want of Humility, would not expreſs all; though indeed phyſically, or in genere entium, it is but a mere Privation: but this muſt be added, to ſhew the full Evil of it in genere moralium, that it is an inordinate Deſire of exalting himſelf, and affecting ſome Excellency above his meaſure, which notes out a poſitive Part, or rather an affirmative Part, as being in a poſitive Subject to a poſitive Object. And therefore all the Privations to which Sin is compared, they are not meer Privations, but Privations evilly diſpoſing the Subject they are in. As when it is compared to Leaven, the old Leaven, 1 Cor. 5. 6, 7. Know ye not that a little Leaven leaveneth the whole Lump? Purge out therefore the old Leaven, that ye may be a new Lump, as ye are unleavened. Leaven is not only the want of that right Savour which ſhould be in Bread, and is naturally in it, but alſo a poſitive Sourneſs, which affects it, and makes it unſavoury: And as that is phyſically thus, ſo is Original Sin morally. For you ſhall find the Scripture (which is the beſt Herauld to quarter out the Coat of the old Man, which is to be put off) diſplaying the Evil of it into theſe two ſeveral Quarters and Parts: ſo if we look on thoſe Places which in general ſpeak of it, Rom. 3. 9, 10. He ſpeaking of that common Sinfulneſs that is in all, as thoſe Words imply, All under Sin, and this both in their Natures, as Infants in their Natures and Lives, if living to Years of Diſcretion; he deſcribes it:

Book VIII

1. Privatively. (1.) In their Natures, That there is none righteous, ver. 10. (2.) In their Lives, There is none that underſtands, &c. none that doth good, but are unprofitable, unſerviceable, ver. 11, 12. And then poſitively alſo, ver. 13, 14, 15. in their natural Inclinations, open Sepulchres, full of rotten Bones when opened, their Mouths full of Bitterneſs, and Poiſon is under their Lips: As alſo James ſaith, chap. 3. 6, 8. that they are full of nothing but Inclinations to Ill, (ſpeaking then within them, when they do not ſpeak outwardly) and active Inclinations which are called a Fire that Man's Nature is inflamed with, and which ſets it a-work: And ſo their Feet are ſwift to ſhed Blood, ver. 15. which notes out the natural readineſs and aptneſs to run that way; and therefore in their Lives there is much poſitive Evil committed, which alſo he deſcribes, With their Tongues they have uſed Deceit. And by the way, let me note this unto you, That the Places the Apoſtle here cites, and applies to prove the common Sinfulneſs of Man's Nature, and this even by Birth, (for he ſpeaks of all) are yet, in the Places where they are cited, ſome of them ſpoken but of particular Men, now as corrupted by actual Sin, Pſal. 140. 3. That of Poiſon is under their Lips, is ſpoken upon occaſion of Doeg, and but of Perſecutors only: That out of Iſa. 59. 7, 8. of Feet ſwift to ſhed Blood, is ſpoken but of the Oppreſſors among the Jews. Which here I note only to this purpoſe, (though afterwards I ſhall uſe it to another) to ſtop that Cavil which ſome Papiſts have raiſed againſt our Divines, that many of thoſe Places they bring to ſhew the Corruption of our Natures, are ſpoken only of Men corrupted by actual Sins. You ſee the Apoſtle doth ſo argue, and well may we; for all that Wickedneſs which is acted by particular Men, is but the expreſſion of that Sinfulneſs that is in all Men: Col. 1. 21. they are not only ſaid to be eſtranged as from the Womb, from the Life of God, as in Epheſ. 4. 18. it is explained; but that their Minds are become vain and ſet on evil Works; they are ſaid to be in evil Works, to note out their Inclinations to them, as a Man is ſaid to be in Law.

And as thus in general, ſo the Corruption of particular Faculties, is both privatively and poſitively expreſſed. (1.) Their Wiſdom; Jer. 4. 22. For my People is fooliſh, they have not known me, they are ſottiſh Children, and they have none Underſtanding: they are wiſe to do Evil, but to do Good they have no knowledg. To do Good they have no underſtanding, but that is not all, they are wiſe to do Evil. (2.) The Inclination of the Will and Affections: Jer. 22. 17. But thine Eyes and thine Heart, are not but for thy Covetouſneſs, and for to ſhed innocent Blood, and for Oppreſſion, and for Violence to do it. Thy Heart and Eyes are not but for Covetouſneſs and Oppreſſion; that is, the Inclination and Diſpoſition is privately taken off from all things that are good; but for Covetouſneſs, to that it is inclined ſtrongly enough.

For Reaſons and Grounds of this Truth:

Firſt, Conſider that Sin in general (conſider it which way you will) hath two ſuch diſtinct Evils in it, and ſo whereſoever it is to be found, both an Evil privative and poſitive, is to be found to make up the Definition.

1. Conſider it as it is a Wrong to God, as he is the chiefeſt Good. Or,

2. As he is the ſupream Judg and Governour, and Law-giver. For Sin wrongs both ways, and ſo anſwerably hath two Definitions of it, and both Definitions include theſe two Evils in it.

1. As it is a Wrong to God as the chiefeſt Good: Jer. 2. 13. For my People have committed two Evils: they have forſaken me the Fountain of living Waters, and have hewed them out Ciſterns, broken Ciſterns that can hold no Water. He defines it by two diſtinct Evils in it; 1. A forſaking of God the Fountain, &c. which is meerly privative: And 2. a digging of Pits, &c. So the Schoolmen alſo define it, that it is an averſion à ſummo bono, & converſio indebita ad minus bonum. And theſe are two Twins, that in what Womb ſoever the one is begotten, the other is alſo: though the one is a Conſequent of the other, and takes the other by the Heel, yet they are never ſevered; no Averſion from God, but joined with Converſion to the Creature; no Converſion thus to the Creature, but is accompanied with Averſion from God.

2. Take

2. Take it as a Wrong to God as Law-giver: So it is called and defined, 1 John 3. 4. ἀνομία, a Transgression of Laws. Now every Commandment of God hath two Parts inseparably conjoined, an Affirmative, This you shall do; a Negative, This you shall not do: a Precept and a Prohibition. And as these always are conjoined in Law, so in Sinning, which is the Transgression of the Law. There is no failing in a Precept, but is joined with jarring against some Prohibition: For Sin bidding contrary to Law, hath two parts also in it, as that hath: only the breach of the negative part of the Law, makes a positive part of Sin; the failing in the affirmative Part of the Law, makes the privative Part of Sin; as two Men standing opposite, the one's right Hand is against the other's Left. Now then if Sin both ways considered, hath two Parts, and there so conjoined, as where one is, the other is also; then Original Sin must have these two Parts, since it is proved to be both a Sin and a Law. A holy Law was written once in our Natures, and now Sin is written there: Jer. 17. 1. The Sin of Judah is written with a Pen of Iron, and with the point of a Diamond; it is graven upon the Table of their Heart, and upon the Horns of your Altars. And as the Law had two Parts when written there, so Sin hath now; therefore the Law of the Members is called contrary to the Law of the Mind, i. e. the Law written in the Mind, Rom. 7. 23. But I see another Law in my Members, warring against the Law of my Mind, and bringing me into captivity to the Law of Sin, which is in my Members.

Chap. 1.

Secondly; If we consider the Subject of all Sin, it is either our Actions or our Inclinations. Now in our Actions these two Parts are distinctly to be considered; whence the distinction of Omission and Commission ariseth: James 4. 17. Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is Sin. Matth. 25. 42. For I was an hungred, and ye gave me no Meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no Drink. There omission of what they ought to have done, is a Sin. John 8. 34. Whosoever committeth Sin, is the Servant of Sin. Psal. 50. 21. These things hast thou done, and I kept silence: thou thoughtest that I was altogether such a one as thy self: but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes. There doing what they ought not to have done, is a Sin. Now if these two Parts are found in Actions, then also in our Inclinations or Natures; which Consequence is proved by a double Reason.

1. Because Action is the Child of Inclination: James 1. 15. Then when Lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth Sin; and Sin when it is finished, bringeth forth Death. Sin is said to be conceived, and to bring forth. An Act hath no Sinfulness which it sucks not from within; for what is in the Effect is in the Cause; especially if it is begot as a Child, then it must be in the same Image.

2. Because the first Sin of Adam, which was a Sin of Omission and Commission both, was the Parent of Original Sin, as I have proved, and so begat it in its Likeness: As it was an Aversion from God, it left us turn'd from him; as it was a Conversion to the Creature, it left us inclined to all Acts of Commission: for John 8. 34. He that commits Sin, is the Servant of it. It binds over his Nature to its Service, by positive Inclinations as Indentures.

Use. If there be two Parts in Sin, then consider that true Sanctification must have two Parts also, for Sanctification is opposite to Sinfulness. Therefore if you have learned Christ, as the Truth is in Jesus, you have learned first to put off the old Man, and then to put on the New: And as in your Natures, so also in your Lives, it is not enough to cease to do evil, but we must learn to do well: so in your Hearts, it is not enough for a Man to have good Motions, but he must also have his Lusts mortified. There is now a kind of half Religion, a negative and dow-bak'd Religion in the World, as the Prophet calls it, which hath not two parts in it, as Sin hath; as Civil Men cease to do any Man hurt, but they set not themselves to do good Duties. Many Men when they have their Consciences terrified, they have their Lusts deaded for a-while, but yet they have not their Hearts quickened to that which is good. But such must know that if Sin hath two parts, then Sanctification must have two parts also, alſo, both in your Natures and Lives; you muſt not only ceaſe to add Sin to Sin, but you muſt add Grace to Grace; 2 Pet. 1. 5. And beſides this, giving all diligence, add to your Faith, Vertue, &c. And you muſt alſo have a Juſtification that hath two parts: for if the Diſeaſe hath two parts, then ſo muſt the Remedy have alſo, or elſe it will do you no good: As if a Phyſician ſhould bring you a Potion, and you drink but half, it would do you no good. Now God hath appointed for a Remedy the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, not only his Death to take away Sin, but alſo you muſt have his active Righteouſneſs imputed for the cleanſing of your corrupt Nature; you muſt take down the whole Potion, and a whole Chriſt, not only whereby he takes away Sin, but alſo that we may be made righteous by him: and if your Sanctification and Juſtification here, hath not two parts; then in the World to come, Puniſhment will have two parts; as 2 Theſſ. 1. 7, 8, 9. ——When the Lord Jeſus ſhall be revealed from Heaven, with his mighty Angels, in flaming Fire, taking Vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting Deſtruction from the Preſence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power. There is a ſeparation from the Preſence of God, there is the privative part; you ſhall be kept in cloſe Priſon, and have not ſo much as a Drop of Water, or a Beam of Light; and you ſhall be poſitively puniſhed alſo by the Wrath of God for ever: therefore get the whole Remedy, be not content only with this, to abſtain from Evil, but alſo to have your Hearts carried on and inclined to God and his Ways. There are many Men have good Motions in them, but yet the Thorns grow up and choak them; there is Vivification without Mortification, and ſo they are in every thing partial.

CHAP.

Chap. 2.

CHAP. II.

This Poſitive Part of the Sinfulneſs of Nature is not the very Subſtance of the Soul, as Flacius Illyricus aſſerted; but the corrupt Luſts of it. Theſe Luſts or Deſires in Man, in his original Frame were right, wherein conſiſted their Rectitude. That we ſhould examine our ſelves, whether this be reſtored in us or not.

HAving ſhewn by Scripture and Reaſon, that Sin, in what Subject ſoever, hath theſe two Parts, Privative and Poſitive, diſtinctly to be conſidered. Now it remains I ſhould, in the ſecond Place, explain both what is to be underſtood by that which Divines call the Poſitive Part of Original Sin, which conſiſts in Luſts, and to ſhew wherein lies their Sinfulneſs, and to prove them to be Sins. For the thing it ſelf, what ſhould be meant by the Poſitive Part. Some expound it to be the very ſubſtantial Nature of Man, turn'd or transform'd ſubſtantially into the Image of the Devil; that as Chriſt is the ſubſtantial Image of his Father, ſo our Nature is the ſubſtantial Image of the Devil; miſalledging this Text to their Purpoſe, becauſe it is called the Old Man; ſo as original Sin is according to you, the Man himſelf. But this Expreſſion is moſt groſs and abſurd; for then it could not be ſaid of Chriſt, as it is Heb. 2. 15, 16. that he took not on him the Nature of Angels, but the Seed of Abraham, and in all things was made like us, Sin only excepted, as elſewhere it is expreſſed, Heb. 4. 15. For we have not an high Prieſt, which cannot be touched with the feeling of our Infirmities; but was in all Points tempted like as we are, yet without Sin. Chriſt had been ἐτερούσιος with us, not of the ſame Nature, if the Subſtance of our Nature was Sin, for he had none of that; and whereas Sin is called the Old Man, it notes out only that it is ſeated in the whole Man, and covers it as a Garment, and informs it. As that part of the Stocking that covers the Foot, is called the Foot; that which covers the Leg, is called the Leg; ſo this covering a Man, as a Garment to be put off, is called the Man.

Flacius Illyricus Demonſtrat. eſſent. Imag. Dei & Diaboli, p. 67. Idem de peccato originali.

But that which you ſee the Apoſtle doth expreſs this poſitive Corruption by, is ἐπιθυμίας τῆς ἀπάτης; therefore it is not the Subſtance of Man's Nature, but the Luſts of it; and thoſe alſo not taken ſimply in their Nature, but as having an ἀπάτη, or Aberration in them, do make up that Corruption of the Old Man, which makes the Poſitive Part of our Sinfulneſs.

And whereas ſome have thought this but a part of that Corruption, ſignifying only the Corruption of the Will and Affection, as the proper Seat of Luſt; and alſo fit rather to expreſs the actual Motions thereof, which are uſually termed Luſts, than the radical Inclination, and ſo think this to be too ſcant a Word to expreſs the Poſitive Part of Sin. I will therefore, firſt, ſhew that the Word Luſt is largely taken, and ſo to be underſtood here for the habitual Inclinations, and that of all the Faculties, Underſtanding alſo; and ſo therefore adequately to expreſs the poſitive Corruption of the whole Man.

1. I ſay, by Luſts here the Apoſtle would have us underſtand the habitual Inclinations and Diſpoſitions of the Mind; for though indeed ordinarily the Word he uſed is taken for thoſe firſt actual Movings and Deſires of the Heart towards ſome Object it is inclined unto, yet here the Apoſtle ſpeaks not of the actual Corruption of the Old Man only, ſo much as of habitual Corruption, which is the Root and Spring of all, as I ſhewed afore: and therefore by theſe Luſts here, in Regard of which the Old Man is ſaid to be thus habitually corrupted, muſt needs be underſtood the habitual Inclinations and Diſpoſitions of the Mind, which are the Cauſe of all the actual Stirrings and Luſtings of the Heart, Heart, and the Principle of them, as the Poiſe or Weights are of the Movings of the Wheels in a Clock. So that as all the Faculties of the Soul were made continually to move and ſtir, ſo there are ſeveral Inclinations annexed to each of them, which are as Weights continually to act them; and their Inclinations are here called Luſts, as well as the firſt Motions themſelves; and ſo the Word ἐπιθυμία in the general Acception of it, is that whereby θύμῳ φέρεται ἔπι, is carried, or is apt to be carried or moved towards ſomething; James 1. 14. But every Man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own Luſt, and enticed. There Luſt is made the principal of all the Motions of the Soul; he calls it, being drawn or moved by his own Luſt, as a Clock by its Weights; ſo that there is no Act in any Faculty, but ſome Inclination or Luſt is the Cauſe of it, for we can ſtir to nothing to which we have not an Inclination. And ſo of all Sins that bring forth Death, ver. 15. as alſo of all the Corruption that is in the World, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Luſt is the Womb and Root; ſo alſo all that is in the World is ſaid to be Luſt; 1 John 2. 16. For all that is in the World, the Luſt of the Fleſh, and the Luſt of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life, is not of the Father, but is of the World.

Book VIII

2. By Luſts here, he intends to ſignify and import all the poſitive Inclinations of what kind ſoever, which any Faculty hath in it, to move or ſtir to whatſoever Act it doth put forth; for here he ſpeaks of the whole Man, as I ſhewed before; and therefore Luſts, as here taken, are the Inclinations of every Faculty in Man; and therefore are not to be limited here to the inferiour Faculties, Affections and Will, but to the ſuperiour alſo; the Underſtanding, Memory, Judgment, which to be his meaning is evident, becauſe in ver. 23. ſpeaking of renewing, and ſo putting off theſe corrupt Luſts, he inſtances only in Spirit of the Mind, as implying that this is the Seat of theſe corrupt Luſts, as well as Will and Affections: And indeed the Scripture is clear for this, for Epheſ. 2. 3. where firſt ſpeaking in general of the corrupt Inclinations and Luſtings of Man's Nature, in thoſe Words, Having our Converſation in Luſts of the Fleſh, that is, corrupt Nature; he ſubdivides theſe Luſts in regard of their Subjects unto the Wills θελήματα of the Fleſh, that is, the inferiour part of the Soul, the Affections; and τῆς διανοιῶν, of the diſcourſing, reaſoning and thinking Power; for Reaſon tells us that the Underſtanding, Memory, &c. have their Inclinations or Luſts to move, rather to this than that Object, or againſt this towards that; rather to think of ſome things, and entertain Parly, and admit them to it, than other things; whence comes this, but that the Underſtanding hath its Inclinations or Luſts as well as Will, &c. So Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 2. 2. For I determined not to know any thing among you, ſave Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified. And if the Underſtanding hath Sins come from it, then alſo Luſts; for Jam. 1. 14, 15. Luſt is the Cauſe of all Sin: and ſo in Gal. 5. 17, &c. Hereſies, Sins of Underſtanding, are reckoned amongſt the Luſts of the Fleſh.

3. Becauſe all theſe poſitive Inclinations which are in the Soul to move, are in themſelves, barely conſidered, good, created by God, as well as the Faculties themſelves. For Power of Motion is a Creature, and therefore ſo, cannot be ſaid to be a part of Original Corruption. Therefore to ſhew you how they came to be a part of Original Corruption, and of the Old Man, he tells you, That now ſince the Fall there is an Aberration in all thoſe Inclinations; for he calls them Luſts, τῆ ἀπάτης, that is, that they incline and ſet us out of our way, viz. that right way they at firſt were ſet in by God; for Eccleſ. 7. 29. God made them right, put a Virtue into them to move us to him, as Iron doth to a Load-ſtone; now theſe Inclinations or Luſts have loſt their Virtue; and ſo though ſtill they move us, yet ἐκ τῆς πάτης, out of the way: and ſo Jam. 1. 14. a Man is ſaid to be ἐξελκόμενος, by his Luſt drawn from what is right, God and all Goodneſs; and by the Poiſe of theſe Inclinations thus wanting, viz. that firſt Virtue to guide them right, we are carried to all Evil; for Sin is but an Aberration, Jam. 5. 20. and in this regard they are ſaid to be corrupt, and ſo now theſe poſitive Inclinations having this Aberration in them, are ſaid to be a part of the Old Man.

Now

Chap. 2.

Now follows the chiefeſt thing: And indeed the difficulteſt we have to do in the opening of this Point, is truly to explain and repreſent unto us a Deſcription of thoſe Luſts of Man, as ſet wrong, as they fully thus expreſs all that poſitive Sinfulneſs that is in Man's Nature. Three things are to be done in it.

And 1*ſt*, becauſe ἐπιθυμία, Luſt in a general and common Acceptation, is uſed to expreſs the Deſires and Inclinations of Man's Mind in Innocency, and as now renewed by Grace, as well as the corrupt Deſires of the Old Man; for it is ſpoken of Chriſt, Luke 22. 15. And he ſaid unto them, With Deſire I have deſired to eat this Paſſover with you before I ſuffer; ἐπιθυμία ἐπεθύμησα. And Gal. 5. 17. the Spirit is ſaid to luſt againſt the Fleſh, and therefore for Diſtinction ſake, Col. 3. 5. it is called an inordinate Affection, and evil Concupiſcence, implying that there are good Luſts as well as evil; and ſo here it is ἐπιθυμίαι ἁπλότης, implying there are Luſts ſet right as well as wrong; therefore it is neceſſary to ſhew you the Nature of Luſts in common, as they are natural in a Man's Mind, conſidered as neither holy nor ſinful, and the Grounds of them.

And 2*dly*, Having underſtood the common Nature of them; becauſe, rectum eſt index obliqui: we will inquire what was the Rectitude of the Luſts of Man's Nature at firſt Creation, in the State of Innocency, and wherein it conſiſted, and what was the ground of it.

And then 3*dly*, the way will be clearly laid to ſhew the Crookedneſs, Obliquity and warring of theſe Luſts, ſpoken of here, when called ἡ ἀπλότης, and alſo the grounds of it.

1. Luſt in the common Acceptation, as the Genus of Good and Bad, regenerate and unregenerate Deſires, ſignify nothing but the Inclination, Power or Readineſs of the Mind, or any Faculty of it, to move to ſome good thing agreeable to it; ſo the Word θυμὸς ὅτι, a Mind to a thing, doth import. For the Mind of Man, and all the Faculties of it, being a moſt active thing, and ordained never to lie ſtill, but to be converſant about ſome thing or other, as the Heavens and Spheres thereof in the great World; ſo the Soul (whereof the Heavens are an Emblem) and the ſeveral Spheres thereof do always move; and the Mind more nimbly than they, courſing from one End of Heaven to another in an Inſtant. Now the Mind of Man being thus active, muſt needs be full of Inclinations or Proneneſs thus to act; for that which provokes it, and puts it on in any Motion to any Object, is a Proneneſs and an Inclination it hath to it: for as the Reaſon why a Stone moves downward, is becauſe it hath a Propenſeneſs and Inclination downward; ſo in like reaſon that any Faculty moves thus about any Object, is from an inward Proneneſs and Inclination to ſuch a Motion: for that which in Beaſts and dead things we call an Inclination or Inſtinct, in Man, being a reaſonable Creature, we call Luſt; ſo the Proneneſs that is in the Mind of Man to muſe and think upon Truth, as agreeing with it, is Luſt, ἐπιθυμία; the Inclination in the Will to chooſe what is good, is ἐπιθυμία. And the Ground of this Activeneſs, and conſequently of thoſe many Inclinations in Man's Mind, is becauſe Man's Mind was ordained to receive its Happineſs, Comfort and Well-being, from things out of it ſelf; Pſal. 4. 6. Who will ſhew us any Good? Which that therefore it might attain, and continually preſerve, it muſt act continually, and move towards ſome Object or other agreeable to it; for its Life and Happineſs was to come in by it: And conſequently it having all its Well-being from Conjunction with other things by Action or Motion, in it ſelf then it muſt needs be nothing but Luſts, Inclination and Longing after ſome thing agreeable to it, which might ſtill whet it on to Action; as the Stomach having its Nouriſhment and Suſtenance from what is agreeable to it ſelf; you ſee in it ſelf it is nothing but Appetite, and ſo are all Faculties, empty Beggars dependant; God being only αὐτάρκης, both Spring and Ciſtern of his own Happineſs: And ſo you have what Luſts are, and the Ground of them.

The Second Thing to be explained is, Wherein conſiſts that Rectitude or Rightneſs of theſe Inclinations of Mankind, wherein it was firſt created, Eccleſ.

Book VIII

7. 29. and whereof this ἀπάτη, Wickedneſs of the Luſts of corrupt Nature is the Privation, and that is explained by three Things.

1. God being the chiefeſt Good in whom true and right Happineſs is only found, and Man's Mind being created for God; then one part of that Rectitude of his Luſts or Inclinations was, That they were carried with the joint Stream of them, to him as their chiefeſt Good, and moſt agreeable to them. For he being indeed the chiefeſt Good, in all Equity and Right he only was worthy to have all Man's Deſires carried to him: therefore the Law, which is a Rule that Rectitude was a Conformity unto, ſays, Luke 10. 27. Love the Lord with all thy Heart: and Mark 12. 31. ἐξ ὅλης τῆς διανοίας, with all thy Mind, and ſo with the joint Stream of all; elſe they ſwerve from the Rule which is moſt right and equal. And this may be added; ſeeing that even the Law it ſelf, and the Inclinations we have, are from God, good reaſon they ſhould be carried to God: So the Apoſtle reaſons, 1 John 4. 7. why our Love ſhould be beſtowed on our Neighbour, becauſe Love is of God; and he commands it to be thus placed above all upon himſelf. Yet this is not all; but further alſo,

2. God being the chiefeſt Good, muſt needs alſo be the chiefeſt End; for, Bonum & finis convertuntur: And Man being a Creature, whoſe Inclinations were to be ſwayed by ſome End propounded, therefore to this Rectitude further there was required, that they ſhould be carried to him, not chiefly for the Happineſs that was to be had by him, but to glorify him as God; otherwiſe they had warped from that Rectitude which was requiſite in them: for the Law ſaith ſimply, Thou ſhalt love the Lord with all thy Heart, but thy Neighbour as thy ſelf: of loving God there is no Regula or Rule. And alſo had it been for Pleaſure as the chiefeſt End, it had reſpected a Creature above God, and that is unequal; for all things are by him, therefore for him; Col. 1. 16.——All things were created by him, and for him. Col. 3. 23. And whatſoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto Men.

3. Whereas he was inclined towards other things beſides God, yet his great and chief Inclination was to God: for as God had made him under himſelf, as therefore he was capable of the Goodneſs which was in God; ſo above all worldly Creatures elſe, he was Lord of all, God making all for him as a ſubordinate End, and therefore made him the laſt; and therefore he endued him with ſuch a Nature, as was ſo ſuited and diſpoſed, as it might receive and taſte of all the Goodneſs, which God, as the Stamps of his own Goodneſs, had diſperſed over all the World; yet ſtill ſo, as Man was principally to regard God as his chiefeſt Good, and alſo chiefeſt End. And therefore a third thing to be conſidered in that Rectitude, is a Conſequent of the other, That though his Inclinations carried him to other things; yet in Subordination to God, as his only chief Good and utmoſt End, who made both them and him, and both for himſelf, he was ſo to deſire other Things as they are ordained for him. Now they were ordained for him, but as to a ſubordinate End, and for him to receive but a ſubordinate Good from them: and therefore that firſt Rectitude muſt needs alſo lie in this, That he deſired them in Subordination to God, which Subordination lies in three things.

Firſt, That his Inclinations were carried to none of theſe with equal Proneneſs or Affection, as unto his God, nothing being ſo good as he, and therefore nothing ſo ſuitable to him; and therefore he inclined to nothing ſo much as unto God: And if his Rectitude lay in making God the chiefeſt Good, then he could deſire nothing in compariſon of him, as David, Pſal. 73. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but thee? and there is none upon Earth that I deſire beſides thee.

Secondly, His Inclinations were carried to nothing contrary to God, or unto any thing he would or did forbid, to no unlawful Pleaſure. Man in nothing thwarted his Law or Command, which follows upon the other, viz. That he made God his chiefeſt End; he inclined to nothing therefore that ſhould thwart God's Glory and Soveraignty over him.

And laſtly, All his Inclinations were carried to other things, only as Helps and Means to make him partake further of God, as all the Goodneſs in the Creatures Creatures were; that therein he might read and behold the Goodneſs of God the more clearly and fully. Chap. 2.

1. For Example; The ſpeculative Underſtanding of Adam in Innocency, (to inſtance in that which ſeems to have nothing of Luſt in it) was inclined to know God, and to think and muſe of him as the prime and chiefeſt, faireſt and only ſatisfying Object thereof.

2. And this not ſo much for the pleaſure of Contemplation, (which of all other is the ſweeteſt) but chiefly to exalt, admire and fall down before him, and adore him in every Thought of him, as his chiefeſt End.

3. And whereas he underſtood, and was to think and ſtudy and view every Creature, yet in ſubordination to him. As,

(1.) To think of nothing with that dearneſs, welcoming the Contemplation of none of them ſo, as of his God, as being the only fair Object that ever his Eye beheld; though as God, ſo he, did ſee that all things were exceeding good, Gen. 1. 31. yet as not worthy to be look'd on the ſame day with God himſelf.

(2.) Much leſs to entertain or hold interview in any liking, with the Thought that tended to his Diſhonour.

(3.) And though other things allowed him to exerciſe his Thoughts about them, yet to this End only, as Means to let him ſee and know, and knowing, to love his God the more, to ſee him in all things, as in every Creature then he did; and to admire ſtill his Wiſdom, Power, &c. in all.

The Ground of this Rectitude; What was it carried his Inclinations, and guided them thus right? It was, 1*ſt*. The Image of God ſtamp'd upon them, wherein at firſt he was created; Gen. 1. 27. Coloſſ. 3. 10. And have put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledg, after the Image of him that created him. This active Principle of Motion, his Inclination I mean, was touch'd with a Magnetical Virtue, or a Divine Nature, which bended thus unto God; as the Virtue of the Loadſtone doth the Needle unto the North: and ſo it is called a Divine Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Now this being the Image or Likeneſs to God, muſt needs carry all to him, as moſt agreeable to him; for, Simile convenit, appetit, gaudet ſimili: Every Like delights and rejoices in what is like to it ſelf.

2*dly*. It being the Image of God's Holineſs, as Coloſſ. 3. 10. And have put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledg, after the Image of him that created him. Epheſ. 4. 24. And that ye put on the new Man, which after God is created in Righteouſneſs, and true Holineſs. It being thus the Image of God in Holineſs, muſt needs carry all to him as the chiefeſt End, and for his Glory principally. For what is God's Holineſs but this, that he makes himſelf his End? And if this did not advance our Inclinations alſo to this End, it were not Holineſs, nor could be called his Image. And,

3*dly*. It muſt carry the Man to all other things in ſubordination to God: For if this drew him out to God as his chiefeſt Good, then it kept all in compaſs, from being drawn out to any thing elſe equally as to him; and then averted all from what was contrary to his Glory, which was Man's utmoſt End; and then turn'd him unto all things which ſubſerv'd this End, thereby to glorify him the more.

Uſe. Try then whether this Rectitude be begun again in any of your Hearts, yea or no? It being the ſame Image renewed in a regenerate Man in part, which was in Adam at firſt.

1. If it be renewed in you, then all your Inclinations and proneneſs of the Soul, will carry all to God as your chiefeſt Good, and to Fellowſhip with him as your chiefeſt Happineſs; as David ſays, Whom have I in Heaven but thee? and in Earth, in compariſon of thee? Pſal. 73. 25. No Thoughts will be ſo welcome as thoſe about God, no Hours paſs with more Contentment, than thoſe wherein you enjoy Fellowſhip with God: All your Soul will be knit to him, as David's was, Pſal. 86. 11. Teach me thy Way, O Lord, I will walk in thy Truth: unite my Heart to fear thy Name. But it will be out of joint, and ſo diſtempered; it will be out of the Centre of its Reſt, and ſo will gravitate, and be heavy and ſad, as all things are that have a proneneſs downward; or it will be as the Needle in a Compaſs, which though joggled wrong, yet would ſtill ſtand due North.

2. If this Rectitude of your Inclinations be reſtored, then all within will act for God as the chiefeſt End: As you will deſire to know nothing in compariſon of him, as St. Paul ſays, 1 Cor. 2. 3. Phil. 8. 9. ſo chiefly to ſet him up thereby; the want of which was the Gentiles Sin, Rom. 1. 21. and ſo it will elevate all your Inclinations, as ſuppoſing that he might have more Glory by your Separation from him, as the chiefeſt Good; and ſo you loſe that comfortable Fellowſhip with him: Yet this Rectitude would ſway all your Deſires to God's Glory, as Paul's were, Rom. 9. 3. For I could wiſh that my ſelf were accurſed from Chriſt, for my Brethren, my Kinſmen according to the Fleſh.

Laſtly; Though your Inclinations carry you to act other things whilſt in this Life, in Callings and Recreations, &c. yet ſo will Grace and the Power thereof ſway all within in ſome meaſure; as when any thing is propounded, though never ſo pleaſant, that is contrary unto God, it will ſtir up ſuch a kind of inclination or luſting againſt it, as you by Sin have to it; Gal. 5. 17. For the Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the Fleſh: and theſe are contrary the one to the other; ſo that ye cannot do the things that ye would. The Spirit luſteth againſt the Fleſh; Conſcience will not only forbid, and ſtir up Fear againſt it, but Grace will ſtir up Inclinations, and thoſe of Hatred and Diſlike againſt it: and though all be carried towards other things lawful, yet to this end, to advance God in all: In eating and drinking, and in all Inclinations, we ſhall look that way; for this end it will ſeaſon, guide, moderate, and elevate them all to glorify God in all, as Paul ſays, 1 Cor. 10. 31. Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatſoever ye do, do all to the Glory of God.

CHAP. III.

How our Inclinations and Deſires loſt that Rectitude, with which at firſt they were created. Wherein the Sinfulneſs of our Luſts conſiſts. That all our Inclinations and Deſires are not only averted from God, but turn'd to all Things beſides him, and carried out after them, as our chiefeſt Good. That we make our ſelves, and pleaſing our ſelves, our utmoſt End. That we delight in Things contrary to God, in Things that are evil. That we ſhould take notice of the Vileneſs and Baſeneſs of our Natures in all this.

IF you ask me, How our Inclinations, pointed or touch'd with this Rectitude, come to loſe it? this continued Similitude may help to convey it to your Minds, though not fully anſwering in all, as none do. God lanch'd Man into this World, as one of his Navy-Royal, though empty of it ſelf of Happineſs, yet bound to that right Haven where it was to be had, viz. God himſelf; furniſhed to that end with an Underſtanding, as a Factor to deal for God, even in ſeeking its own Good; with a Will as a Rudder, to be guided by the Underſtanding, and ſo to ſteer aright; with an active Principle to move it ſelf without either Wind or Tide, if ſteered aright, to that right Port. To direct all in which Voyage, God furniſh'd him alſo with a Needle and Compaſs, his Image or Divine Nature, informing all ſtill, looking God-ward, as a Mariner's Compaſs doth Northward; which had he ſteered by, he had certainly come to the true Haven, and there reſted for ever. But this Merchant apprehending a poſſibility of making a better Voyage at another Port, than this Needle directed and pointed him unto, he jogs and moves the Rudder of his Will wrong, by reaſon that though that Inclination at firſt had ſet it right, yet ſo as it was moveable, and free to turn the other way, and ſo he did. As a Puniſhment of which Error, that Needle loſt its Virtue, was deprived of God's Image, and that Rectitude wherein at firſt it was created, and now turns every way, as Man's Inclinations do, but only the right: and he now ſailing by this which now whirls every way, arrives ſometimes at the Port of Honour, ſometimes of Riches, as the Needle turns, and his Luſts, now ſet wrong, do guide him; and though Freedom of Will ſtill remains, ſo as he may turn the Rudder this way or that way, yet ſo as never more unto the right: And as ſuch a Needle and Compaſs may be called deceitful, or τὸ ἀπάτης; ſo alſo are Man's Inclinations now in the ſame ſenſe. But this is but a Similitude.

Now to ſhew you wherein this ἀπάτη, or Aberration lies; as I ſaid before, it is eaſily diſcovered, if you review but wherein the Rectitude lay: For conceive but the clean contrary to be now in them to that their firſt Rectitude, and you have the main Eſſentials wherein this Aberration lies; I ſay, the Eſſentials, becauſe the Aggravations of their Sinfulneſs, and Aberration is afterwards to be added in the ſecond Place. I will firſt, give you the entire Deſcription of the Irrectitude of them, with all the Severals of it ſet together: Which, ſecondly, I will take in pieces, and handle by themſelves.

Firſt; For the entire Deſcription of it, it lies in this, That now all the Inclinations and Luſtings of Man's Mind are not only taken off, and clean averted from God, as their chiefeſt Good and utmoſt End, but alſo are prone to be carried to any thing beſides God, as more agreeable to them, and as their chiefeſt Good, yea, and to all things moſt contrary unto God, meerly to pleaſe themſelves, as their utmoſt End: And which is more alſo, they are prone to carry and move all in Man's Mind againſt God, and all that tend to reduce and bring them right to God again. This is the Deſcription of it in the groſs. Let us view the Parts of it, which are three, expreſſed in three words, Averſa, Converſa, Adverſa: Averſion from God; Converſion to all things elſe, yea what is contrary to him; and Adverſeneſs to all that might turn us to God again; whereof one hangs and depends upon, and is a conſequent of the other, as you will ſee afterwards.

1*ſt*. All our Inclinations now are turned away from God; and in this regard they are called ungodly Luſts; Jude 18. How that they told you, there ſhall be Mockers in the laſt Time, who ſhould walk after their own ungodly Luſts; τῶν ἀσεβειῶν. So as now when any Inclination or Luſt ſtirs in us, it doth draw us away, as James ſays, chap. 1. 14. or as in the Original, ἐξελκόμενος, draw out of its natural Place appointed for it. Now the natural Center of our Souls (both when our greateſt Reſt and delight of Mind was in God, as in our chiefeſt Good, and the utmoſt End of all our Actions and Motions) was God, whom David calls his Reſt, Pſal. 116. 7. Return, O my Soul, unto thy Reſt; out of which now our Inclinations or Luſts draw and hale us, and cauſe us to depart from the living God, Heb. 3. 12. to draw back from him, Heb. 10. 38. And then follows the other, which is δελεαζόμενος, to carry us to ſome Bait of Pleaſure elſewhere, as in James 1. 14. And as the Rectitude of our Inclinations had two main parts to carry us to, and reſt in God as our chiefeſt Good, and chiefeſt End; ſo theſe Luſts turn us away from God in both regards.

1. From him as the chiefeſt Good to be delighted in; ſo that Place in Jer. 2. 13. is principally to be underſtood, forſaking God as the Fountain of living Waters, for he is ſo called, as being the freſh continual Spring of Happineſs and Comfort. So that now a Man cannot delight in him, nor in the Thoughts of him, or Communion with him, or any thing that reliſheth of his Holineſs, becauſe now he wants that Image of his that made us like him, and ſo gaudere ſimili, to rejoice in what is like: ſo that it may be ſaid of all Men, what is ſaid in Job 27. 10. Will he delight himſelf in the Almighty? Will he always call upon God?

2. They are turned from making him their chiefeſt End: ſo doth that Speech of Men corrupted, in Job argue, chap. 21. 15. What is the Almighty, that we ſhould ſerve him? and what Profit ſhould we have, if we pray unto him? Now to ſerve him, is to make him our End in all our Actions, and to do all for his Advantage and Profit: Now they acknowledg no ſuch Service due to him in Deed and in Truth, though in Words they may, Titus 1. 16. For they have made Profit, and Advantage to themſelves, their End; and therefore ſerve God but to that End: for it follows in Job 21. 15. If we pray, what Profit ſhall we have?

But this is indeed but the Privative Part of their Aberration, and I ſhewed it, when I handled the Ungodlineſs of our Natures: And we have now to do only with their Poſitive Aberration, which is the Conſequent of this, and which lies in two main Parts, whereof the one is the Conſequent of the other.

(1.) An inordinate Converſion to other things, joined

(2.) With a poſitive Averſeneſs, or Luſting againſt God; for that is to be added as an Appendix and Conſequent of the former. So that as the privative Part of our Sinfulneſs had two parts, as I ſhewed out of Rom. 5. 6. ſo alſo hath the poſitive Sinfulneſs of our Inclinations, in that we are called Sinners, ver. 8. and alſo Enemies, ver. 10. namely, as we have an Inclination to Sin, ſo againſt what is good; which is the ſecond thing we have now in hand.

Firſt, Then to ſpeak of the Aberration of our Luſts, not only as averted from God, but converted to other Things inordinately, which is the firſt Part Poſitive. That they were prone to be carried to any thing beſides God, as more agreeable to them, and a chief Good, yea, and to all things moſt contrary to God, meerly to pleaſe themſelves, as their utmoſt End. So that whereas, as I told you before, Man's Inclinations, whilſt right, are inclined to other good Things beſides God, created for Man's Comfort, yet ſo as,

Firſt,

Chap. 3.

Firſt, To nothing equally to him, making him ſtill the chiefeſt Good. Now many Inclinations are carried to all thoſe things, rather than to him, ſo as to make them their chiefeſt Good.

Secondly, Whereas before, though they were carried out to other things, they ſtill made God the utmoſt End in all; now they are carried out to all other things agreeable to them, to pleaſe themſelves, as their utmoſt End.

Thirdly, And whereas they were carried out whilſt right, only to good things, and in this ſubordinate manner alſo; now they are carried out thus inordinately to things ſimply evil, ſuch as God never created, but forbids and hates, viz. all manner of Sins whatever.

To demonſtrate theſe three Particulars to you.

Firſt; Man's Inclinations are carried to any thing but God, as his chiefeſt Good, and finds more Pleaſure in any thing than in God; why elſe is it ſaid, 2 Tim. 3. 2. For Men ſhall be Lovers of their own ſelves, Covetous, Boaſters, Proud, Blaſphemers, diſobedient to Parents, Unthankful, Unholy? that is, of Pleaſures which are to be had out of him, more than thoſe which are to be had in him, as the Oppoſition ſhews: why elſe is it ſaid, Eccleſ. 7. 29. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made Man unright; but they have ſought out many Inventions? i. e. Man having loſt that Rectitude which he was created in, he ſeeks out many Inventions: which carries this Meaning with it, that the Soul being put off of God to delight in, is now fain to ſeek, to go up and down all the World for Pleaſure, yea and ſo hard it is to come by, ſo unſatisfactory all vain things here below are; and therefore are Men ſo often put to Shifts, that they are fain to uſe their Wits (as Men that live a ſhirking Life, by their Wits) to find out new Inventions, to get Pleaſure from that which God never created, from Envy, Murder, &c. which he never ordained, nor came into his Heart to ordain; as he ſays of that Invention of ſacrificing their Children to Moloch, Jer. 7. 30. and content they are to ſeek, and go all the World over, as the Iſraelites, for Straw and Stubble, for Fuel for their Pleaſures; and will bring new ſtrange Inventions into the World, rather than go to God, to the Land of Canaan flowing with Milk and Honey. They are willing to dig for Water all the Earth over, as it is ſaid, Jer. 2. 13. to look for Comfort in the Creature, where they are not ſure to find it, rather than go to the Spring and Fountain, where it is to be had; So long as they can have but an Huſk, though empty of the Kernel of true Happineſs, yet, as the Prodigal, would have been contented with them, and not have gone home to his Father, where was Bread enough, Luke 15. 16. ſo alſo they will be ſatisfied with any thing, rather than go to God; all which ſhews they are carried to any thing, rather than to God. Neither is there any Comfort ſo poor, mean and contemptible, which a Man's Soul will not ſtoop to, and Inclinations prey upon it, rather than return to God: They will tranſgreſs for pieces of Bread, Ezek. 13. 19. they will leap like Dogs at a Cruſt, they will ſin even for old Shoes; Amos 2. 6. Thus ſaith the Lord, For three Tranſgreſſions of Iſrael, and for four, I will not turn away the Puniſhment thereof: becauſe they ſold the Righteous for Silver, and the Poor for a Pair of Shoes: that is, they will do wickedly for trifling Pleaſures, things of no worth in Compariſon, ſo the Scripture ſpeaks of them; which ſhews, that any thing, though never ſo mean, they prefer before God, and Happineſs in him.

And, which is to be added, as an Appendix of the Irrectitude to diſcover it, They are carried to theſe things, as their chiefeſt Good: So the rich Man is brought in, ſaying to his Soul, Go, take thine Eaſe in thy Goods laid up for many Years; as if he ſhould have ſaid, Here is all the Comfort thou art like to injoy, and as many Years as theſe laſt, thou ſhalt do well enough. So alſo are the Epicures, 1 Cor. 15. 32. Eat and drink, for to morrow we ſhall die; as if they had reaſoned thus, Take it out (whilſt you may) as much as you can, for you are not like to ſtay long by it; therefore theſe worldly Enjoyments are called wicked Mens Dainties, Pſal. 141. 4. as being the ſweeteſt bit they deſire:

their Treaſure, Matth. 6. 19. as the choiceſt of things they care for: their God, Phil. 3. 19. which they ſet up in that room (which God once had in them) to be the Fountain of their Happineſs; and therefore they are called, as Idolaters, Col. 3. 5. Eph. 5. 5. ſo Adulterers, James 4. 4. as placing that Affection on the World, and things of it, that they ſhould fix upon God as their Husband chiefly to be delighted in; and they uſe that that is their chiefeſt Good, which they ought to uſe as a Servant only; 1 Cor 7. 30, 31. And they that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they poſſeſſed not; and they that uſe this World, as not abuſing it: for the Faſhion of this World paſſeth away. This is the firſt Part of that Irrectitude in our Luſts, which is, as Auguſtin ſays, Utendis velle frui; to ſeek to enjoy chief Happineſs in thoſe things we ſhould but uſe.

Auguſt. de Trinit. lib. 10. c. 10.

The ſecond thing wherein the inordinate Aberration of our Luſts, in regard of their converſion to other things beſides God, lies, is, That as they are carried thus to them, as their chiefeſt Good, ſo alſo merely for Pleaſure or Self-love ſake, as the utmoſt end; which is an Aberration from that Mark they were firſt aimed at, and ordained to carry their Actions to: For whereas God the Author of all, had made the Soul for Action, and ordained all its Actions to his Glory, as their End and Pleaſure (which accompanies their Motions, when converſant about things agreeable to them) only as the Oil to the Wheel, to further Action, to make it move the more nimbly and chearfully about, without Retardation and Trouble; and as Sauce to ſtir up Appetite, and whet on a little our Inclinations: So as Pleaſure was but a ſubordinate thing to our Actions and Inclinations, as they alſo to God's Glory: Now for Pleaſure to be made the ultimate End of all, what a Confuſion is this? ſuch an Error as Solomon ſaw in States, Eccleſ. 10. 6, 7. to exalt the Servant to be above his Maſter. Now that our Luſts are thus inordinate, in regard of their End, alſo appears by that in James 4. 3. Ye ask, and receive not, becauſe ye ask amiſs, that ye may conſume it upon your Luſts. He challengeth them of an Irrectitude in their Luſts, not only in making the things of the World, in the Place of a Husband, or the chief Good, ver. 4. but in the end of ſeeking them; Ye ſeek amiſs, that is, to a wrong End, to ſpend it on your Pleaſures; ſo the Word in the Original, ἐν τῇ ἡδοναῖς; and ſo it is in the Margent varied, as noting out the final cauſe, as Beza notes, for εἰς τας ἡδονὰς; and Tit. 3. 3. they are ſaid to ſerve Luſts and Pleaſures, Pleaſure being the Buſineſs the Luſt aims at, and uſeth Actions as the Bawd to bring them together; and therefore the great Aberration which God at the latter Days ſhall puniſh, (James 5. 3, 5. compared) is, that they had lived in Pleaſure, aimed at nothing elſe in their Lives but to pleaſe themſelves, and to nouriſh their own Hearts, and feed them fat; and therefore the Rule God goes by in Puniſhing, is this, So much Pleaſure, ſo much Torment, Rev. 18. 7. How much ſhe hath glorified her ſelf, and lived deliciouſly, ſo much Torment and Sorrow give her: for ſhe ſaith in her Heart, I ſit a Queen, and am no Widow, and ſhall ſee no Sorrow. And why doth God go by this Rule, but becauſe Pleaſure is the utmoſt End which cauſed Men in all Actions to err? Now when, I ſay, Pleaſure is made their utmoſt End, it is all one as if I ſhould ſay, They make themſelves their utmoſt End; that is, all Man's Inclinations carry him to move, or to act nothing which doth not pleaſe himſelf, advance, and profit himſelf ſome way; yea, and otherwiſe he hath no Inclination to ſtir one jot, to bring any Glory to God, or to do any Man the greateſt Good in the World, otherwiſe than it ſome way reflects on himſelf; and for to advance himſelf otherwiſe, he cares not if all the World, God and Chriſt, Heaven and Earth ſhould periſh, as Judas did not, and the Devil doth not, whoſe Luſts we have in us, John 8. 44. I ſay, it is Self-love, and pleaſing our ſelves is that which guides all; and indeed theſe two are all one. And 2 Tim. 3. 2. reckoning up a Bead-roll of Evils ſhould abound in Mens Lives in the laſt Days, that which he brings in as the Captain of this Army, in the Beginning or Fore-front, that rules them all, and they ſtir not without his Command, is Self-love, Men ſhall be Lovers of themſelves; and that which he brings in as the Captain's Lieutenant at the End, is the loving of Pleaſures;

ſo as you ſee they are all one, and have the ſame Rule in the Heart; and ſo predominant ſhall that end be in them to pleaſe themſelves, that they ſhall break all Bands of Friendſhip, Society, Nature, Grace, and do any Miſchief but to pleaſe themſelves. As now, whereas Men are tied in deareſt Bonds to Parents, and to pleaſe them all they may, to whom they owe their Lives, yet to pleaſe themſelves they care not to become diſobedient to them, ver. 2. And whereas Nature ties us ſtrongly to our Children to love them, and do them all the Good we can, if ſo that at any time their Good reflects not on our ſelves ſome way, it makes us without natural Affection, ver. 3. If we have bound our ſelves never ſo ſtrongly in Covenant to others, yet if we ſhall receive ſuch a Damage by it, as is not help'd ſome other way in Credit, &c. we prove Truce-breakers: if tied in Civil Society, and common Bond to Superiours, for good of the whole, we prove Traitors when it is for our Advantage; ſo as no Right or Ties of Obligation can hold us; and if we deal thus with Men, we care not to blaſpheme God, ver. 2. and live ungodly, and deſpiſe thoſe that are good, &c. for every Man ſeeks his own things, Phil. 2. 21. And as true Love of God ſeeks not its own, 1 Cor. 13. 5. ſo Self-love only their own; Iſa. 56. 11, 12. They all look to their own way, every one to his Gain. And with this Principle are our Luſts now wholly guided and inſpired, being indeed but Branches of that great Vena cava, and therefore are called our own ungodly Luſts, Jude 18. as making God no longer, but our ſelves our chief End; and therefore on the other ſide too, denying of our ſelves, and mortifying our Luſts, is the ſame thing.

Now then the third thing, wherein the Aberration of our Luſts are turned to other things, lies in this, That they are carried out thus inordinately, even to take Pleaſure in things contrary unto God, which are ſimply evil, whereas when right, they were carried out only to good things of this Life, ſtill in Subordination; but now there is an Inclination not to make Riches, Honours, &c. our chiefeſt Good, but that which is truly and ſimply Wickedneſs; 1 Cor. 10. 6. Luſting after evil things: 2 Theſſ. 2. 12. Pleaſure in Unrighteouſneſs, as Envy, Lying, Murder, Blaſphemy, &c. So you read, James 4. that Mens Luſts carry them out, not only to good things of the World, as chiefeſt Good, ver. 2, 3, 4. but luſteth, ver. 5. after Envy, &c. that is, to repine at the Good of another, as Chriſt deſcribes it, Matth. 20. 15. our Eye being evil, becauſe God is good to another: So Rachel envied Leah, ſhe being barren, Gen. 30. 3. ſo that ſhe would have her Husband defile his Maid, that Leah might not have all the Children, though ſhe ſtill ſhould have none. And as Men repine at the Good of another, ſo rejoice at the Hurt alſo: ſo Edom, Obad. 12. rejoiced over Jeruſalem in the Day of their Deſtruction: and Ezek. 25. 6. ſtamped with the Feet, clapped the Hands, ſhews all Signs of Joy, and rejoiced in Soul, and manifeſted all Deſpite againſt the Land of Iſrael. And a Man comforts himſelf in revenging himſelf upon another in the greateſt Diſcomforts: ſo Eſau, Gen. 27. 42. when diſconſolate for the Loſs of his Birth-right, yet comforted himſelf that he would be revenged on Jacob, yea, and bears this long in Mind; as Edom, Ezek. 25. 15. to deſtroy it for old or perpetual Hatred; yea, and this alſo, when there is no real Cauſe given: Pſal. 35. 19. Let not mine Enemies wrongfully rejoice over me, that hate me without a Cauſe, and would wink with their Eyes if any Evil befel him. In a Word, the Devil's Luſts, as called ſo, John 8. 44. Murder, Malice to God and Men, and that when they do them no hurt, are in us; His Luſts ye will do; they are called his Luſts, becauſe he only takes Pleaſure in ſuch things; and having no Creatures to delight in as we, and having before had nothing but God, now turned from God, he hath nothing but ſimply Miſchief to delight in, which alſo Men delight in: Pſal. 52. 1. Why boaſteſt thou thy ſelf in Miſchief, O mighty Man? the Goodneſs of God endureth continually. Wanting Charity, 1 Cor. 13. 6. and true Love to God, they do rejoice in Iniquity, and make it a Sport to do Miſchief, Prov. 10. 23. It is a Sport to a Fool to do Miſchief: but a Man of Underſtanding hath Wiſdom. They love Swearing and Lying more than true and holy Speeches; Pſal. 52. 3, 4. O deceitful Tongue, that loveſt Evil more than Good, and Lying rather than to ſpeak Righteouſneſs; and love all devouring Words, ver. 4. Yea, and which is the higheſt that can be, Men have Diſpoſitions in them, would carry them to delight in Sin as Sin, becauſe it offends God, not only becauſe ſome Pleaſure or other cannot be had but by Sinning, but ſub hac notione, under this Notion, becauſe it provokes and angers the Lord. So they that ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, they deſpitefully ſin, and caſt a Contumely on the Spirit; Heb. 10. 29. Of how much ſorer Puniſhment, ſuppoſe ye, ſhall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the Blood of the Covenant wherewith he was ſanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done Deſpite unto the Spirit of Grace? This is called Blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt, Matth. 12. 31, 32. Wherefore I ſay unto you, all manner of Sin and Blaſphemy ſhall be forgiven unto Men: but the Blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt ſhall not be forgiven unto Men. And whoſoever ſpeaketh a Word againſt the Son of Man, it ſhall be forgiven him: but whoſoever ſpeaketh againſt the Holy Ghoſt, it ſhall not be forgiven him, neither in this World, neither in the World to come. And it is an endeavouring to put Chriſt to open Shame; as in Heb. 6. 6. If they ſhall fall away, to renew them again unto Repentance; ſeeing they crucify to themſelves the Son of God afreſh, and put him to an open Shame. Now to this Sin we are all prone, elſe David would not have prayed to be kept from it, as he ſeems to do, Pſal. 19. 13. Keep me from preſumptuous Sins, ſo ſhall I be free from the great Offence, in the ſingular number, as noting out that Sin which is above the Sin of Preſumption, to which yet that is a Step.

Uſe. Take notice of the Vileneſs and Baſeneſs of our Natures, as thus guided by Luſts, that we may become vile in our own Eyes, and truly out of Conceit with our ſelves. We judg baſely of thoſe Creatures, that feed and delight only in Excrements and Filth; of a Swine, becauſe it will rather eat Dung than any Food elſe; of a Dog, becauſe he licks up his Vomit; of a Serpent, becauſe it eats the Duſt of the Earth. Men that lived upon Juniper Roots, Job 30. 6. he calls baſe and vile Men, ver. 8. ſo when we may go to the Spring and Fountain of living Waters, to drink rather Puddle-Water, to eat Dogs Meat, as the Apoſtle calls all things in Compariſon of God, Phil. 3. 8. σκύβαλα, to eat Duſt, as Earth-Worms and covetous Men do, and Huſks, rather than go to God, with whom there are Rivers of Pleaſure, and Bread enough; it argues a baſe Nature. So for one that hath a fair Husband, to run away with every Varlet, and proſtitute her Body to all Comers rather, ſhews her a baſe Quean. But eſpecially adding to this the Self-love that is in us, that we ſhould admire and dote upon, and value our curſed ſelves above God, Chriſt, and all the World beſides: that we who were the other day mere nothing, and but lately admitted into the World, deſerving to be kick'd out and expelled the firſt day, ſhould yet begin to prog only for our ſelves the firſt hour; regard none in it but our ſelves, take upon us, as if all the World that had been made ſo long before we were, and ſhall ſtand when we are gone, were only made for us; and like Ants or Caterpillars in an Orchard, caring not to ſpoil all the Fruits, to lay up for and maintain a little Mite of Being, which is ſcarce crept into the World. And whereas we were admitted into the World, to be profitable to God and Men, to uſe all our Wiſdom, &c. for this End, We have, and do imploy it only to be profitable to our ſelves, as Job 22. 2. to ſeek our own things, Phil. 2. 4. make our ſelves the Center of all Actions; that whereas we ſhould take but the ſet Fee allowed us by God, and be content with our Wages, and do Service freely, and ſtill think 'tis more than our Work; for us not to be willing to ſtir or do a jot of Service for God or any other Creature, but we muſt have a Feeling, an underhand Bribe out of it; not grind a whit unleſs we may have Toll; and being appointed but publick Stewards in all the Talents we injoy, which in 1 John 3. 17. are therecalled this World's Good, not ours; for us to imploy it all only for our own Advantage, and are ſorry that any Water ſhould go by our Mills, that any ſhould ſhare in the Honours or Pleaſures of the World, otherwiſe than they might hold of us, or as ſome way they may prop up our Eſtates and Credits, or be Shadows to add Luſtre to us; yea ſo, as not to care to pull down others Credits and Eſtates, to build up our own a little; hence all the

the Defaming and Oppreſſion, and detracting from others that are in the World, (as Nero, they ſay, did burn all Rome to make himſelf a large Palace, and that he might have the Credit of Building it up again; and he that ſet Diana's Temple on Fire, to get himſelf a Name) not caring what Inconvenience we put others to, to advantage our ſelves never ſo little; not to care though we ſet another's Houſe on Fire, to roaſt but our own Eggs; or ſo we may have ſafe and ſure, and eaſy ſtanding to ſee, and to be ſeen in the World (like Men in a Croud) we care not how ſore we lean upon the Shoulders of, and oppreſs thoſe that are under us, and throw down thoſe that over-top us, not willing to put our ſelves to any Inconvenience for another's Good; if any publick Good be to be done, or any publick Evil hindred, which will endamage our particular, contrary to Caiaphas's Principle, we are too apt to ſay in our Hearts, Better a whole People periſh, than that I ſhould be prejudiced; yea, if any Good be to be done, wherein we have not an Hand, or wherein we are not the chief, how ſorry are we, and ready to hinder it, and ſpeak againſt it, and will not draw unleſs we be the fore-Horſe, and have all the Feathers and the Trappings: Yea, as Judas cared not to hazard the Salvation of all the World, in the Death of Chriſt, (which as I think, he then knew not to be the means of ſaving them) ſo he might gain but thirty Pieces; ſo alſo if we are poor, we wiſh all the World were ſo; if we be deſpiſed, yea, if we periſh, as one ſaid on his Death-bed, let Wife, Children, and all the World periſh alſo. Theſe and many more are the natural Diſpoſitions of Self-love in us, which are moſt baſe and accurſed; and he that ſees not his Inclinations towards theſe, it is becauſe he knows not his Heart, but Self-love hath blinded his Eyes, and made him think too highly of himſelf; as Hazael ſaid to the Prophet, Am I a Dog that I ſhould do this, 2 Kings 8. 13. No, my Brethren, Grace only makes you profitable Men, content to ſpend and to be ſpent, to let go your own Sweetneſs and Fatneſs for the Good of others. Charity ſeeks not her own, rejoiceth not in Evil, is not envious, 1 Cor. 13. 4, 5, 6. Charity ſuffereth long, and is kind; Charity envieth not; Charity vaunteth not it ſelf, is not puffed up, doth not behave it ſelf unſeemly, ſeeketh not her own, is not eaſily provoked, thinketh no Evil, rejoiceth not in Iniquity, but rejoiceth in the Truth. Therefore learn to eſteem Grace and good Men highly, and regard corrupt Nature and wicked Men as vile and baſe, and reſt not till you have a Principle in you to deny your ſelves, &c.

Chap. 3.

The third eſſential part, which goes to make up the ἀπάτη of Luſt, is Averſeneſs, Enmity, Oppoſition againſt God, and what might reduce us to Communion with him again. We are not only thus turned to the Creature, and what is contrary to God, but it is accompanied with an Enmity to God: Job 21. 12, 13, 14. They take the Timbrel and Harp, and rejoice at the Sound of the Organ. They ſpend their Days in Wealth, and in a Moment go down to the Grave. Therefore they ſay unto God, Depart from us; for we deſire not the knowledg of thy Ways. They do not only ſpend their Days in Wealth, delight in Timbrel and Harp, and rejoice at the Sound of the Organ; but ver. 14. they ſay to God, Depart from us. If God at any time preſent and offer himſelf, and the Communion of himſelf to them, they put him away, they ſay, Depart, as one they care not for, as one they care not to have to do withal; nay, cannot indure the Knowledg of him; We deſire not the Knowledg or Sight of him, and that not of him only, but alſo not of his ways, or of any thing that leads to him. And ſo Rom. 1. 28. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledg, God gave them over to a reprobate Mind, to do thoſe things which are not convenient. They liked not, or thought it not good for them, ὐκ ἐδοκί μασαν, viſum non fuit iis; they did not judg it good for them, to return and receive God in their Knowledg. And if this be thought not to argue Averſeneſs and Oppoſition to him, thus not to indure the Sight of him, ver. 30. it is expreſly added, ver. 30. they hated God: there is not only an Eſtrangement from God, ἀπηλλοτριώμενοι, Col. 1. 21. but alſo Enemies, and that not by outward Unkindneſs, but in Minds; and not to God only, but to all Righteouſneſs, Acts 13. 10. and not Enemies only, but Enmity, Rom. 8. 7. the Wiſdom of the Fleſh is Enmity againſt God and his Laws; and therefore in a Man's own Heart they fight together, Gal. 5. 17. The Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, for they are contrary; ſo as all the Luſts of the Fleſh are contrary againſt the Spirit, as they are called, Rom. 7. 23. But I ſee another Law in my Members, warring againſt the Law of my Mind, and bringing me into Captivity to the Law of Sin, which is in my Members: i. e. a Law, ἀντιστρατευόμενον, fighting againſt; neither is this Enmity in our Nature only, but our Nature and all Inclinations are ſaid to be in it, Acts 8. 23. Thou art in the Gall of Bitterneſs, that is, a bitter Spirit againſt God and Goodneſs. As a Man is ſaid to be in Love with that which he loves moſt, and is wholly taken up with; ſo in the Gall of Bitterneſs, to that which he hates moſt of all things elſe.

CHAP. IV.

What are the Aggravations of our ſinful Luſts: They make us fit and ready for any Sin; they are eager, greedy and inſatiate.

HAving explain'd the eſſential Parts of this Aberration of our Inclinations and Deſires; it remains that I ſhew the Aggravations of Inordinacy in theſe ſeveral Parts, which are neceſſarily to be added to them, to make the ἁμαρτία, and Aberration more fully appear. The Aggravations of their Sinfulneſs, in regard of the firſt Part, Averſion from God, being treated of before, when I diſcover'd that Contrariety and Enmity which is in our Natures to God; I will omit it here, and come to thoſe which are proper to the Second, viz. Converſion to other things, and what is evil; which indeed is the firſt of the poſitive Part of our Sinfulneſs by Nature.

Now the Aggravation of the Inordinacy of our Inclinations, in regard of their converſion to what is evil, is expreſſed in theſe Degrees of it.

Firſt; The firſt and loweſt, and indeed leaſt poſitive Evil that Luſt adds to our Nature, is, That in all the Faculties and Powers of the Soul and Body, there is a Fitneſs to be inſtrumental, and employed about what is evil, rather than what is good; and therefore are they called Members of the Body of Sin, Coloſſ. 3. 5. Mortify therefore your Members which are upon the Earth, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, &c. And they are alſo called Weapons or Inſtruments of Unrighteouſneſs to obey Luſts, Rom. 6. 12, 13. Let not Sin therefore reign in your mortal Body, that ye ſhould obey it in the Luſts thereof: neither yield ye your Members as Inſtruments of Unrighteouſneſs unto Sin. Now that which differenceth one Member from another, is a Fitneſs or Diſpoſition to be employed about ſomething that another is not; as the Eye, that it is a fit Organ for the Soul to ſee with; the Hand, which is ὄργανον ὀργάνων, to apprehend and lay hold with: which ſeveral Fitneſs ariſeth from a ſeveral Faſhion that is in them. And ſo alſo one Weapon differs from another Weapon or Inſtrument, by reaſon it hath ſome peculiar Fitneſs to be uſed in ſome Employment, becauſe of the Faſhion given it; which another wanting, is unfit for ſuch an uſe; as a Sword to fight with, a Shield to defend with. And therefore Ariſtotle ſaid, that an Inſtrument is ἓν πρὸς ἕν, it hath a peculiar Fitneſs for ſome one thing. Now then when the Apoſtle calls the Faculties of Soul and Body, Members of the Body of Sin, and Weapons of Unrighteouſneſs, it implies, that there is a peculiar Fitneſs in them to be uſed in any unrighteous Practice; and that if they be but drawn out and wielded, they are fit Inſtruments for Sin, and for nothing elſe; that as Grace moulds and caſts our Souls and Faculties into ſuch a Faſhion, that all are fit Weapons for Righteouſneſs, Sin doth ſo mould them, that they are fit Inſtruments only for what is evil: Rom. 6. 17. But God be thanked, that ye were the Servants of Sin; but ye have obeyed from the Heart that form of Doctrine which was delivered you. He calls it τύπος διδαχῆς, εἰς ὃν παρεδόθητε, into which ye were delivered, so in the Original, and in the Margent: It was as a Mould they were cast into, as Vessels are, and so received such a Fashion, as they were fit Instruments for Righteousness, ver. 13. and 2 Tim. 2, 21. made Vessels meet for the Master's Use, and prepared for every good Work. So now our Nature having been cast in old Adam's Mould into his Image, 1 Cor. 15. 49. we are shaped and formed in Iniquity, as our Translation reads that in Psal. 51. 5. and so made fit for all Iniquity, and reprobate, and unfit for every good Work. That as a Spade hath a fitness in it to dig in the Earth, but is unfit to cut Meat with, or the like honourable Imployment; so are all our Inclinations and Dispositions earthly Members, Colass. 3. 5. as being fit to be used in earthly and sinful Imployments, but unfit for heavenly. As therefore David compares his Tongue to the Pen of a Ready Writer, in regard of fitness and preparedness to endite holy and good things, Psal. 45. 1. to run nimbly and fairly as a well-made Pen; so a wicked Man's Tongue he compares (for the fitness of it for Mischief, to wound others in their good Name) to a sharp and keen Razor; Psal. 52. 2. Thy Tongue deviseth Mischiefs; like a sharp Razor, working deceitfully. So he speaks of Doeg's Tongue, in regard of the fitness of it to abuse Men, by detracting from, and cutting off what is an Ornament to a Man, as Hair is, Ezek. 16. 7. Now that which is said of the Tongue, is true of the rest of the Members. Chap. 4.

Doctrine

Secondly; The second Degree of the Hainousness of these Lusts, is, That in them all there is an active readiness to what is evil; which is a farther Degree, and more than simply an instrumental Fitness to be used and acted: for superadded to this there is a lively Principle, a quick-silver Activeness, and Readiness to what is evil. Acts 13. 10. And said, O full of all Subtilty and all Mischief, thou Child of the Devil, thou Enemy of all Righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right Ways of the Lord? It is said of Elimas, that he was full of all Readiness to work Evil; so it is expressly in the Original, ῥᾳδιουργίας; and in the forenamed Place, Rom. 6. 18. they are not only called Weapons of Unrighteousness, but Servants also, ready to act what is injoined them upon all occasions, that always stand readily appointed to stir upon the least Watch-word given. Yea, and S. Paul says, Rom. 7. 18. For I know that in me (that is, in my Flesh) dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good, I find not. Evil was present with him, even at his Elbow, still offering its Service: So evil our Inclinations are, still pushing themselves forward, when any Evil is to be done, like unto that Spirit, 1 Kings 22. 21. when Ahab was to be tempted, one comes and says, I will perswade him. And so Rom. 3. 15. our Feet are said to be swift to shed Blood, ready to run, and that swiftly too, upon Oppression's Errand, or Murder's Errand; but when any Good is to be done, we are slow of Heart, Luke 24. 25. and need Goads to prick us on to it. When we are exhorted to any Good, our Ears are dull of hearing; Heb. 5. 11. Of whom we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing. Matth. 13. 15. For this People's Heart is waxed gross, and their Ears are dull of hearing, &c. The word is νώθροι, i. e. which are heavy, and so they are opposed to such as are swift of hearing, James 1. 19.

Thirdly; A third Aggravation of their Aberration, is, That there is in them not only an active Readiness to Sin, but a powerful prevailing Injunction to do a wicked Action. Lusts do not only make all the Faculties fit and ready, but with power and authority carry a Man on to Sin: therefore Sin is compared to a Tyrant reigning in us, whereof the Laws, in which the Power of this Tyrant lies, he calls Lusts, Rom. 6. 12. Let not Sin therefore reign in your mortal Body, that ye should obey it in the Lusts thereof. Let it not reign; if you ask by what? he tells you, that you obey it in the Lusts thereof, which therefore in Rom. 7. 23. are called expressly a Law of the Members carrying captive unto Sin. For what is more powerful than a longing Lust, coming with a strong Mandamus into the Heart, and with a Spring-Tide that bears all before it? And therefore, 2 Pet. 2. 14. they are said to have Eyes full of Adultery, it coming in like a full Sea filling all the Banks, flowing into the Eyes, and overflowing there; ſo as the Man cannot ceaſe from Sin: Neither is it compared to a ſtrong Tide only, but to a ſtrong Wind alſo; wicked Men are as Clouds carried about with a Whirlwind, ver. 17. and as empty Clouds with a Tempeſt, Jude 12. which are carried by reaſon of their Lightneſs irreſiſtibly.

Fourthly; A fourth Degree of their Inordinacy, is an untainted Greedineſs of ſinning, which is in our Luſts alſo: Epheſ. 4. 19. Who being paſt feeling, have given themſelves unto Laſciviouſneſs, to work all Uncleanneſs with greedineſs. They give themſelves to work Uncleanneſs, all Uncleanneſs, (that is, Sin in general) with a πλεονεξία, as deſiring to have their fill, to be ſtuffed with it, as the word πλεονέχειν implies, come with full Mouth to every Act of ſinning, as a thirſty Man doth to drink; ſo is the Compariſon, Deut. 29. 19. deſiring to ſwallow down all the Pleaſure that is to be had in a Sin at one gulp, if it be poſſible. And therefore it is alſo ſaid of wicked Men, Jude 11. that they go greedily after the Wages of Balaam, they ἐξεχύθησαν, that is, effundunt corda, they pour out all, which is very emphatical. And whereas the Deſires of Grace, are pure and peaceable, James 3. 18. Luſts do war in our Members, chap. 4. 1. From whence come Wars and fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your Luſts, that war in your Members? The Soul is up in Arms for any thing it deſires; when it would have any thing, it muſters up all its Forces, carries out an Army to conquer the Helena, or Golden Fleece of our Deſires.

This appears:

1. In that they carry us clean againſt Reaſon. Rachel's Deſire of Children was ſo violent, and ſo tranſported her, as againſt all Senſe ſhe comes to her Husband, and ſays paſſionately, Give me Children, or elſe I die, Gen. 30. 1. whenas poor Man, (as he truly anſwered her) it was not in his power; Am I in God's ſtead? ver. 2. And ſo 2 Tim. 6. 9. he that will be rich, is led into many fooliſh Luſts, to do things which even Reaſon is againſt. So how fooliſhly was Herod tranſported to promiſe a Woman, meerly for a Dance, to give her the half of his Kingdom? Mark 6. 9.

2. Their Greedineſs appears, that if one Luſt be not ſatisfied, nothing elſe can pleaſe us as long as that Fit laſts. Rachel when ſhe could not have her longing, ſhe would in pet die in all haſte; Give me Children, or elſe I die: though ſhe had an Husband was worth ten Children to her. And ſo was it with Haman, Eſther 5. 11, 12, 13. all the Honour and Riches which he poſſeſs'd, would not content him, ſo long as he was not revenged on a poor Porter that would not riſe to him. So Ahab, though a King, had his Stomach took away to all other Delights, becauſe that he wanted one bit, Naboth's Vineyard, which he coveted, 1 Kings 21. 4.

3. It appears in the Unſeaſonableneſs of them: Men cannot ſtay, but muſt have them ſatisfied immediately. Hence Men make haſte to be rich, Prov. 28. 22. ſo greedy are they that they would preſently be at the Journey's End of their Deſires. And therefore the Intemperancy of Princes is noted out, Eccleſ. 10. 16, 17. that they drink not in Seaſon, but in the Morning; ſo impatient and unſeaſonable are their Deſires, like Eagles that haſte to the Prey, as Hab. 1. 8. compares them, it being a greedy Bird. Whereas, the Deſires of Grace, are ſeaſonable and patient: He that believes, makes not haſte. And in Pſal. 1. 3. a godly Man is compared to a Tree which brings forth Fruit in Seaſon.

4. It appears, in that the greater the Difficulty is to attain to them, the more eager we are; ſo as the Difficulty whets our Deſires for it, ſets a greater Price upon the Thing deſired. Ammon fell ſick, and thought it hard to do any thing to his Siſter, 2 Sam. 13. 2. and this is noted to ſhew how his Deſire was the more whetted, by how much he thought it harder to compaſs, though with ſome hope. Let a thing ſeem to be conceal'd from us, and we long the more earneſtly to know it; as the pulling away of the Bait, makes Fiſh greedier.

5. It appears, in that nothing can tame a Luſt: Therefore, James 3. 7, 8. the Tongue is called an unruly Evil which none can tame, and ſo more fierce than any Beaſt, for there is no Beaſt but hath been tamed by the Art of Man, but no Reaſon can tame this. Solomon ſpeaking of the Vanity of all humane Knowledg, Eccleſ. 1. 15. brings this in for one, that it cannot rectify the Crookedneſs of a Man's Deſires; nothing but Grace can do it; James 4. 5,6. Do ye think that the Scripture ſaith in vain, The Spirit that dwelleth in us, luſteth to Envy? But he giveth more Grace: wherefore he ſaith, God reſiſteth the Proud, but giveth Grace unto the Humble. Chap. 4.

6. Yea, the Greedineſs is increaſed by all the Means we uſe to quell it, till God give more Grace; the more we are forbidden a thing, the more we long after it; nitimur in vetitum. The Law which was as Water to cool the Heat of ill Deſires forbidding them, ſtirred them up in Paul's Heart the more, Rom. 7. 13. Was then that which is good, made Death unto me? God forbid. But Sin that it might appear Sin, working Death in me by that which is good; that Sin by the Commandment might become exceeding ſinful. The Law prohibiting, makes our Luſts more violent; as Water caſt by Smiths on their Forge, makes the Fire burn the faſter; or as the Wind that blows out the Fire one would think, doth but ſpread the Flame, and ſtir it up the more. John told Herod, it was unlawful to have his Brother Philip's Wife, and the more he loved her: and therefore ſtollen Bread and Waters are ſweeter than others, *Prov.*9. 17. becauſe we gain it in oppoſition to the Command.

Fifthly; The laſt Aggravation of the Inordinacy of our Luſts, is Unſatisfiedneſs, which I make a further Degree than Greedineſs: For the Lions and Eagles, though greedy after their Prey, Job 9. 26. 1 Pet. 5. 8, 9. where the Devil is compared to a roaring Lion drinking up all at a draught, yet they are ſoon ſatisfied, and lay not up what they leave, Matth. 6. 26. But we, as we are ſtrong of Appetite, which notes our Greedineſs, ſo we can never have enough, know not to be ſatisfied; Iſa. 56. 11, 12. Yea, they are greedy Dogs which can never have enough, and they are Shepherds that cannot underſtand: they all look to their own way, every one for his Gain, from his Quarter. Come ye, ſay they, I will fetch Wine, and we will fill our ſelves with ſtrong Drink, and to morrow ſhall be as this Day, and much more abundant. That whereas the Deſires of Grace, are content with little, 1 Tim. 6. 8. with Meat and Cloth, with but convenient Food, or a ſtinted Portion, as the word ſignifies, Prov. 30. 8. ſo it it is in the Margent, an Allowance ſuch as Souldiers have, or Birds by them that feed them, and they crave no more; Matth. 6. 26. the Birds lay not up; only we enlarge our Deſires, as Hell that cannot be ſatisfied, Hab. 2. 5. The ambitious Man heaps up in vaſt Fancies and Deſires, all Nations: and at ver. 6. the covetous Man loads himſelf with thick Clay, takes not only what he needs, but loads himſelf.

CHAP. V.

An Enquiry into the Grounds and Cauſes of this hainous Inordinacy in our Luſts.

HAving thus largely ſhewn wherein the Inordinacy or Irrectitude of Man's Luſts does lie, both for Parts and Aggravations; now it remains that, as in the reſt I have done, I ſhould ſhew what are the true adequate Grounds of all theſe ſeveral Parts and Degrees of their Inordinacy or Sinfulneſs ſpecified; which I will manifeſt to you in their ſeveral Order, by a few Propoſitions linked together, as Links in a Chain, that ſo you may ſee how one thing follows upon another.

Propoſ. 1. That all Men have ſinned, and are in their own Conſciences guilty of a Wrong done unto God, and thereby obnoxious to his VVrath and Judgment. This now all the World yields to, and I have before proved it from Rom. 3. 19. every Mouth is ſtopp'd at it, and becomes ſubject to Judgment, as the word is; and this all Conſciences apprehend, and look at God as an Enemy, till Reconciliation is apprehended by Chriſt: if they know but God, they muſt needs do ſo, and then they can never make him their chiefeſt Good; for what they make their chiefeſt Good, they muſt delight in above all. Now him whom they apprehend as an Enemy, and are guilty of an Injury done to him, they can never truly delight in; ſo as the Guilt of Sin will, if there was no more, take them off from God as their chiefeſt Good, and if ſo, then alſo as their chiefeſt End; for Finis & Bonum, the End and the Good can never be ſevered. And beſides, if they apprehend God an Enemy, whilſt they do ſo, they cannot make him their utmoſt End; for none can make one that loves him not, the utmoſt End of all his Actions: This is enough, if no more, to prove it: but we will add, Prop. 2. As by the guilt of Sin, Man's Nature is deprived of ability to make God the chiefeſt Good; ſo alſo of Holineſs, to make him the chiefeſt End. Rom. 3. 23. All have ſinned, and ſo are fallen ſhort of the Glory of God: ὑστεροῦνται, they come lag, reach not ſo high, as Men that come ſhort of a Goal for want of Strength. [Of the Glory of God,] either fall ſhort of ſeeking or attaining Glory or Happineſs in him as the chiefeſt Good, or deſiring to bring Glory to him as their chiefeſt End. Now, nihil agit ultra ſuam ſphæram, nothing acts beyond the Sphere of its Activity. Therefore being deprived of that Power, they fall ſhort, yea, even their Judgments want a power to diſcern and know him aright to be the chiefeſt Good, as 1 Cor. 2. 14. they cannot know the Things of God, they think them Fooliſhneſs, they have Thoughts that fall ſhort in the judging of their chief Good, and then ſuppoſe no other Defect; yet their Inclinations cannot be carried unto him; for, ignoti nulla cupido, there is no deſire of what is unknown. Epheſ. 4. 18. Being eſtranged from God through Ignorance. Or if they could truly diſcern him to be the chiefeſt Good, yet the Guilt and Conſciouſneſs which they have of his being an Enemy, hinders him from being ſo to them; or yet they want a ſuitable Principle; but laſt of all, they want a power to judg him ſo.

Prop. 3. Though the Soul is thus deprived of the Glory of God, and ſo of ability to make God its chiefeſt Good, and utmoſt End; yet (as you may remember I told you before) the Soul is an active thing, and ſo remains ſtill for all this. It is as full of Quick-ſilver as ever, for ſtill it deſires Happineſs and Good; Pſal. 4. 6. Who will ſhew us any Good? Omnia bonum appetunt, ſays the Philoſopher. It is as full of active Inclinations as the Sea is of Waves, which cannot reſt, as you have the Compariſon in Iſa. 57. 20. but muſt roul to ſome Shoar or other. And this now diſcovers the ground why 'tis carried on to other things as its chief-eſt Good, ſo continually and ſo unceſſantly; for ſeeing theſe Inclinations cannot find Delight in God, it muſt needs go ſeek Satisfaction ſomewhere elſe: ſo in the fore-alledged Place, Epheſ. 4. 8. Being eſtranged from the Life of God through Ignorance, ſo as not to ſee this eternal Good in him: What follows from it? They give themſelves over to Sin with greedineſs; every Man would have his Belly full, and of Pleaſure they muſt have a πλεονεξια. And eſtranged from God they are; and therefore they cannot have it in him; and ſo they go out to any unclean Practice that will afford it: and therefore alſo Ignorance is made the ground of Luſts; 1 Pet. 1. 14. As obedient Children, not faſhioning your ſelves according to the former Luſts, in your Ignorance. The reaſon they luſted after vain things ſo, was their Ignorance of God, and unability to make him their Delight, as Children that make Counters and Rattles their chiefeſt Delight, being ignorant of better things; and the Soul too muſt have ſomething to play with as well as they. Chap. 5.

Prop. 4. As the Soul being deprived of ability to make God its chiefeſt Good, ſtill retains Inclinations to ſome other by reaſon of its Activeneſs, and the Inclinations that are in it; ſo alſo being deprived of ability to make God its chiefeſt End, the Soul muſt ſtill have ſome general End in the guiding of all theſe its Inclinations, becauſe it ſtill remains a reaſonable Creature, which worketh always to and for an End. Now what other can that prove to be but Self-love? ſeeing it was the next ſubordinate End to God in Man by Nature, and is not extinguiſhed by Sin, and the deprivation of Grace; but on the contrary, when that former End, who is God, is took away and put down from its Soveraignty, this muſt of neceſſity ſucceed, inherit and poſſeſs all its Rights, Priviledges and Prerogatives: even as in a Kingdom, when the firſt Heir or Elder is removed, the next Brother, or ſo, ſucceedeth, who before was but a Subject, though the next and firſt unto the King. And therefore all that a Man doth or can do now, the utmoſt End which guideth all, and to which all was directed before, when he was in his upright State, muſt needs be for the ſake of Self-love or Pleaſure, which is all one.

Prop. 5. Self-love having got into our Hearts, into that Throne and Seat and Regality that God's Glory once there had, which is now depoſed; and ſo having the ſame abſolute Prerogative, and enjoying all the Priviledges that were annexed to God's Crown and Soveraignty over Man's Soul, it alſo comes to exerciſe the ſame Juriſdiction in us which God's Glory once likewiſe did and ſhould; as being now the Lord-Paramount-End of all the reſt, and ſo plays all theſe ſinful Pranks in us that appear in our Hearts and Lives, and ſo comes to be the ſole true adequate Ground of any Sins which can be inſtanced in. For, as before, we making God our utmoſt End, as God makes himſelf his End, and ſo as he admires Himſelf, his Thoughts and Actions, brings his Will to paſs, and his Counſel muſt ſtand; ſo we alſo ſhould have done our Wills being in tune to his; ſo now by the ſame reaſon we come to admire and doat upon our ſelves, ſeek to advance our own Wills, and to make all ſtoop to us: and ſo here you may ſee the ground of all the Pride that is in us. Again, as then we ſhould have been zealous and tender of his Glory, leſt any Creature ſhould in the leaſt meaſure derogate from him, or enjoy any Good to it ſelf, which God's Glory had not Cuſtom out of, (for thus zealous is God of his Glory) ſo now Self is looking to have the ſame Priviledg, grieves that any ſhould have any Excellency we have not, or which may not add Luſtre to ours, or which may in the leaſt meaſure caſt a Shadow on ours: Hence all the Envy that is in us at the Good of others, all Grudgings, Repinings, Diſtractions, rejoicing at the Hurt of others, whereby that is removed that ſhould ſtand in our Light. As God making himſelf his utmoſt End, deſtroys all his Enemies out of the infinite Love of himſelf, brings them into ſubjection, that he may be all in all, 1 Cor. 15. 24 to 28. So we likewiſe deſire and endeavour to do to all our Enemies, and to get the Victory, and to keep our ſelves uppermoſt: And hence all the Revenge that is in us, and all theſe you ſee proceed from Self thus advanced, as the adequate Ground of them: and ſo it may be ſaid of all Sin elſe contrary to the Law; only I inſtance in theſe, becauſe in Luſts we ſeek Pleaſure out of good things created; and it is more apparent we do ſo from theſe Inſtances. And in 1 Cor. 13. 4. true Love is made the ground of Long-ſuffering, Kindneſs to others, &c. therefore the oppoſite Sins to all theſe come from Self-love, which is oppoſite to the Love of God. And ſo you ſee that other Ground of that Branch of our Luſts, Inordinacy, that they are not carried only to other things beſides God as the chiefeſt Good, but alſo to things contrary to God and the Good of others.

Prop. 6. Now Self-love having got into the Saddle, and having uſurp'd all the Power into its own hands, and eſtabliſhing its own Prerogative, and ſeeking its chiefeſt Happineſs in the Creatures, and not being able to delight in God, it comes alſo to hate and luſt againſt any thing that would rob it of its happineſs, and that labours to make it ſubject again, and to dethrone and depoſe it; it hates it as an Enemy to its Prerogative and Soveraignty, which is its utmoſt End. And therefore as a Man by reaſon of this Self-love, loves all things that advance it, be they never ſo contrary to the Law; ſo it hates what would any way hinder it: and hence is its Enmity againſt God, his Law, his Children, becauſe all theſe would bring it down; 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. For the Weapons of our VVarfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of Strong-holds, caſting down Imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the Knowledg of God, and bringing into captivity every Thought to the Obedience of Chriſt. They would bring all into Subjection again, and into Captivity to Jeſus Chriſt. As Tyrants uſe to hate the lawful Heirs to the Throne, ſo we do God, and cannot endure to hear of him; as Saul could not of David: therefore Rom. 8. 7. the Fleſh is ſaid to be Enmity againſt God. And therefore if Grace in our own Bowels ſeek to ſet God up again, we fight againſt it, and ſet our ſelves againſt it, as Saul did hate his Son Jonathan for taking part with David. And hence is the luſting of the Fleſh againſt the Spirit, Gal. 5. 17. And the Motions of the Fleſh are as ſo many Spears thrown to kill all Motions of the Spirit in us: And if the Law of God comes as a Herauld to proclaim God, Lord and King, and to threaten us if we will not be ſubject to him; yet Self-love, which is thus highly exalted, is of ſo great a Spirit as it will never yield. The Wiſdom of the Fleſh is Enmity againſt the Law, and cannot be ſubject, Rom. 8. 7. And the ſame ground of Quarrel is there in wicked Men againſt godly Mens Lives, who being of God's Party, the Light wherewith they ſhine, condemns them for Traitors and Uſurpers, and tells them their Works are evil; and therefore they hate the Light, for their Deeds are evil; John 3. 19. And this is the Condemnation, that Light is come into the World, and Men loved Darkneſs rather than Light, becauſe their Deeds were evil. Yea, when Conſcience comes to apprehend God to be an invincible Enemy, who will certainly deſtroy us; as it doth in thoſe that ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, who (Heb. 10. 27.) are ſaid to receive and expect Judgment: then Self-love thus advanced, deſires to be revenged on God all it can, and as an utter Enemy, delights in what angers and provokes him; for the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt is but Revenge againſt God and his Saints; as the Devil when he was caſt out of Heaven, made War with the Woman and her Seed, Rev. 12. 13.

Hence you may ſee Grounds for all the ſeveral Aggravations of this Inordinacy of our Luſts.

1. That Readineſs to Sin, for the Soul remains ſtill in it ſelf active and nimble.

2. Our Luſts muſt need have much power and force in us to carry us on to him, becauſe they are the Laws of this Lord Paramount Self-love, which reigns as our utmoſt End, and gives all our Deſires their Commiſſion, and they all there fawn upon it; who having ſuch power therefore, puts forth all the Power the Soul hath in all its Deſires; ſo as quicquid vult, valde vult.

3. The Unſatisfiedneſs ariſeth from the emptineſs of thoſe Objects which Luſts carry us out unto (ſuch are the Pleaſures of Sin and the Creatures) as their chiefeſt Good: and withal, the vaſt Wideneſs of the Soul being made at firſt of ſuch a ſize, as God only, not the Creature, ſhould be able to fill it, and widen'd alſo by Adam gaping to ſwallow a Godſhip at once; ſo all theſe Pleaſures ſatisfy you no more than a Drop can fill a Ciſtern. Chap. 6.

4. This Greedineſs ariſeth from the Unſatisfiedneſs; for, appetitus finis eſt infinitus: for the Soul having ſo large a Stomach, becauſe it hath a large Life of Comfort to maintain, and theſe Pleaſures affording ſo little at once, the Soul is as a Man ready to periſh with Thirſt, and hath only a Sucking-Bottle given him, whence he can ſuck but Drops at once, which can ſcarce keep Soul and Body together; and therefore it is ſo greedy and impatient, and would have all at once.

CHAP. VI.

That there is no neceſſity of aſſerting Original Sin to be a poſitive Quality in our Souls, ſince the Privation of Righteouſneſs is enough to infect the Soul with all that is evil.

THeſe being declared to be the true adequate Grounds of all the Sinfulneſs that is boiled up to its greateſt height in Man's Nature; then there is no neceſſity to ſuppoſe, as ſome have done, Original Sin to be in its own Eſſence, and, as conſidered by the Underſtanding, as apart from the Soul which it is in, to be a poſitive Quality come in the room of Original Righteouſneſs, as Heat into Water when Cold is expelled, to inflame and provoke it unto Evil: For if the bare deprivement of Original Righteouſneſs from the Soul, ſtill ſuppoſed to continue active and deſirous of Happineſs, and having ſtill a Principle of Self-love left unextinguiſh'd in it, if this may be a full and adequate Cauſe of all the Sinfulneſs that is in Man's Deſires, what need we feign and excogitate any poſitive Quality ſuperadded over and above and beſides all theſe, to whet and enflame the Soul to Evil? There is no neceſſity of doing ſo, becauſe, fruſtra fit per plura quod fieri poteſt per pauciora, it is frivolous to do that by many things, which may be done by one: Et entia non ſunt multiplicanda ſine neceſſitate, Beings are not unneceſſarily to be multiplied. And this Deprivation of Righteouſneſs, you ſee is ſufficient, but eſpecially becauſe that Suppoſition draws on this inevitable and unanſwerable Abſurdity, That it muſt have in it ſelf a true real Being and Entity: And if ſo, then it ſhould have ſome Goodneſs in it; for, Ens & bonum convertuntur, every Being is good, and muſt either be from God, and ſo he be made the Author of it, who doth not ſo much as tempt to Sin, and ſo Sin ſhould not be Sin; for every Creature is good, 1 Tim. 4. 4. Or elſe in the ſecond Place, There might be ſome Entity which held not of God in capite, whoſe Name is I am, and who is the Fountain of all Beings, John 1. 3. Neither doth the Affirmation of the contrary, as thus explained, put us upon the like Abſurdity, or inforce us from diſſenting from any received Truth among our Divines.

For, firſt; Whereas it may be objected, That this is to deny what formerly I have aſſumed and proved, namely, That there is a poſitive as well as a privative Part of Man's Sinfulneſs by Nature; and therefore if Sin be in its own Nature but a Privation, this is a Contradiction to make two ſuch Parts of it.

I anſwer; That though Sin in it ſelf be but a bare Privation or want of Righteouſneſs; yet, as it is in our Natures full of Inclinations, which Inclinations wanting Righteouſneſs, become ſinful; So it may be ſaid to have two parts: for in the ſame ſenſe that Sin in our Actions is ſaid to have two parts, in the ſame ſenſe it may be ſaid to have in our Natures: now in our Actions it hath two parts, whereof the firſt is purely and meerly privative, becauſe it is negatio actus debiti, the denial of an Act which ought to have been done: And ſecondly, of Commiſſion alſo, which ſuppoſeth a poſitive Act done, but implies and connotates withal a want of Righteouſneſs, which ought to have been in it; ſo that the Sinfulneſs of both them is but a bare Privation or want of Righteouſneſs; yet becauſe it is in poſitivo, therefore the latter is called a Sin committed or done, and ſo diſtinguiſh'd from the former.

Now to give the Reaſons to prove that Sin in our Natures hath two parts, though in it ſelf it be but a want of Righteouſneſs.

1. By reaſon of the want of Righteouſneſs, it may be ſaid there are Inclinations in Man, but not to Good; which Good becauſe it ought to be in them, therefore thoſe Inclinations are Sin.

2. It may further be ſaid, that thoſe Inclinations that are there are not good, for that they want that Righteouſneſs which ſhould be in them, and therefore are called Luſts, της απατης; which is a further thing than the former, and which, becauſe it notes out a poſitive Subject, is called the poſitive Part.

I will illuſtrate this Anſwer by a Similitude grounded on a Scripture-Expreſſion, which calls our Luſts, thus wanting Righteouſneſs, and making up this poſitive Part, the Body of Sin, Rom. 6. 6. —That the Body of Sin might be deſtroyed, &c. And it is called Members of it, Col. 3. 5. Mortify therefore your Members, &c. This alludes to a natural Body; that as a Body is a part of a living Man, ſo theſe Luſts are a part of Original Sin, and ſo called Fleſh: Now to ſpeak properly, all Life is formally and originally in the Soul, only as the Fountain and Source of it; yet this Soul being in a Body, and informing it, the Body is truly called a living Part, which yet in it ſelf alone conſidered, is but a dead thing. So in like manner and originally, the whole Eſſence or Nature of Sin is expreſſed in a want of what is good; but this Privation being ſeated in poſitive Inclinations, theſe Inclinations, as thus wanting Righteouſneſs, make a diſtinct part of that Sinfulneſs, and ſo anſwerably is called a Body of Sin: which Inclinations alſo, as ſimply conſidered in themſelves, are good, and ſo far as poſitive, but wanting Righteouſneſs, are called Sins: And the like is ſaid of Habits ſuperadded to them. And hence theſe poſitive Inclinations, as thus wanting true Righteouſneſs, having all their Power and Force turned to Sin, and againſt what is good, they may truly be called a Law of the Members fighting againſt the Law of the Mind, and ſo not to be privatively only contrary to Grace, but poſitively alſo; Gal. 5. 17. For the Fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the Fleſh; and theſe are contrary the one to the other. And ſo they are called Fleſh, and the Acts, Luſts of Fleſh: and hence alſo becauſe Self-love exalteth all the Power and Force that is in us againſt what is good, and carries it on to evil; therefore the dethroning and depoſing of Self-love, and reducing it to its firſt Order to make it ſubject to Grace, is called Mortification, and denying a Man's ſelf; as that new Principle of Grace put in that is made King, is called Vivification: neither doth this make Man in puris naturalibus, for that is a Notion, that in deſcending from the State of Grace into a State of Sin, cannot be imagined, ſeeing God created Man upright, but he fell from that righteous State.

And as for the increaſe of the ſame ſinful Habits, there is the like reaſon; for ſo far as the Act is good, there is increaſed an aptneſs to fall the ſame way again; but that it ſhould be more ſinfully than ever, is from a further Elongation from God, and ſo from a further Privation in that Inclination, and from a conſideration of the former Pleaſures of Sin, which the Man reflects on, and is more ſtrongly allur'd therefore to do the ſame again. Neither have the Papiſts any advantage by this, ſeeing their End and Meaning, in denying a poſitive Part, is but to affirm Luſts to be no Sins: And our Divines meaning, when they contend for a poſitive Part, is but to ſhew that Luſts are Sins, which is as well eſtabliſhed by this Doctrine as by any other; which therefore thus explained, no way diſſents from them, or gives way to the Papiſts.

CHAP. VII.

He who would truly know the Corruption of his Nature, muſt ſearch into the Luſts of his Heart. How great a Curſe it is for any Man to be given up to his Luſts. We ſhould be very careful that we are not in any degree indulgent to our Luſts. Arguments to move us, drawn from the Inordinacy, hainous Sinfulneſs, and Deceitfulneſs of all our Luſts.

Uſe 1. THAT the Apoſtle here, when he would expreſs the Corruption of the Old Man, ſays, it conſiſts in Luſts; and when he would exhort to put off the old Converſation, he exhorts to put off the Luſts thereof: Hence learn, that he who would know the Corruption of the old Man and an unregenerate Eſtate, muſt above all, and moſt of all, ſearch into his Luſts. It is indeed and will be ſome help unto you to take a Survey of your Actions, but you can never come to ſee how deeply and how abominably corrupted and depraved Creatures you are, till God open your Eyes to ſee your Luſts; for the old Man is corrupt through Luſts: and though the outwards of moſt Men be exceedingly corrupt, much Rottenneſs in Mens Speeches, their Throats being open Sepulchres, and full of Bitterneſs and Curſing; yet their inward Parts are moſt corrupted, their inward Parts are very Wickedneſs; Pſal. 5. 9. For there is no Faithfulneſs in their Mouth, their inward Part is very VVickedneſs, their Throat is an open Sepulchre, they flatter with their Tongue. It is in the Original הוות very Wickedneſſes, that is, moſt wicked of all other. The Ignorance of this Sinfulneſs of inward Luſts, hath been the Original of all Errors and Deceipts that Men have about their Eſtates; they were ignorant of their Luſts, they knew not the Inordinacy of them. Paul who whilſt he looked to his Actions, and not to his Luſts, thought himſelf blameleſs, Phil. 3.6. Concerning Zeal, perſecuting the Church, touching the Righteouſneſs which is in the Law, blameleſs. But when it was diſcovered unto him that Luſts were Sins, and that all Concupiſcence had been ſtirring in him, Rom. 7. 7, 8, 9, 10. VVhat ſhall we ſay then? Is the Law Sin? God forbid: Nay, I had not known Sin, but by the Law: for I had not known Luſt, except the Law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not covet. But Sin taking occaſion by the Commandment, wrought in me all manner of Concupiſcence. For without the Law, Sin was dead. For I was alive without the Law once: but when the Commandment came, Sin revived, and I died. And the Commandment which was ordained to Life, I found to be unto Death. When this was diſcovered to him, then he was prov'd to be the chief of Sinners, and his Sin to be above meaſure ſinful, as himſelf confeſſes: ſuch an Alteration did the diſcovery of the Corruption of his Luſts work in his conceit and opinion of himſelf. And the main Reaſon why the Papiſts ſay Luſts are no Sins, is to nurture Men up in the Opinion of Perfection poſſible to be attained unto, becauſe indeed it is poſſible to frame a Man's Actions ſo, (at the leaſt for ſomewhile) as outwardly not to tranſgreſs the Law in appearance to themſelves and others: But now if this was granted and diſcovered, that Luſts are ſo corrupt and abominable, they would find themſelves to be painted Sepulchres, who inwardly are full of dead Mens Bones, as Chriſt ſays of the Phariſees of old for the ſame reaſon, Mat. 23. 27, 28. VVo unto you, Scribes and Phariſees, Hypocrites; for ye are like unto whited Sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead Mens Bones, and of all Uncleanneſs. Even ſo ye alſo outwardly appear righteous unto Men, but within ye are full of Hypocriſy and Iniquity. Could Civil Men who are the World's Saints, maintain a ſerious and good Opinion of their Eſtates ſo long together, if the

Devil

Book VIII

Devil did not keep them from taking any great notice of the Corruption and Inordinacy of their Luſts; no, it is impoſſible they ſhould. But Men look only to their Actions, and compare themſelves with others Outſides, as the young Man in the Goſpel did, Mat. 19. 17,18,19,20. —But if thou wilt enter into Life, keep the Commandments. He ſaith unto him, Which? Jeſus ſaid, Thou ſhalt do no Murder, Thou ſhalt not commit Adultery, Thou ſhalt not ſteal, Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſs; Honour thy Father and thy Mother; and, Thou ſhalt love thy Neighbour as thy ſelf. The young Man ſaith unto him, All theſe things have I kept from my Youth up; what lack I yet? I am not as other Men, ſaid the Phariſee alſo, in Luke 18. 11, 12. He looked no further than his Actions, as thoſe Words imply: whereas, the old Man in us is eſpecially corrupt through Luſts. To convince Men of this, which is indeed neceſſary for us all to take notice of, viz. That we muſt judg of our Corruptions and Eſtates by what our Luſts are chiefly, and not only by our Actions, (though there be enough in them to diſcover oft-times to Men, that there is no Fear of God before their eyes, Pſal. 36. 1.) When God would convince the World of the greatneſs of their Wickedneſs and Corruption, Gen. 6. 5. what Evidence doth he bring of it? God ſaw that the Wickedneſs of the Earth was great: one would look now to have Murders, Idolatries, Blaſphemies, and ſuch grievous Crimes reckoned up to make good this Indictment; but mark what follows, Every Imagination of the thought of his Heart was only evil continually: their inward Luſts and Corruptions are brought in, as making up that great Heap of Miſchief, for which God repented he had made Man. And to convince thee yet more that this is the moſt certain and only ſure way to know the Sinfulneſs of thy Perſon and Eſtate by, conſider,

1. If Men look to their outward Actions, they can plead they are not wholly and in all reſpects evil; for even the Heathen did τὰ τοῦ νόμου, Rom. 2. 14. For when the Gentiles which have not the Law, do by Nature the things contained in the Law, theſe having not the Law, are a Law unto themſelves. The worſt of Men are in ſome things agreeable to the Law; nay, ſome Men might plead as the young Man did, All theſe have I kept from my Youth; his Actions he thought were all entirely good, if he ſhould look no further: but now turn thy Eyes inward, and thou ſhalt find every Thought or Imagination, Deſire or Luſt which brought forth theſe Actions, to be evil, and continually ſo, doing nothing for God, and out of a pure Heart, but merely from Self-love, which is the great Luſt of all other; and this now would have convinced my young Man. And if a Man come to ſee once that all the Luſts, Stirrings and Agitations of his Inwards are only evil; then he will ſee, and not till then, that all his Actions are ſo; for every Action is the Child of ſome Luſt or other; and whatſoever Luſt brings forth, is Sin. Therefore if you would know the Corruption of the old Man, look to your Luſts within you.

2. Conſider that if a Man's Actions were Sins only, and not his inward Luſts, then the Man would not be always evil; for if unregenerate Men commit things directly contrary to the Law, yet their Actions are not continually ſuch; for there is much ceſſation of their outward Actions when they are aſleep, and at other times when alone; but now the Luſts of their Hearts are continual; for, as I ſaid at firſt, our Souls are always active: and Gen. 6. 5. ſays that all their Thoughts are only evil, and that continually.

3. If all our Actions were only and continually evil, yet there are and might be many Sins which never appear in our Actions; one Man is no Murderer, another is no Thief: but now look into the inward Corruption of the old Man, and then thou ſhalt find, as Paul confeſſed of himſelf, Rom. 7. 8. that all Concupiſcence hath been ſtirring in thee. And as a godly Divine ſaid, there was never a Day went over his Head, but he felt Inclinations againſt all the Commandments ſtirring in him: ſo haply might all of us ſay too, but this would not appear in our Actions. Therefore ſtill I ſay, if you would know the Corruption of the old Man, look to Luſts; for as there are more Bloſſoms than Fruit by ten times, ſo there are more Luſts than Actions.

4. Conſider that the ſtrength of Corruption lies eſpecially in Luſts; ſo that ſuppoſe the multitude of our Sins might as well be diſcovered in our Actions, yet not the ſtrength of them; and therefore they are called the Law of Sin in the Members; Rom. 7. 23. But I ſee another Law in my Members, warring againſt the Law of my Mind, and bringing me into Captivity to the Law of Sin, which is in my Members. Theſe are they which do maintain the War, and bring into Captivity: they are Sins, Janizaries or Prætorian Bands, in which its Force lies, they have the Strength of an Army, yea, they have not the force of an Army, but of a Law; and a King may do more with one Law, than an Army can with all its force; and the Power of a King lies in his Laws, and by them he reacheth to the utmoſt of his Dominions. Now he compares Sin to a King, Rom. 6. 12. Let not Sin therefore reign in your mortal Body, that ye ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof: Let it not reign to obey it: in what? in the Luſts thereof, as the Laws of Sin their King; Neither give your Members, ſays he, ver. 13. as Weapons of Unrighteouſneſs. If we commit a Sin in our Actions, the outward Member is but a Weapon, and the outward Action is but the Blow; but the Strength whence the Blow came, and which wielded the Weapon, was the Luſt within, which fights againſt the Soul; 1 Pet. 2. 11. Dearly beloved, I beſeech you as Strangers and Pilgrims, abſtain from fleſhly Luſts, which war againſt the Soul: It is theſe Luſts which maintain the War.

Chap. 7.

5. Conſider as a Man ſhall not otherwiſe know the Strength, ſo nor the Hainouſneſs of his Sin, but by knowing his Luſts. This appears,

(1.) If we draw an Argument from the former Metaphor, in that it's called a Law; now one bad Law in a Common-wealth doth more Miſchief, provokes God more, than an hundred bad Examples for outward Acts, to frame Miſchief by a Law. David brings in as the Height of Impiety, Pſal 94. 20. Shall the Throne of Iniquity have Fellowſhip with thee, which frameth Miſchief by a Law? And ſo on the contrary, when good Laws are made in a State againſt Swearing, Sabbath-breaking, &c. they are a great Fence to a Land, though the People be very wicked: therefore pray that good Laws may be made in Parliaments, and rejoice when they are made. A Luſt with a Law is ten times more miſchievous than many evil Actions.

(2.) A ſinful Action jars directly but againſt the Law given, which ſaith, Thou ſhalt not commit Adultery, and is therefore ſaid to be done againſt God, becauſe againſt his righteous Law: but the Luſt whence this Action proceeds directly and primarily, offers an Injury to the Perſon of God immediately; for the Inordinacy of Luſts lie in this, (as I have ſhewn) that a Man's Deſires turn from God to the Creature as the chiefeſt Good, and ſo contemns the Goodneſs and All-ſufficiency that is in God, and Pleaſure in the Creature comes into Competition with God, in our Luſts more immediately than in our Actions; in them we have uſually but the Law in our Eye, but in our Luſts we refuſe God, and cleave to another; we chuſe Riches, and forſake God. Now for a Man to undervalue the Perſon of a King, provokes him more than to deſpiſe his Law, becauſe he is nearer to himſelf than his Law; and to contemn him as a Man, provokes more than to contemn him in the Relation of a King put upon him; for Kings are more ſenſible of Contempts reflecting on their Perſons than their Power. How provoking then is it to God, that he ſhould be deſpiſed in his All-ſufficiency, and in all his Perfections, in his Eſſence, and in a Man's Luſts? chuſing other things for his Happineſs, God is thus deſpiſed: God being conſcious of his Excellency, how highly muſt this provoke him?

6. Conſider that ſinful Actions are commited by us, but for our Luſts ſake, to ſatisfy them; and therefore they are called, Epheſ. 2. 2. fulfilling the Luſts of the Fleſh, or doing the Will of the Fleſh; ſo as the Luſt is the Maſter, the Action but the Servant; the Luſt is the Whore, the Action is but the Baud to bring the Object and the Luſt together. Deut. 29. 19. it is called adding Drunkenneſs to Thirſt: Men drink to ſatisfy their thirſty Luſts: So that if the Action be thus as it were ordained for the Luſt, then the Luſt is more ſinful; and therefore all Corruption in the World is ſaid to be in Luſts, as the efficient and final Cauſes of them; 2 Pet. 1. 4.——Having eſcaped the Corruption that is in the World through Luſt.

7. Conſider, a Man cannot know the Corruption of his Perſon and Eſtate, and his Bondage to Sin, but by his Luſts, becauſe many of the moſt hainous Luſts that unregenerate Men ſerve, and which keep them under the Power of Satan,

Book VIII

Satan, have no outward Actions to vent themſelves; or if they are vented in any Actions, thoſe Actions in themſelves are lawful, ſuch as Emulation, &c. which vent themſelves in Men of Underſtanding, and that not in vain Faſhions of Apparel or Speeches, proud and boaſting, or High-looks, but in ſeeking outward Excellencies, commendable and profitable to the Church and Common-wealth. And you know that Chriſt himſelf was preached out of Envy; and the Phariſees received Honour one of another, and therefore believed not, John 5. 44. Now that which cauſeth one to honour another, is Praiſe-worthy. Yea, and other Luſts, of loving and ſeeking Riches and bodily Pleaſures, though they vent in unlawful Actions, in many Men, as in Oppreſſion, Uncleanneſs, &c. yet moſt eſpecially now under the times of the Goſpel, the Devil is caſt out of many, in reſpect of ſuch groſs Sins, and the enormous Crimes of the Gentiles vaniſh; as the Hobgoblings which were familiar with Men in the time of Popery, now when the Light is come, no longer appear: therefore now the Luſts of Men vent themſelves in things lawful, by an inordinate Affection to them, as in the young Man in Matth. 19. 22. who was in Bondage to Covetouſneſs, and yet he had not got his Goods unjuſtly, they came to him by Inheritance, he having them ſo young; neither did he, as is likely, put out his Money to Uſe, or oppreſs others, for Chriſt bad him ſell, not reſtore his Poſſeſſions; yet he doted too much on them, to obey him. So eating and drinking, and giving in Marriage, things natural and commendable, were yet, through Mens Inordinacy in them, the Sins for which God brought Judgment on the old World, becauſe of the Defilement of the Heart in all theſe.

Uſe. 2. In that he calls them here Luſts of Deceit or Error, and carrying Men wrong; and in that they are ſo inordinate, as I have deſcribed; then ſee what a Curſe and Judgment it is to be given up to your Luſts, to be led by them, as the Phraſe is, 2 Tim. 3. 6. and to walk after them, as Jude 18. Miſerable and curſed Guides that lead Men out of the way, Deut. 27. 18. and the more you follow them, the further you are from God and Happineſs: As a Bark at Sea without Chard or Compaſs, Cable or Anchor, toſſed up and down by the mercileſs Winds and Waves; ſuch is a Man guided by his Luſts, which Jude compares to Winds, Jude 12. and James compares Men to Waves toſſed hither and thither, James 1. 6. and a Man is liable to Drowning and Deſtruction at every Gale, by hurtful Luſts which drown a Man in Perdition and Deſtruction, 1 Tim. 6. 9. But they that will be rich, fall into Temptation, and a Snare, and into many fooliſh and hurtful Luſts, which drown Men in Deſtruction and Perdition. Expoſed a Man is to Temptation, and ſo to all Evil, (as we pray againſt it in the Lord's Prayer) for Luſt is the great Tempter of all the World, greater than the Devil, who yet is called the Tempter; when a Man is tempted he is drawn away by his Luſt, James 1. 14. But every Man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own Luſt, and enticed. Men fall into Temptation; how? by hurtful Luſts, 1 Tim. 6. 9. Thus expoſed a Man is to his utter Enemies, for Luſts fight againſt the Soul, 1 Pet. 2. 11. Men think it their Happineſs to have their Deſires, as Men in burning Fevers deſire to have Drink when they will, which proves their Death and Deſtruction; and therefore one whom God intends to deſtroy, he leaves to his Luſts, as Hophni and Phinehas, 1 Sam. 2. 25. If one Man ſin againſt another, the Judg ſhall judg him: but if a Man ſin againſt the Lord, who ſhall intreat for him? Notwithſtanding, they hearkened not unto the Voice of their Father, becauſe the Lord would ſlay them. Pſal. 78. 29, 30. So they did eat, and were well filled: for he gave them their own Deſire. They were not eſtranged from their Luſt: but while their Meat was yet in their Mouths, (He gave them their Deſire, but it was their Bane, for the Wrath of God came upon them;) ver. 31. The Wrath of God came upon them, and ſlew the fatteſt of them: and ſmote down the choſen Men of Iſrael. So Pſal. 73. 7. Their Eyes ſtand out with Fatneſs: they have more than Heart could wiſh. To thoſe God meant to deſtroy, he gave them more than Heart could wiſh. So Pſal. 81. 12. So I gave them up unto their own Hearts Luſt; and they walked in their own Counſels. When God offered them Happineſs in himſelf; ver. 10. Open thy Mouth as large as thou wilt, and I will fill it, ſays God; and they hearkned not: what was their Puniſhment; ver. 12. I gave them up to their Hearts Luſts, ſays God. And let all this then warn us; 1 Cor. 10. 6. Now theſe things were our Examples, to the intent we ſhould not luſt after evil things, as they alſo luſted. But now if God hath a Mind to ſave thee, he will break thee off from all thy ſinful Deſires, for thou ſhouldeſt certainly go to Hell elſe; Iſa. 57. 17. For the Iniquity of his Covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his Heart. God was wroth for his Covetouſneſs, or indeed Concupiſcence, and ſmote him: And when they yet went on, he meaning to ſave them, reſolved to heal them; ver. 18. I have ſeen his Ways, and will heal him: I will lead him alſo, and reſtore Comforts unto him, and to his Mourners. God therefore often hedges up a Man's Ways; Hoſ. 2. 6, 7. Therefore behold, I will hedg up thy Way with Thorns, and make a Wall, that ſhe ſhall not find her Paths. And ſhe ſhall follow after her Lovers, but ſhe ſhall not overtake them; and ſhe ſhall ſeek them, but ſhall not find them: then ſhall ſhe ſay, I will go and return to my firſt Husband, for then was it better with me than now. God often denies them the Deſires of their Hearts, keeps them low and bare, to ſtarve their Luſts; and though they ask, they ſhall not have what they would ſpend upon their Luſts; James 4. 2, 3. Ye luſt, and have not: ye kill, and deſire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, becauſe ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, becauſe ye ask amiſs, that you may conſume it upon your Luſts.

Chap. 7.

Uſe 3. If the Corruption of the Old Man doth principally conſiſt in Luſts, and theſe Luſts be ſo inordinate and deceitful, then take we heed how we be indulgent to them, or any one of them; as a Man then is, when either he admits Conference and Parley with the Object of his Luſt, brings it and his Heart often together, is loth to part with the Interview of it, but could fix his Eye ſtill upon it, glanceth again and again: Or when he obeys it and ſatisfies it, and the Importunity of it; or doth venture to try Experiments, and to prove what Pleaſure is to be had in ſuch a Sin, as Solomon did in Mirth, Eccleſ. 2. 1, 2. I ſaid in mine Heart, Go to now, I will prove thee with Mirth, therefore injoy Pleaſure: and behold, this alſo is Vanity. I ſaid of Laughter, It is mad; and of Mirth, What doeth it? He gave his Heart leave to play as it were; Go to now, ſays he, I will prove thee with Mirth, and therefore injoy Pleaſure; or which is worſe, when a Man takes thought to lay up Proviſion for it, as that Man in the Parable, Luke 12. 19. And I will ſay to my Soul, Soul, thou haſt much Goods laid up for many Years; take thine Eaſe, eat, drink, and be merry. When a Man ſlips the Collar of the Heart, that is, takes off Checks of Conſcience and good Motions, letting his Heart purſue a deſired Luſt, with full Mouth, as the Hound doth the Hare; the Pleaſure the Man will have, whether in Beauty, Riches, Preferment, or any of the Pleaſures of Sin, carnal Mirth, good Fellowſhip, Chambering, Wantonneſs, unlawful Recreations, and ſpending precious time away in them; I ſay, take heed of them, for they are deceitful Luſts; labour to get thy Heart quit and rid of them. Put them off, ſays the Apoſtle, though the Pleaſures of them ſtick as cloſe to thee as thy Skin doth to thy Fleſh, yet get thy Heart and them looſened, get them flayed off; though they lie in thy Boſom, yet give a Bill of Divorce to them. If any worldly Excellency of Learning and Applauſe draw out thy Heart, and, as Bird-lime and Pitch, when 'tis touch'd, makes all within thee roap after it, as that which thou ſhouldſt eſteem thy Excellency; get it looſened, get that Fullers-ſoap, ſpoken of, Mal. 3. 2. to waſh it off. Job would not let his Hands cleave to any thing; Job. 31. 7. If my Step hath turned out of the way, and mine Heart walked after mine Eyes, and if any Blot hath cleaved to mine Hands. When thou art to deal with any thing in the World, ſpit on thy Fingers that they may not ſtick to it, that thou mayeſt uſe it as if thou uſedſt it not. Doſt thou feel thy Soul roaming and ſtretching it ſelf above its Compaſs, to great things, as David ſays, Pſal. 131. 1, 2. too high for thee, and projecting Eaſe and a quiet Life, in ſuch and ſuch a Condition? ceaſe not till thou haſt got thy Heart into David's temper; Pſal. 131. 1, 2. Lord, my Heart is not haughty, nor mine Eyes lofty: neither do I exerciſe my ſelf in great Matters, or in things too high for me. Surely I have behaved and quieted my ſelf as a Child that is weaned of his Mother: my Soul is even as a weaned Child. Bring thy ſelf to this Temper, to be as a weaned Child, that hath no great Thoughts you know; there is no great Commotion in their Heads; yea, as a weaned Child, that much regards not the Dug it once ſo cried for. A Soul that is quiet and ſtill, cries not diſcontentedly if it hath not this and that Toy preſently; and ſuch a Soul projects no great Matters aforehand, as Children do not, but hopes in and depends upon the Lord, as Children on their Parents, Pſal. 131. 3. Let Iſrael hope in the Lord, from henceforth and for ever. If Beauty intice thee, or Pleaſure of Uncleanneſs ſoak into thy Inwards, as Oil into the Bones, and draws and tolls out thy Heart; ceaſe not confeſſing, curſing, bewailing it, till that baſe liquoriſh Diſpoſition of thy Heart be worn out, and the inward Neighings of it tamed and ſubdued. Doſt thou feel thy Heart ſhooting the Sprigs of it into the Earth, rooting it ſelf in Riches? O get the Earth looſened from it, and thy Heart ſtub'd up; take heed there be not a Root of Bitterneſs, Heb. 12. 15. get thy Heart new planted, and ſhot into Chriſt, rooted there; Rom. 6. 5. For if we have been planted together in the Likeneſs of his Death, we ſhall be alſo in the Likeneſs of his Reſurrection. Coloſſ. 2. 7. Rooted and built up in him, and eſtabliſhed in the Faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with Thankſgiving. You that are more prophane, and draw Cart-loads of Sins after you, of Drunkenneſs, Swearing, Oppreſſion, and other groſs Sins, with Cords of Vanity, as Iſaiah ſpeaks, chap. 5. 18. Wo unto them that draw Iniquity with Cords of Vanity, and Sin as it were with a Cart-rope: i. e. with ſtrong Affections and long drawn out, faſtned and chained to ſuch baſe Courſes: get thoſe Cart-ropes cut, thoſe Affections diſſolved from ſuch curſed Works of the Devil; for thou carrieſt but Loads of Fuel for Hell to burn thee with. To conclude, when I exhort you to put off your Luſts, my meaning is, you ſhould get fatherleſs, motherleſs, wiveleſs, richeſleſs, learningleſs, honourleſs, pleaſureleſs Hearts, and to keep them ſo; to be to all things as Strangers and Pilgrims here, as Peter exhorts, 1 Pet. 2. 11. Dearly beloved, I beſeech you as Strangers and Pilgrims, abſtain from fleſhly Luſts, which war againſt the Soul. That whereas ſinful Diſpoſitions and inordinate Deſires would be daily and continually putting themſelves forth in us, and moving us inordinately to Pleaſures of this Life, we ſhould abſtain, that is, keep our ſelves from the Occaſions, means of increaſing or ſatisfying of them; and uſe all the Pleaſures and Comforts of this Life, only as Baits in our Journey, not ſo as to detain us any whit in our way. And this I will inforce at this time on you, from the inordinate Sinfulneſs and Deceitfulneſs of all theſe Luſts, which is the Argument here uſed by the Apoſtle in my Text.

Firſt, Every Luſt that is thus inordinate in the Heart, it is in regard of God flat and plain Idolatry; ſo as ſo many Luſts as thou nouriſheſt, ſo many Idolaters doſt thou give Toleration unto, in the Dominion of thy Heart; Coloſſ. 3. 7. Mortify your earthly Members, &c. Covetouſneſs which is Idolatry: Now by the Reaſon that Covetouſneſs is Idolatry, by the ſame reaſon is every other Luſt, which is a deſiring Pleaſure in ſome Creature, or Act of Sinning, rather than in God, as I defined it. And indeed ſo that place of Ezekiel is and may moſt properly be underſtood; Ezek. 14. 4. Therefore ſpeak unto them, and ſay unto them, Thus ſaith the Lord God, Every Man of the Houſe of Iſrael that ſetteth up his Idols in his Heart, and putteth the Stumbling-block of his Iniquity before his Face, and cometh to the Prophet, I the Lord will anſwer him that cometh, according to the Multitude of his Idols. Setting up Idols in the Heart, that is, ſo many Luſts; yea, and the Idols of Mens Hearts are in many things worſe than the Idols of their Hands. For,

1. This Idolatry in the Heart is a Puniſhment often of the other Idolatry; therefore it is worſe; Rom. 1. 22, 23, 24. Profeſſing themſelves to be wiſe, they became Fools; and changed the Glory of the uncorruptible God, into an Image made like to corruptible Man, and to Birds, and four-footed Beaſts, and creeping things. Wherefore God alſo gave them up to Uncleanneſs, through the Luſts of their own Hearts, to diſhonour their own Bodies between themſelves. Becauſe they did worſhip Idols, therefore they were given up to Luſts, ver. 24.

2. Be-

Chap. 7.

2. Becauſe theſe Idol-Luſts in the Heart ſtand ſurer, and more faſtly fix'd. Good Governours have pulled down other Idols, but theſe they cannot, nor never could.

3. Men are more inflamed with theſe Idol-Luſts, and mad upon them, which is made an Aggravation of Idolatry, Iſa. 57. 4, 5. Againſt whom do ye ſport your ſelves? Againſt whom make ye a wide Mouth, and draw out the Tongue? Are ye not Children of Tranſgreſſion, a Seed of Falſhood? enflaming your ſelves with Idols under every green Tree, ſlaying the Children in the Valleys under the Clifts of the Rocks? In Acts 19. 24. and ſo on, you may obſerve Demetrius reſpected his Gain, which was the Idol of his Heart, more than Diana his great Goddeſs; his Speech bewrays it, ver. 25. VVe have had much VVealth by her, ſays he; and this he ſpoke to them of the ſaid Occupation, that made Shrines for her, as knowing they would be therefore zealous, and make the loudeſt Noiſe, in crying, Great is Diana of the Epheſians. The other is but dead painted Idolatry, this real and lively, and hath Mens Hearts more: in the other external Idolatry, Men did uſually bend but their outward Man, it had but their Caps and Knees, and this often for Faſhion-ſake and cuſtomarily. But Luſts have the firſt-born of Mens Thoughts, their Morning-Sacrifices, they are their dearеſt and darling Delights; and the Fruit of their Souls, not of their Bodies only, is dedicated to their Service: to theſe Men ſend up, as Ejaculations, many a hearty Glance day by day, all the day long; to theſe Men vow their happieſt Opportunities, their moſt precious Times, and vowing, are ſtrict in performance too.

Secondly, As Luſts are thus inordinate in regard of God, and injurious to him; ſo they are alſo wrongful to the Creatures they are occupied about, for Mens Luſts abuſe them and ſubject them to Vanity: Rom. 8. 20, 21, 22. For the Creature was made ſubject to Vanity, not willingly, but by reaſon of him who hath ſubjected the ſame in hope: becauſe the Creature it ſelf alſo ſhall be delivered from the bondage of Corruption, into the glorious Liberty of the Children of God. For we know that the whole Creation groaneth, and travaileth in pain together until now. Now then a thing is ſaid to be vain, when it is not uſed to the right end for which it was ordained; and the being uſed to Mens Luſts, makes every Creature an Abomination of Deſolation, ſetting it up in the place it ſhould not, namely, in the room of God, and ſo makes it to loſe its proper Excellency: So that God who look'd and ſaw every Creature good, now looking on it again, ſees they are all Vanity; yea, and the better any Creature is, ſo much the more Vanity, becauſe it is the more apt to be doted upon and abuſed, to be made the more common Whore to Mens Luſts; inſomuch as the Creature is ſaid to groan, (as if they were ſenſible indeed they would) that they ſhould be preſs'd, not willingly, Rom. 8. 20. by the Tyranny of Mens Luſts, to ſerve in War againſt their Maker, that they ſhould thus by force be made Idols; were they ſenſible, how hainouſly would they take it? As Paul and Barnabas rent their Clothes, Acts 14. 14. when the People would have worſhipped them. And Mens Luſts commit a Rape upon the Creature, for it is ſubjected to Vanity unwillingly, forced to be the Heart's Whore, and thereby is defiled; Titus 1. 16. They profeſs that they know God; but in VVorks they deny him, being abominable and diſobedient, and unto every good VVork reprobate.

Thirdly, If we regard the Soul it ſelf which foſters them, theſe Luſts are moſt injurious towards it. Not only,

1. In defiling of it, for 'tis ſpiritual Adultery, James 4. 4. and as that Sin is ſaid to be a Sin againſt a Man's own Body, making it one with a Harlot; ſo every Luſt by the ſame reaſon is a Sin againſt the Soul, by making it one with the Creature it luſteth after, be it never ſo baſe.

Nor 2. only in debaſing the Soul, by transforming and putting it either into the condition of a Beaſt or a Devil, as all Luſts do; thoſe of the Body make us as Beaſts, delighting but in thoſe things they do; therefore the Prodigal is ſaid to have ſerved Swine, Luke 15. 16. And ſo in the Poets, Circe is ſaid to have transformed Men into the Shapes of Brutes. Or, Men are turn'd into Devils in the Luſts of the Mind, as being common to them alſo; and therefore are called Luſts of the Devil, John 8. 44. Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the Luſts of your Father ye will do.

Nor 3. are theſe Luſts injurious to the Soul, only in that they rob a Man of his own Soul, and give it away to the Creature that it luſteth after; therefore, Hoſea 4. 11. Wine is ſaid to take away the Heart; ſo as when a Man comes to have an Offer of Grace made him and of Heaven, he hath no Heart to beſtow, as Solomon ſays, Prov. 17. 16. Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a Fool to get Wiſdom, ſeeing he hath no heart to it? For 'tis gone after Covetouſneſs, Ezek. 33. ult. this Creature or that Luſt lays claim to it. But when a Man turns to God, he then gets and recovers his Heart again.

But to let theſe Notions paſs, that which I mean principally to inſiſt on, is the Deceit and Cheat which Luſt puts upon the Heart, which as the Word is tranſlated, is the Motive in the Text why we ſhould put them off, becauſe they are deceitful Luſts. The chief and only Reaſon that can be alledged why Men are indulgent to Luſts, is the Pleaſure that comes in by them; that which leads Men out of the way in their Deſires, is, That they love Pleaſures more than God. Now if Mens Luſts therefore ſhall cheat and deceive them herein, in that wherein they are ſo much betruſted, and in that which is only hoped and expected from them; then they may be truly called deceitful; for they ſay none are deceitful but thoſe that are betruſted, and on whom our Hopes depend. To ſcan therefore for the preſent no other Inconvenience by them, we will only conſider and reaſon this Point a little. And in the firſt place let us conſider, Firſt; As I told you in the Definition of them, they take the Heart clean off from God as their chiefeſt Good, for whom, and to be filled with whom, the Soul was firſt made, to live with him as the Fiſh in the Water, at whoſe right Hand, and in whoſe Preſence is Fulneſs of Joy and Rivers of Pleaſure, and this for ever, for the Soul to have drunk of; Pſal. 16. 11. and Pſal. 36. 8 compared; Thou wilt ſhew me the Path of Life: in thy Preſence is fulneſs of Joy, at thy right Hand there are Pleaſures for evermore. They ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied with the Fatneſs of thy Houſe; and thou ſhalt make them drink of the River of thy Pleaſures. In God the Soul was to have had Fulneſs to ſatisfaction, they ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied: In God the Soul ſhould have drunk Rivers as without ſatiety, running always freſh, and for ever, as never emptied, no nor ebbing, but in full flowing Tide always. And in theſe Rivers did the Soul once ſwim, till Luſt hook'd the Soul out with a Bait of Pleaſure elſewhere to be had: Luſt hath drawn the Soul out of its proper Element, as James ſays, chap. 1. 14. yea, and it hath ſo took off the Heart, that it cannot live or find Comfort in God, but would die if put into God again, unleſs Luſt be deſtroyed: And out of him thy Soul muſt needs die alſo, as a Fiſh out of the Water; though it lives a while, drinking in Iniquity, as Job ſpeaks, yet that Pickle will not keep thee long. Yet,

Secondly; It inticeth a Man with great Promiſes, large Hopes, as thoſe Seducers, 2 Pet. 2. 18. ſpeak great ſwelling Words, whilſt they are all Vanity. Luſts ſwell and blow up a Man's Fancy and Expectation, both to give full Satisfaction, as Prov. 7. 8. Let us take our fill of Love; a Fulneſs is promiſed; as alſo Continuance, To morrow ſhall be as to day: yea, and they will increaſe in the enjoying, much more abundant. Iſa. 56. 12. Come ye, ſay they, I will fetch Wine, and we will fill our ſelves with ſtrong Drink, and to morrow ſhall be as this Day, and much more abundant. Now as you uſe to ſay, Men have no greater Enemies than Expectation, ſo neither than Pleaſures; for if they prove not as we expected, they vex ſo much the more; if Hope be deferred, it makes the Soul ſick, Prov. 13. 12. much more Hope fruſtrated. Now Luſts do ſtrappado a Man's Expectations, hoiſe them up a huge height, and let them fall on the ſudden: for when a Man comes to enjoy them, they are the pooreſt emptieſt things, that the Soul, as cheated, begins to think, What, is this all? and ſo is vexed. Solomon who ſaw Men dote ſo much upon Pleaſure here, thought there might be ſomething in it, and ſurely his Expectation was raiſed high, he thought he would try Concluſions; Eccleſ. 2. 3. I ſought in mine Heart to give my ſelf unto Wine, (yet acquainting mine Heart with Wiſdom) and to lay hold on Folly, till I might ſee what was that Good for the Sons of Men, which they ſhould do under the Heaven, all the days of their Life. Well, ſee what was the Concluſion, ver. 17. I hated Life, becauſe the Work that is wrought under the Sun is grievous unto me; for all is Vanity and vexation of Spirit: That all ſhould prove ſo empty, this vex'd him. And which is ſtrange, though every time a Man's Luſt is ſatisfied, he finds he is deceived; yet (which argues the greateſt Cheat and Colluſion in the World) a Man's Luſt varniſheth the ſame worn empty Delights over again, ſets a new gloſs on them, that a Man's Expectation is blown up again as high as ever; and by either the change of the Object, or addition of ſome new Circumſtance, a Man is fool'd to think that now he ſhall have ſomething he never had yet; as Balaac thought the change of the Place would do ſuch Feats. Thus do our Luſts gull us, and are ſtill as empty, and ſtill we are as much vexed that our Expectation is fruſtrated. But conſider further, Chap. 7.

Thirdly; The thing which Luſt pitcheth us upon, is but at the beſt too little for the Soul, a Drop to a Ciſtern, that which is not Bread; Iſa. 55. 2. Wherefore do ye ſpend Money for that which is not Bread? and your Labour for that which ſatisfieth not? And which argues Luſt ſtill to be a worſe Cheater, Luſt makes the Creature more empty to us than it would be, for it is that blaſts them all, and the guilt of it; 'tis that hath made them all Vanity to us; Rom. 8. 20. For the Creature was made ſubject to Vanity, not willingly, but by reaſon of him who hath ſubjected the ſame in Hope. God filled the Creature with Comfort, but he, namely Man, by his Sin and abuſe of it, hath ſubjected it to Vanity; it is the Luſt of Man which ſteals God's Bleſſing, yea, God himſelf out of it, who otherwiſe in the uſe of it would fill the Soul with good things, but now they are meer Husks, Luke 15. 16. the Kernel is gone, and that Husk too, the Sin that covers it about, fills it with Bitterneſs and Curſings, adds ſome Croſs to it or other; ſo that all now is but a mere Faſhion and gaudy Shew; 1 Cor. 7. 31. And they that uſe this World, as not abuſing it: for the Faſhion of this World paſſeth away. As if the World was gone, and the Caſe and Shew of it only left; Hoſea 4. 10. Micah 6. 14. Hag. 4. 6. Prov. 23. 5. Wilt thou ſet thine Eyes upon that which is not? for Riches certainly make themſelves Wings, they flee away as an Eagle toward Heaven. They are there called things which are not, and therefore wilt thou ſet thine Eyes on them? They are ſaid not to be, in reſpect of that deceitful Appearance or Gloſs which our Fancies caſt on them: their Goodneſs lies in Conceit, which Conceit comes from Luſts: and though Luſt makes them really leſs than elſe they would be, yet in Opinion it makes them more, and ſo all proves Deceit. 'Tis common Opinion hath raiſed the Price of Gold and Silver, and for a while hath turned it up trump, and ſo it anſwers all things, as Solomon ſays, Eccleſ. 10. 19. So look upon the Mart of Learning, 'tis common Opinion in ſeveral Ages that raiſeth and cries down ſometimes one Strain, ſometimes another: and accordingly Men have applied their Studies even againſt their natural Genius and Diſpoſition, to that Learning, not which is in it ſelf moſt uſeful and excellent, but which bears the Bell away in the Eſteem of Men; therefore that which in one place is in Faſhion, is not in another; ſtrong Lines in one, Quotations in another: Yea, hence there is ſuch Variety in the ſame Men, they leave the purſuit of old Vanities, and ſtart up new; what once they purſued with greedineſs, now they regard not, becauſe Opinion is the Clerk of the Market: what is one Man's Paradiſe, is another Man's Hell; what one adores, another tramples upon and ſcorns, becauſe of variety of Opinions: Which argues that Opinion and Fancy is that which puts the gloſs on things; 1 Pet. 1. 24. For all Fleſh is as Graſs, and all the Glory of Man as the Flower of Graſs: the Graſs withereth, and the Flower thereof falleth away. Here worldly things are compared to Graſs: and two things are ſaid, here is the Flower of Graſs, the Gloſs and Beauty of it, and the Graſs it ſelf; ſo there is the Things of the World and the Glory of them, that is, the Goodneſs ſubſtantial which is in the Things, and the Gloſs that Man's Luſts put on them as Varniſh. Now as the Flower falls away and decays before the Graſs, ſo doth this Varniſh, and fall off before the things periſh. And when we en-enjoy the Things, and thus find them not to anſwer our Eſteem of them, then we are vex'd. And, Fourthly; This Faſhion of the World is paſſing away, 1 Cor. 7. 31. whereas Continuance is alſo by our Luſts promiſed, yet the time is but ſhort, which will divers ways appear.

For firſt, Suppoſe the Things and our Luſts ſhould continue a like time together, and be of like life and continuance, yet the Time appointed at the utmoſt is but ſhort, viz. the time of this Life: A Man can enjoy the Objects of his Luſts no longer than in his mortal Body, which is a Motive the Apoſtle uſeth why they ſhould not therefore be ſerved, Rom. 6. 12. Let not Sin therefore reign in your mortal Body, that ye ſhould obey it in the Luſts thereof. The Reign and Dominion of Sin is limited: yea, and Luſts have made the Body thus mortal, hath crazed it, and made it moulder; Rom. 5. 14. Death reigns by reaſon of Sin, and hath no other Title to its Crown but what Sin gives it.

Yea, ſecondly, This ſhort Time is cut often ſo much the more ſhort, by how much a Man follows and obeys his Luſts: Eccleſ. 7. 17. Be not over-much wicked, for why ſhouldſt thou die before thy time? for wicked Men live not out half their Days. And Luſts ſhorten our Days, not only meritoriouſly, provoking God to do it, to put out the Candle before 'tis half burnt, as Job ſays, chap. 21. 17. How oft is the Candle of the Wicked put out? and how oft cometh their Deſtruction upon them? God diſtributeth Sorrows in his Anger. But alſo Luſts do this efficiently, the abundance of Fuel to feed the Flame of Luſts, choaking and putting out the Candle. Intemperancy, the very Name it ſelf, ſignifies diſtempering the Body, and diſſolving its Conſtitution, and ſo implies deſtroying a Man's ſelf: And indeed the Throat hath killed more than the Sword.

Thirdly, The Objects are taken away, and do often fail us before we be taken from them, and this alſo by the Treachery of our Luſts: And this many ways will appear, for,

1*ſt*. God with-holdeth many things from Men which he would give them, but for their Greedineſs; therefore James brings in this as a reaſon why they obtained not, becauſe they were too violent in deſiring, James 4. 2. and would conſume all on their Luſts: So God always deals with his Children, and often with wicked Men, whom he croſſeth in their Deſires; Jer. 5. 24, 25. Neither ſay they in their Heart, Let us now fear the Lord our God that giveth Rain, both the former and the latter in his Seaſon: he reſerveth unto us the appointed Weeks of the Harveſt. Your Iniquities have turned away theſe things, and your Sins have with-holden good things from you. God thinks much that his good Creatures ſhould be ſo baſely imployed, ſhould feed ſuch filthy Luſts, and that more ſhould be conſumed and devoured by them, than would ſerve twenty of his other poor Creatures. Compare theſe two Scriptures together, Hag. 1. 6, 9. Ye have ſown much, and bring in little: ye eat, but ye have not enough: ye drink, but ye are not filled with Drink: ye clothe you, but there is none warm: and he that earneth Wages, earneth Wages to put it into a Bag with holes. Ye looked for much, and lo it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did blow upon it: why? ſaith the Lord of Hoſts: Becauſe of mine Houſe that is waſte, and ye run every Man unto his own Houſe. Mal. 3. 9, 10. Ye are curſed with a Curſe: for ye have robbed me, even this whole Nation. Bring ye all the Tithes into the Store-houſe, that there may be Meat in mine Houſe; and prove me now herewith, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, if I will not open you the Windows of Heaven, and pour you out a Bleſſing, that there ſhall not be room enough to receive it. You ſhall find whilſt they out of greedineſs and ſparing, and fear of want, would not pay their Tithes, and build the Temple, that therefore God with-held a Bleſſing; Ye looked for much, ſays God, and it came to little; as if he had ſaid, Ye were too greedy, and therefore I did blow upon it: their only way God tells them, is to bring in their Tithes, and ſee, ſaith he, if I pour not out a Bleſſing.

Chap. 7.

2*dly*. If Men have good things, yet they ſacrificing them to their Luſts, God is provoked to take them away; your Luſts make you forfeit your Eaſe, and provokes God to re-enter; Hoſ. 2. 9. I will take away my Corn and my Wine, becauſe they were prepared for Idols, ver. 8. God thinks much the Creatures ſhould be made Corrivals with him, and adored and loved in his ſtead; and therefore as he threatneth Idols often, ſo Mens pleaſant things too, as being alike Images of Jealouſy, as Ezek. 24. 25. which he repreſented to them, ver. 16. in taking away Ezekiel's Wife, Behold with a Stroak I will take away from thee the Deſire of thine Eyes; and if they ask thee what theſe things mean; ver. 25. ſay to them, I will take away the Deſire of their Eyes, the Joy of their Glory, and that whereupon they ſet their Minds; God dealing therein as Benhadad threatned to do to Ahab, 1 Kings 20. 6. Yet I will ſend my Servants unto thee to morrow about this time, and they ſhall ſearch thine Houſe, and the Houſes of thy Servants; and it ſhall be, that whatſoever is pleaſant in thine Eyes, they ſhall put it in their Hand, and take it away. If thou haſt any thing better than other to part with, which would even kill thee, take heed, God loves to take that away with a Stroak. If any thing bring the Adverſaries in, Luſts will do it; Lam. 1, 10. The Adverſary hath ſpread out his Hand upon all her pleaſant things: for ſhe hath ſeen the Heathen entred into her Sanctuary, whom thou didſt command that they ſhould not enter into thy Congregation. Yea, the Creatures themſelves, as wronged and abuſed, will in the end caſt you out; Levit. 18. 26, 27, 28. Ye ſhall therefore keep my Statutes and my Judgments, and ſhall not commit any of theſe Abominations, neither any of your own Nation, nor any Stranger that ſojourneth among you: (For all theſe Abominations have the Men of the Land done, which were before you, and the Land is defiled.) That the Land ſpue not you out alſo, when ye defile it, as it ſpued out the Nations that were before you. They will ſpue you out with Loathing and Indignation, that is, provoke God with their Groans, mentioned, Rom. 8. 22. to do it to revenge their Quarrel; as Subjects when they are wronged, caſt out the Tyrant, and unhorſe him, becauſe he rides them too hard.

3*dly*. They do not only provoke God to do it, but even the very Luſts themſelves, and the eager Purſuit of them proves the inſtrumental Cauſe of the Loſs of the Objects they purſue: How many a Man had come to his Journey's End, if he had not ridden too faſt, and his Luſts had not ſpurred him, and he laid the Reins on their Necks? So in the Purſuit of Riches, Prov. 21. 5. He that haſteth to be rich, cometh to want; and ſo Prov. 28. 22. for either he entangleth himſelf in too much, and by labouring to graſp too much, loſeth all: or by too much Dearneſs and Falſeneſs turns away his Cuſtomers, which by moderate Gains he might hold and increaſe; Light Gains make the Purſe heavy: or runs into ſome unjuſt prohibited Courſe, and ſo forfeits all to the Law, as Solomon ſays, Prov. 28. 20. He that makes haſte to be rich, ſhall not be innocent, nor unpuniſhed, and whilſt he flies gredily to his Prey as a Bird, he gets a Bullet that kills him, viz. that ſame flying Roll ſpoken of, Zech. 5. 1, 2, 3. God's Curſe that flies into the Thieves and Oppreſſors Houſe: Or elſe he is the rather made a Prey to the Hunters and Nimrods of the World, as thoſe Beaſts are the ſooneſt that have the coſtlieſt Skins and Furrs on their Backs; Prov. 13. 8. The Riches of a Man are the Ranſom of his Life; being taken in a Fault, he is condemned the rather to die, that his Goods may be begged or forfeited; that to be the meaning, the next Words ſhew, The Poor hears not the Rebuke, that is, a meaner Man ſhall eſcape. So in the Purſuit of Learning, if ſome Scholars had been worm'd of that greedy Humour of vain Learning, they might have proved Scholars; but they through too much Reading of Variety of Books have ravelled and fazzel'd their Notions, that they cannot bring out a right end of them, or know not where to begin or end; beſides the making their Spirits and Bodies more unapt, and to be as tired Jades, dull'd and not able to hold out. So the ambitious Purſuit of worldly Greatneſs and Glory, has been their Ruin; many have fallen in the climbing, for venturing higher than the Boughs will bear them, as Abſalom did; or have been preſſed to Death by others in crowding, and have loſt their ambitious Aim, in the ſeeking it; Prov. 25. 27. It is not good to eat much Honey: ſo for Men to ſearch their own Glory, is not Glory.

Book VIII

The Deſire of Glory is Baſeneſs, and caſts a Spoil upon it when diſcovered: as proffer'd Ware loſeth its Eſteem; ſo Credit affected, like a Shadow it runs away from thoſe that follow it, fall down if you will catch it; He that humbleth himſelf, ſhall be exalted, Luke 14. 11. For whoſoever exalteth himſelf, ſhall be abaſed: and he that humbleth himſelf, ſhall be exalted. Or elſe if ſome Men do attain to ſome height, yet it proves unſeemly for them, and their Parts are not able to manage it, and ſo it proves their Shame, as Prov. 3. 35. The Wiſe ſhall inherit Glory, but Shame ſhall be the Promotion of Fools. So alſo the greedy and eager devouring of Pleaſures is often the means in the Iſſue and Event, to deprive Men of the things they ſhould have Pleaſure in, Prov. 21. 17. He that loveth Pleaſure, ſhall be a poor Man. Prodigal Men having much by them, lay all on the Fire's back at once, and ſo come to a Morſel of Bread: ſo Idleneſs alſo doth, and at laſt the ſlothful Man is fain to work for his Living, as the prodigal Son did, and to be glad of Husks. Laſt of all, God often uſeth the Luſt a Man hath been moſt indulgent unto, to be his Ruin, his Hang-man and Executioner; ſo Abſalom's Hair was to him, and Dalilah was ſo to Samſon.

Fourthly, If the Objects and we ſhould remain, yet the Luſt it ſelf gives us the ſlip before the thing is gone; 1 John 2. 17. The World paſſeth away, and the Luſts of it. Often when the thing remains, and when the Luſt or Stomach is gone, the Sweetneſs is gone, for nihil intereſt num non habeas aut non concupiſcas; for it is all one as if we had not the thing, if we do not deſire it; the Stomach is the ſame to Meat, without which the beſt Meat is fulſome.

For (1.) Often a Man's Mind changeth: for Fancy and Opinion being the Ground of Luſt, as a ſick Man's Mind alters, ſo doth a wicked Man's; his Luſt, which is his Caterer and his Keeper, with much Coſt and Care and Pains, hath procured and dreſſed ſuch a Diſh, which he longingly called for, and e're it comes he hath no Mind to it, but ſomething elſe. A Man's Luſt ſends him as a Lackey to purvey ſuch a Pleaſure, &c. and when that is obtained, or e're he is at his Journey's end, it ſends him upon ſome other Fool's Errand as oft: Yea, and the more curious a Man is to pleaſe his Luſts, the more froward, wayward and delicate do they grow, and the harder to pleaſe; like cockered Children, or Men in Conſumptions, when they have ſpent much time in projecting and building ſome ſtately Houſe, or have contrived ſome Diſh on which they might feed, before 'tis half finiſhed, their Delight in it is gone; as ſoon as the Diſh comes on the Table, their Appetite is pall'd. Solomon's great Orchyards and Buildings, Eccleſ. 2. were in the End no more to him than Woods and Cottages are to others, Eccleſ. 2. 4, 5, 11.

(2.) A little Sickneſs, or old Age, or a Croſs, make our Luſts to vaniſh, though the Objects remain; Health being the Salt to all Bleſſings. In old Age Eccleſ. 12. 1. Men come to ſay, I have no Pleaſure in them; yea, a little Affliction deadneth a Man's Luſts, as the Tooth-ach vexeth more than the Health of all the Members doth delight. The Affliction of an Hour makes a Man forget all Pleaſure, takes a Man's Heart from all, that all avails him nothing; as it did Haman, Eſther 5. 11, 12, 13. Nay if one wayward Luſt be croſt, (as his was) one Ounce of Sorrow ſpoils a Sea of Pleaſure, for ſegnius bona quam mala ſentimus, we have a ſlower and duller ſenſe of Good than Evil.

Fifthly, In the end when all Objects ſhall be taken away, then the Luſt remains to a Man's Torment, as it will prove ſo in Hell. Revel. 18. 14. And the Fruits that thy Soul luſteth after, are departed from thee; and all things which were dainty and goodly, are departed from thee, and thou ſhalt find them no more at all. All goodly things are departed, they ſhould ſeek them, and find them no more at all; then O for a Drop of Water, what would the wretched Man give for it? but a Man ſhall be kept cloſe Priſoner, and ſtarved to Death, and a worſe Death (if Hell were no more) could not be invented.

Sixthly, Now in the ſixth Place let us inquire into the Pleaſure it ſelf, which Men have in ſatisfying their Luſts; and we ſhall find that Men are infinitely cheated and deceived in it, which will many ways evidently appear.

For

Chap. 7.

For 1. Luſt pitcheth us upon taking pleaſure in things the Soul was never made for, in things which are unnatural to it, not only in unnatural Uncleanneſs, ſpoken of Rom. 1. 26, 27. but in Revenge, in the hurt of others, in diſgracing, oppreſſing others, and building our ſelves up on other Mens Ruins: wherein the Pleaſure therefore cannot be great, becauſe theſe are Objects not made for it, and is as if a Man ſhould find ſweetneſs in his own Dung, eat Man's Fleſh, or (as in ſome Diſeaſes) eat Aſhes and Clay, &c. For all Pleaſure ariſeth from Suitableneſs, and Suitableneſs ariſeth from God's fitting things at the firſt; thoſe naturally and moſt fully delight the Soul, as that Meat the Palate, which naturally was made for it. Now the Pleaſures of Unrighteouſneſs the Soul was not made for, therefore they are againſt the original Genius of it, they are nothing but a wreſting and a forcing and wringing it the wrong way; and all diſtorted Motions have more Pain than Pleaſure to accompany them: and therefore when a Man ſins, his Soul is put out of Joint, Gal. 6. 1. Brethren, if a Man be overtaken in a Fault, ye which are ſpiritual, reſtore ſuch an one in the ſpirit of Meekneſs; conſidering thy ſelf, leſt thou alſo be tempted. Καταρτίζητε, the word is, ſet him right again.

But 2. ſuppoſe it carries us on to take pleaſure in thoſe things that were made to perfect the Soul, as Learning, Knowledg, and which refreſh the Body, as the lawful Comforts of this Life; yet Luſt hath made theſe leſs pleaſant to us: for Original Sin and Luſt is a Diſeaſe, a Sickneſs and a Diſtemper in the Soul, as may ſeem to be the meaning of Solomon, where giving a reaſon of that Sorrow and Vexation of Men in enjoying outward things, ſays he, Eccleſ. 5. 17. He eats in Darkneſs all his days, and hath much Sorrow with his Sickneſs. Men are not bodily ſick all their days, bur their Minds are, and ſo they have much Sorrow in the uſe of all, by reaſon of the Sickneſs and Diſtemper of their Affections; for indeed, vivere eſt ægrotari, to live in our ſinful State, is to be always ſick: and therefore Chriſt muſt come with healing in his Wings, Mal. 4. 2. when Grace is renewed, which is the Health of the Soul. And that 'tis a Sickneſs, is evident from the burning Diſtemper, and violent Aguiſh-Fits of Longings we are caſt into, as Rachel was, when ſhe impatiently ſaid, Gen. 30. 1. Give me Children, or elſe I die. 'Tis evident from that Thirſtineſs and calling continually for Drink, as Deut. 29. 19. that toſſing from one ſide of the Bed to another, that is, changing our Stations, and Conditions, and Objects, and ſo thinking to eaſe our ſelves, but not to cure our ſelves. Now if it be ſo, then the Pleaſure is fulſom, and unnatural alſo, by reaſon of our vitiated Palat, a ſick Sweetneſs; and therefore we think all Beer bitter to us, that is, no Creature can long pleaſe us: whereas, were our Souls in Health, all Comforts would be ſweet and comfortable; and if a Man had experience of a Month's Health, he would find them ſo. But being led by Luſts, falling into a Fever, and alſo becauſe the Diſeaſe is fed, not the Man, who conſumes more and more, is weakened and effeminated; for his reſtleſs endeavours to gratify his Luſts, molitiem & debilitatem inducunt, ſuck out the Vigour of that Spirit which ſhould ſuſtain Infirmities: So that we are unapt to bear Croſſes, are more unuſeful to others, and weak to help our ſelves.

3. If we examine the Conception, the Birth and bringing up of all our Pleaſures in ſinning, we ſhall find that they are begotten, brought forth, trained up in Sorrow; and that this is much more than the Pleaſure.

(1.) Becauſe unleſs there be ſome difficulty in attaining that we deſire, we little care for a thing; the more we are reſtrained by Blocks in our way, by Checks of Conſcience before, (all which are painful to overcome) the more eager are we; and therefore ſtolen Meat is ſweet, Prov. 9. 17. Quod licet ingratum eſt, quod non licet ægrius urit; What is allowed us, is ingrateful; what is prohibited, more violently inflames us: and the Difficulty ſets a Price upon the Sin.

(2.) Sorrow is the Womb in, and the Matter of which all our Pleaſures in Sin are begotten; Pain is the Sulphur of this Blaze, the Sauce to this Sweet; for the very Deſire, till ſatisfied, is a reſtleſs Torture, 'tis but as the throbbing of a Boil, or the Pain of the Itch, which all Men account a Miſery; and ſatisfying is but the breaking of the Boil, 'tis rather Eaſe than Pleaſure: ſo the Stoicks defined it to be Indolence, and that that was the utmoſt Happineſs Man could attain to: it is only putting the Arm out of Bed to cool a little. And that this Deſire is a Torture, is evident by Amnon, who was lean from day to day, from the deſire he had to Tamar, 2 Sam. 13. 2, 4. and by Ahab who was ſick for Naboth's Vineyard, 1 Kings 21. 4. And therefore yielding to a Luſt, is rather the quitting our ſelves of the Torment of ſuch a Deſire which is importunate, than any ſweetneſs of Enjoyment: as the unjuſt Judg yielded to the Widow, to diſcharge himſelf of an importunate Suitor. And without ſtrong Deſire, no Pleaſure is found; for this is in proportion according to the Deſire. To whom is Meat ſweet, but to him that is pained with Hunger? elſe 'tis loathſom: ſo as all Satisfaction of Luſt, is but a Remedy for Pain, a privative Pleaſure rather than poſitive. And therefore our Luſts put us to a great deal of pains to pleaſe them, not ſuffering Men to ſleep unleſs they have done Miſchief; Hab. 2. 13. Behold, is it not of the Lord of Hoſts, that the People ſhall labour in the very Fire, and the People ſhall weary themſelves for very Vanity? Men weary themſelves for Vanity, and take pains to do wickedly, whether in gathering Riches, eating the Bread of Carefulneſs, &c. or in aſpiring after Glory and a Name; Magnus labor magnæ cuſtodia famæ, it is a great labour to preſerve a great Reputation. Credit is a coſtly Building, which coſts much the rearing, and much the keeping in repair: Or in Pleaſures, Men tire themſelves; the Adulterer watcheth for the Twilight; Men ſit up late at Cards and Dice. Thus Men are ſet to gather Straw, as the Iſraelites by the Egyptians, with much care, as Fuel and Proviſion for their Luſts.

(3.) The pleaſure in enjoying them, is but the encreaſing the Deſire, which you ſaw before was a Torture; and ſo as a Man in ſatisfying them, makes himſelf more Pain, more Work; his going of one Errand to pleaſe a Luſt, occaſioneth his being ſent again, and ſtill he is but the more weary: As drinking in a Dropſy, though it ſeem to eaſe, yet it makes the Thirſt more; and ſo the Man's Vexation is more by the gratification of his ſinful Deſires, he adds but Fuel to the Fire; and all his Pleaſures are Baits, not Meat, that do not feed the Man, but the Deſires; and the yielding to them, encourageth them to be more boldly importunate.

And yet 4. Theſe Pleaſures are but momentany, and die between our Teeth, or ſlip like Shadows from between our Hands whilſt we indeavour to graſp them; they are but a blaze of Straw, crackling of Thorns, Eccleſ. 7. 6. none of them are ſo long as one Fit of an Ague; if any of them are quick and lively, yet they periſh in the very uſing; yea, and ſo ſmall are they, as that the painful Deſire was more contentment to the Man than the Fruition, the wooing time more delightful than the enjoying; for then the Heart was fed with pleaſing hopes of poſſeſſing ſome great Good.

And 5. They leave the Heart full of Sorrows, like ſweet-ſinging Birds which Men endeavouring to catch, thruſting in their Hands on a ſudden, are left in the midſt of Thorns, and the Bird is flown and gone: Riches have Wings, ſo have Pleaſures: Prov. 14. 13. Even in Laughter the Heart is ſorrowful, and the End is Heavineſs; Extrema gaudii luctus occupat, Mourning ſtill ſucceeds Joy; and that appears many ways.

1*ſt*. Becauſe the Soul is left empty by them, the Luſt is ſatisfied, and the Soul gets nothing, is not bettered by it, but is conſumed and weakned rather; the Diſeaſe is fed, and not the Man; as no ſick Man is nouriſhed by all the Meat he takes; the Soul is ſtarved, the Luſt is only nouriſh'd. In the Parable of the Prodigal, the Swine, (that is his Luſts) eat up all the Husks, he could not get ſo much as them. Thus they ſay the Devil eats all the Witches Food, when he feaſts them. In a word, all the Satisfaction is but taking down Wind into the Body, Hoſea 12. 1. Ephraim feeds on the Wind, and Iſrael is a wild Aſs that ſnuffs up the Wind, the deſire of her Heart, Jer. 2. 24. And this Emptineſs vexeth, Eccleſ. 5. 16. And this alſo is a ſore Evil, that in all Points as he came, ſo ſhall he go: and what profit hath he that laboureth for the Wind? This is a ſore thing to labour for the Wind; and therefore the Soul goes ſtill bleating up and down, lowing for Fodder, as ſtarved as ever, like Pharaoh's lean Kine.

2*dly*. Becauſe the Luſt it ſelf, and the Soul find a Burthenſomneſs and a Loath-

Chap. 7.

Loathſomneſs in the End. It is not Emptineſs only, but Fulſomneſs; for tho a Man is not nouriſh'd by them, and ſo ſatisfied, yet he is cloyed and dauled with them; and then loathing comes, which is joined with Sorrow; Prov. 27. 7. A full Stomach loaths the Honey-comb; and ſo Amnon did loath Tamar when enjoyed; Præſentium tædio laboramus; the Object, when preſent, becomes a Burthen, and oppreſſeth Nature; for Luſt carries us to Exceſs, and Exceſs is loathſom.

3*dly*. Becauſe a Man can never ſatisfy one Luſt, but he muſt diſpleaſe another. Prodigality and Luxury bring forth Shame and Poverty with it, at the ſame time that it brings forth Pleaſure, or at leaſt ſo as to take it by the heel. As in miniſtring Phyſick to cool the Liver, they ſpoil the Stomach, &c. ſo a Man in laying up for one Luſt, ſtarves another; in heaping up Riches, he defrauds his Soul of Pleaſure; Eccleſ. 4. 8. —Yet is there no end of all his Labour, neither is his Eye ſatisfied with Riches, neither ſaith he, For whom do I labour, and bereave my Soul of Good? This is alſo Vanity, yea, it is a ſore Travel. This is a ſore Evil, to go with an empty Belly to fill their Cheſts: as a Man diſpleaſeth one dear Friend to pleaſure another; and if he ſits down, he diſpleaſeth both: for every Object a Man is converſant about, every Luſt comes about it like ſo many Swine to the Trough, and all put their Mouths in, and as ſome are pleaſed, ſo ſome are diſpleaſed: ſo as James 4. 1, 2, 3. they are ſaid to war in our Members one againſt another, to interrupt the free enjoying one of another; and all fighting againſt the Soul that ſtands in the midſt, and receives all the Blows, 1 Pet. 2. 11. and is pierced through with many Sorrows, 1 Tim. 6. 9.

4*thly*. There is much Sorrow mingled with them, becauſe what we affect and deſire, and do enjoy, we take care to keep, have perplexing fear of loſing them, and grieve anſwerably if we do loſe them; ſo as Riches, Honours, Pleaſures increaſe, Sorrows increaſe, for all theſe Affections have Pain joined to them; Eccleſ. 5. 11. When Goods increaſe, they are increaſed that eat them; and what good is there to the Owners thereof, ſaving the beholding of them with their eyes? When Riches increaſe, they will not ſuffer a Man to ſleep, as many Clothes will not. Nabal's Heart died for fear of loſing what he ſo loved; when the Storm of David's Anger was over, and the Danger paſt, and when Nabal was got ſafe over the dangerous Bridg, yet the Conceit kill'd him. When the Heart is rooted in any thing it delights in, the loſs of it tears out a piece of the Heart: therefore, Job 20. 15. God is ſaid to tear and rake Riches out of a covetous Man's Belly. David would have died rather than have loſt his Abſalom, ſo inordinate was his Grief, becauſe his Love was ſo. Thus in regard of the things we deſire and luſt for, we are like Children that are fond of a Man, and cry if he but ſeem to ſtir; and then when that is gone we are moſt affected with, we are vexed more, than ever we were pleaſed by the poſſeſſion of it, and cry, We are undone! Stultus quod perdidit amat: we are as a Fool, who then begins to prize a thing, when he hath loſt it.

5*thly*. Becauſe there is a Sting left behind, the Sting of Conſcience; therefore the Gratification of our Luſts hath more Pain than Pleaſure in it, it bites as a Cockatrice; Prov. 23. 31, 32. Look not thou upon the Wine when it is red, when it giveth his Colour in the Cup, when it moveth it ſelf aright: At the laſt it biteth like a Serpent, and ſtingeth like an Adder. It is a Dart that ſtrikes through the Liver, that wounds the Soul; and though the Wound is not felt in hot Blood, whilſt the Man is in eager purſuit of his Luſt, yet at Night when he is cooled, then theſe Wounds will ake and throb, and make him ſubject to the Fear of Death all his Life-time: the Sin will beat him at Night, notwithſtanding all his pains to commit it, as the Task-maſters did the Iſraelites. Though Men kindle Blazes of Pleaſures, which yet are but Sparks, and walk in the Comfort of them a-while, yet they lie down in Sorrow, Iſa. 50. 11. And in Hell, ſo much Torment there will be, in proportion to the Pleaſure which Men have had in Sin: James 5. 1. Go to now ye rich Men, weep and howl for your Miſeries that ſhall come upon you. Rev. 18. 7, 8. How much ſhe hath glorified her ſelf, and lived deliciouſly, ſo much Torment and Sorrow give her: for ſhe ſaith in her Heart, I ſit a Queen, and am no Widow, and ſhall ſee no Sorrow: Therefore ſhall her Plagues come in one day, Death, and Mourning, and Famine; and ſhe ſhall be utterly burnt with Fire; for ſtrong is the Lord God who judgeth her. Hear, and ſeriouſly conſider this, you who have lived in Pleaſure, and nouriſh'd your ſelves deliciouſly with ſinful Delights. Yea, and thoſe things which have been the Inſtruments of your Luſts, ſhall moſt be puniſhed: as Dives his Tongue, which was the Conduit-Pipe of his Pleaſure, was now the Veſſel of his Pain.

Wisdom in the hidden Part, or practical Wisdom concerning Original Sin, founded on David's Example and Practice, Psal. 51. 6. That this Sin is Matter of Repentance as well as our actual Sins, and how we are to be humbled for it, and to repent of it.

Behold, thou desirest Truth in the inward Parts; and in the hidden Part thou shalt make me to know Wisdom.

CHAP. I.

The Errors of the Papists, denying Original Sin to be the Object of Repentance. The Opinions of Bonaventure, Estius, Suarez and Bellarmine, propos'd and refuted.

EVery Truth in our Religion hath an ἔυπραξις, an Usefulness in it: The Doctrine of Original Sin in both parts of it, (the Guilt of Adam's Fact, and the Corruption inherent) is an eminent Truth, (which our Christianity cannot want) and therefore ought to have, and is fitted to have an ἐργασία, an Operation upon the Heart of every Christian, answerable to the Weight and Moment of the Truth; and therefore is not to lie by us as if it were a mere Speculation. And whatever Dispositions of Heart others may have handled, as required of Christians towards God about it; I shall single out this of Humiliation, Contrition, or Brokenneſs of Heart for it. For if it be Sin, and our Sin, (proprium Peccatum, tho not propriæ Operationis) tho not of our own committing or operation, and whereof yet the Guilt ariſeth unto us; we may be ſure that a ſerious Humiliation and Submiſſion of Soul is requiſite for it; for Humiliation and Sin are Relatives in their Kind, even as Faith and Chriſt are: and ſo far as it is Sin and our Sin, it is meet we be humbled for it.

or

To evince all which, you have here David's Practice and Example ſet afore you in this Treatiſe; and e're I come to the clearing thereof, I do by way of Preface give the Reader a brief Scheme of thoſe practical Errors, and not ſo much about the Doctrine of Original Sin it ſelf, which Men, profeſſing themſelves Divines, have uttered about the Exerciſe of Repentance for it, and if any, what it ſhould be. Among many it hath been made a ſet and ſolemn Queſtion, Whether any Repentance and Humiliation at all is required of Chriſtians for Original Sin, (whether it be the Guilt of Adam's firſt Act of Sin, or the Corruption): and at beſt, the moſt allow ſo ſlight a Diſplicency for it, (for ſo they mince it) as truly 'tis ſcarce worth the owning by God. I ſhall ſpread their Opinions before you: for 'tis no ſmall Advantage towards the underſtanding the Truth, to have a view of the Errors about it, or fallings ſhort of the Truth, and that in their ſeveral Sizes and Proportions leſſer and greater: It makes us both value the Truth the more, and better diſcern it when we perceive where Truth and Errors part.

Firſt; Not to inſiſt on the Socinians Doctrine and Practice, who wholly and utterly deny this Sin in us in any part of it; and therefore no wonder if they put it not into their Confeſſions, and teach Men not to do ſo.

Secondly; As for the Arminians, they (the old ones I am ſure did) acknowledg the Imputation of Adam's Act to be our Sin, but the Corruption inherent to be only a Puniſhment of that Sin, and ſo not a Sin diſtinctly conſidered: but withal, they teach that all that accrues to us, as Sin in it, is ſo taken away by Chriſt the ſecond Adam, and ſo univerſally, even to Heathens, as well as thoſe that are baptized among Chriſtians, as that they are all quitted of that Sin, (when of no other without Repentance;) but this they ſay, whether Men repent or not, it ſhall never be laid unto Mens Charge; ſo as we need not trouble our ſelves more about it.

Thirdly; As for the Papiſts, they grant the Imputation of Adam's Act as of a Sin, and alſo original Corruption inherent to have been a Sin afore Baptiſm, and ſo to all unbaptized; but affirm withal, that Baptiſm is appointed to take away all the Sinfulneſs or Guilt that may redound from either Act or Corruption: and what is left of inherent Corruption after Baptiſm, is not a Sin in them, or to them, but a Weakneſs, a phyſical Corruption; as a Diſeaſe or any other Infirmity in Nature, but not a moral Evil. And then for actual Sins after Baptiſm, they have ſet up that Invention of Penance (as they call it) or Repentance, to be a Sacrament, for the forgiveneſs of actual Sins; the Myſtery whereof is to neceſſitate all Men to a Confeſſion unto, and Abſolution by a Prieſt for ſuch Sins; as Baptiſm is a Sacrament for the taking away Original Sin. So that this of Penance, &c. is God's Ordinance (they ſay) for taking away the Guilt of actual Sins only of a Man's own committing: And ſo by this Doctrine they do quit thoſe that are baptized, and their Conſciences wholly of Original Sin (as a Sin). And thus they think themſelves compleat Chriſtians, and to have a full Proviſion made for both, as to the Forgiveneſs both of original and actual Sin; what between the one Remedy of Baptiſm, and the other of Repentance. And they are ſo intent upon magnifying this, their ſacramental Repentance for Mens own actual Sins, that they load not Mens Conſciences at all with Repentance or Humiliation for Original Sin, as having been ſufficiently removed by Baptiſm: they put over this Sin wholly unto that; ſo as that comes not within the compaſs of any Confeſſion that is to be made either to a Prieſt for Abſolution, nor of a Repentance before God; and this is a great Myſtery of their Religion.

* Lib. 4. Sent. diſtinct. 16. p. 2. quæſt. 1. Specialiter quantum ad adultos qui ſe habere neſciunt, & quantū ad hos non oportet quod aliquis actus deteſtationis adveniat.

Bonaventure *, the beſt of all the antient Schoolmen, yet ſpeaks leanly and flaccidly as to this Point; his Determinations are,

1. That all Men grown up are not bound to a Deteſtation and Repentance for this Corruption; becauſe, ſays he, all Men do not know they have ſuch Corruption in them, and ſo are not obliged to any Act, no not of Deteſtation; ſo he ſpeaks about about it. A good Church it is in the mean time, that ſo crieth up the Efficacy of Baptiſm, to take it ſo generally away, as it judgeth that the Prieſt needs not inſtruct their Penitents grown up of the Evil of this Sin.

2. For them that are grown up and know it, he ſays, (1.) It is meet indeed and fit that this Sin ſhould diſpleaſe them, that they ſhould have a Diſplacency, not a Contrition or Brokenneſs of Heart for it: for afterwards it follows, that he is not bound to afflict himſelf for it. And (2.) That Diſplacency neither is but only congruous, not neceſſary. (3.) That it be done but in the general, (as it is common with all others of Mankind, or in the lump and groſs with all other Sins) but not in ſpecial, as his own particular Condition.

Quantum ad tales qui ſciunt congruum eſt quod diſpliceat non in ſpeciali ſed in generali, ſed non eſt neceſſarium. And after that, Quod non tenetur ſe affligere. Bonavent. ibid.

Only I confeſs Eſtius corrects him, for it is ſo ſmall Allowance out of Aquinas, as being too ſhort, and ſays, debet haberi, that a Man ought to have it; and yet how he corrects himſelf in this afterwards, I ſhall ſhew.

Æſtius lib. 4. Sent. diſtinct. 16. §. 6.

And for Aquinas himſelf, he reſtrains Repentance propriè & principaliter, properly and principally, unto mortal Sin committed by a Man's ſelf, as the Object of it: but as to Original Sin his words are, Repentance is neither [principally] appointed for it, becauſe the Sacrament of Penance is not ordained for it, but Baptiſm rather: nor [properly], becauſe it was not committed by our own VVills, &c. And yet take Repentance largely (ſays he) for any kind of Deteſtation of a thing paſt, ſo it may be termed Repentance for Original Sin. Thus he limits it unto an Act of Deteſtation only, and that but ſuch as amounts to [an any kind of Deteſtation of a thing paſt, which is amiſs] which is as little as may be, and at beſt but as much as nothing for it, and that for the preſent, unleſs Humiliation, inherent Corruption dwelling in us, be performed alſo by us.

Tho. Aquinas, ter. par. quæſt. 84. art. 2. ad tertium.

Suarez, one of our acuteſt new Schoolmen, ſays, 1. Non videtur eſſe apta materia virtutis pœnitentiæ, That Original Sin ſeems not fit Matter or Object for the Vertue of Repentance. So that it is not for that Grace ſo much as to be converſant or exerciſed about it, but as for their Sacrament of Penance or Repentance: This Sin nullo modo pertinet ad materiam illius Sacramenti, it doth no way belong to the Matter of that Sacrament; and therefore Contrition for it is not required at all of theſe Penitents afore their Abſolution.

In tertiam par. 4. diſp. 2. Sect. 1. de objecto materiali, Tom. 14. Oper.

And the moſt I can get of him is, 2. That if we conſider this Vertue of Repentance, as it is a mere ſimple Affection, and a piece of Juſtice which we owe to God, as Original Sin is a State of Injuſtice to God; and ſo conſider'd, we may have ſuch a kind of Repentance for it. And ſo far he bountifully grants; Hoc modo non eſt inconveniens objectum ejus ampliari etiam ad originale: ſo taken, it is NOT INCONVENIENT (forſooth) to extend it to Original Sin as its Object.

And again, 3. Poſſumus dolere eò quòd humanum genus in primo parente Deum offenderit; VVe may be grieved that Mankind did offend God in their firſt Parent: which is all one with Bonaventure's [in generali] that in general we may exerciſe a Diſplacency about it, but not in ſpecial, that is, particularly for our own Perſons, which yet we are to do, and lay it to Heart, as if none elſe had been guilty of it with us.

And 4. In his Cloſe he adds of that alſo, that this may be done by conſidering it ſpeculatively, ſo as thereby to expreſs an Affection to God.

But 5. Afterwards he profeſſedly ſays, There is no Commandment given us either to mourn for it, or be diſpleaſed thus at it, (for of thoſe two Acts he had ſpoken afore.) Nay, he adds, nec dari oportuit, nor ought any ſuch Command to have been given.

Negat eſſe neceſſarium, ac merito, quia nullum latum eſt de eo præceptum, nec dari oportuit, quia ſicut unius Adæ voluntate commiſſum eſt, ita unius Chriſti voluntate pro illo ſatisfactum eſt: & ſicut generatione naturali contrahitur, ita etiam per regenerationem in Chriſto deletur. Suarez ibid. Originale peccatum etiamſi (rem ſpeculativè conſiderando) poſſit eſſe materia ſeu objectum alicujus odii pertinentis ad pœnitentiam, &c.

And 6. He gives this profeſſed Reaſon, Becauſe as that Sin was committed but by the VVill of that one Man Adam, ſo it was ſatisfied for by the VVill (or willing Obedience) of Chriſt alone: and as by Generation natural it is contracted by us, ſo alſo by Regeneration in Chriſt (which with them is done once for all in Baptiſm, unto all baptized) it is blotted out: and ſo (as we uſe to ſay) it lightly comes, and it as lightly goes: and thus they paſs it over and wrap it up.

Book IX.

Nihilominus non eſſe materiam neceſſariam, neq; practicè loquendo moraliter utilem ad corrigendos & emendandos mores, qui ſunt proprii fines virtutis Pœnitentiæ. Suarez ibidem.

Auguſtinus docet corripiendam eſſe in homine originem damnabilem; non quia eam quiſque ſibi fecit, neq; quia in eâ natus eſt, aut eam habet, niſi forte culpabiliter gratiam regenerationis diſtulerit, &c. Eſtius ibid. lib. 4. Sent. diſtinct. 16. §. 6. ad finem.

Nay 7. He concludes, Nihilominus, &c. That notwithſtanding all thoſe liberal Grants he had made about it, of Diſplacency, &c. (which you have now heard) yet it is not a neceſſary Matter or Ground of any ſuch Acts, nor to ſpeak PRACTICALLY (ſays he) is it an USEFUL Matter (of Repentance) to correct Mens Manners, which are the proper Ends of Repentance. Thus he. So as in fine they plainly lay aſide all kind of Repentance about it, as of no uſe at all, in the Exerciſes thereof.

And as for Eſtius, for all his debet haberi, he notwithſtanding in his Cloſe about it, comes off thus, ---in anſwer to an Objection made out of Auſtin, that that damnable Original Sin is to be laid to heart, amended and corrected in a Man; Not (ſays Eſtius) either becauſe every Man did it for himſelf, nor becauſe HE WAS BORN IN IT, or that he hath it (in him), nor unleſs the caſe happen to be that a Man ſinfully delays the Grace of Regeneration, and wilfully remains in Corruption, and will not be freed from it by Regeneration: And ſo to do, is the Sin of a Man's own Will, which is ſeverely to be repented of. So that indeed Eſtius puts all upon this; In caſe a Man delays Repentance, and will not be freed by it from that State of Corruption, ſo indeed he is to repent, and for ſo doing, for that is always a Sin of his own Will; but ſtill ſo as take original Corruption ſimply, and as inherent in him, he flatly affirms he is not bound to repent or be afflicted for it, either becauſe he was born in it, or BECAUSE HE HATH IT, that is, that 'tis in him.

O how ſlightly, ſlenderly, leanly and dilutely do theſe Men ſpeak of, and paſs over one of the greateſt Matters, and of the greateſt Concernment to Mankind that ever was in the World! Brethren, love and value your Religion. Let us take part rather with Paul, who in the Concluſion of his Diſcourſe about that Corruption, (which they after Baptiſm deny to be a Sin) we find to have been ſo infinitely preſs'd at the ſenſe of it, that he cries out, O miſerable Man that I am! who ſhall deliver me? &c. And the Miſery he there intends and complains of, is the above-mentioned ſinful Sin, as that which all along from ver. 14. in that Chapter he had ſo bitterly complained of; and yet Paul had been baptized many years afore he writ this Epiſtle. And if any ſay, he ſpeaks in the Perſon of an unregenerate Man, we know that Multitudes remain ſuch after their being baptized. Fall down likewiſe let us here with David, who long after his Circumciſion (which our Baptiſm ſucceeds) thus bewail'd the Corruption of his Nature; and bitterly lament and humble our ſelves for this Sin, as we ſhall ſee that here he did,—with an Ecce, a Behold upon it; Behold, I was ſhapen in Iniquity, and in Sin did my Mother conceive me.

And truly the greateſt Grounds I can find in Suarez or Bellarmine, or any of them, is, firſt, That the Object of Repentance properly is Actus proprius, an Act done by a Man's ſelf; and that in rigour Repentance is only Retractatio facti præteriti, the recalling with Sorrow and Grief a Fact that is paſt, which muſt be ſuppoſed a Man's own: Pœnitet & facto torqueor ipſe meo. Whereas (ſay they) neither of theſe two parts of Original Sin are committed or contracted by a Man's own Will, and ſo come not under the caſe of Repentance. And, ſecondly, That there is not, nor can be any morſus Conſcientiæ, Sting or Senſe of Conſcience for this Sin, ſuch as for our own actual Sins. One of theſe ſo expreſſeth himſelf, Nemo in ſe reperit morſum Conſcientiæ propter hoc peccatum; no Man finds in himſelf any Sting of Conſcience for this Sin. Ego nunquam ſenſi, &c. I never felt any, ſays he, &c.

As for Refutation of theſe Opinions I ſhall ſay little. David's Practice, and what follows in the Treatiſe it ſelf, will be ſufficient for this: yet I ſhall premiſe here ſome few things thereto.

Firſt, I would bring both Papiſts and thoſe others unto Acts 2. 37, 38. Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their Heart, and ſaid unto Peter, and to the reſt of the Apoſtles, Men and Brethren, what ſhall we do? Then Peter ſaid unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, for the remiſſion of Sins, and ye ſhall receive the Gift of the Holy Ghoſt. Here we find thoſe Chriſtian Converts newly ſtricken with the ſenſe of Sin, and as yet unbaptized; and to the end they might be baptized by the Apoſtles, are exhorted to repent of their Sins; Repent, and be baptized for the remiſſion of Sins. Now I would demand whether or no they were not herein exhorted to repent of every ſort of Sin that was to be forgiven them, and the Forgiveneſs whereof was to be ſealed up by Baptiſm? and ſo, whether they were not here commanded to repent in common of their Original Sin, as well as of their Actual, in order to that ſealing up of Forgiveneſs of one as well as of the other?

And from thence my Argument lies thus;

That all thoſe Sins, the Forgiveneſs of which, Baptiſm upon Repentance was the Seal, of all thoſe Sins (that is, indefinitely, of any ſort or particular of them) they were to repent in order to that Forgiveneſs. But theſe original Sins (if Sins either of them) were Sins, whereof Baptiſm upon Repentance was the Seal of their Forgiveneſs, as well as of their own actual. Ergo.

The Proof hereof lies upon this, That theſe things are made of like Extent by the Apoſtle. 1. Sins to be repented of in order to Forgiveneſs, &c. 2. Forgiveneſs of thoſe Sins upon Repentance. 3. Baptiſm ſealing up that Forgiveneſs on Repentance.——There is no ſort of Sin that was to be forgiven, but is alike indefinitely exhorted to be repented of, and Baptiſm to be adminiſtred to ſeal up the Forgiveneſs thereof: for this Exhortation is general, or at leaſt indefinite, and reacheth to all ſorts of Sins that are to be forgiven. And who ſhall make the exception or difference, that ſome Sins need not be repented of in order to Forgiveneſs, but others muſt, ſince the Apoſtle makes none? In like manner, when Chriſt, preaching the Goſpel, exhorted to repent and believe, ſurely his Intendment was, that our Repentance for Sins ſhould be as extenſive as our Faith for the Forgiveneſs of them. If therefore we are to exerciſe Acts of Faith for the Forgiveneſs of all or any, then Acts of Repentance alſo: Who ſhall diſtinguiſh where God and Chriſt do not?

If any ſay, It is not requiſite that every Sin that is to be forgiven ſhould particularly be repented of: The Anſwer is, True, if it be underſtood upon this Ground, or with this Caution, that a Penitent cannot de facto know or recal every particular Sin of his through Weakneſs; yet ſo as yet the Duty lies upon all, or any, indefinitely one as well as another, eſpecially any one ſort of Sin as well as another, (about which the Queſtion is) and ſo as ſtill every one Sin is capable of a true Repentance as well as another; ſo as it muſt not be ſaid of any, that he needs not repent of ſuch or ſuch, that yet are acknowledged Sins, and for which Forgiveneſs is neceſſary.

And this Argument from Acts 2. comes the more home unto the Papiſts; for, according to their Doctrine, Baptiſm is principally intended and ordained for the Forgiveneſs of Original Sin, and the taking of it away as a Sin: So ſay they. And therefore ſay I, the Apoſtle, according to the Rule of Adequation, muſt be ſuppoſed to exhort theſe Men, now grown up to riper Years, to the Repentance of this Sin, in order to their being baptized, above any other.

Nor will the Inſtance of Infants, that they are not bound to repent of this Sin in order to Forgiveneſs at Baptiſm, and yet have it forgiven, obſtruct this; for theſe Converts were Adulti, Men grown up and come to knowledg: and this Rule in Acts 2. was given principally for what concerned them, and ſuch as they, viz. Men of riper Years when baptized: And ſo ſuch were and are obliged to repent of it.

If it be farther ſaid, That however their Original Sin being upon Baptiſm forgiven them, and that Forgiveneſs ſealed up thereby once for all, that therefore theſe Men were not obliged any more to repent of that Sin being ſo ſealed up and forgiven; and therefore not we, ſeeing it was done away once for all when we were baptized Infants.

The Reply is, That their actual Sins committed afore their Repentance and Baptiſm, were then forgiven as well as their original, and the Forgiveneſs of them ſealed up as well as this of original: and ſurely they will not affirm that theſe Converts were not obliged, nor needed any more at all to repent of their actual Sins after that Forgiveneſs at Baptiſm, eſpecially if they look a Verſe or two back, and conſider that crucifying of Chriſt was one of the Sins they are there exhorted to repent of, and were prick'd in their Hearts in order unto Forgiveneſs. And will they ſay, they needed not to repent of that Sin, becauſe forgiven at Baptiſm, whenas St. Paul, that had that Sin forgiven at his Baptiſm, yet cries out bitterly, I was a Perſecutor and Injurious, long after his Baptiſm.

Secondly, A ſecond Anſwer is, That both others, and the Papiſts, do in theſe Aſſertions bring up the higheſt Antinomianiſm, and proclaim themſelves as much ſuch as any are in the World: for theſe Aſſertions are founded upon this Suppoſition, That if a Sin be once forgiven by God, we need no more repent of it, or lay it to heart. The Papiſts Doctrine holds all Men in ſuſpenſe about the Forgiveneſs of actual Sins, but peremptorily teacheth that this original Sin is forgiven for ever,—and pretend to have the Aſſurance thereof, when not of the Forgiveneſs of the other; and from hence exact not a Repentance for this in Perſons baptized: ſo that look wherein they judg an abſolute Forgiveneſs to be, therein they are as perfect Antinomians as any. And what reaſon of difference can be given, why Original Sin, once forgiven, ſhould never more be humbled for, but actual Sins muſt; and why the Abſolution of a Prieſt in their Penance ſhould not abſolve them from actual Sins (Penance being to them God's Ordinance) as effectually, as the other Ordinance, Baptiſm, doth from original?

Beſides, is not this unkind and diſingenuous, whether in Papiſts or whomſoever, that this Sin forgiven by God, and remembred by him no more, ſhould therefore be forgotten by us? Shall a Man run away with the Forgiveneſs, and paſs it over thus, ſo as not to concern himſelf about the Sin forgiven any more? Shall not this Sin (if it be a Sin, as they confeſs) abound in our ſenſe and apprehenſions, to the end that the Grace of Forgiveneſs may abound much more? Which Grace (if this Sin, according to the proportion of Sin in it, be not laid to Heart) is utterly loſt, deeming it, but as we do, a common Pardon of courſe, of which there would be Forgiveneſs whether we repent or no. However, it ſhould have a due regard from us, when we repent of other Sins, tho pardoned, to humble our ſelves for that alſo, it being proper unto us, that is, every one of us who are perſonally guilty of it, as if none other had been guilty of it with us. Aſſurance of Forgiveneſs quits us not, nor diſchargeth us of confeſſing and humbling our ſelves: We are to humble our ſelves the more, becauſe pardoned: ſo Ezek. 16. 63. That thou mayſt remember, and be confounded, and never open thy Mouth any more, becauſe of thy Shame, when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou haſt done, ſaith the Lord God. And though here the Prophet mentions only what we have done, yet there is the ſame reaſon of what we are or have been, or of what may be counted Sin, and for which God is pacified towards us too, as well as any other Sin; there is every way the ſame reaſon for both. We are to put our Mouths in the Duſt for ever for all Sins for which God is pacified, eſpecially when we feel the Venom of a Sin, (as in this Caſe it is) like a Cup of Poiſon drunk by us, ſtill working in our Bowels, and continuing ſo to do, until Death, which it brought into the World, fetcheth us out.

Rom. 5.

Theſe things I have caſt rather into a Preface, than to inſert them into the Body of the Diſcourſe it ſelf, (though there they might have had a fit Place) becauſe I aim at the benefit of the common ſort of Chriſtians, whom ſuch a Narrative of others Opinions do often deter and divert from reading any farther.

I ſhould likewiſe here anſwer thoſe forementioned Grounds why they deny Original Sin to be fit Matter of Repentance, which Bellarmine alſo manifeſtly affirms, namely, 1. Becauſe Repentance is properly only of an Act done by a Man's ſelf. And 2. Becauſe there is not, nor can be any morſus Conſcientiæ, ſting or biting of Conſcience for this Sin, eſpecially for Adam's Fact imputed, (ſo ſay they.) But becauſe the Anſwers to theſe are more proper Ingredients into the very Practice and Exerciſe of our Souls about it, I have remanded them to a due Place in the Diſcourſe it ſelf.

CHAP.

Chap. 2.

CHAP. II.

The Expoſition of the Text proved: That David expreſſeth Humiliation and Repentance for his Original Sin, and that he humbles himſelf in the ſenſe of his Guilt by the Imputation of Adam's firſt Sin, and of the Sinfulneſs of his own Nature.

PSAL. li. 5, 6.

Behold, I was BROUGHT FORTH in Iniquity; and in Sin did my Mother CONCEIVE me.

Behold, thou deſireſt Truth in the inward Parts: and in the hidden Part thou haſt made me to know Wiſdom.

MY intended Subject is the Demeanour and Exerciſe of an humbled penitent Soul in point of Original Sin towards God: It is not the Doctrine of Original Sin, (of which I have already diſcourſed) but what Humiliation and Repentance the Soul, convinced of it, is to put forth about it. And truly it is an uſeful Point of Practice as any other, and conducing greatly to glorify God, which yet is much out of uſe, I fear, in the private Intercourſes of Chriſtians between God and their own Souls, which therefore I ſhall endeavour to revive in your Spirits.

My Ground and Warrant for this, is David's Frame and Exerciſe of Spirit here in theſe two Verſes; this being the moſt proper Scope of them, and this the eminent Penitential Pſalm of all the other ſeven, in the common repute of Antiquity, and wherein David as a Penitent, upon occaſion of this Murder and Adultery, and other groſs actual Sins, humbles himſelf deeply for this his Original Sin as the Cauſe and Spring of all: and therefore I do found the treating hereof upon this his Practice. And that I may with more advantage urge and direct you in and to this Exerciſe of Spirit and Soul about it, and lay a ſure and proper Foundation for my whole Diſcourſe, concerning this the Practical Part, (as I ſtile it) I ſhall in the firſt place open the Words, and David's Heart as it lies incloſed in them; the Sum of which I reduce unto two principal Heads, to which I add a third.

I. David's Confeſſion of this Sin, or David's Brokenneſs of Heart for it: by opening which I ſhall clear that the Scope and Intention of his Soul was deeply to humble himſelf for this Sin, &c.

II. David's own Reflection upon God's working this in him, and having diſcovered and ſet upon his Soul this Sin; he bleſſing God highly for this in the cloſe of that his Confeſſion in thoſe words, ver. 6. And in the hidden Part thou haſt made me to know Wiſdom.

III. There is a third Head ſerving to open the Words, which is, That whereas there are two Parts or Branches of Original Sin;

1. Adam's firſt Tranſgreſſion imputed:
2. Inherent Corruption thence flowing:

I ſhall give ſome account that each of theſe are included diſtinctly in the Words, according to the Opinion of ſome Interpreters, which will make the Book IX. Expoſition of theſe Words compleat, and will alſo afford a Foundation for two Parts concerning each of theſe, which I have propounded to my ſelf to handle in this Diſcourſe, as in the Sequel will appear.

Firſt; For the clearing of the firſt of theſe Heads: Some would elude this Place by ſaying, it is his Mother's Sin ſuppoſed to have been in her in the Act of Generation, which he confeſſeth here, and not at all any that was his own, in which by her he ſhould have been conceived: Whereas on the contrary,

1. All his Acknowledgments in that Pſalm run upon his own Iniquity, his Heart was filled and poſſeſs'd with his perſonal Sins: ſo all along hitherto, MY Tranſgreſſions, ver. 1. MY Iniquity, and MY Sin, ver. 2. I acknowledg MY Tranſgreſſions, MY Sin is ever before me, ver. 3. Againſt Thee, Thee only have I ſinned, ver. 4. And ſhall we think that here he diverts to the Sin of his Mother, when he was in the full heat and carreer of confeſſing his own?

2. His Grief for his own Sins was ſo intenſe, both afore theſe Words and after, as muſt needs leave little Heart for him to run out upon his Mother's Sin, and leave off the purſuance of his own: he is not in Jeremiah's or Job's Frame, to curſe the Day of his Birth, and his Mother that brought him forth; no, we find him too deeply broken to do ſo: And to what purpoſe ſhould it be for him to ſay, My Mother ſinned in conceiving me, whilſt he lays ſo deeply to heart his Murder and lying with another Man's Wife? What had his Mother's Sin in conceiving him, to do with his having committed the Murder of Uriah, and defiling his Wife Bathſheba?

3. Nor did his Mother ſin in that Act of conceiving him, more than in other Actions the Godly do, and as indeed in all Actions we all do. He might have ſaid, that in eating and drinking, whereby ſhe nouriſh'd him in the Womb, ſhe had ſinned, as well as in this of conceiving him. His Mother was a godly Woman, as that Speech ſhews, Pſal. 116. 16. O Lord, truly I am thy Servant, I am thy Servant, and the Son of thy Handmaid: And he the Iſſue of lawful Marriage, whereof the Bed was undefiled, Heb. 13. 4. yea ſanctified, 1 Cor. 7. 14. And ſhall David then, upon occaſion of defiling another Man's Wife, and begetting a Baſtard, or a Child unclean, reflect upon his Parents lawful Act, yea, an Act ſanctified by God? No. Beſides, David was now at the Bottom of Hell acknowledging his Sins, ver. 3. and 'tis utterly contrary to the Genius of ſuch a Soul to mention the Sins of others in ſuch a caſe.

Secondly; If it was his own Sin he ſo cries out of, then certainly his having himſelf been conceived in Sin, and ſo his own Conception-Sin and Birth-Sin (which we call Original Sin) was it which he ſo much bewails, and it could be no other: And take our Doctrine about it, which teacheth it is derived by Conception, &c. and there could not be more manifeſt Words to ſignify it.

And that this ſhould be his very Heart and Meaning, is every way ſo congruous: For,

1. It holds ſome Order and Equipage with former Confeſſions in other Pſalms: he had confeſſed the Sins of his Youth, in Pſal. 25. and here the groſſer Acts of his more elder Years: he had ſaid, Pſal. 58. 2. That the Wicked go aſtray from the Womb: And here himſelf goes farther, and deſcends to the Source of all, Behold, I was brought forth in Sin, yea, and conceived in it, &c.

And 2. that upon occaſion of theſe ſo foul Miſcarriages, he takes a new Survey of the Sins of his whole Life, and examining himſelf to the bottom, ſhould arrive at this: even as in going along by a River, we come at laſt to the Well-Head, the Fountain of all thoſe Streams; ſo here. And this is natural and coherent, and there was a full Riſe for this; and it is no other but perfectly correſpondent with what the Apoſtle long after inſtructs us in, Col. 3. 9. even to join inherent Corruption and its Deeds together, as Cauſe and Effects. And David ſpeaks apparently to the like purpoſe here, This I have DONE (in the former Words,) for thus I was conceived in Sin, and behold, theſe Deeds are the curſed Iſſue of that Sin: He yokes, you ſee, the old Man and his Pranks together; yea, upon this Examination of the Matter, he found this the Cauſe of theſe and of all Sins elſe whatever. And therefore,

3. He

3. He sets, you may observe, the behold upon the matter of this Confession above all the former. He sets not the behold upon those actual Sins, or his, This have I done; yea, he translates the wonder from off his having committed these, although so foul Sins, and puts it over the Head of this his Conception-Sin, as that which bears the account of all; and so it is as if he had said, No wonder if I have thus foully transgressed, having the Principles of these and all Sins in me; the wonder rather lies in this, that I have not formerly so sinn'd, and filled my Life with such Defilements. Chap. 2.

Thirdly; The issue and close in his inserting and intermingling the Confession of this Sin, with that of those grosser Sins, was every way suitable and becoming a broken Soul; which I shall farther draw out in these four Particulars, which will both help us to take up what David's Heart was in, and also discover this, wherein the very Practice or Exercise of a penitent Soul consists as touching this Sin.

1. It was thereby to humble himself greatly, and thereby the more for those actual Sins, by joining this and those his Deeds together: His Scope was not to extenuate the Matter in those actual Sins, which the next Verse clears, as Calvin hath observed, but to aggravate and aggrandize them; and it is as if he had said to God, (for unto God it is he utters this and all the rest) I have been guilty of this Evil which I have done in thy sight, this my Murder and Adultery, as likewise of infinite other Transgressions in the course of my Life; but above all, I humble my self for this my Conception-Sin. For [I] that have committed these grosser Evils, am further in my Nature a Mass and Lump of all Sin altogether corrupt, and would of my self have committed those, and all Sins else, as other Men do, and am ready (if left to my self) to commit a thousand more such-like. And if we do farther attentively consider the great import of his behold, affixed upon this Sin's Head, and not upon those other of his grossest Sins, it will promptly and pregnantly give us to understand how deeply sensible his Soul was, and how greatly humbled for this Sin above the other. We may observe how he forbore to set it over his Confession of those his actual Sins, though the grossest, but reserves his behold for this. He said not, Behold, this Evil have I done, ver. 5. but, Behold, I was conceived in Sin, &c. He says not, Behold, (I) David a King, that have received such and such Mercies from God, who would have given me more, (as God told him) who had that entire Communion with him, and Graces from him, [I] even [I] have done this Evil: No, he keeps it in till he came to this, and then his Heart could hold no longer; O, BEHOLD, I was conceived in Sin. His Debasement was at its Auge here. And to whom is it he utters this Behold? What, to Man? No, his meaning is not to call on Men, (q. d.) O! all ye Sons of Men, behold: That is but his secondary Aim, arising out of his having penned it, and delivered it unto the Church: But when he uttered it, it was to God, or rather afore God; and yet, not as calling on God to behold, for that needed not: David had elsewhere said, God look'd down, &c. and beheld the Sons of Men, when speaking of this very Corruption. He therefore knew God beheld it sufficiently; but he utters it afore God, or, as spoken of himself, between God and himself, thereby to express his own Astonishment and Amazement at the sight and conviction of this Corruption, and at the sight of what a Monster he saw himself to be in the sight of God, in respect of this Sin. It was a Behold of Astonishment at himself, as before the great and holy God; and therefore it was, he seconds and follows it with another Behold made unto God, Behold, thou requirest Truth in the inward Parts. And it is as if he had said in both, O! how am I every way overwhelmed, whilst with one Eye cast on my self I see how infinitely corrupt I am in the very Constitution of my Nature; and with the other Eye I behold and consider what an infinite holy God Thou art in thy Nature and Being; and what an Holiness it is which thou requirest: I am utterly overwhelmed in the intuition of both these, and am able to behold no more, nor to look up unto thee, O Holy God!

This

Book IX.

This is the firſt Particular, humbling himſelf.

2. His Scope is to clear God: So in the Coherence with ver. 4, and 5. Againſt thee, thee only have I ſinned, and done this Evil in thy ſight; that thou mighteſt be juſtified when thou ſpeakeſt, and be clear when thou judgeſt. Behold, I was ſhapen in Iniquity; and in Sin did my Mother conceive me. I have done this Evil, I who have ſuch a Nature, conveyed together with my very Being, which, O Lord, will utterly clear thee, that when thou comeſt to judg, thou mayeſt be juſtified, who art an Holy God, tempteſt no Man to Evil, and hadſt nothing to do with theſe Sins of mine, but it was I my ſelf alone, out of the proneneſs of my Nature and Birth-Sin, who have done theſe Evils; it was my own Luſt that tempted me. And this the Scope of ver. 6. doth farther ſhew, Behold, thou requireſt the contrary, Truth, that is Holineſs in Truth in the inward Parts.

3. In the third place. He being upon the freſh guilt of theſe actual Sins upon his Knees, ſuing forth a Pardon, he confeſſeth this Conception-Sin with them, to the end to obtain his Pardon for his actual Sins, and this alſo altogether. He who is ſuing out of a Pardon of ſpecial Grace from a Prince, and hath the Liberty to draw it up himſelf, will be ſure to put into it all and every one of his Crimes, one as well as another. And Priſoners at the Bar do deſire to have all Indictments brought in, to the end they may be throughly diſcharged. And in the like manner David here confeſſeth this his Birth-Sin, upon occaſion of theſe his other Sins; and not only in reſpect of the Influence and Cauſation ſpecified, which that firſt Sin had into theſe Acts, but that it being a great Sin, a Sin ſtill remaining in him, comprehenſively takes it in to have it pardoned with the reſt. That as the Apoſtle in a doctrinal way, Coloſſ. 2. 13. firſt ſpecifying the Sin of the Uncircumciſion of their Fleſh which they were born in, together with all other actual Sins, comprehenſively concludes of all, that God had forgiven them all their Treſpaſſes: And you being DEAD in your Sins, and the UNCIRCUMCISION of your Fleſh, hath he quickned together with him, having forgiven you [all Treſpaſſes.] So doth David here, in a practical way, in his ſuing out a Pardon for Sin: And it is as if he had ſaid, Lord, take in and forgive altogether, both the old Man and his Deeds together, the whole of my Sinfulneſs, Root and Branch: And this comprehenſive intention of his, all thoſe vehement loud Cries for Mercy, both before theſe words and after in the following, do manifeſt. (1.) Before: Have Mercy, &c. ſaith he, ver. 1. Waſh me THROUGHLY, ver. 2. that is, both Inſide and Outſide, the Guilt and Stain, the Acts of Sin, and the inward Corruption. (2.) The word after, Purge me with Hyſſop, waſh me, make me clean: And he is principally therein intent upon the Sin in his Inwards; for, ver. 6. he ſets another Behold upon this, Thou requireſt Truth in the inward Parts; which is ſpoken in a perfect relation to the Matter of this his Confeſſion, in ver. 5. Behold, I was brought forth in Iniquity.

4. His Scope is to provoke, and to whet his Soul on to ſeek true inward Sanctification, or a new Frame of Spirit, ſuch as is ſeated in the Heart, and not in Acts only; ver. 10. Create in me a clean Heart; for thou requireſt Truth in the inward Parts, and I am wholly corrupted there. Which new Creation, without the ſight of Original Sin, a Man will never do, nor come to underſtand the neceſſity of. Compare with this Coloſſ. 3. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. For which things ſake, the Wrath of God cometh on the Children of Diſobedience. In the which ye alſo walked ſometime, when ye lived in them. But now you alſo put off all theſe; Anger, Wrath, Malice, Blaſphemy, filthy Communication out of your Mouth. Lie not one to another, ſeeing that ye have put off the old Man with his Deeds; and have put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledg, after the Image of him that created him.

II. The ſecond Head I propounded for the opening this Text, was, David's own Reflection thereupon in the cloſe, in theſe words, And in the hidden Part thou haſt made, or makeſt me to know Wiſdom.

Which in plainer words is, His bleſſing of God, who had upon this occaſion of his Murder and Adultery, diſcovered this firſt Sin unto him, had ſet

it

it upon his Heart, and had humbled him for it more than ever: and alſo it is a recommending the Knowledg of this, and the demiſſion of our Souls for it, (according to this his own Experience and Example) as of a great and deep Wiſdom in the hidden, and ſhews the high Valuation and Price David puts upon this Diſcovery of God's to him, and ſetting on of this Sin upon him. Chap. 2.

Our Tranſlators read it in the Future Tenſe, Thou ſhalt make me know; but multitudes of other Tranſlators in the time Paſt or Preſent, Thou haſt made, or, Thou makeſt, &c. For it is a known Rule, Verbs of the Future Tenſe, are in Hebrew often put to import the Preterferfect or Preſent Tenſe. So Calvin. Hilderſham. Vatablus. Pagnin. Tremellius. Hammond.

Now of thoſe Interpreters that read it in the Time paſt, Thou haſt made me, &c. the moſt of them do carry the drift unto this, that David ſhould ſtill proceed on to heighten thoſe his groſs Sins, and that it is a new Aggravation of them as to this ſenſe, That I whom thou hadſt inſtructed in the moſt ſecret Wiſdom of Matters of Godlineſs, and made me wiſer than my Teachers, ſhould yet thus ſin againſt ſuch and ſo much Light.

But Piſcator in his Annotations on this Pſalm, puts this ſenſe upon it, That David ſhould bleſs God for having made him to know this ſpecial Wiſdom in this hidden Thing or Matter, and had brought the Knowledg thereof home, as a Point of ſaving Wiſdom, to the hidden Man of his Heart, ſo as to ſee fully and clearly this native Corruption as the Cauſe of all Sin, and on that account to cauſe him lay it to Heart; and that God had made this Diſcovery, and this his deep Humiliation for it, to be the Iſſue of thoſe foul Sins, in ſuch a manner as he had never been ſenſible of it before; and ſo, that withal his Scope ſhould be to commend the Wiſdom herein to all Men elſe.

Per ſapientiam in occulto intelligit agnitionem vitioſitatis naturæ, unde naſcitur animi demiſſio coram Deo. Piſcator in . ocum.

Alting. alſo in his Preface to his Diſcourſe about this Sin in his Theologiâ Elenchticâ, Loco vii. Pſaltes ille Regius, Pſ. 51. v. 8. prædicat ut rarum ac ſingulare Dei beneficium quod occultam illam ſapientiam ipſi revelare fuiſſet dignatus. Sapientiam vocat Agnitionem naturæ corruptæ ejuſq; vitioſitatis, quæ inde à primo conceptu atq; origine inhæret. Occultam dicit, quia licet per omnes partes diffuſa & variis motibus & actionibus ſeſe prodat, vix tamen aut ne vix quidem Obſervetur ac deploretur. Alting. Theol. Elenct. Loc. vii.

And truly to me this Gloſs and Interpretation of it, ſeems very fair and genuine, both becauſe that other of aggravating his Sin, comes in after an Interruption, and ſo remotely: whereas this latter comes in in immediate coherence with, and upon his confeſſion of Original Sin, and indeed is the cloſe of that part, and ſo ſeems rather to belong thereto, as this Interpretation doth make it to do.

And upon many other Accounts it ſeems very apt and congruous.

For, 1. this is in it ſelf a great Point of Wiſdom; For the Heart of Man is deceitful, who can know it? ſays the Prophet, Jer. 17. 9. And therefore to have a Divine Light in the hidden Man of the Heart from God, (who alone muſt and doth give this) experimentally, to ſee into and gauge this Gulph, muſt needs be an eminent part of Wiſdom. And indeed it is to dive into, and arrive at the bottom of true Humiliation, and fathom the utmoſt Depth of Sin: It is alſo in it ſelf an hidden thing. There are two hidden Wiſdoms; the one of that in God's Heart towards us in Chriſt; the other, which is next to it, (as Chriſt ſaid of the ſecond Table) is to know what is in our Hearts, and to have a through and bottom-light into the Sins thereof, into the inward rooted ſpiritual Contrarieties therein unto Grace and Holineſs, and that Truth in the inward Parts which God requireth. Epheſ. 3. 9. 1 Cor. 2.

And, 2. it is, when made operative, a practical Wiſdom in us, (and then it is that Knowledg doth become a Wiſdom) whereby a Man's Soul is broken and made contrite, and all a Man's Affections ſtirred at the ſight of it; and it proves alſo as true a ſign of Grace, and piece of the Wiſdom of the Juſt, as the Baptiſt calls it, as any other: yea, and David ſeems to eſteem it ſo; for having had this inſight and illumination about this Sin, as the Iſſue of thoſe his Sins, he took it as a Pawn, and a good Hanſel, that God would do him good, and vouchſafe all thoſe other Mercies which in the following Verſes he purſues after, namely, of God's waſhing, purging, reſtoring him, creating in him a clean Heart and a right Spirit, &c. in that God had begun ſo good a Work in him as this was, that therefore he would perfect it.

3. It

Book IX.

3. It were eaſy to ſhew how this Wiſdom lays the Foundation in the Soul, for its ſeeking Juſtification through Faith by Chriſt alone; and that the Soul that is deeply convinced and inſtructed in this, will never be quiet in any other thing but Chriſt's Righteouſneſs: How alſo it directs and points the Soul unto that which is the true ſpiritual Sanctification, and worſhipping of God in Spirit and Truth, and not to reſt in any outward, moral, formal, yea, or imperfect Work on the Heart; for ſuch a Soul ſees by its Contrary, what Truth in the inward Parts God requireth: And look how deep the ſenſe of this is, ſo high will our Aims and Deſires riſe, both after what, and what manner of Grace it is wherein true Sanctification lieth. The conviction of this alſo being grown into a Wiſdom, perfectly lays the Creature at God's Feet, as is David here, and cauſeth it to juſtify and clear God, and condemn it ſelf: it cuts off alſo all Opinion of what a Man is apt to think he is of himſelf, and in his own Ability, for any good as of himſelf.

Laſtly; It is no wonder that David ſhould thus highly value it; for, beſides the former Conſiderations, it is alſo a Wiſdom rare, eſpecially in the Old Teſtament; and perhaps himſelf had not ſo intenſively and throughly conſidered this Sin before now; few in compariſon had arrived at this, or were ſenſible of it. And as David the Father, ſo Solomon the Son expreſſeth a like value for it, as a ſingular Point of Wiſdom, Eccleſ. 7. 29. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made Man upright; but they have ſought out many Inventions.

I beſeech you therefore carry this home with you, That to ſee into, and to be ſenſible of, and humble one's ſelf deeply for this Conception-Sin, even to a Behold, is an eminent Point of Wiſdom. It is not the Knowledg of the Doctrine about this Sin, (you may have that and periſh, and not be humbled) but it is the Wiſdom of it in the hidden Man of the Heart, (as ſome underſtand it) or in this hidden thing (as others) practically ſeated in the inward Man, ſo as to be affected and acted accordingly. This is the Wiſdom I mean, and do exhort unto. I have therefore ſet this as the Title over this Diſcourſe, which urgeth and directs unto this [WISDOM IN THE HIDDEN]. This for the ſecond Head in the Expoſition.

Object. It hath been ſaid by ſome, That David confeſſed this for himſelf in particular; and what is this to the reſt of Mankind to argue, that therefore they all are ſo conceived in Sin? &c.

Anſw. 1. Becauſe, as the Apoſtle ſaith of himſelf and all the Jews, VVE were by Nature Children of Wrath as well as OTHERS, that is, All others of Mankind. The Argument therefore holds good from David, Paul, and the Jews, to all others.

2. Becauſe the Holy Ghoſt, by the ſame Apoſtle, hath ſince pronounced the very ſame of All; in whom All have ſinned, Rom. 5. 12. yea, having firſt quoted words out of our Pſalmiſt for the univerſal overſpreading of this Corruption over all Mankind, not one excepted, Rom. 3. from the 10*th* Verſe to the 18*th*, he concludes, ver. 19. Now we know, that what things ſoever the Law ſaith, it ſaith to them who are under the Law; that every Mouth may be ſtopped, and all the World may become guilty before God. And, ver. 23. All have ſinned, and come ſhort of the Glory of God they were created in.

3. How otherwiſe can it be ſuppoſed David's Caſe ſhould be a ſingular Caſe? Yea, or how ſhould himſelf come to know that this had been his peculiar Condition at his Conception, if he had not meaſured himſelf at that common Standard and Rule of all Mankind elſe, as in the Word of God he found the Condition of all Mankind to be ſet out in the Conviction, of which he applieth and ſpeaks it of himſelf? I may ſay as they to our Saviour, (though to a different ſenſe) What ſpecial Sin, before his Conception, had he more than any others committed; or his Parents, in begetting and conceiving him, that he ſhould be born in Sin, not others?

III. The third Head I propounded to compleat the Expoſition, and as introductory to the two following Parts of the Diſcourſe, is, That whereas there are two parts of Original Sin,

1. The

Chap. 2.

1. The firſt Act of Diſobedience imputed to us:
2. Inherent Corruption thence flowing:

That truly I could not paſs over in ſilence, what, in ſearching into David's meaning in theſe words, I found in Piſcator's Annotations, viz. That David ſhould have had each of theſe two diſtinctly in his Eye in this his Confeſſion, ver. 5. which I read thus, Behold, I was brought forth in Iniquity, and in Sin did my Mother conceive me.

That here are two diſtinct Sentences wherein he makes Confeſſion of this his Original Sin, and differing in the words of them, that is manifeſt.

For 1. There are two words uſed to expreſs the Sin hereof, by עון and חטא; and there are likewiſe two different Verbs, חוללתי tranſlated in the firſt Sentence ſhapen, and חמתני tranſlated conceived.

2. In the firſt Sentence, the Verb חלל doth ſignify, and is by divers rendred brought forth or born, which Word ſometimes denoteth ſimply the firſt bringing forth of any Creature into being or exiſtence; for 'tis uſed of God's forming the Earth in the beginning, Pſal. 90. 2. and alſo to expreſs the beginning of a Man's being, Job 15.7. WAST THOU MADE BEFORE THE HILLS? And again, ſometimes the bringing forth by the Dam with Pains, as Job 29. 2, 3, 4. Pſal. 29. 9. and of a Child by its Mother, Iſa. 45. 10. See Hilderſham on the Words.

And being thus underſtood in this comprehenſive Meaning, it imports both, (1.) That David from the very beginning of his Being, or having been brought forth into Being, even the firſt Moment wherein he exiſted a Man or Son of Man, that it was together with Iniquity, or in Sin. (2.) That from the Birth, or when I was brought forth with Pain by my Mother, it was with the guilt of Iniquity together with it. Now Piſcator, though indeed he takes the latter ſenſe of that Word, yet underſtands this firſt Sentence, I was born or brought forth in Iniquity, to be eſpecially intended of (the firſt part of Original Sin) the Guilt of Adam's Fact: And then the ſecond Sentence, I was conceived in Sin, he takes to intend inherent Corruption. And if ſo, then in the firſt Saying David doth confeſs, that aſſoon as he was made a Man, or Son of Adam, by union of Soul and Body together, that he was alſo made a Sinner; as Rom. 5. 19. ſpeaking of Adam's Fact in that Chapter, the Apoſtle doth in terminis affirm of all Men: And that then further, David ſhould likewiſe point to the time of his Birth into the World, when he was viſibly brought forth a Man, and owned to be a Man; from which time therefore all Men do generally date their being Men: and thus accordingly David enters his Name into the Canon-Regiſter of Mankind, as if he had ſaid, born into this World David a Sinner, when his Mother brought him forth with Pain; which was a manifeſt token of her bringing forth a Sinner born to Sorrow, as the Sons of Fire that fly upward; thoſe Sorrows alſo having been laid as a Curſe on her for her ſhare in tempting Adam, the firſt Man, unto that firſt Act of Iniquity, which brought Sin and Miſery upon all her and his Poſterity. This as to the firſt Part of Original Sin, out of the Interpretation of the firſt Clauſe or Sentence, ver. 5. See Piſcator's Scholia on Pſal. 51. 5. Quam admiſi in lumbis ejus.

Then that ſecond Sentence which follows, And in Sin did my Mother conceive me, or warm me, may and doth as fitly, and in as ſpecial a manner refer unto that inherent Corruption or Vitioſity of Nature, which the Apoſtle terms the Sin that dwells in us, Rom. 7. 17. contracted from our guilt of that firſt Act of ſinning, which ſeiſing on us at the beginning of being Man, (as was ſaid) defiles our Nature, as the guilt of that Act did Adam's: and ſo that word [my Mother warmed me] expreſſeth both (1.) his Mother's firſt Conception of him, by which he was made a Son of Adam; and alſo (2.) her nouriſhing him all that while in the Womb, in which ſignification the word is uſed, Gen. 30. 38, 39, 41. and thus taken, it doth moſt properly and more eſpecially reſpect that part of Original Sin, Corruption of Nature inherent, (as that which was the Sin he was conceived in, and thus warmed) which Word imports not only how at the firſt moment of Conception, that ſmall Tare or Seed, that had the reaſonable Soul ſhot then into it, became the Seat of Corruption from that Inſtant; but, as Calvin indigitates it, was nouriſhed and foſtered whilſt we lay in the Womb; that is, that Corruption was ſtill extended, and did go on to leaven and ferment that Maſs or Bulk ſtill as the Child did grow bigger and See Piſcator ibidem. Mihi videtur Propheta ſignificare velle foveri nos & calefieri in peccato quamdiu in viſceribus matrum latemus. Calvin on Pſal. 51. 7. upon that word.

Book IX.

bigger in the Womb: And look as the Soul diffuſeth it ſelf more and more, as the bulk of the Members do increaſe; ſo withal original Corruption. And this Interpretation brings forth this Notion with it, That look as the Body and Soul by Conception united together, grow more ripe and mature, and the Members, Organs and Faculties of the Soul more fitted to bring forth actual Sin; ſo together with that Growth (tho the Growth it ſelf is natural) this inherent Corruption was, whilſt in the Womb, diffuſed and enlarged, and grew up with it towards a ripeneſs and ability for actual Sin, againſt the time of the buddings and ſpringings forth thereof. And the Words being underſtood in this latitude of Senſe, do comprehend the whole that may be ſpoken of this Original Sin, as,

1*ſt*. The Parts of it:

(1.) Guilt of Adam's Fact: And,

(2.) Inbred Corruption.

2*dly*. For the Time when he was made, or elſe declared guilty of theſe.

1. When he was made a Man, or brought forth into Being, or being Man: Which,

2. Was at his firſt Conception, that then he became guilty of both theſe: Yea, and,

3. Continued guilty of the Act; and the inherent Corruption did withal grow greater all along the time he was warmed in the Womb. And then,

4. When at Birth with Pains he was openly and viſibly to Men found to be a Man, and owned as ſuch. And thus the whole of Time, and the Progreſs of it from firſt to laſt, is intended and involved.

And this for the third Head of Expoſition.

So then from the Words thus fully opened and interpreted, do ariſe two main Aſſertions to be proſecuted, the laſt whereof is the main I aim at.

The firſt meerly doctrinal, viz. That there are two Parts of Original Sin.

1. A Guilt of the Act in Adam's and Eve's Loins.

2. The inherent Corruption thence contracted and growing up to a Vigour, as the Body and Soul do increaſe, &c.

The ſecond is wholly practical, or the Uſe of the Doctrine of theſe two, viz. That a penitent Soul in humbling it ſelf for Sins, and confeſſing of them, ſhould take in his Sinfulneſs of Original Sin in both theſe Parts, as Matter of Humiliation to him: for David we ſee with a Behold, &c. hath an Eye to each of theſe in his Confeſſion here, according to the Interpretation given.

For the firſt of theſe Aſſertions, my Scope is not to proſecute it largely, it being meerly Matter of Doctrine: nor yet ſhould I have founded the two following Parts of this Treatiſe, viz. for a diſtinct humbling our ſelves for each of theſe apart, merely and alone upon this Text, or the latter Head of Expoſition now given, (although I think it moſt genuine) did not other Scriptures in the New Teſtament more expreſly and clearly ſet forth both theſe as diſtinct Parts of that our Sinfulneſs: And that being ſo clearly in a doctrinal Way done, I have propoſed this Interpretation comprehending both, (being not alone in it) and this Text as a Ground for theſe two parts of our Humiliation, the firſt for the Guilt of the one, the ſecond for the Exiſtency of the other in us, after David's Example here, the Interpretation being ſuitable to the Analogy of Faith, and our common Doctrine about Original Sin. And yet it will be neceſſary for me briefly to add ſome further Evidence of theſe two out of thoſe other Scriptures.

1. We all have the Guilt of the Act of Adam from him, Rom. 5. 12. In whom All have ſinned, or, In that all have ſinned; for in whom ſhould they have ſinned but in Him, that one Man ſpecified in the fore-part of the Verſe? Infants and all, who in themſelves he denies to have ſinned, ver. 14. after the ſimilitude of Adam's Tranſgreſſion; that is, by actual Sin, yet had ſinned in him: And in what Act of his? but that one Offence of his, which ver. 15, 17, 18. indigitate, τὸ παραπτωμα, that total Ruin of his in that Fall, or Sin in eating the forbidden forbidden Fruit; from which one Offence, when it was conſummated or finiſhed, both Sin and Guilt or Judgment, as ver. 12, 16. entred and came upon all the World of Mankind unto Condemnation, and thereby they were made or conſtituted Sinners, ver. 19. Nor ſpeaks he theſe things in that Place of inherent Corruption derived, but of our being made Sinners, whence Condemnation and Judgment came upon us, as Juſtification doth from Chriſt's Obedience, as the Parallel is, ver. 16, 18. And look as he treats of our Sanctification by Chriſt in the ſixth Chapter, apart from this of Juſtification by Chriſt's Obedience, which he doth in this fifth Chapter apart: ſo in the like Method he ſpeaks of the inherent Corruption, or Sin that dwelleth in us, that follows upon the Guilt of this Diſobedience, apart likewiſe in chap. 7. 17. and ſo on. And the word he uſeth to expreſs our being made Sinners by that one Offence, ver. 19. as alſo made righteous by Chriſt's Obedience, is not a word ſerving any way to expreſs the impreſſing any Qualification inward, whether of Corruption or Sanctification, but to conſtitute, (as the word uſed there) which notes out the Act of an external Power or Authority, whereby a Man is made ſuch or ſuch, and ſo comports with a forenſical conſtituting us Sinners, or being juſtified, or pronouncing us guilty, and this alone: ſo as the derivation of the Guilt of that Act is the ſole Scope of what the Apoſtle ſpeaks of there, and of this of David alſo in the firſt Sentence here, Pſal. 51. 5.

2. But there is a ſecond thing from Adam alſo conveyed with, and by reaſon of the guilt of his Fact imputed to us, and that is his ſinful Image, or Maſs of Corruption inbred and ſticking in our Nature, which is ſtiled Adam's Image, Gen. 5. 3. in perfect oppoſition unto that Image of God conſiſting in Holineſs, (as Epheſ. 4. 24.) which God created Man in, as in Gen. 1. 26, 27. And bring unto all theſe Places that ſpeak of both, Coloſſ. 3. 9, 10. and the Apoſtle's own Interpretation, gives Light to all; whereby we may eaſily ſee, that what in Gen. 5. Moſes termeth Adam his Image, that the Apoſtle in Coloſſ. 3. ſtileth the old Man, as being derived from the old Man Adam, though to an Infant but new-born: And on the contrary, God's Image he created Man in, which Moſes ſpeaks of, Gen. 1. the Apoſtle terms the new Man, in theſe words, After the Image of him that created him, namely at firſt, in Gen. 1. 27. Which Places, thus together compared, evidence not only an inherent Corruption (called therefore the Man) overſpreading our whole Man, called therefore the Man, to be in us; but alſo that we have it from Adam, called therefore the old Man, as that which is that his Image, Gen. 5. which he begat in us, contrary to God's Image he was created in. And in theſe Places he ſpeaks not of the Act of Adam's Sin, as in Rom. 5. he does, and not of this Corruption there at all. And ſo theſe are the two diſtinct Parts of our Original Sin.

As in the laſt Head of the foregone Expoſition, we found two diſtinct Parts of Original Sin confeſſed by David, ver. 5. which we have briefly confirmed from other Scriptures; ſo anſwerably thereunto, I ſhall divide this practical Diſcourſe about this Sin into two Parts.

Firſt; The firſt diſcuſſing what Humiliation or Repentance is due from us for our Guiltineſs of the Act of Adam's Sin imputed.

Secondly; The ſecond, what Humiliation or Acts of Repentance we are obliged unto for that inbred ſinful Corruption which is derived therefrom to us, and dwelleth in us.

CHAP. III.

A Diſcuſſion premiſed, By what Principles in a converted Man's Heart, he comes to be convicted of the Guilt of Adam's Fact, and how far the Conſcience may be and is made ſenſible of it in true Converts.

AS for the Act of Adam's Sin made our own by Imputation; e're I come to ſet out the particular Acts of Humiliation or Repentance about the Guilt of this; firſt, It is neceſſary for me to clear and remove thoſe Grounds of Objection ſpecified in the firſt Chapter, whereupon the Schoolmen and others (who do elevate and diminiſh Repentance for this Guilt) do chiefly build, which I there mentioned to be chiefly theſe two.

1. That Repentance properly is only Actus proprii, of and for an Act of Sin done by a Man's own ſelf.

Pœnitet & facto torqueor ipſe meo.

Whereas this Sin was perpetrated by Adam, and not by our ſelves perſonally.

2. The ſecond is, That there is not, nor can be any Sting or Regret in the Conſcience of any Man for this Sin, no morſus Conſcientiæ, as for a Man's own actual Sin there is.

The removal of theſe, as alſo the clearing the Truth hereabout, is beſt performed by a Diſcuſſion, By what Principles in a Convert's Heart, his Soul takes in and comes to be convicted of this Guilt: And it is neceſſarily introductory unto thoſe Acts of Humiliation which are to follow ſuch a Conviction, that we treat this Point firſt, how and by what Man is convicted thereof.

And the Diſcuſſion hereof is not now by us to be managed by handling and proving the doctrinal Truth of the Imputation of this Sin to us, (this my Diſcourſe ſuppoſeth that here, (as they alſo do) though ſomething I have ſpoken to it in the laſt third Head of Expoſition); but I being upon the clearing the practical Part, &c. my buſineſs is to find out the practick Principles in a Convert's Heart, by which the Holy Ghoſt (working upon a Man's Soul) makes him apprehenſive and ſenſible of this Guilt, and in what ſenſe, or how far even Conſcience is or may be ſtruck with it.

And firſt, I here grant that there is no ſting or morſus of Conſcience for the Act of Adam's Sin imputed; that is, the Soul can never be tormented with this Thought, I have done this Act my ſelf: this is granted, and the Apoſtle affirms it, when ſetly ſpeaking of our guilt of this Sin, and that Infants who die, ſinned in him, yet not after the ſimilitude of Adam's Tranſgreſſion, Rom. 5. 14. ſo as there is not neither a Worm begotten in Conſcience, after the ſimilitude of Adam's Torture about it, whoſe Conſcience had this to ſay to him, which ours do not, This I my ſelf have done, and have deſtroyed all others by it. All which I ſpeak as of the Guilt of the Act of Adam's Sin.

Yet, ſecondly, the Soul is capable of a Conviction of Judgment, that that Sin of his is our Sin as truly as any other; that it is proprium Peccatum, though not propriæ operationis; it is our own proper Sin, though not of our own proper acting and operation: and of this the Soul is capable to be convinced. And that which is proper for me to beat out in this practical handling of it, is what manner of Conviction this is, and how or by what Principle in Man it is effected: And my return is, that partly by Faith in the Word, and partly from the Equity and Juſtice of its being reckoned unto us by virtue of the Law of Nature.

1. By Faith on the Word of God, which hath revealed it, and affirms it; which Faith and Word may and do bring it home, even to our Conſciences, I ſay, ſay, to our Conſciences: For if Faith brings home, and applies Chriſt's Blood to our Conſciences, and purifies our Conſcience from the Guilt of all Sins, if the Blood ſhed by another [Chriſt] purifieth and diſchargeth the Conſcience from the Sins perpetrated by a Man's ſelf, inſomuch as that Conſcience receives a quietus eſt from another's Fact ſprinkled upon it, as we have it expreſs, Heb. 9. 14. Then why ſhould not Conſcience alſo take upon it the Sin of another, when the Word of God ſo plainly chargeth us, and the Juſt and Righteous God pronounceth and ſays, that every Man is guilty of it, and lays it at our Doors as well as any other Sin never ſo much our own? and thereupon, why ſhould not Conſcience own it as well as any other Sin? and admit this Word of Condemnation from the Mouth of God, as well as it joyfully receives and takes into it ſelf the Word of Juſtification; as Rom. 10. 6, 8. But the Righteouſneſs which is of Faith, ſpeaketh on this wiſe, Say not in thine Heart, Who ſhall aſcend into Heaven? that is to bring Chriſt down from above.—But what ſaith it? The Word is nigh thee, even in thy Mouth, and in thy Heart; that is the Word of Faith which we preach. It is the ſame God our Lawgiver, who hath Power to ſave and to condemn, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks) whoſe Word it is in both, and both ſpoken from him unto that Principle in our Conſciences, which is the Seat or Receptacle of all the Guilt of Sin, as it is of the Pardon thereof: And if Conſcience be that Faculty which is abſolved from all Sin that is any way our own, then alſo it is that Faculty that takes in its Diſcharge from this; for the Scripture mentions that Faculty, at leaſt principally to be the Receiver of Acquittances from the Guilt of all ſorts of Sins for the whole Man: If therefore Conſcience be capable to apprehend an Abſolution from this Sin, when that it is pardoned, then ſurely it is, and was firſt capacitated to take in Conviction of a Man's being guilty thereof, yea, and of trouble for it; only AS the Word of God chargeth it, SO Conſcience receives it; and though the Word of God chargeth it not as a Sin of a Man's own committing, and therefore anſwerably Conſcience hath not this Sting, to ſay, I my ſelf committed it; yet the Word applying it as a Man's own Sin, Conſcience may and ought ſo to apprehend it, and be poſſeſt of its Guilt accordingly; for Conſcience is that Principle in Man which anſwers to the Holy Law of God, in reſpect of Sin chargeable upon us; and what the Law ſays, it ſays to Conſcience, which is its Subject, and under the Law. Chap. 3.

2. Eſpecially when the Sentence of the VVord is ſeconded and confirmed by the Equity and Juſtice of the Law of Nature; whereby I mean, not that Law which the Jews would have accuſed God of, That every Child ſhould bear the Sin of his Father, which by two Prophets, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, God doth renounce; but that which the Prophet Iſaiah had before in a ſpecial manner declared of OUR FIRST Father, Iſa. 43. 27. Thy firſt Father hath ſinned, and thy Teachers have tranſgreſſed againſt me. He being created the Head and Source of the Nature of all Mankind, and by the Law of Nature, or the Law of his and our Creation, and that made and enacted before he had ſinned; and by which Law it was that he had by Creation the Image of God's Holineſs to convey to us, if he had ſtood till he had put forth our Nature by Propagation out from him, and ſet it running in its courſe, he, by the Equity of the ſame Law, (which indeed was the Common Law, as I may term it, to Beaſts and Herbs to bring forth in their Kind, Gen. 1. 11, 24.) muſt beget in his own Image of Sin, if he fell and did ſin; and therefore he was naturally and neceſſarily conſtituted the Repreſentative of them all, in reſpect of the firſt Act of Sin he ſhould perpretrate, and the Guilt thereof muſt naturally, in the ſenſe given, be devolved to them, or elſe that part of the Law of Nature and Creation, viz. to convey his own ſinful Image as ſinful, had not had the ſame fulneſs of Equity in its fulfilling, as that other part of conveying the Image of God as an Holy Image, ſhould by the Law of Creation have attained: for it is evident, that nothing but the Guilt of an Act of Sin could cauſe that Image of Sin to be Sin; and as not in Adam himſelf, had that privation of Holineſs been a Sin to him, had it not been he had been guilty of an Act of Sin firſt, that cauſed that Privation; ſo neither in us, had that inherent Privation of Holineſs, Book IX. Holineſs become a Sin, had we not firſt been made Sinners in the imputation of that firſt ſinful Act of his. But of theſe things I have treated more largely before.

As there are two things concur in a Godly Man, unto our Knowledg and Conviction, That this VVorld was made by God. Firſt, That we know this by Faith, as Heb. 11. 2. Then, ſecondly, by the Light of Reaſon, viewing the Workmanſhip of God therein, as in which the Attributes of his Godhead are clearly ſeen, &c. Rom. 1. 21. which doth confirm a Godly Man's Faith therein, and may alone ſerve as a Conviction, even to a Heathen that hath no knowledg of the Word; which is the Apoſtle's ſcope there, ſo is it here, only with this difference, that the Light of meer Nature perhaps would never have attained to the knowledg of the imputation of our firſt Father's Act of ſinning, if the Word had not firſt revealed it, (according to that of Solomon, Eccleſ. 7.29. This only have I found, (namely in the Word of God by Moſes) that God made Man upright, but they, &c.) yet ſo as being once revealed by the Word, there may be diſcerned an Equity in it, according to the very Primitive Law of our Creation, recorded in that Gen. 1. And by this means may Conſcience it ſelf be poſſeſs'd of it, as of that which is a Man's own Sin, and accordingly lay it to heart, tho not with this Sting, That I in my own Perſon did it, it can never riſe to a—facto torqueor ipſe meo. Yet take Conſcience in this large ſenſe, That it is a Knowledg together with God, ſo as to know that God knows and judgeth we are guilty ſo or ſo: And thus may our Conſciences, through the conviction of thoſe Means mentioned, be made conſcious, or to know with God this our Guilt, and anſwerably lay it to Heart. I ſtill urge, if Chriſt's Blood ſhed for us, and not by us, may ſpeak (in our Conſciences as well as before God) better things, &c. as the Apoſtle affirms, Heb. 12. 24. then why may not Adam's Sin, committed by him, and not by us, when brought hence and charged upon our Souls by God, cry and ſpeak bitter things in our Conſciences, according as the Guilt thereof deſerveth, as well as of any other Sin, tho ſtill that Voice, I my ſelf did it, can never be heard in it? For conſider, how that the Parallel in that place is made between the Sin of Cain, which was acted by himſelf; and on the other hand, of what Chriſt did for us, and on our behalf; both which are in this common, that the one cries, and in the Conſcience too, as well as the other: both ſpeak, only the things they cry are oppoſite. Abel's Blood cried Terror and Vengeance in Cain's Conſcience; and Chriſt's Blood ſpeaks Peace, but both in Conſcience: and therefore the Eccho of it is termed the Anſwer or Plea of a Conſcience made good by Chriſt's Death and Reſurrection; 1 Pet. 3. 21. The like Figure whereunto, even Baptiſm, doth alſo now ſave us, (not the putting away the Filth of the Fleſh, but the anſwer of a good Conſcience towards God) by the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt. And it is obſervable, that in that ſame Chapter it may be found, that a good Conſcience is termed both that kind of Teſtimony in Conſcience, which ariſeth from the conſciouſneſs of a Man's own well-doing. So in ver. 16. HAVING A GOOD CONSCIENCE; that whereas they ſpeak evil of you, AS OF EVIL DOERS, &c. And then again, in ver. 21. of a Conſcience purified and pacified by Chriſt's Death and Reſurrection, (compare Rom. 4. laſt) is termed a good Conſcience alſo, as that which hath within it ſelf (ſtrengthned by Chriſt's Reſurrection) to appear before, and plead before God for its Juſtification. And Acts of Conſcience, and Voices in Conſcience, theſe both are, yea, and towards God.

I have inſiſted the more upon this Argument, both becauſe it aſſoils the greateſt Difficulty, and moſt ſpecious Objection that the Schoolmen and others go upon, why it is not, nor can be (ſay they) matter of our Repentance for it, becauſe it pertains not (as they ſay) unto the Conſcience; as alſo becauſe this hitherto ſaid, lays a Foundation for our demonſtrating,

WHAT KIND of Acts of REPENTANCE, according unto Scripture-acceptation of REPENTANCE, we may and ought to put forth, and exert upon this Conviction, which is the main Subject of this Diſcourſe.

CHAP.

Chap. 4.

CHAP. IV.

What are the Acts of Repentance which we are to exerciſe, concerning our Guilt of Adam's firſt Sin. We are to judg our ſelves Guilty, and to condemn our ſelves for it. We ſhould alſo bewail the Miſery of that Condition into which it hath brought us. And we muſt alſo acknowledg our own ſhare in the Guilt of it, with the greateſt Sorrow and Grief.

THeſe Things having been premiſed as introductory; and we now taking it for ſuppoſed, That a Soul is convicted thereof by the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt, I proceed on to ſet forth thoſe Penitential Acts which do and are to follow upon this Conviction.

And hereunto I muſt yet go farther, and premiſe this ſhort Aviſo alſo in the general, That I take and underſtand Repentance, not in the vulgar Acceptation that Heathens, and commonly Mankind take it only in, which we know is properly of what a Man's Conſcience hath an inward remorſe for, as having been perpetrated by a Man's ſelf: But we are to enquire into ſuch Acts of Repentance, as, according to the Scripture's acceptation of Repentance, we find ſet forth to us therein, that may be applicable to the thing before us, or which the Soul may and ought to put forth upon the conviction of this Sin; and thus even Bellarmine himſelf acknowledgeth, That Repentance (in this Argument) is to be underſtood by us.

Non tam ſequenda eſt Etymologia in nomine pœnitentiæ quod uſus Scripturæ in vera ſignificatione verborum aſſequenda. Bellarm. de Pœnitentiâ, Lib. 2. Cap. vii.

Repentance, in the Scripture-ſenſe, hath two principal Parts.

1. Looking backward to an Act of Guilt as gone and paſt.
2. Looking forward to Time to come, in turning unto God for the future, upon the conſideration of ſuch a Guilt that is paſt.

Let us now enquire what Acts of Repentance, of either ſort, which are truly penitential, are applicable to our Guilt of Adam's Fact that is paſt.

A Soul convicted of this Guilt as its own Sin, though not of its own committing, by the operation of the Holy Ghoſt, may and ought,

Firſt; To judg it ſelf for this Sin, or pronounce a Sentence of Condemnation upon it ſelf for it; and we find Repentance is expreſs'd in Scripture to us, to be an Act of judging our ſelves, that we be not judged with the World; 1 Cor. 11. 31, 32. For if we would judg our ſelves, we ſhould not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chaſtned of the Lord, that we ſhould not be condemned with the World: as alſo 1 Pet. 4. 6. And the Reaſon why we are thus to judg our ſelves for this Act, is, What God judgeth us for, we are to judg our ſelves for, alſo before him; for in ſo doing, we do but take part with God, and conform our Minds unto his Judgment and Will, and thereby alſo prevent God's judging of us, as in the place laſt cited. And that God judgeth us for this Sin, there is this expreſs Scripture, Rom. 5. 16. The Judgment is by one unto Condemnation. And, ver. 18. As by the Offence of one, Judgment came upon all Men to Condemnation: Even ſo by the Righteouſneſs of one [the Gift of Righteouſneſs] came upon all Men unto juſtification of Life——Where (1.) by [ONE] came Judgment, ver. 16. he means, that one firſt Offence of Adam, ver. 14. whom he calls him that ſinned, Compare for this Inſertion ver. 16.

Book IX.

ſinned, as in the words afore: for that ONE is oppoſed unto MANY Offences that are pardoned, in the following words of that Verſe.— (2.) By thoſe words, Judgment came upon all Men to Condemnation, he manifeſtly means, That upon Adam's ſo ſinning, there iſſued forth from God, the Judg of all the World, a Judgment, pronouncing all Men criminally guilty of Sin, which ended and determined in a Sentence of Condemnation unto Death, as the demerit of that Guilt in them. And that thus Judgment unto Condemnation (κρίμα εἰς κατάκριμα) is to be underſtood, appears: For,

Et non inquit ſicut per unum hominem peccantem, ita eſt & donū: Nam Judicium quidem ex uno in Condemnationem, Gratia autem ex multis delictis in Juſtificationem. Ex uno ergo quid, niſi delicto? Quia ſequitur Gratia autem ex multis delictis. Dicant iſti quomodo ex uno delicto in condemnationem, niſi quia ſufficit ad condemnationem etiam unum Originale peccatum, quod in omnes homines pertranſiit. Auguſtin. ad Valerium, lib. 2. c. 27. pag. 184. Tom. 7. Op. Ed. Par. 1571. & Epiſt. 89. pag. 83. Tom. 2. Oper.

1*ſt*. Judgment is mentioned as the Cauſe, and Condemnation as the Effect; even as one's being judged guilty or criminal firſt, is the only cauſe of a Sentence of Condemnation unto Death: and it is guilt of a Sin that only is the cauſe of Condemnation.

2*dly*. By its oppoſite, theſe are parallel'd in the words following, ver. 18. Wherein, 1. the Righteouſneſs of one, namely, Chriſt's Righteouſneſs acted in Ver. 14, 16. and by himſelf, is oppoſed unto that one Offence of Adam that perſonally ſinned.
Ver. 16, 18. 2. Judgment, or κρίμα, on us by that one Sin, is oppoſed to Juſtification, or God's accounting us righteous, and ſo imports God pronouncing us guilty or Sinners by that one Offence. 3. Condemnation, or κατάκριμα, is oppoſed unto
Ver. 18. Juſtification OF LIFE, and ſo a Condemnation unto Death is thereby intended, and that Death ſuch as is oppoſite unto that Life, which follows upon Juſtification, and therefore eternal Death, as the other is eternal Life.—Now what Guilt God as a Judg pronounceth on us, in and by virtue of that one Offence, and ſentenceth Death thereupon, that we as poor guilty Creatures ought to take upon our ſelves, and judg of our ſelves (as in our ſelves) thereby. And,

Secondly; We are to judg our ſelves ſo far, as that an Act of fear and trembling before our holy God, ſhould ariſe in our Souls that profeſs to fear this God,
Iſa. 66. 2. (one of whoſe Characters it is, to tremble at God's Word) for it, as for any other Sin; eſpecially in Souls in their firſt Converſions: ſo far as the Hammer of the Law may break the Heart with Threatnings for any other Sin, ſo far for this Matth. 10. 28. alſo; at leaſt ſo far as Chriſt gave Command, I ſay to you, my Friends, fear him that can deſtroy Body and Soul in Hell.—For the Scripture hath not ſaid in Epheſ. 2. 3. vain, That we are Children of Wrath by Nature; that is, by reaſon of the guilt of this Birth-Sin: God is not in jeſt but in earneſt with us, whilſt he ſpeaks it.
Rom. 13. 3. And as it is ſaid of the Magiſtrate, Be afraid, (for having done Evil) for he bears not the Sword in vain: ſo God is not wrathful for this Sin in vain. For whatever Sin we are obnoxious to Wrath for, we are to fear before God in that reſpect, as having deſerved it at his hands; and therefore we are to humble our ſelves before that God, and humbly to ſeek Pardon for the averting or turning away of that Wrath for this Sin, as well as for any other Sin—. Yea, and the Conſcience of the beſt is capable of Chaſtiſements of Wrath, or withdrawings by God for this Sin, though but imputed: For if Chriſt having our Sins made his, but by his voluntary Aſſumption and God's Imputation, yet was Matth. 27. 46. made to cry out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Surely for the guilt of this Act ſo juſtly imputed, we might fear that God might deſervedly ſeparate us from himſelf for ever.

Thirdly; We may lament and bewail our ſelves for it, and the woful Condition that our ſelves and all Men are under by reaſon of it, and for the Conſequents thereof that come upon us and them. 'Tis eminently obſervable that there was a ſolemn Bewailment hereof, as in a common Concernment to Mankind, traduced and delivered down to the very Heathens that were of Japhet's Poſterity, for three thouſand Years after and upwards: Thus the Grecians in Orgiis Orgiis Bacchi, bruiſing Serpents, and carrying them on their Heads, uſed to cry, EVA! EVA! which pointed clearly at that Miſchief the Serpent and Evah did us, in his firſt tempting to, and her eating the forbidden Fruit; the Serpent beguiled her, and his Head was to be bruiſed. And for the proof of this old Heathen Cuſtom, we have ſeveral Teſtimonies, as of Demoſthenes, * Virgil, Propertius and Catullus. And beſides, † Clemens Alexandrinus that lived in Heatheniſh Times a while, gives this Account of it; They ſet out, being crowned with Serpents, and howling out the Name of EVAH: and adds this Interpretation of it, That Eve, by whom Sin or Error, and all kinds of Evils flowing thence, have followed in the World, is hereby lamented by them. And ſo ‖ Plutarch in the Life of Alexander the Great, reports how Olympias, Alexander's Mother, performing theſe Bacchanalian Rites, ὄφεις μεγάλας χειροήθεις ἐφείλκετο τοῖς θιάσοις, that is, ſhe did wind great tam'd Serpents about the Thiaſi or myſtical Fans of Bacchus. And theſe things tho they did blindly, the firſt Impreſs of the true Intent of it being worn out, yet in that the Practice was thus continued in theſe ſo ancient Myſteries of Worſhip, argues, that in times nearer the Fall (as in Japhet's time, the Father of theſe, when the Memory of this was freſher) it was intended for a bewailing that firſt Sin and Fall, and the Miſeries and Evils which the Sin of Eve, by the Serpent's Malice, brought on all Mankind. Yea and further, the R. R. Arch-biſhop of Armagh is bold to caſt in this Conjecture, as touching that great Faſt of the Jews, ſo called by way of Eminency, celebrated among them but once a year, which was the Day wherein the High-Prieſt (the Type of Chriſt, our ſecond Adam, his entring into Heaven for us) went into the Holy of Holies with the propitiatory Blood and Incenſe; which Day he conjectures to be the very Day anniverſarily that the firſt Adam fell and ſinned in, and whereon he was driven out of Paradiſe: His Words in the ſecond Page of his Chronology I ſhall give you. "It is very probable that Adam was turned out of Paradiſe upon the "10*th* day of the World, anſwering to our firſt of November, (according to "the Suppoſition of the Julian Period) upon which "Day alſo, in remembrance of ſo remarkable a thing, "(as in all reaſon, ſays he, it ſhould ſeem) was ap"pointed the Solemnity of EXPIATION or Atone"ment, and the yearly Faſt ſpoken of, Acts 27. 9. "termed more eſpecially by the Name The FAST, "wherein as well Strangers (as home-born People) "were commanded to afflict their Souls with a moſt "ſevere Intermination, (or Threatning) that every "Soul which ſhould not afflict it ſelf, ſhould be de"ſtroyed from amongſt his People, Lev. 16. 29. and 23. 29.——— Thus he carries it, that that Faſt had a ſpecial and eminent Aim, Reflection and Eye at Adam's firſt Sin, and his being turned out of Paradiſe, when this Sin was expiated by Chriſt's Blood, and the other Adam's Fall repaired and made up by our High Prieſt's entring into Paradiſe, Heaven it ſelf, (which illuſtrates the Parallel of the two Adams:) And ſo, according to his Notion, the Duty of that Day took into it, not the Sins of all the Year paſt only, (as Heb. 10.) but this great Sin eſpecially, as the Floodgate that firſt let in all other Sins: and therefore their Souls were to be humbled for it, as well as any other Sins whatſoever. And theſe Notions and Interpretations about the Practices both of Jew and Gentiles in their ſacred Myſteries, do ſerve to that which is my Propoſal, That as a Bewailment of this Sin and Fact was held up thereby both among Jews and Gentiles, (and

For the Foundation of his Conjecture, why the firſt Day of the Creation began October 23, and ſo that this Faſt being appointed the 10th day after, and ſo on the 4th day anniverſary after Man's own Creation. For this I refer the Reader unto his Chronology the firſt two Pages of it, and his Epiſtle prefixed to the Chronology. But then the Sabbath (upon which Day that both Men and Angels ſtood) the Argument is ſtrong from Exod. 31. 17. and if ſo, there were but two days more between that and the Fall, ſuppoſing it on Nov. 1. Theſe falling ſo near together, and all things ſo ſuiting in the three, makes it very probable that Day to have been the Day of Man's Fall, and of the Jewiſh Faſt.

both laid together, do ſomewhat conduce to confirm this Conjecture about either); and even in that very Levitical Law all Strangers were commanded to afflict their Souls, as well as they of their own Country, as the word is Levit. 16. 29. as both therein concerned; that therefore it is our Duty to lament it, and to be humbled for it.

Fourthly; The fourth Act is, To make a Confeſſion of our Guilt in this Sin, and to humble our ſelves with ſpiritual Mourning, and godly Sorrow for our ſhare in it; which is yet a farther thing, than to bewail our ſelves for the Miſeries it hath brought upon us. The Heathens did bewail the Miſeries that flow'd from it, but they knew not the Cauſe, nor the imputation of the Guilt thereof: But we that are enlightned by the Word, and convicted hereof by the Spirit, are in this manner to mourn for it, as well as any Sins of our own. Let Suarez and other Papiſts excuſe themſelves by a ſpeculative Affection expreſſed to God, or grieving that Mankind offended God in their firſt Parent, (as in the Preface I cited him) that is, in the general condole one another for it, as we ſay, as a common Condition; and yet he ſpeaks that but with a poſſumus dolere, we may thus grieve, that is, if we liſt, or have a mind to it, as if it were a Matter but left at our liberty, which we alſo may let alone.——But we have not learned old Adam thus. I ſay, practically we ought to do it, and with application to our ſelves in particular, as if no other in the World were guilty of it but our ſelves. For this Maxim doth and will follow us throughout all theſe Acts to be exerciſed, That it is proprium peccatum, our own Sin; though not propriæ operationis, of our own proper committing; yea, this is alſo our firſt Sin. And it will everlaſtingly follow from thence, that then we are to lay it to heart in particular as our own, and to mourn practically, particularly, and truly, and properly, for our guilt of it. David we ſee, when he was in his Month, (as I may with the Prophet ſo ſpeak, of the juncture of Time wherein he penn'd that 51ſt Pſalm) puts his Mouth in the Duſt before God; Behold, I was brought forth in this Sin, and I was conceived——He mentions not all Mankind, he loads himſelf with it, I and I, and puts the confeſſion of it among the reſt of his own actual Sins, and ſeeks a perſonal Pardon for it afreſh together with the reſt: yea, and the load thereof, together with the reſt of his own actual Sins, did contribute to work that brokenneſs of Heart in him, which, as a Sacrifice, he preſents unto God, ver. 17. for all the Sins he had before confeſſed, one as well as another, (of which more ſpecially afterwards). And certainly if the Jews were to afflict their Souls on that their Faſt-Day for their Sins, and that that Day was choſen by God for it, the Day whereon Adam committed this Sin; the ſignificancy of it was, That they ſhould afflict their Souls for this Sin, in relation to the commiſſion whereof that Day was ſingled out: And the Condition requiſite in that Faſt was, That every Man ſhould afflict his own Soul in particular for his own Sins, and therefore for this Sin, as well as any other Sins of his in particular, yea, for this ſpecially as the Foundation-Sin of all the reſt, which the intent of the Day minded them of. However, to be ſure this afflicting their Souls was to be done for all the Sins which Chriſt (who was typified out by the High Prieſt) ſhould procure the Pardon of by his Sacrifice and Interceſſion in Heaven; both which Acts of High-Prieſthood were performed by the High Prieſt, as in a ſhadow of Chriſt, whilſt the People without were afflicting their Souls for all or any of thoſe Sins, which by that Sacrifice were expiated or interceded for that Day. ——And if the common Jew, out of ignorance, omitted to do it for this Sin, yet however it teacheth us, (of whom in their Worſhip and Significancies hereof, They and Theſe were Types, and upon whom the Ends of the World are come) it teacheth, I ſay, us, that know and are enlightned, to take upon us the Guilt of this Foundation-Sin, and which we expect to be, and to have been expiated and forgiven by the Blood of Jeſus, carried into the Holy of Holies by him, and his there interceding for us: It becomes us, (I ſay) and it is our Duty (whilſt we ſtand on Earth without) to afflict our ſelves for this Sin, if we look for Pardon for it, as of any other.

Speculativè conſiderando & poſſumus dolere, quod humanum genus in primo parente Deum offenderit. Suarez in loco ſupra citato.

Now

Now what was it, or is it, to afflict our Souls for any Sin, but a particular laying it to heart, as being our own, to mourn and to be in bitterneſs for it? Thus, James 4. 9. Be afflicted, mourn and weep, are there joined together. And this is not to be done by us only before God, but with Sorrow according to God; as in 2 Cor. 7. 9. Now I rejoice, not that ye were made ſorry, but that ye ſorrowed to Repentance; for ye were made ſorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing. He ſpeaks of what kind of Mourning is to be for all Sin, according to God, (ſo in the Original) that is, according to God's Concernments that are found to be in a Sin, and Reflections upon him in that Sin, which have caſt Diſhonour and a Shadow upon the Glory and Honour of God any way. And upon ſearch we may find many high and great Ones of ſuch reflections upon God, to have been in the ſubſtance of that firſt Act of Adam's ſinning, that did touch nighly upon God, (whereof I have ſummed many before) as that it was a depoſing God, a Jealouſy that God envied and kept them from Happineſs, in forbidding that Fruit, &c. There are infinite many of ſuch in that FIRST Sin, that had a malign Aſpect unto God, and for theſe we ought to mourn, if we will mourn at all. And truly, if we conſider how in this place to the Corinthians, (e're we go off from it) that it was but the Sin of one Man among them, and ſo originally (as I may ſo ſpeak) but another's Sin, which yet had occaſioned and broached that godly Sorrow in them, upon the Apoſtle's having reproved them for not having done it, 1 Cor. 5. This Sin, though the Sin of another, committed by one of their Society, yet they, as being one Body together with him, ought to have laid it to heart, and to have mourned for it as committed amongſt them; yea, and that they ſhould have done alſo, under the Conſideration of God's Concernment therein; according to God, which, reſpect had unto that Man's Sin as their own, that Paſſage in ver. 10. doth clearly point at, You have approved your ſelves (by that their mourning) clear [in this Matter], viz. about that Man's Sin committed amongſt you——Although alſo this his Sin had likewiſe become their own Sin, by their having omitted to mourn for it, as their Duty was to have done, as in the former Epiſtle he had told them, 1 Cor. 5. 2. Ye are puffed up, and have not rather mourned, &c. By defect of which they had involved themſelves in the Guilt of that Man's Sin, which otherwiſe had ſingly remained his own; though now in that 7th Chapter of the ſecond Epiſtle, they had, by a godly Sorrow for it, approved themſelves clear and ſincere in that Matter.

Book I. Chap. 4.

Now to bring this ſomewhat farther home to the Point in hand,——I urge it thus;

If the Sin of one Man, committed in a Body and Society of Men in Church-relation, was to be the Object of confeſſing it, and mourning by the whole of that Body, and each Perſon of it, both publickly and privately; which if they had not omitted to have done, had not become their Sin, (the like in many Caſes holds about the Sins of a Nation)——Then much more this firſt Sin ought to be the Object of our Mourning, this firſt Sin committed by our firſt Father, and Head of Mankind, to which we all had that near Relation, (which our Divines out of the Scriptures uſe to urge) and which Sin becomes ours, not by a meer omiſſion of mourning for it, as having been the Sin of an ordinary Parent, but even by our being involved in the very acting and perpetration of it by our firſt Father, and ſo as the Fact it ſelf becomes our own Sin. This was not the Corinthians Caſe; the Corinthians did not ſin in the inceſtuous Perſon's ſinning, as we all are ſaid to have done in that one Man Adam.——If therefore theſe Corinthians found that Relation of theirs in that Fact, and that Concernment of God's Diſhonour in it, and his Intereſt, ſuch as they mourned according to God for it, and ought ſo to have done; then certainly, thou being convinced that this Act of Adam's is thy Sin, (on the account fore-ſpecified) and then coming before God to afflict thy Soul for other Sins of thine; and being to deal with God about Sin, and all Sin, and this being thy Sin, which thou art ſenſible that (as in thy ſelf) thou ſtandeſt guilty before this Holy God for, then ſurely thou art to mourn for it: For how are we to deal with God about any Sin, which occurs to our Thoughts, and which we are found guilty of

Rom. 5. 12.

before him? or how to manage our ſelves in his Preſence, under the apprehenſion of our guiltineſs thereof, but by falling down before him, and to put our Mouths in the Duſt, with a true and bitter humiliation for it? —And therein (if it be our Sin) to ſearch out the Aggravations of it, and what the Concernments of God are in it, (and in this Sin we may find many) as matter of this humbling, and to move us ſo to mourn according to God, and all this to the end, to return an Honour to God by our debaſement of our ſelves, and in confeſſing the Aggravation of it, deeply breaking our Hearts, and cauſing them to mourn. And in this Caſe it is not only as the mourning of a Traitor's Son for his Father's having committed ſuch or ſo high a Treaſon againſt his Prince and Country, as hath brought Ruin upon both, but as of one who is enwrapped in the very Act of his Father: Thus here it is reckoned, thy Treaſon as well as thy Father's, by thy being in Adam's Loins as the firſt Father and Head of Mankind. The like Reaſon whereto holds not of any other Father and Child, as not of any National or Church-relation ſince.

I add this further, to ſet this Duty home upon our Hearts of mourning for this Sin, drawn from the Corinthians Inſtance, That it being our own Sin already, whether we mourn for it or not, by our neglecting to mourn for it when we ought, we incur the Guilt of it anew, and ſo draw a double Guilt thereof upon our ſelves, as the Corinthians alſo did. And I can conclude with this, That as we are and do receive Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, when imputed through Faith with Joy, Rom. 5. 1, 2. and Rom. 15. 13. and are filled with Joy and Peace, upon our reception and laying hold of that his Righteouſneſs as ours; ſo ſurely may we by Conviction apprehend our ſelves guilty of this Sin imputed, entertain the apprehenſion of it with like godly Sorrow.

Fifthly; A fifth Act is Contrition, or brokenneſs of Heart, which is indeed the top and higheſt Diſpoſition and Act in Repentance: and therefore David, of all other, ſpecifies and preſents that to God, A broken and a contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe, in this 51*ſt Pſalm*, ver. 17. and he ſpeaks it at, yea, and as the very cloſe and winding up of all his Confeſſions and Mournings, (for the reſt of the Pſalm is a Prayer for the Church) and certainly coming in thus, as that which he breath'd forth as his laſt Sigh, ultimus Singultus, and as a Depoſition left with God at his farewel, and his breaking off all his Confeſſions, (unto which brokenneſs of Heart hath an immediate relation) it muſt needs include all and every of thoſe Sins he had been confeſſing afore in the Pſalm, as thoſe for which, and at the mention of every of which, his Heart had been a breaking and a melting all along: and having now his full load, his Heart ſo broken as he could go no farther on in that ſtrain, he therefore makes a ſtop there, and diverts to another Key. And what then, ſhall we leave out of the comprehenſion of this his brokenneſs, that Sin which he had confeſſed, ver. 5. I was brought forth in Iniquity? &c. Certainly no; nay, his Heart breaks to an Elah, to a Behold in that, to a βοήθεια, a crying out (as Heb. 4. 16. the word is) when he came to that Sin; and if any would go about to exclude and except this, as having no part or ſhare in breaking his Heart, he muſt give a reaſon of difference (and it had need be a great one) why, he having confeſſed this among thoſe other Sins, it yet muſt be underſtood that his broken Heart only was for, and had an eye to thoſe other Sins, not this—David's Heart (I believe) felt not, nor found any ſuch diſtinction. I pray therefore take this in with the reſt, both this of his Birth-Sin, as thoſe of his own committing, for he had equally confeſs'd both, yea, That Original Sin, with a behold above the reſt; take it, I ſay, into your Thoughts, and be convinc'd that the Guilt of the Act of Adam's Sin is as juſt and full a Ground and Matter of true brokenneſs of Heart, truly and rightly underſtood, and according to the Scripture-Notion, as any other Guilt.

True Contrition and Brokenneſs, brings the Creature unto nothing in it ſelf, in its own humblings of it ſelf, it cauſeth it to deſcend as to the Duſt of Death and Hell, ſo even to nothing. In Iſa. chap. 57, & 66. A broken and contrite Heart, is ſet in full Aſpect to the Infinite Highneſs, Soveraignty and Greatneſs of God. So Chap. 57. 15. Thus ſaith the high and lofty one, that inhabiteth Eternity, whoſe whoſe Name is Holy, I dwell in the high and holy Place, with him alſo that is of a contrite and humble Spirit, &c. And the humble and contrite Heart there, imports an Heart made in the deepeſt manner apprehenſive and ſenſible of its infinite Diſtance from God as God, and of its own being Emptineſs and nothing, both as a Creature at its beſt, and as a Sinner at its worſt: This Heart (in Iſaiah) is made low and humble in both reſpects, as well before God as the high and lofty One, as before God as the holy One; and a Soul, when brought low in both theſe reſpects, is the fitteſt Match or Companion to chooſe, for God to fill and dwell in: and both theſe (beſides whatever elſe) doth that Poverty of Spirit cauſe, which Chriſt made the firſt Promiſe of Bleſſedneſs unto: For what is that Poverty, but a meer and perfect Emptineſs in a Man's own view and depreſſion of Spirit? Chap. 4. Matth. 5. 3.

Now the conviction and ſenſe of a Man's being guilty of this firſt Sin, brings a Man's Soul to this Nothingneſs in ſome reſpects, more than any other Sin, in regard of both theſe.——

1. That it doth this in reſpect of his being made a Sinner by it, the Hainouſneſs of this Sin (ſet forth by many inhancing Circumſtances) above any other will ſhew, which I here inſiſt not on.

2. That the Recognition hereof ſhould humble and bring the Soul to a Nothingneſs, as we are Creatures, before this high and lofty one, is manifeſt upon ſuch Conſiderations as are more proper to the guilt of this Sin than to any other Sins of our own committing, ſince we have been firſt made Sinners by this firſt Sin. For he that will to the full humble himſelf for this Sin, muſt firſt put himſelf, in his Faith and the Suppoſition of his Mind, into a State of perfect Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, by conſidering himſelf to have been ſuch once in Adam: He muſt firſt underſtand himſelf to have been exactly and compleatly holy and righteous, and alſo to have ſtood and continued ſuch, as Adam was, and did unto the very moment of his ſinning: and then may the Soul ſay, O but yet I fell and ſinned in him. Look as when we come to be juſtified by God, we are to look upon our ſelves as ungodly Perſons, as the Apoſtle ſays, our Father Abraham did long after his Converſion, Rom. 4. 5. even after his having been made godly thereby: Which tendeth to the deepeſt Emptineſs of our ſelves, that God ſhould for ever juſtify as ſuch, that is, as ungodly; and this we are to do, becauſe of our ſelves we are ſuch, having been ſuch once, though now we are and have been upon a new Grace truly ſanctified. Juſt thus when thou comeſt to humble thy ſelf for this Sin, (that thou mayſt thorowly do it, and to the bottom) look (on the contrary) firſt upon thy ſelf, as once to have been ſo and ſo perfectly upright and holy, by and from thy Creation — And then thereupon, thy conſidering how thou didſt fall from that Condition, will more effectually read to thy Soul theſe humbling Lectures and Admonitions, to annihilate thee, or bring thee to nothing as a Creature, than any other of thy Sins ſince.

1*ſt*. It will humble thee not only for the ſinfulneſs of that Act, but alſo for the Mutability, Vanity, Fickleneſs and Unſtability of thee in falling from ſuch a perfect State, the moſt perfect that Man by Creation was any way capable of.

2*dly*. It will inſtruct thee, that if thou thy ſelf hadſt been in Adam's ſtead, when he was thus perfect in Holineſs, (as he was in thine and all the World's ſtead) that thou wouldſt have ſerved him and us all ſo, even as he ſerved us, (or rather God) and have fallen as foully and as ruinouſly as he did.——Thou wilt eaſily therefrom conclude it with thy ſelf, by taking thy Meaſure from that Standard; That if the holieſt Man that ever was, (but the ſecond Man Chriſt, perſonally united to the Son of God) choſen out by God on purpoſe as the Perfection of his Creation, eldeſt-born of the Sons of Men for ſtrength and ability to ſtand, betruſted with his own and all Mankind's Intereſts, and future Happineſs, &c. if he thus fail'd, That even ſo ſhould I have done, wilt thou think.

think. God I ſee might truly ſay, as in Job, I can put no truſt in any of my Creatures ſtanding on their Bottom. Nor could I (mayſt thou ſay) have any Confidence in my ſelf, by which to have undertaken to ſtand, if I had been ſet down in Adam's Circumſtances, and with his Apprehenſions about me, more than he did. And this will inſtruct a Man wholly to give up his Creature-Eſtate to God: and this is a great Leſſon. Yea, 3*dly*. The Conſideration of this will teach and inſtruct thee, as never to put Confidence in any Free-will-Grace, that is, Grace committed to the conduct and menage of Man's Free-will; ſo nor in renewed Grace, that is, if God ſhould now ſet us up again upon a new Stock, make us as holy as we were at firſt, and then leave us to a Creature-like Management of our ſelves, (ſuch as at firſt we had) we ſhould fall with all that our new Repair and Stock of Holineſs, it would not keep us a moment; and in this Emptineſs and Nothingneſs of our ſelves, the guilt of the firſt Act of Sin perpetrated by a pure Creature, (as Adam was) inſtructs us in ſuch a manner, as no other Sin of our own, now when we are corrupted, would or could have taught us: for that was acted out of pure Freedom, or rather Arbitrarineſs of Man's Will, as not then biaſſed or inclined unto Evil, but furniſhed with the contrary; whereas now our Wills are ſpoiled and corrupted by that Sin, and have a Weight depreſſing them, and a Bribe in their right Hand: So that we now ſin, tempted by our own Luſt, (as the Apoſtle ſays, James 1. 14.) as well as out of a freedom of Will.

CHAP. V.

All theſe Acts of Repentance are mingled with Faith in Chriſt, and have a Tendency to excite and increaſe it. That the ſenſe of this Sin hath, more than any other, an Influence to move us to Chriſt, ſince hereby we are convinc'd of our Weakneſs and Mutability, as Creatures, as well as of our Guilt, as Sinners, that ſo we may ſeek a Remedy in Chriſt for both.

ALL theſe forementioned Acts, eſpecially the latter of ſpiritual Mourning and Contrition, are mixed in the Heart of a Soul truly penitent, with Strains and Veins of Faith upon Free-Grace, and Chriſt, for Pardon and Juſtification from this Guilt as well as any: Nor indeed is that ſaving Repentance for any Sin that flows not from, or at leaſt is not accompanied with the hopes of, and ſeeking of Pardon and Forgiveneſs for that Sin a Man repents of. We ſee therefore how this exerciſe of Spirit is here intermingled in this Pſalm with theſe Confeſſions, Waſh me, purge me with Hyſſop, which had Chriſt's Blood in it, according to the Levitical Type, to ſprinkle the Conſcience withal. Hyſſop was uſed as the Inſtrument of ſprinkling both Water and Blood on them that were any way unclean, whereof we read, Exod. 24. 7, 8. with the Blood of Calves; and Levit. 14. 6, 8. with the Blood of Birds, in caſe of the Leper; and Numb. 19. 6, 18. with the Aſhes of an Heifer. The Myſtery of all which the Apoſtle hath led us into, Heb. 9. 19. Moſes took the Blood of Calves and Goats, with Water and Scarlet Wool, and Hyſſop, and ſprinkled all the People: And ver. 13, 14. he interprets it thus; If the Blood of Bulls and of Goats, and the Aſhes of an Heifer ſprinkling the Unclean, ſanctifieth to the purifying of the Fleſh; how much more ſhall the Blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit, offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your Conſcience from dead Works? &c. thereby ſignifying our Juſtification. Now the ſprinkling of the Blood and Water, by Hyſſop, &c. dipp'd therein, in caſe of the Leper, Lev. 14. was more ſpecially intended of cleanſing us from our Original Sin, both by Chriſt's Blood in the way of Juſtification, and by Water, in the way of Sanctification; for that Sin needeth both—Sanctification to cleanſe us from the Filth or Blot inherent, and Juſtification from the Guilt. And the Leproſy more properly pointed unto that Birth-Sin, ſince that noiſom Diſeaſe often was conveyed by Birth, and always noted out that inherent Corruption, which as a Sin and a Leproſy is in us, contracted firſt by Adam's Fact, and by Birth derived as a native Diſeaſe. Now David therefore confeſſing himſelf unclean in reſpect of his Birth-Sin, and having Chriſt's Blood in his Eye, as well as thoſe other Sins, pertinently therefore cries out, Waſh me thoroughly, ver. 2. (for that ſprinkling on the Leper was done ſeven times, Lev. 14. 7. a number of Perfection) and purge me with Hyſſop, &c. ver. 7. and I ſhall be whiter than Snow: for the Leper was cleanſed by the ſprinkling of Blood, from Scarlet Wool dipp'd in it, as well as Hyſſop, Lev. 14. 6, 7. whereby the Crimſon Guilt of this and other Sins was done away; and, as the Prophet ſpeaks, Though they were as Scarlet, they ſhall be as white as Snow; though they be red like Crimſon, they ſhall be as Wool.—So then, together with Confeſſion and Repentance, we muſt remember to mingle Acts of Faith, as David did. And truly thoſe forementioned Acts, ſpecially of Contrition, &c. for the guilt of this Act, do both prepare for further Acts of Faith, and are to be accompanied therewith.

Firſt; Such a Brokenneſs prepares for going out unto Chriſt, perhaps in ſome reſpect more than any other Sin. For, 1*ſt*.

Book IX.

1*ſt*. It letting us to ſee our mutability and nothingneſs as Creatures, &c. (as was noted) this diſpoſeth the Soul both to value, and go out of it ſelf unto Chriſt.

1. As an Head of Union, by whom we are fixed and made ſtable as Creatures, and ſhall one Day in Heaven become immutable through our Relation to him as to an Head. And,

2. To have recourſe unto Chriſt as a Redeemer, to cleanſe us from the Guilt and Power of Sin, both which do ſo diſtinctly make up the Faith we ought to act on Chriſt in regard of this our Original Sin.

2*dly*. It ſerves (by the parallel of the two Adams) to help Souls more clearly to underſtand the right way of our Juſtification, and how it is diſtinct from being ſanctified, namely, by the Righteouſneſs of another, Jeſus Chriſt the ſecond Adam imputed to us, over and above our having Sanctification inherently wrought in us by him. This we ſhall come more diſtinctly to underſtand, when the Soul hath been once made throughly ſenſible that the Sin of the firſt Adam comes upon it for condemnation, over and beſides inherent corruption of Nature therewith contracted. The one ſerves to give Light to the other, although in the Conveyance they infinitely differ, the one being received by Faith and Regeneration from Chriſt, the other comes upon Men traduced by natural propagation.—I have known ſome Souls, who having been, in the Work of Humiliation upon them, firſt powerfully convinced of both theſe Sinfulneſſes from Adam, and particularly of the juſt imputation of Adam's Fact by God to them, who yet in ſeeking how to be ſaved, (as they in Acts 2.) did not at firſt ſo clearly underſtand the way of Faith on Chriſt's Righteouſneſs as diſtinct from Sanctification, (on which Sanctification they had too much reſted, as if that were to be their Juſtification in the ſight of God) have, after they came to liſten to the Doctrine of Juſtification by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs imputed by God, and through Faith alone laid hold on and received, and had it more fully opened to them, they have been wonderfully helped to apprehend and take this in from their foregone conviction of the imputed Guilt of Adam's Sin, yea, and have had their Hearts the more encouraged to go out of themſelves to God and Chriſt for this Righteouſneſs of Juſtification, by the Parallel which that afforded to this other, as in Rom. 5. 19. the Apoſtle hath ſet them together, As by one Man's Diſobedience, many were made Sinners; ſo by the Obedience of one, ſhall many be made Righteous. For if the things themſelves compared, do illuſtrate each the other, as by the Apoſtle's ſo having done appears; then alſo in the apprehenſion and underſtanding of any Soul that conſiders them; for, uti res ſunt in eſſe ita in cognoſci: For a Soul to think, I will go to that God, who, as by a juſt Act he hath accounted me and us all Sinners in Adam, in whom All have ſinned; ſo he may and will, out of free Grace through Chriſt his Righteouſneſs, juſtify the ungodly, and make us the Righteouſneſs of God in him, and why not me?

And other Sins which a Man in his own Perſon hath committed, though they may and do let a Man ſee a more need of Chriſt, and ſo preſs forward his Soul to go unto him, and may ſerve to the School-maſters part to whip us to Chriſt, in reſpect of ſight of need; yet they no way conduce to inſtruct us in the Way of Faith, or going to Chriſt for Juſtification in that Manner, as the conviction of this of Adam's Sin doth, as hath now been ſpecified: Nay, the Voice of thoſe Sins in the Conſcience cries aloud to the contrary, The Soul that ſins, ſhall die, and bear its own Sin it ſelf. Thus much as to what our ſenſe and ſorrow for Original Sin, makes way for and helps forward Faith in Chriſt for Juſtification.

Secondly; As to free Grace, or the Mercy of God juſtifying of us freely through Chriſt's Blood, which is alſo the Object of Faith, we ought, upon the conviction of, and humiliation for this Sin, to lay our ſelves at the Foot-ſtool of God's Throne of Grace, ſeeking pardon to take away the Guilt of it, as David doth doth in this Pſal. 51. ver. 1, 2. together with his other Sins. Men are apt to think with themſelves, that God in juſtice, accounting Adam's Sin unto them, ſhould, as it were, oblige him (being a God ſo merciful) to pardon it: and to that purpoſe, ſome in their Writings have not ſpared to expreſs themſelves: But if it be a Sin, and our Sin, we muſt be beholden to Grace to forgive it; and God in juſtice might condemn us for it, though we had no other Sin. And this is an eſſential and inſeparable Property or Character of Grace, to be free, and ſo to juſtify freely, as Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt. And therefore in the Apoſtle's following Diſcourſe, about our Guilt of this very Act of Sin; in Chap. 5. he ſubjoins, ver. 1. that it is by an abundance of Grace, and of the Gift of Grace, whereby this Sin, together with the many other of our own came to be pardoned, and we juſtified; and therefore the ſame Grace that muſt exert it ſelf to pardon other Sins, muſt be freely extended, and put forth by God for the forgiveneſs of this alſo. Chap. 6.

But of this Part, I ſhall have occaſion again to ſpeak, in the concluſion of this part of this Diſcourſe.

CHAP. VI.

That Act of Repentance, which is a turning from Sin unto God, is to be exerciſed about this our Original Sin, and in what manner.

THere is a Second, and the main Part of Repentance, which looketh forward unto Time to come, and is a turning to God from Sin, being thereto provoked by Sorrow for Sin paſt or preſent; Thus 2 Cor. 7. 10, 11. For godly Sorrow worketh Repentance to Salvation not to be repented of; but the Sorrow of the World worketh Death: For behold, this ſelf-ſame thing that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, what carefulneſs it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of your ſelves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement deſire, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge; in all things ye have approved your ſelves to be clear in this Matter. Godly Sorrow maketh Repentance, which reſpects Time to come.

It is then next to be conſidered, What conviction of this Act with Sorrow may be provocative to a Soul apprehenſive of it unto a turning unto God, as well as ſorrow for any other Sin.

To this I give a general Aſſertion or two.

1. That the main of Repentance lies in a turning to God out of a ſtate of Sin. This the Scriptures do moſt inſiſt on. Acts 26. 18. To turn Men from the Power of Satan (who in their ſtate of ſinning is ſaid to have power over them all their Life long, that is, whilſt they continue in that eſtate, Heb. 2. 15.) unto God, as the Terminus ad quem. And it is certain, that initial Repentance is not meerly from an act, but from a ſtate of Sinning. Now if it be duly conſidered, it is that Guilt of the ſinful Act of our firſt Parents that brought us into, and had conjunct with it a ſtate of Sin. And as by Faith we enter, or have our firſt acceſs into the Grace wherein we ſtand, Rom. 5. 2. that is, the ſtate of Grace; ſo oppoſitely, ver. 12, and 18. it is ſaid, Sin entred; which entrance was by that firſt Sin, and the Guilt of it; and together with that its entrance it was, that we entred into a ſtate of Sin, and we were (firſt) made Sinners by it, ver. 18. and ſo made Sinners, as to be under a ſtate or dominion of Sin and Death; Sin reigns unto Death, ver. 21. Yea, and it was this Sin that ſhot that firſt Bolt upon you, whereby you were and are irrecoverably ſhut up under Sin, without any poſſibility of recovery. Other actual ſins, yea, inherent Corruption, do but keep you in that eſtate; but 'twas this Sin firſt brought you into it. —— If therefore the great Converſion of a Soul at firſt be from out of a ſtate of Sin unto God; then ſurely it is a turning from this Sin, not only as conjunct with this ſtate, but as the Original hereof.

2. In general. That a Man may be provoked by the Conviction, &c. of his Guilt of this Sin to turn unto God, as well as by any Act of his own committing. To this purpoſe let it be conſidered, that this Sin is our own as well as any other. And if ſo, then if a Man's Soul be once poſſeſt of it, that this Sin of Adam's is alſo his own Sin, and withal of the hainouſneſs of it, then why ſhould not this Man, out of the ſenſe of his Guilt hereof turn unto God, and againſt all Sin what-ever, as well upon the ſenſe of any Sin or Sins of his own committing? for both are Sins, and both are his own Sins, though upon a different account.

To illuſtrate this yet the more, I will but make this Suppoſition, (which for illuſtration-ſake I may) That any Son of Adam come to underſtanding, could be ſuppoſed guilty of no other Act of Sinning, but this imputed one from Adam; or, if this ſhould not be admitted, I will make another, which will be as ſerviceable to my purpoſe; Suppoſe that any ſuch Convert's Mind was wholly taken up with the Conviction of, and poring upon his Guilt of that one Sin, ſo as at that preſent he had not in his actual Thoughts and Meditations any other actual Sin of his own, (and this is really ſuppoſeable, and may be a Convert's Caſe) and ſo he were at that preſent wholly upon ſuch penitential Acts for that Sin alone as have been ſet out, viz. of judging himſelf, ſorrowing according to God, &c. I would in this Caſe but demand, whether this Conviction, and Sorrow, deteſtation of himſelf for this Sin—as Sin, and as his own Sin, and a moſt hainous horrid Sin, joined with ſeeking after, or a ſenſe of the pardon of it, might not, ought not, would not work and ſtir up in him a ſpiritual turning unto God againſt all Sin whatſoever? Certainly, Yes: yea, and as I ſhall ſhew, it may naturally and kindly work all thoſe Effects of Repentance which the Apoſtle ſays, that godly Sorrow had wrought in thoſe Corinthians, 2 Cor. 7. 11. (of which by and by) for ſtill where there is the ſame ground of like Repentance, there may follow and ariſe from thence the ſame Effects.

You will ſay, There is this difference in the Caſe, (over and beſides that Conſideration, that a Man committed it not himſelf) that in caſe of other Sins, a Man is provoked to Repentance, becauſe he is capable to commit that ſort of Sin again, and ſo ſays with himſelf, and ſpecially reſolves againſt that particular Sin, to commit that no more of all his Abominations, as the Prophet's words are. But thus no Man can ſay of this Sin of Adam's eating the forbidden Fruit; it was done but once, and put to the trial but once; yea, the Command forbidding it, ceaſed, and was up n the Fact at an end For Anſwer,

1. Adam himſelf, or Eve, if they were alive, were not capable of ſuch a ſpecial Repentance for that Sin, who yet were the Perſons themſelves who had committed it, (whom yet all will acknowledg to have repented in the conſideration thereof, and perhaps more than of any other Sin elſe committed by them, becauſe turned godly, and made Penitents by God himſelf); For why? the Commandment was inſtantly void; yea, and if this Reaſon which is objected hold, we muſt ſay, That whilſt they were alive, they in this ſort never did repent of it as to time to come, (which is that part of Repentance we were now a ſpeaking of) nor never could: What then was their Repentance for it as for the time to come? even to ſay and reſolve with themſelves, We will through Grace ſin no more againſt any Command of God what-ever, that either God hath or ſhall give us, eſpecially not againſt any ſuch Command that is made a Trial and Symbol of Obedience in ſo ſignal a manner as this was.—And unto ſuch a Repentance for time to come, may the Soul of every Son of Adam, bowed down under his Guilt of this Sin, and deep ſenſe of God's Diſpleaſure, taken at it, and manifeſted againſt it, find all ſorts of Motives and Provocations. Thus in general. Chap. 6.

But further, 2. Suppoſe there be ſome particular Sin, which bears the appearance or likeneſs to that firſt Act which a Man's Soul hath formerly fallen into, and that this be his Caſe, (and like Sins unto that, for the ſubſtance of the Act there are many) by occaſion of which his Soul hath been forewarned in a ſignal manner, to take heed above all other of ſinning with ſuch a Perſon, or in ſuch a thing, which are as the forbidden Fruit unto that Man: And the Commands of God againſt it have been in a ſingular manner ſet home upon his Soul, and ſo have become as ſymbolical Commands to him as that was to them, (and ſome ſuch ſingular Commands, and ſpecial Acts of ſinning, every Penitent hath or may have before him in his Eye) may not I ſay ſuch a Soul, upon the intuition of his Guilt in that Act of Adam's eating that ſo forbidden Fruit, is poſitively and really moved and provoked to turn unto God, in reſolving, with a true and efficacious Repentance, both in general, againſt breaking any of God's Laws for the future, but above all againſt any ſuch-like Tranſgreſſions, or breaking any ſuch trying Commands of ſpecial Obedience ſet him, even becauſe in Adam he did offend in the like? May not ſuch a Soul, in the depth of his Depreſſments, and lying in the Duſt, efficaciouſly reaſon himſelf (as the Apoſtle's Word upon another Occaſion is, Rom. 6.) unto ſuch a Repentance as hath been ſpecified? and the more, by how much he may conſider how hainouſly God took that Sin, curſt the Earth for it, whereby alſo himſelf and every Man is polluted and accurſed that comes into the World, by conſidering with himſelf, I was involved and concerned in all this, and thereupon to ſay, Surely if I were guilty of no more actual Sin but this alone, it ſhould be a ſufficient Motive againſt all Sin, which by God's manifeſted Diſtaſte at this Sin, I ſee he infinitely abhors; and whilſt his Thoughts are thus ſeriouſly working in himſelf, let any particular Sin come into his Thoughts, and he will in this freſh ſenſe of this firſt Sin abominate it. But theſe are but Generals, though perhaps ſufficient to ſet our Meditations and Exerciſes of our Souls awork this way, and lead us the way into more particular Acts of Repentance from hence.

Book IX.

CHAP. VII.

The Sorrow and Repentance which we ſhould have for Original Sin, more amplified from the Effects which godly Sorrow wrought in the Corinthians.

2 Cor. vii. 10, 11.

For godly Sorrow worketh Repentance to Salvation not to be repented of; but the Sorrow of the World worketh Death. For behold, this ſelf-ſame thing that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, what carefulneſs it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of your ſelves, yea, what Indignation, yea, what Fear, yea, what vehement Deſire, yea, what Zeal, yea, what Revenge: in all things ye have approved your ſelves to be clear in this matter.

I Shall endeavour to make a farther Eſſay upon all thoſe particular Acts of Repentance, which are ſet out to have been the Effects and Conſequents of godly Sorrow in thoſe Corinthians, if we underſtand that Paſſage of what Repentance was wrought in them, for that part of the Guilt which themſelves, as a Church, had contracted, and for which he had reproved them in the 5*th* Chapter of his former Epiſtle, as thoſe which had not mourned; which occaſioned this their Repentance here, as ver. 8. informs: and therefore that perſonal Repentance for themſelves muſt be taken in as there intended, and hath alſo been before animadverted. And ſo underſtood, I ſhall attempt to go over all thoſe particular Effects there ſpecified, and demonſtrate that they all may as naturally flow from a true godly Conviction and Sorrow for our ſhare in the Guilt of Adam's Sin, as upon the guilt of any perſonal Sin of our own committing.——The Apoſtle's words are theſe, Godly Sorrow worketh Repentance, ver. 10. And the Effects thereof do follow, ver. 11. For this ſelf-ſame thing that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, (or for God) 1. What carefulneſs wrought it in you; yea, 2. what Apology, or pleading for your ſelves; 3. what Indignation; 4. what Fear; 5. what vehement Deſire; 6. what Zeal; 7. what Revenge. Theſe are ſpiritually natural Effects of godly Sorrow for any grievous Sin, and Acts of Repentance relating unto Time to come: For as Bellarmine well ſays, There cannot be a true Sorrow of Heart for a Sin that is paſt, but preſently there doth ariſe a purpoſe not to ſin for the future.

Ἀπολογίαν.

In going over theſe, I ſhall couple thoſe of them that are more ſymbolical and congenial one with another, and ſo ſhortly ſpeak of them in the force of what hath been hitherto ſaid.

The firſt Couple ſhall be Care and Fear, both which reſpect avoiding Sin for Time to come, that we fall not into the like.

1. Care. Let any Soul but view the Tranſactions of Satan with Eve, and her's with Adam; and how eaſily their Feet ſlipt, and they turned thither, (as the Pſalmiſt's Phraſe is, Pſal. 73. 2.) and were eternally loſt and gone; and let that Soul withal but intereſt himſelf in that Act of Adam's firſt Sin, and he may find it gives him as great a monition of watchfulneſs, as any of his own Sins are like to do againſt all Temptations of Satan, not ſo much as to liſten to them, or to any other Motions of Sin.

2. [What Fear.] Fear imports a Carefulneſs ariſing from the ſenſe of a Danger, againſt Security or Confidence in our ſelves. There is no Inſtance will will prompt more heedfully for ever to ſtand upon our Guard, than this of Adam's ſinning: for if thou haſt put thy ſelf into Adam's Caſe and Condition, &c. thou wilt conſider how, though thou hadſt in him a fulneſs of perfect Holineſs, and nothing within to tempt thee, that yet thou then didſt fall in him, and he that was ſo compleatly armed, then fell, and thou in him; how much more then now when thou haſt ſo little of Grace to preſerve thee, and ſo much of Corruption to tempt thee, may it cauſe thee to work out thy Salvation with fear and trembling? Let him that ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall, is a natural Leſſon from hence; and, Put on the whole Armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand, &c. And this is holy Fear and Jealouſy of our ſelves. This for the firſt Couple. Chap. 7.

A ſecond Pair or Couple, are Indignation and Revenge.

The firſt ſpeaks a throwing away of Sin in a chafe: What have I to do any more with Idols? as Ephraim, Hoſ. 14. 9. ——Or ſuch an Indignation as Aſaph had at himſelf, Pſal. 73. 22. So fooliſh was I, and as a Beaſt before thee. And if ever any Sin (take the Conſequents of it) would raiſe up Indignation in the Heart of one ſuppoſed guilty of it, this will, to think how triflingly the whole World was loſt and caſt away, my ſelf and all Mankind, at one Throw, for leſs than a Meſs of Pottage. O this ſhews what we are at beſt, even but Creatures; and this is our Creation-Grace, on which a Man would not venture the ſmalleſt piece of a Soul, much leſs the Bleſſedneſs of all Mankind. We are apt enough indeed to have our Spirits fume at Adam and Eve (as no queſtion, they repenting, did againſt themſelves) for ſo great an Unworthineſs, that Man in Honour ſhould ſo eaſily become a Beaſt that periſheth, yea a Devil. But the Indignation I call upon thee for, is of another kind: to which purpoſe put thy ſelf into Adam's Caſe, and firſt think with thy ſelf, If I had been in his ſtead, I with my Creature Freewill-Grace ſhould, vice verſâ, have ſerved Adam ſo, and loſt all for my ſelf and him, even as he did.——And then again, think alſo, that this Act of his Sin is thy Sin, and this will both turn thy Indignation againſt thy ſelf, and ſet thy Heart to be more reſolved againſt all Sin for time to come: for any Sin, as well as that of eating the forbidden Fruit, if it had been committed by them, would have done it: I will never truſt Creature-Grace or Freewill-Grace more, for this foul failure of it in him: O what Indignation!

The ſecond is Revenge. There is a Queſtion among the Schoolmen, Whether Repentance be only an Act of Love to God, or withal an Act of Juſtice, or doing a Juſtice unto God again, by way of recompence for Sin, as it is a Wrong and an Injury to him, by endeavouring what in us lies, to deſtroy the Injury done to God, and reſtore unto God his Right? Thus they. This Notion they would put upon Repentance's Revenge, with an intention thereon to found a Compenſation, a Satisfaction made unto God by Repentance, (ſuch as the Creatures can make) and withal thereby to make up a Reconciliation with God again, Injuriam reſarciendo, by making God amends. Thus they philoſophize. Yet never this Notion of theirs from this blaſphemous Affront given unto the Satisfaction of Chriſt alone made for us, inſtead of which they would ſet up their Satisfactions in Penances, &c. and underſtand this analogically or ſimilitudinarily, and there is a Revenge a penitent Soul takes of it ſelf for Sin, or rather upon Sin; and there is an endeavour to make God an amends, that by how much a Man hath the more ſinned, by ſo much the more he would be obedient, and do contrary unto what formerly he hath done; which you ſee to have been in Paul, who had been ſo violent in perſecuting the Church; in the Woman of Naim, &c. Luke 7. 37. and in the Chriſtians at Epheſus, that burnt their Books of curious Arts, &c. Acts 19. 19. And ſuch a Revenge is not ſimply intended as againſt our ſelves, (we leave that to the Papiſts) but againſt our Sins; and thoſe not ſimply, as having done our ſelves ſuch Miſchief, but as againſt God: for as it is Sorrow to God, or for God's Intereſt, from whence this Revenge here ariſeth, ſo as there is a Revenge done on Sin for God's ſake, wherein the penitent Soul can reſt ſatisfied with nothing but the utter deſtruction of it, for that Revenge doth always import: Jealouſy is the Rage

Book IX. or Revenge of a Man; Prov. 6. 34. For Jealouſy is the Rage of a Man; therefore he will not ſpare in the Day of Vengeance.

Now as to this of Revenge againſt Sin thus underſtood, how it ſhould be ſtirred up in us, by the conſideration of our guilt of that Act of Adam's Sin, or upon what thing or Sin this Revenge ſhould wreck or vent it ſelf? that is the Query: Upon that Act of Sin paſt? That cannot be: and to revenge our ſelves upon ſome lawful Liberty that holds an appearance to that of their eating the forbidden Fruit, in the contemplation of this Sin, is eaſily imaginable.

I ſhall only ſay as to this Point theſe two things.

1. If a Man would have Hatred ſtirred up to purpoſe againſt Sin, (which is the Ground and Provocative of Revenge) let him view but Sin in that Glaſs of Adam's Fall, and conſider but how hainouſly God took it, and how highly he was diſpleaſed at it, and hath ſhewn it in the miſerable Conſequents of it, ſo as never the like, it being the Spoil of all his Workmanſhip, which in the end of the ſixth and ſeventh Day he was ſo refreſhed withal; and a turning the whole Wheel and Way of the old Creation (of Man eſpecially) into a Contrariety unto him for ever.

There are two great Glaſſes to view the Deformity of Sin in. The firſt in this of Adam's Fact in Paradiſe. The ſecond in that of Chriſt's ſuffering for Sin upon the Croſs; God laid upon him the Iniquities of us all, Revenge being thus ſtirred up.

2. Wouldſt thou be revenged for this Miſchief done to God and thee, &c. and know where and how, in a proper way, to point and direct the Sword's Point of thy Revenge againſt it? Then look as David, when he would ſtudy how to ſhew a Kindneſs unto Jonathan who was dead, and ſo out of a capacity, or the reach of a Kindneſs himſelf, (as the Act of this Sin alſo is to ours) yet as David inquired, Is there any left of the Houſe of Saul, that I may ſhew kindneſs to him for Jonathan's ſake? 2 Sam. 9. 1. And they told him, he had a Son Mephiboſheth, ver. 3, &c. Thus ſay I, wouldſt thou be revenged for the Judg. 16. 28. Loſs not of thy two Eyes only, (as Samſon) but for the loſs of the whole Image of God, &c. which was created in Knowledg, &c. as the Apoſtle ſpeaks: I ſay, wouldſt thou be avenged for this and other Miſchiefs on this Sin? Look firſt if there be any of its Brood left behind it, whom thou mayſt fairly wreck thy Vengeance on. And for that thou needeſt to go no farther than thine own Heart, behold a whole Body of Sins, all ſorts of Luſts therein, that are the Brood it hath left behind it, that Sin was the Father of. Beſides all the actual Sins which are begotten by it, the Grand-children of that Grand-Sin; and if theſe be not large enough to ſatiate thy Vengeance, thou haſt the Sins of all the Sons of Men thou converſeſt with, that come within thy cognizance, to endeavour to extirpate theſe in them, by all Ways and Means wherein thy Duty lies.——These are all of the ſame Stock and Lineage, and deſcended from this Root, and Couſin-germans to thine own Sin. But if thou thinkeſt theſe too remote and too far off in Kindred, look upon thine own Children, who came out of thine own Loins, and all the Sins in them, which are all nearer a-kin unto that Corruption in thy ſelf, and next unto thine own. In all theſe thou haſt Field enough before thee for Revenge to forage in: Only firſt begin this thy Revenge at home, thou haſt enough to ſatiate thy Hatred upon there; ſlaſh and cut, and ſpare not; hew and cut down, and lay the Ax to the Root of the Tree. O what Revenge! But on a Revenge hereon I ſhall enlarge when I come to the Acts of Repentance for inherent Corruption.

There is a third Pair or Couple, What Deſire? What Zeal? Thoſe latter Fruits of Repentance do, to be ſure, ſpring from pure Love to God: What Deſires to be rid of Sin, and to be holy, which are the beſt Fruits of thy Grace in this Life? And then thy ſenſe of the Guilt of this Act of ſinning will put thee upon hungring and thirſting after Righteouſneſs, eſpecially that Righteouſneſs of that other Adam, Chriſt, of which by and by; and it will ſtir Deſires alſo after the Favour of God; for this was the firſt Sin that ſeparated betwixt God and thee. And Zeal is but Love and Deſire, and other Affections intended; Deſire is Smoak, and Zeal is Flame. And for a Man to conſider, I am guilty ty of the firſt Sin that ever was committed in the World, and one of the greateſt that ever was or will be: this may well provoke him to Deſire, and to ſay, That was the Alpha of my Sins, would to God that which I committed laſt might be the Omega. Again, did I bring Sins enough into the World, even of the Guilt of that Sin, if I had added no more, to have found me work to repent of as long as I have been or am to be in the World; yea, to find me work enough of that kind, if I did nothing elſe? And ſhall I ſin any one Sin more? O, if it were poſſible, not ſo much as one! O what Deſire, what Zeal ſhould this provoke us to? Chap. 7.

There is one thing more in that Text, 2 Cor. 7. a ſingle Seventh, which will not ſo well yoak with any of the other, a clearing our ſelves, or Apology in defence of our ſelves: And what may that be ſuppoſed to have to do with our ſenſe of the Guilt of this Act? We will be ready to ſay, That of all Sins elſe, we can the beſt apologize for this, and clear our ſelves, and waſh our Hands of that, and plead in defence of our ſelves, It was the Sin of another, and not our own: Quæ non fecimus ipſi, vix ea noſtra voco; That which I did not, can hardly be ſtiled mine. This was Adam's Fault indeed, in ſeeking to excuſe himſelf, by laying his Sin on his Wife, yea at God's door, Gen. 3. which Job alludes to, chap. 31. 33. But as to the Corinthians clearing themſelves for that perſonal ſhare of theirs in that Sin, (which the Apoſtle had reproved in theſe Corinthians) that true godly Sorrow which their Hearts were yet bedewed with, and had brought forth, this Apology here was joined with a putting their Mouths in the Duſt, and a taking Shame and Guilt to themſelves, to the utmoſt Grain of weight it will bear. The word here uſed, is an Apology, or pleading for Pardon and Forgiveneſs, having firſt taken a Sin upon us: for, as I obſerved before, true Faith is always intermingled with Repentance which is Evangelical, yea and cauſeth it: and the more it's made ſenſible of its Sin through its working, the more it puts the Soul upon further Exerciſes of Faith, and to ſeek after the attainment of freſh aſſurance of Forgiveneſs. This Apology the Apoſtle terms elſewhere, the Anſwer or Speakings of a good Conſcience, when through Faith the Soul is enabled to plead Chriſt's Reſurrection for the Juſtification of it ſelf, 1 Pet. 3. 21. which is done, whilſt a penitent Soul approacheth with freſh and lowder Cries the Throne of Grace for God's Abſolution and Forgiveneſs, and clearing of them to their own ſenſe, for a Sin repented of and ſorrowed for; as we ſaw in David, who through God had by the Prophet's outward Meſſage ſent him, declared he had forgiven his Sin, 2 Sam. 12. 13. yet David's Soul muſt hear God himſelf ſpeak that Word over anew to his own Soul; and therefore you heard of his Pleadings and Apologies for Mercy and Pardon, out of Pſal. 51. 7. 1 Cor. 5. 3. See Dyke Repent. chap. 14.

I ſhewed before out of Rom. 5. 25. that it is and muſt be the Free-Grace in God, that only muſt quit and diſcharge us of the Guilt of this Sin, as well as from any other Sins; yea, and an abundant Grace it is to forgive that Sin, as well as the many of our other Offences, ver. 15, 16.——Unto which, as to that other of David's, I add, as I then ſaid, two more Scriptures to confirm this. And it is very obſervable, that in ſo many Places (take them all) where this Sin is ſpoken of, God's Free-Grace in pardoning and ſaving, is eminently ſpoken of alſo, as to the Forgiveneſs of them.

The firſt is Iſa. 43. 27. Thy firſt Father hath ſinned, and thy Teachers have tranſgreſſed againſt me. There you have this Diſobedience of Adam laid to their charge to humble them, as generally, ſays Calvin, Interpreters expound it, and not their Forefathers, as to their Birth, becauſe he ſpeaks of ſome one Father ſingly and eminently, which that word [firſt] Father indigitates. And who was the Primo Primus, the Firſt-Firſt, whoſe Sin alſo was ſo famed and notorious, and the cauſe of all Sin, as Adam is the common Father of all: but withal Free-Grace to pardon that and all other their Sins, is not far off, yea had been aforehand ſet down in ver. 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy Tranſgreſſions for my own ſake, and will remember them no more. A Scripture which ſpeaks mere Free-Grace as amply and as loudly as any Place whatever, and ſpeaks it not under the Language of that Redemption from Captivity, (though including ding it) but of blotting out Tranſgreſſions, and remembring them no more; which is made the proper Language of the Covenant of Grace unto the Elect out of Mankind: And ſo he ſpeaks to the Godly of that Nation perſonally; and he inſtanceth in ſuch Sins, as they might otherwiſe think they leaſt needed Pardon for, not their own perſonally committed by themſelves, but firſt that Guilt common with them to all Mankind, committed in Adam; and then their publick Guilt, in reſpect of the Relation of their Prieſts, who were the Interceſſors for them to God; and yet had ſtiled theſe [THY SINS] in ver. 25. which you are to be humbled for, as for your own, every one of you. And lo (ſays he) I am he that blots out theſe, and all other thy Tranſgreſſions, for my own Name ſake, that is, freely: And it muſt be my Grace which muſt forgive theſe thy Sins, as well as any other of thine own; and therefore look up unto me, I, even I am he that pardoneth them: Neither canſt thou find out, ſaith God, or enter on any Plea or Apology (as the word is here) for Pardon, but this alone of my Name, which I have ſo long ago proclaimed unto thee, The Lord gracious, &c. Thus in ver. 26. Put me in remembrance; let us plead together; declare thou, that thou mayſt be juſtified: Juſtified for theſe Guilts, which are thine but by Imputation, as the firſt Sin of thy Fore-father, or national Relation, as the Sin of thy Teachers.

The ſecond Scripture added, is Epheſ. 2. 1, 5. Ye were dead in Sins and Treſpaſſes, and by Nature Children of Wrath: And they were by Nature, or born dead, as well in reſpect of the Guilt of their firſt Father Adam's Diſobedience, being condemned in him, Rom. 5. 18. as of inherent Corruption. But what then is it he points them unto alone, whereby they had obtained, or were to obtain Pardon and Salvation from? Ver. 4, 5. God, who is rich in Mercy, &c. when ye were dead in Sins, hath quickned us together with Chriſt, (by Grace ye are ſaved.)

And thus much for the firſt Part of this Diſcourſe, The humbling our ſelves for our Guilt of the Act of Adam's Diſobedience.

CHAP.

Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

What Sorrow and Repentance we ſhould have for the other Part of Original Sin, viz. the Corruption which is inherent in our Natures. We muſt conſider it as the Cauſe of the greateſt and moſt hainous Sins which we commit, and which give us the higheſt occaſion of mourning. That every Act of Sin is of ſo much the deeper Guilt, as the Corruption of our Nature doth more vent it ſelf in it. That the Corruption of Nature doth ſet us farther off from God, than any actual Sin whatever. That this is more near and intimate to thy Soul than all thy actual Tranſgreſſions.

I Now come to the ſecond Part of the Diſcourſe touching inherent Corruption, and what Exerciſe of Repentance, Mourning, or whatever Acts elſe we are to put forth about it; which Corruption is the Fruit of that ſinful Act of Adam, and is inherent in our Nature, which is called, Rom. 7. 20. the Sin that dwelleth in us. And this we may take for a certain Rule, whatever Acts may any way become genuine, to humble our ſelves for the Guilt of that firſt Sin of eating the forbidden Fruit, they will prove more direct and proper to be put forth, as concerning the inherent Corruption in us. For this is our Sin, not by Imputation, but by indwelling in us; even as Leproſy derived from the Parents (no matter how they came by it) is as properly the Son's Leproſy as it is the Father's: And there needs no diſpute about it, whether a Man's Leproſy be by derivation from his Parents, or by a Man's ſelf contracted, however it's his own Leproſy: And accordingly as to the Conviction of this, to be our own indwelling Sin, we are but to look into our own Bowels, (though we need ſpiritual Light to diſcover it with unto the bottom, yet) there is enough of its Corruption boiling up every day, as doth or may teſtify this to our Conſciences.

I propound for my Method in this, theſe two things, which you may call Parts or Heads of this enſuing Diſcourſe.

I. The great Sinfulneſs of this Sin of inherent Corruption dwelling in us.
II. The Acts of Repentance which we are to exerciſe about it.

I. I begin with the firſt, the Sinfulneſs of this inherent Corruption; it is not of Sin in general, which I have elſewhere ſet forth, but the Sinfulneſs that is in this inherent Corruption of Nature we brought into the World with us, and which is increaſed in us, and remaining to this day in every one of our Souls. Diſcourſe of the Aggravations of Sin.

I ſhall take two Courſes to manifeſt the Sinfulneſs of this unto you.

Firſt, In a comparative Way.
Secondly, Conſider it ſingly, and ſimply in it ſelf.

Firſt, The comparative Way is double.

1*ſt*. Single out the groſſeſt actual Sin thou haſt been guilty of in thy Life: take any one particular groſs Sin, that thou thinkeſt lies heavieſt upon thy Conſcience, (as ſuch are moſt apt to do) yet that Corruption thou broughtſt into the World with thee, that Maſs and Body of Sin thou haſt in thy Nature, gives thee more cauſe in many reſpects to be humbled for that, than for any one groſs Sin, be it what it will.

Book IX.

2*dly*. Compare it with all actual Sins whatſoever, and take them and abſtract them from this Root of inherent Corruption, and it may prove a Queſtion, whether of the two we ſhould be moſt humbled for?

Firſt, Single out the groſſeſt Act that ever thou committedſt, or perhaps haſt heard of to have been committed by any, (the ſpecial Poiſon of the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt excepted) and that inherent Corruption of thy Nature in many reſpects doth exceed it. To this purpoſe,

1. Conſider, That if it were no more, than that it was the Cauſe of that actual Sin, this is ſufficient to render it more hainous; and the Virtue whereby any thing is produced, is ſtronger in the Cauſe than in the Effect. Now that groſs Sin, whatever it be, was but the Bud of that as the Root; and take but a little of a poiſoned Root, and extract the Spirit of it, and it hath more Poiſon in it than any of the Branches. The Notion of this I ſhall afterwards carry down to the other, the ſecond Head, of comparing it with all actual Sin.

2. Conſider that the Evil of any groſs Sin, or the greateſt part of the ſinfulneſs of it, will be found to lie in this, according as the evil Diſpoſition, and Venom and Poiſon of thy Nature did vent it ſelf in that Action more or leſs, and fills that Action, the wickeder it is. According as the Tide flowing from that Sea, fills the Channel more or leſs, ſo doth the ſinfulneſs of that Sin riſe up more or leſs; and ſo it is that Corruption, wherein ſpecially the Guilt lies in every ſuch Action. And thence it is that Actions, groſs and great for bulk, are often leſs ſinful in the Eyes of God than ſmaller Actions, becauſe leſs filled with the evil Diſpoſition of the Heart. And this the Philoſophers themſelves acknowledged, That an evil Notion done, ex pravâ diſpoſitione, an Act proceeding from a rooted habitual Diſpoſition, was worſe, and more to be puniſh'd than another, though outwardly as bad, if but done out of ſome ſuddain Paſſion, as they call it: witneſs that Sentence of the Athenian Judges, who condemned a Boy to death, but for tearing out, in a cruel manner, the Eyes of a few Crows and Partridges, as being (though for the Act but ſmall) the Evidence and Indicium of an habitual cruel Nature. And God himſelf judgeth of Mens Ways according to the diſpoſitions of their Hearts let out in their Ways; for which read that Speech in Solomon's Prayer, 1 Kings 8. 39. Render to every one according to his Ways, whoſe Heart thou knoweſt; which though intended principally of God's acceptation of the contrary good Actions of holy Men, yet as a General holds of evil Actions alſo, and much more, becauſe there is a demerit in them which is not in the other. We ſee he ſays not ſimply according to their ways, but as growing on this Stock, their Hearts, from whence their Actions ſuck or draw up more or leſs Poiſon. And we find elſewhere God himſelf joining his Teſtimony to this Maxim in Solomon's Prayer, and confirming it, and anſwering to it, Jer. 17. 10. I the Lord ſearch the Heart, to render to every Man according to his Ways. He joins the Heart and the Ways together; he compares how much the Action ſavours of the Muſt of the Veſſel, and doth taſte of it, that he may know how to meaſure forth a Portion of Puniſhment to their outward Ways and Actions, according as he ſees and judges how far, more or leſs, the Action was ſteep'd in the ſowr Liquor of their Original Corruption.

A third thing is, That the evil Diſpoſition of thy Nature doth farther ſever and ſet thee off from God, than ſimply an actual Sin doth. And that is the meaſure of more or leſs Sinfulneſs, by how much the Sin doth more or leſs ſeparate from God, Iſa. 59. 7. Your Sins have ſeparated between me and you: therefore the more they ſeparate, the more is the Sinfulneſs. Now this Corruption of Nature makes a greater elongation of thee from God, than an actual Sin doth, be it the groſſeſt. The Leproſy was the Type of it in the old Law; it was that only that ſeparated a Man from God, and from the Congregation all his Life; and it ſignified not an Act of Sinning ſo much, as inherent Corruption, which is a Diſeaſe in the Soul, as that is in the Body. You have it, Numb. 5. 2, 3. and if he were a King, yet he was to be ſeparated, if a Leper, 2 Chron. 26. 21. Now that inherent Corruption doth more ſeparate than an actual Sin doth, the reaſon of it is, becauſe a

Contrariety

Contrariety in Nature breeds always greater Diſtance, yea Enmity, than ſimply an Act of Hoſtility, or meer outward Acts of Injury. You ſee this in the Creatures that have contrary Qualities, which we call Antipathies in their Diſpoſitions; and meerly out of a contrariety of Nature, they are greater Enemies than others that do one another actually more harm. Let a Swine, or a Maſtiff tear and rend us, as Chriſt ſays, yet we can endure the ſight of them, the preſence, yea we can afterwards ſtroak him; but let a Serpent appear, where there is a contrariety in Nature, or a Spider appear, you ſee how mightily it works in the Spirit of one that hath an antipathy to theſe (as Man hath) at the firſt view or ſight of them. Now inherent Corruption is ſuch a Contrariety in thy Nature unto God; it is a Contrariety in the way of an Antipathy. Tranſient Acts of Sinnings, are indeed ſaid to be againſt the Lord; but the inward Diſpoſition of their Nature hath, and is a Contrariety in Nature it ſelf, and ſo is deeper and ſtronger; ſo this Fleſh is ſaid to be Enmity to God, in the Abſtract, Rom. 8. 7. It is contrary to Holineſs, as it is in God's Nature; whatever God hates, it loves; and whatever God loves, it hates. Chap. 8.

4. Conſider, thou haſt more cauſe to be humbled for the ſinful Diſpoſitions in thy Nature, than any of thy actual Sins, becauſe there is a nearer Union between Sin and thy Soul, in reſpect of this inherent Corruption, than by thy Action ſingly conſidered. An Act of Sin hath not ſo near a Kindred or Alliance to the Soul, as inherent Corruption hath. You read in Micah 6. 7. that the meaſure of Sinfulneſs lies in the relation it hath to the Soul of a Man; Wilt thou give the Fruit of thy Body for the Sin of thy Soul? Therefore the more it may be ſaid to be the Soul's Sin, the more Sinfulneſs is in it; and further, there is this in Reaſon for it, that the nearer union we have with Sin, or our Hearts have with it, the farther we are ſeparated from God. Now that this Union is nearer, I manifeſt by one or two things.

(1.) This is the relation of ſubject and inherent Quality. Thy Soul is the Subject, and the Sin an inherent Quality in thy Soul; It dwells in us, as the Apoſtle ſays; it is not an Act paſſant from us, that bears but the relation of an outward Effect unto its Cauſe.

(2.) The Union that is between Sin in thy Nature, and thy Soul, is ſuch as between the Matter and Form. The Soul is as the Matter unto this Sin as the Form; as the Body is the Matter which the Soul informs: for we account that to be the Form, which acts, inſpires, moves, informs, and guides the Matter. Hence this Corruption is called a Man's ſelf; Thou and that Corruption that is in thee, are called by one Name [Fleſh] in Scripture: Joh. 3. 6. That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh; and all the Actions of the whole Man are attributed to it. But now the Union between thee and thy Action, hath but the Relation of the Tree and the Fruit, the Parent and the Child: Rom. 7. 5. For when we were in the Fleſh, the motions of Sins which were by the Law, did work in our Members, to bring forth Fruit unto Death. James 1. 14, 15. But every Man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own Luſt, and enticed. Then when Luſt hath conceived, it bringeth forth Sin; and Sin when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth Death.

5. Conſider, That in a ſinful Action but a Work of thine own is ſpoiled and marred, which thou ſhouldſt have produced in a ſhape more agreeable to the Law, the Pattern for that Action; but by the Sinfulneſs that is in thy Nature, God's Workmanſhip is ſpoiled, his Image defaced, a Frame and Principle of working which he produced, and formed for his Glory, as the Prophet, Iſa. 43. 21. or created at firſt to good Works, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Epheſ. 2. 10.

Again, 6. conſider, That particular groſs Sin thou haſt committed, is but a particular tranſient Breach and Tranſgreſſion of ſome one Commandment. Now look on an Act of Cruelty and Injuſtice, in what kind ſoever, ſuppoſe the greateſt that can be perpetrated by a State, or the Supream Power, and it is far leſs hainous, than if there were a ſtanding Law enacted by them to authorize ſuch an Act: And now take the groſſeſt Sin that ever thy Soul committed, and there is a ſtanding Law in thy Nature that hath force in thy Members to bring forth a thouſand thouſand ſuch Acts; and by virtue of it they may be brought into Act until that Law be recalled, that is, thy Nature changed: So that ſtill ſuppoſe the groſſeſt Act that may be, if in thy Nature there be as wicked a Law to authorize it, and to bring it into execution, and that alſo a ſtanding Law, it is an invincible proof, that thy Nature, in reſpect of being ſuch a Law, is more wicked than any grievous Act of ſinning, even the moſt grievous whatſoever. And this Conſideration far exceeds the firſt; for thy Corruption was not only the Cauſe of ſuch an Act, but the Cauſe as a Law is, which is extant ſtill to be the Cauſe of ten thouſand more, as Occaſion and Temptation is.

Yea, 7. conſider, That Action was but one tranſient breach of ſome one particular Command, but the Corruption that is in thy Nature, hath not only a particular Law to enforce that kind of particular Sin again, over and over, but it is a Contrariety to the whole Law in every Tittle of it: and look how many Laws God hath in his Word, ſo many contrary Laws Sin hath in thy Heart, Rom. 7. 22, 23. compared, (I delight in the Law of God after the inward Man; but I ſee another Law in my Members warring againſt the Law of my Mind, and bringing me into Captivity to the Law of Sin which is in my Members) doth confirm both of theſe two laſt Aſſertions. There in thy Heart the Devil's Commandments are written, contrary to God's written in the two Tables, explained by Moſes and the Prophets: Now the Holy Spirit by David hath ſaid, Pſal. 119. 69. I have ſeen an end of all perfection; but thy Law is exceeding broad: as much as to ſay, The Particulars thereof are infinite, there is no End of it, as the ſame David ſpeaks of God's Knowledg. If therefore thou haſt as many Laws of Sin in thee, as there be Laws of God, how above meaſure muſt thy Nature be ſinful?

Again, 8. conſider, That that groſs Sin was committed haply but by ſome one Member, uſed as a Weapon and Inſtrument of Unrighteouſneſs; but this Sin of thy Nature is ſpread through all, and thereby all Parts and Members are made Weapons ready formed, faſhioned, and ſteeled, to be employed in the Service of Sin. This, as concerning Acts of Sin, you have in Rom. 6. the other in multitudes of Scriptures, as when this Sin is ſtiled, The Man, The old Man, a whole entire Man, a Body of Sin, from the crown of the Head to the ſole of the Feet; the Sin that encompaſſeth us round, Heb. 12. 2. And if one Member, the Tongue, be arraigned to be the Seat of a world of Iniquity, what is the whole, and every Member and Faculty of Soul and Body? And thus much for the firſt Branch of this comparative way, viz. comparing the ſinfulneſs of corrupt Nature with any one particular Act of ſinning, the groſſeſt.

CHAP. IX.

That there is more Guilt in the Sin of our Nature, than in all our actual Tranſgreſſions put together.

I Now come to the ſecond Head, the comparing of our inward Corruption, with all our actual Sins put together. Truly ſome have affirmed it in their Writings; Dr. Sibbs in that which he hath printed himſelf, that it is worſe than all our actual Sins. So then at leaſt it may prove a Queſtion, whether of the two hath the greater ſinfulneſs? And ſo which of the two (take actual Sins abſtractly conſider'd from this Root) thy Soul ought to be humbled for moſt? And I alone have not ſtarted this Query unto the diſcuſſion, though I confeſs I had long before I ſaw that of his, enlarged upon this Head, in Sermons upon Original Sin.

Soul's Conflict, V. 2, 6. We ſhould look upon it worſe than Any, nay than all the Impure Iſſues of our Lives together.

I ſhall proceed in this Point.

I. By way of Explication, or ſtating of it.
II. By the Demonſtration of it.

I. For Explication. When, I ſay, the Queſtion is, For whether of theſe two as apart conſidered, we ſhould be humbled moſt, or whether has the greater ſinfulneſs?

1. I grant, we muſt allow a far greater enlargement unto the confeſſing of actual Sins, and a far larger humiliation for actual Sins: We muſt inſiſt on them more, which the Apoſtle's Pattern inſtructs us to, by viewing the firſt and third of the Romans. In the firſt he ſpeaks of actual Sins, and ſpends a whole Chapter thereupon, and that as in the Gentiles; as in the ſecond Chapter he inſiſts upon the Sins of the Jews; and in the third ſpeaks of this Corruption, and there he narrows his Diſcourſe about it, he doth that briefly. And the reaſon why we ſhould do ſo, is plain; Actual Sin is Original Sin, drawn out in words at length, (as I may ſo ſay); but Original Sin by it ſelf, is our Sins but in Figures, yea, but as in ſemine, tho it ſummarily contains all: Our Humiliation therefore ſhould extenſively be ſuper-exceedingly more for actual Sins; but intenſively our Souls ſhould be as deeply humbled and ſtricken for this of our Natures, as for thoſe others.

2. Our Humiliation and Confeſſion of the Sin of our Natures, ſhould be commixt with that other of actual Sins. Original Sin ſhould be either laid firſt for a Foundation, or actually carried along with us in the confeſſion of Actual; or at leaſt virtually ſuppoſed, though not always expreſt, as that which is conjunct with every one of our Sins; it is to be, as it is, the burden of every Sin.

3. Every actual Sin, to be ſure, in a Man unregenerate, encreaſeth the Corruption of Nature, (there is or may, perhaps, a Queſtion be raiſed, Whether in a Man regenerate or no, becauſe Grace is an incorruptible Seed, and therefore habitual Sin is not in the totallity of it, augmented in ſuch an one by an Act of Sin, the Seed of God keeping an habitual poſſeſſion of what room in the Soul it hath gained, though the Operation is obſtructed and weakned for the preſent) but in an unregenerate Man, every actual Sin encreaſeth a farther corruption of Nature unto ſome degree. It is a Root, and Roots grow under-Ground, as much as the Branches do in bulk above-Ground; and Corruption in the Heart encreaſes, as actual Sins encreaſe; Rom. 6. 13, 19. Yield not your Members Servants of Iniquity, unto Iniquity; but on the contrary, have your Fruit unto Holineſs: The fruit of doing things holily, is to be made more Holy; and the fruit of doing a groſs Act of Sin, (of which he there ſpeaks, or of ſuch that have Dominion) is to be made more ſinful, and to enlarge Corruption unto a greater degree of it. Hence a wicked Man's Sinfulneſs, and Corruption of Nature, is improved to a wonderful encreaſe, in compariſon of what what it was ſimply by Nature. When therefore I in this Comparative ſet it with all actual Sins, there muſt a few Abatements or Conſiderations be made.

The firſt, That I do not reſtrain it purely and only to what Corruption of Nature you had at firſt, but withal as it is encreaſed, and ſo complexly Corruption of Nature as it now is grown up in us; for the in-dwelling Sin, in Paul's ſenſe, is the whole ſtock of it, New or Old.

The ſecond is, That we take Corruption of Nature, as diſtinct from actual Sin, to conſider that apart with all its curſed Augmentation. Original Sin is the firſt Stock, the old Stock; but all the Increaſe put to that firſt Stock, makes up the preſent whole Stock, as Merchants ſpeak in Companies.

Yet, thirdly, ſo as though the firſt Stock be leſs in degree, yet ſtill in kind it is one and the ſame.

Fourthly, It muſt be allowed, or conſidered alſo, in a Man truly regenerate, That the Power and Dominion of both Original Sin at firſt, as alſo of what has been added, is abated unto what it was whilſt a Man was unregenerate. Now it is the whole of thy Wickedneſs, firſt and laſt, that is found dwelling in thee, and that for which I now exhort you to be humbled.

4. There are many Reſpects wherein actual Sin hath the greater Guilt, as being the Fruit and Product of our Wills, which Original Sin is not, and therefore the Scripture inſiſts more upon them. Yet this I muſt ſay, That this of Corruption of Nature, hath its Reſpects alſo wherein it exceeds, and we are to give due weight unto every thing in either. But this I ſhall after ſpeak unto in anſwering Objections.

II. I come next to the Demonſtration of it, which conſiſts in this, That take that inherent in-dwelling Corruption, both Original at firſt, and the encreaſe of it, (and unto the firſt Original Stock, all the encreaſe is to be attributed and put upon the Account thereof): Take that, I ſay, apart from all actual Sins, and there are many reſpects that do aggravate the ſinfulneſs of it above that of actual Sins. As,

1. Original and In-dwelling Sin, is the univerſal Cauſe of all Sin, of every one as well as any, and in that reſpect hath more Sinfulneſs in it, than all the Acts of Sin put together: I ſay, in that reſpect it is a Cauſe, and an univerſal Cauſe. This is a true Rule, the Virtue of things is ſtronger in their Cauſes than Effects; a little of a venemous Root, if boil'd, is found to have more Poiſon in it, and to infuſe more thereof into the Liquor, than many Bunches, or Fruits, or Leaves of that Root. But when a thing is an univerſal Cauſe, this Rule holds much more. The Sun, you know, is an univerſal Cauſe of Warmth, and Life of Plants, and chearing the Earth, &c. it hath the Virtue of all Plants in it, and much more: And why? becauſe it is an univerſal Cauſe. You have heard of other Similitudes, perhaps, to expreſs this thing by.

As, firſt, this hath been one Similitude, That the Fountain hath more of Water in it (take it as it runs, firſt and laſt, and all the Water that feeds it and maintains it) than the Streams: I add this Scripture, Jer. 6. 7. As a Fountain caſteth out her Waters, ſo ſhe caſteth out her Wickedneſs: Yet you ſee in a Fountain but a little Water at preſent bubling up, when the Fountain hath all the Water in the Sea to maintain it and its Streams; and ſo hath more Water as in the Cauſe than all the Streams.

If that be not enough, take the Similitude of the Sea it ſelf; that to be ſure hath more Water in it than all the Rivers that come from it at firſt. Now look Iſa. 57. 20. The Wicked are like the troubled Sea; they have a Sea of Wickedneſs in them, which doth continally caſt up Mire and Dirt of actual Sinnings. The Sea is the univerſal Cauſe of all Waters that are above Ground, or under the Earth; or of the Vapours that fall from the Heavens above. In like manner it hath been ſaid, there is more of Fire in Fire it ſelf, than in Sparks. Now I will but give a Scripture for that too, Hoſ. 7. 6, 7. They have made ready their Heart like an Oven; their Baker ſleepeth all the Night, in the Morning it burneth as a flaming Fire. He compares them unto a fiery Oven, in reſpect of their inward Luſts, (not only in reſpect of that burning Luſt of Adultery, but of other Luſts alſo, as when the Tongue is ſaid to be on Fire of Hell, James 3. 6.) and ſo the Heart is as an Oven ſet on Fire with Helliſh Fire that firſt came from Hell: And there is a thouſand times more Fire in the Oven than in the Sparks that fly out of it. Chap. 9.

Now then, that inherent Corruption in thy Nature is the univerſal Cauſe of all Sin, I will give you ſome Scriptures for that; Mark 7. 20, 21. I think an expreſs place for it; others pitch on that in Matthew, I on that in Mark; He ſaid, (namely Chriſt) That which cometh out of the Man, defiles the Man: For from within out of the Heart of Men, proceed evil Thoughts, Adulteries, Fornications, Murders, Thefts, Covetouſneſs, Wickedneſs, Deceit, Laſciviouſneſs, an evil Eye, (that is, an envious Eye) Blaſphemy, Pride, Fooliſhneſs: All theſe evil things come from within, and defile the Man.

Wherein obſerve, 1. The Heart within, out of which all proceeds, is evidently Corruption of Nature within, inherent there: and the Reaſon is plain, for he ſpeaks of that Principle within, out of which the very firſt-born of actual Sins do ariſe; for he ſpeaks expreſly of evil Thoughts, which are the firſt-born, and it muſt be the inherent habitual Corruption from whence they come: theſe are the Motus primo primi, the very firſt Motions, as we call them; therefore Corruption of Nature is meant by the Heart within as the Cauſe of them: and under this general of evil Thoughts, the moſt inward Purpoſes, Ends and Counſels are comprehended.

2. You may obſerve it is ſpoken of all Sin, and not only of evil Thoughts, or inward Sins, the ſmalleſt; but his Inſtances ſhew that all Sins, outward Acts which are the greateſt, as Adulteries, Fornications, Murders, Blaſphemies, &c. Now if all evil Thoughts, and groſs Sins do ariſe from that Heart within, then that is the Cauſe of all: Chriſt's Inſtances hold clearly forth that diviſion which takes in all, even the all of Evils that defile the Man.

The ſecond Scripture is Rom. 7. 13. Was then that which is good made Death unto me? God forbid. But Sin that it might appear Sin, working Death in me by that which is good; that Sin by the Commandment might become exceeding ſinful. He ſtiles it ἁμαρτωλὸς ἁμαρτία, ſinful Sin: It is a good Interpretation given here by ſome to call it ſinning Sin, as an Epithet given it; and you cannot call it by a worſe Name than its own, idem prædicatur de ſeipſo. But further, I judg it hath a more ſpecial reſpect to its being the Cauſe of Sins, or as it is a working, or worker of Sin; and that he ſpeaks it of Original Sin, and Inherent Corruption, plainly and eminently, as it is diſtinct from Acts of Sinning, which he there arraigns as the Cauſe of all Sin, appears,

1. That it is called the working Sin, the pragmatical operative Sin: So in the words before, ver. 8. Sin wrought in me all Concupiſcence; and ſo is made contradiſtinct unto Sins wrought, which are actual Sins, (and Sins of Concupiſcence are the inward Sins, and the firſt-born of Original Corruption, Jam. 1. 15.) and he plainly ſays it was the Cauſe of [all] that Concupiſcence; and he doth not mention outward Acts, for as in reſpect of them he had been according to the Law, or outward Acts of it, blameleſs; and yet all the outward Acts which Concupiſcence brings forth, this ſinning Sin is the Cauſe of; of which afterwards.

And then, 2. afterwards, ver. 20. he manifeſtly (as interpreting what this ſinful Sin was) putteth all Sin upon the In-dwelling Sin in our Nature; It is not I, but Sin that dwelleth in me: His inward Man, with the inherent Grace that was in it, could ſay, It is not I, but Sin; the contrary Sin that dwells in me.

And this was it that was the great Humiliation to our Apoſtle at his Converſion; this ſinning Sin, above all elſe, humbled him; this was it was in his Eye, καθ' ὑπερβολὴν, above meaſure ſinful; and this, becauſe it was the Cauſe of all Sin.

This is argued alſo from the Compariſons the Scripture ſets it forth in; it is compared both to a Root, and to a Mother: and what improvement we may make of that to humble us, we ſhall ſee by and by.

Firſt;

Book IX.

Firſt; It is compared to a Root: There is no Fruit, no not on the top-Branch, never ſo far off the Root, but it partakes of the Root: and the Root is the Cauſe of all that Fruit that grows upon the Tree, as well as the Branches that brings them forth. This Nature and Experience ſhews, there is no Fruit but doth grow from its proper Root; and it holds true in all Fruit, both Good and Bad, they all have their Root in their Kind, without which nothing can be brought forth. Our Saviour Chriſt having compared himſelf to a Root, and then to Branches, John 15. 1, 2. ſays upon it, Without me ye can do nothing, ver. 5. and Hoſea 14. 8. From me is thy Fruit found: And thus may Original Sin ſay of our Hearts, and of all our ſinful Fruits, Without me you bring forth nothing. And that the Scripture compares this inherent Sin to a Root, look Gal. 5. 19. The Works of the Fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, &c. Fleſh, you know, is inherent Corruption, which fights againſt the Spirit; and Adultery, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, Laſciviouſneſs, Idolatry, &c. theſe are the Fruits there ſpecified: But the Fruits of the Spirit are Love, Joy, Peace, &c. Theſe are two Roots, (ſays he) contrary in their Nature one to the other; and this the Metaphor of [Fruit] on the one part ſhews; the Fruits of the Spirit are, &c. As all gracious Acts are Fruits of the Spirit of Regeneration in us; ſo on the contrary, all the Villanies in the World are Fruits of the Fleſh, as the Root. I might ſhew the ſame from Heb. 12. 15. Looking diligently, leſt any Man fail of the Grace of God; leſt any Root of Bitterneſs ſpringing up, trouble you, and thereby many be defiled. That Root of Bitterneſs is an unregenerate Perſon, in whoſe Heart corrupt Nature, or inherent Corruption remains in its full ſtrength and vigour unmortified, and bringeth forth Gall and Wormwood, as the Phraſe in Deut. 29. 18. (whence this Speech is taken by the Apoſtle); and both being compared with that other Apoſtle's Expreſſion, confirms it, whereby he ſets forth Simon Magus his remaining ſtill in the Power and State of Original Corruption; Acts 8. 23. I perceive (ſays Peter to him) that thou art in the Gall of Bitterneſs, and the Bond of Iniquity; that is, thou continueſt in thy native Corruption, and in the Bond of Iniquity, which hath thee under Servitude and Dominion; which is that which brings forth the Gall and Wormwood that is in all Mens Lives, and is the Root of it as before.

CHAP.

Chap. 10.

CHAP. X.

We are to be humbled for this Sin, as the Original of all our Sins, as that which tempts us and draws us to ſin more than the Devil doth. It produceth ſuch Sins in us, unto which the Enticements of Senſe, and Satan's Temptations, could not extend any Influence. This Sin of our Nature is always fruitful to bring forth Evil inceſſantly. To humble our ſelves for it, we are to conſider, that our evil Nature might have produced more Evil than it hath done, and that it hath that ſinfulneſs in it, which will be productive of all our Sins to come.

LET us now improve the Conſideration hereof, to humble our ſelves as to this Sin: If but one Luſt, or but one Branch of Original Corruption, when it becomes a Root of Evil, is ſo cried out upon by the Apoſtle, 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. The love of Money is the Root of all Evil; which while ſome coveted after, they have erred from the Faith, and pierced themſelves through with many Sorrows. If he brands one Luſt with this, as the height of its Aggravation, That it is the Root of all Evil; as the Apoſtle James in like manner doth Strife and Contention; Where envying and ſtrife is, there is confuſion, and every evil Work. Then have you not cauſe to be humbled for that Root, which is an univerſal Root of all Sins whatſoever, of any kind thou didſt ever commit? It may be ſaid of this univerſal Corruption, as to all other Sins whatſoever, that they bear not the Root, but the Root them, Rom. 11. 18.

Secondly; It is compared to a Womb, and Mother of all, (and we ſhall ſee how that may be improved to our Humiliation alſo); the place is James 1. 14, 15. Every Man is tempted, ſays he, when he is drawn away of his own Luſt, and enticed. Then when Luſt hath conceived, it bringeth forth Sin; and Sin when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth Death. To open this now, is my purpoſe in hand.

1. By Luſt here, that conceiveth and bringeth forth, Inherent Corruption and Original Sin is meant, becauſe it is that which is the Conceiver. Conception, you know, is the firſt production of a living Creature into Being: Now the very firſt conceptions of Sin, that are productive of outward Acts, are attributed to this Sin of Luſt: and the firſt drawings on, or enticing Motions and Suggeſtions, (which are the firſt Acts of our actual Sin) are all attributed to this Luſt; ſo as that which is the Conceiver is not actual Sin, but inherent Sin, that Sin in the Womb, whereof all other Sins are conceived. And that it is compared to a Mother, that's clear; for he ſpeaks both of Conception, and of bringing forth: Temptation, and Occaſion, and the Devil, and wicked Companions, may be as the Midwife to help to bring forth, but this is the Mother.

Then again, in the ſecond place, it is the immediate Mother of every ſuch Sin; neither is it the Mother only by deſcent, as in a ſucceſſion afar off; as Eve is the Mother of all Living; as Great Great Grand-mothers are of Children that never lay in their own Wombs, only they beget thoſe that bring forth others; but this is the immediate Womb it ſelf in which all lay. Stapleton objects, That it is not the Cauſe of all Sin, becauſe one Sin is puniſh'd with another; yet ſo as ſtill this is the immediate Cauſe of both, the Sin by which, and for which we are ſo puniſhed: and this is that which inclines us as well to the Sin the Puniſhment, as it did unto the Sin which is the meritorious Cauſe of that Puniſhment; only God is pleaſed to give up or let forth that inherent Inclination, actually to bring forth that whereby another Sin is puniſhed in way of a Curſe, and which elſe he would not have given the Heart unto. Only in letting out corrupt Nature, God obſerveth a Method, and lets out one Luſt after another, as the Curſe of a former; yet ſo as inherent Corruption is the Cauſe of both the one and the other.

3. It is the principal Cauſe or Tempter: although there be other Cauſes of our Sinnings alſo, yet this is the chief; and therefore that alone is mentioned: ſo as though the World tempts, and the Devil tempts, yet they tempt but as Tempters that are without us, and propound but the Objects: But this is a Pondus Naturæ, it is the Poiſe and Swinge of Nature: And all things move as from a natural Weight, or Poiſe and Weight within them. In Heb. 12. 1. he ſpeaks of this Sin, in ſaying, Let us lay aſide every Weight, and the Sin which doth ſo eaſily beſet us. Amor meus pondus meum, ſays Auſtin; What my Love is, that's my Weight that ſways me: Stones move downward, Air upward, as their Poiſe is.

The Demonſtration of this its Cauſation of ſinning, may be amplified by theſe farther farther Particulars, whereby we may diſcern that no Sin is to be exempted from its Efficiency.

1. That many times it begins to be the Mother of Sins, and draws us away e're ever the Devil or the World do tempt us, or the actual Knowledg of the Law provokes us to it, (of whoſe provocation of corrupt Nature to Sin you read, *Rom.*7.) as it is ſeen in Infants, who begin to ſin before the Devil or World can tempt them, in Envy, Frowardneſs, &c. they go aſtray from the Womb, being drawn aſide only by the natural Pondus of their own Corruption: Gen. 6. 5. God ſaw that every Imagination of the Thoughts of Man's Heart was only evil continually from his Youth up. In which Place Original Sin is compared to a Mould, which caſts and ſhapes within it ſelf all and the very Figmenta or Conceptions of the Heart into ſuch or ſuch a ſinful Faſhion; and it is from their Youth, yea Infancy; Children bring forth Sin before they bring forth Teeth or Hair, and then when they are uncapable of Satan's Suggeſtions, or of outward Temptations from the World.

2. In that it is the Cauſe of ſuch Sins, as neither the World nor Devil can reach to tempt us to, no not after we are grown up to Reaſon. My Brethren, you that are ſpiritual Chriſtians, find ſuch Sins and Contrarieties in you unto what is good, ſuch ſecret Reluctancies, Damps, Heartleſneſs unto what is holy, as ariſe from the mere Enmity, Deadneſs that is in your Natures unto what is good: I find a Law, (an inward Diſpoſition) that when I would do Good, Evil is preſent with me. You find mere ſpiritual Oppoſitions preſent, that oppoſe ſpiritual Motions and Inclinations to Good, from their firſt riſing, and are up in their warrings againſt you, as ſoon as the good Motions are: theſe laſt riſe as do the other; they are purely pure ſpiritual Motions, as Ingenuities unto God, Strains of Love towards him; theſe riſe; and the contrary Motions to check and reſiſt them, are up in Arms as ſoon: And as the Heart grows more ſpiritual, ſo corrupt Nature will be ſending forth its Contrarieties againſt the holieſt Actings of Grace in the Heart towards God, and not damping them only, but contradicting them, and as a Weight pulling them down to the Earth, when they offer to ariſe; and beſides, will be mixing Self-intereſt with the Good. Now theſe Contrarieties are neither from Satan, nor from the World; the Devil hath not power to know ſuch, becauſe they ſecretly and cloſely work, and are tranſacted in the Spirit of the Mind; and beſide, the Devil could not be ſo quick in contrary Suggeſtions; for theſe Oppoſitions riſe in the ſame inſtant with the good; the Law of the Fleſh is ſtill contrary to the Law of the Mind, and ſends out its Acts and Dictates even as ſoon as the other: this Paul was ſenſible of in Rom. 7. 21. When I would do Good, Evil, ſays he, is preſent with me. He complains there of the Corruptions of his Heart. And not in theſe Caſes

Caſes only, but take all or any kind of Sin whatever, and it is a Mother that could conceive alone of it ſelf, within it ſelf. The Mother Earth (as we call it) muſt have Seed caſt into it for many kinds of Fruit: all animal Creatures have their Male and Female that muſt concur to their Procreation; but actual Sin needs not to have a Male to be a Father, this Female Womb is ſufficient to bring forth all Conception, though now when fallen, there was no Devil to tempt; it is Seed, and Womb, and prolifick Virtue and all: At firſt indeed Eve had not fallen, if the Devil had not tempted her; nor could Adam have eaten the forbidden Fruit, but that both the Devil indiſcernibly, and Eve both did tempt him. But now we ſhould eaſily fall into Sin, though the Devil were abſent; although he alſo is by God's Curſe let looſe upon us as the Tempter, and is in many reſpects termed the Father of Lies. But this Mother could and would conceive without a Father. Nay, Chap. 10.

3. It is ſo pregnant of Wickedneſs, that even the good and holy Law made known to it, provokes it to conceive the Sin that is contrary to it: and therefore the Law is compared to an Husband, Rom. 7. 5. The Motions or Paſſions of Sin which were by the Law, did work in our Members to bring forth Fruit unto Death. But in ſo doing, the Law is but a mere occaſional Cauſe-Mover unto Sin; as it is in the following 8*th* Verſe of that Chapter, This inherent Sin taking occaſion by the Commandment, wrought in me all Concupiſcence: 'Twas this Sin was the ſole Worker directly, the Commandment but indirectly; that when the Commandment by the Light and Motion of it, would ſtill beget Good upon the Heart, this ſinful wicked Womb enraged thereby, doth, uterino furore, bring forth the clean contrary.

4. It is a Womb that is never barren. By a continual plowing and ſowing of the Earth, you may get the Heart on't out, and then it muſt lie fallow a while before it will bring forth again: Other Mothers of animal Creatures bring forth Children to ſuch or ſuch an Age, but then ceaſe Childing, yea, and live a long while after, and have no Children; they have, when old, done teeming: But this the longer it lives and continues, and the more Sin it brings forth, the more it may, unleſs the Lord takes away the Dominion of it by Grace: Job 14. 7, 8. ſays he, There is hope of a Tree if it be cut down, that it will ſprout again, and that the tender Branch thereof will not ceaſe: Though the Root thereof wax old in the Earth, and the Stock thereof die in the Ground; yet through the Scent of Water it will bud, and bring forth Boughs like a Plant. I know he applies this Similitude otherwiſe, but I apply it to this; Take Sin when it is old, it will bring forth; if a ſcent of Water come near it, if Temptation come, it preſently ſprouts again.

5. Some Females and Mothers go long with their Brood before they bring forth, and carry it long in their Womb, to ripen it e're it comes to the Birth; as a Woman goes nine Months, an Elephant three Years; and the ſtronger the Creatures are, the longer they go; and the weaker they are, the ſooner they bring forth, as Mice, &c. But this Sin brings forth preſently: Hoſea 7. 6. They have made ready their Heart like an Oven, &c. their Baker ſleepeth all the Night, in the Morning it burneth as a flaming Fire. You go quietly to Bed, and in all appearance free of ſuch or ſuch a Luſt and ſinful Diſpoſition ſtirring; but you wake in the Morning with ſome baſe Luſt or other, that hath overgrown the Heart in the Night: like Jonah's Gourd, it grows up in a Night, nay in a Moment, upon occaſion of Temptation.

6. This Womb brings forth continually. It was the Excellency of the Tree of Life of the New Jeruſalem, Rev. 22. that it brings forth Fruit every Month; but this is a conceiving and hatching of Evil every Moment, and never hath any interruption of conceiving one Sin or another: Gen. 6. 5. God ſaw that the Wickedneſs of Man was great in the Earth, and that every Imagination of the Thoughts of the Heart was evil continually: It cannot ceaſe from Sin. How oft is this ſpoken of wicked Men in the Scriptures!

And ſhall not theſe things deeply humble us for this ſinning Sin, that is ſuch a Mother, and the Mother of all Sin, and which hath a far nearer and more intimate Cauſation, and deeper Hand in all ſinnings than the Devil has? that is, as to us, and as in us Sin is wrought. 'Tis true, the Devil hath the denomination of being that evil One, καὶ ἐξοχήν, and the Tempter, and the Father of Lies, John 8.44. and ſo of all other Sins; and all Sins of ours are by deſcent from him: And in 1 John 3.8. all Sins are called his Works, He that committeth Sin, is of the Devil; for the Devil ſinneth from the beginning: For this purpoſe the Son of God was manifeſted, that he might deſtroy the Works of the Devil. The Devil is thus called the firſt Father of Sin, both becauſe he was the firſt that brought up that curſed Invention of ſinning; the firſt Founder and Original of Sin; and in that reſpect called the Father of Sin: as the firſt Inventers of Muſick and working in Braſs, are termed the Fathers of them that do follow them in thoſe Trades, Gen. 4. 20, 21. As alſo further, for that Influence and Hand he hath upon us, in cauſing us to ſin by continual tempting of us. And it is true, that the Guilt which redounds on him perſonally, is far deeper for his tempting us, than what falls to our ſhare, who are the tempted, for acting what he tempts us to: But the Sin of him therein is proper to himſelf, and he ſhall anſwer for it all at the laſt Day; when the Angels ſhall be judged, he muſt bear the Load of it. And it is moreover true, that there is a Guilt lies on us, both on the Father's ſide, and on the Mother's ſide; and we are to humble our ſelves for both; on the Father's ſide, for our entertaining his Temptations, and thereby eſpouſing his Intereſt, (as Sin is his more than ours) and thereby making our ſelves Children of the Devil, as Chriſt ſpeaks;

John 8. 44. and again, You are of your Father the Devil, and his Luſts you will do; though we little diſcern it, and mind it not. But yet there is this difference between what Guilt deſcends upon us on the Mother's ſide, from what on the Father's, That this Mother is the inward, immediate, natural Cauſe of all Sin in us; Satan is to us but the outward Cauſe and mediate, and cannot tempt us, and perſwade our Wills but by and from the native Corruption that is indwelling: and the deſcent of Sin from him to us, is accordingly but outward, not as from a natural Father; his Fatherhood is but political, and by a Metonymy, and we as it were but his adopted Children only, not natural. Yea, that Guilt of our yielding unto him in his Temptations, muſt be laid upon that very indwelling Sin that is in us; that Mother inwardly falls in Love, and cloſeth with the outward Temptation of this curſed Father; ſo as the great blame of all will lie upon this Mother, without whoſe being allured and inticed, this Father would not allure or perſwade us: 'Tis the Mother, the Mother, our corrupt Wills that betray us, and yield us to this Father: And therefore Chriſt lays the blame on Us, and our Luſts, that we are of our Father the Devil. And James 1. 14. the Apoſtle devolves our Guilt in being tempted upon our own Luſts; When ye are tempted, ye are tempted of your own Luſt: that's the Tempter far greater than the Devil. This Sin of your Mother is naturally yours; and all the curſed Children ſhe brings forth in you, are her natural Children: and ſhe is your very Nature and intrinſick Conſtitution.——And when you ſin by her Temptations, you may be ſaid to ſin of your own, as well as the Devil doth of his own malicious Propenſion, as Chriſt ſpeaks of him. It is in and by the Womb of this Mother, that Sin is conceived within you; in that Womb it is foſtered, and by the ſtrength of it 'tis brought forth: and the Sinfulneſs therefore hereof is properly yours, in that the Mother of it is in you, even as the Devil's Guilt in your Sins is properly his. O therefore above all humble your ſelves for this, that you carry ſuch a Mother, or Womb of Sin within your ſelves. You read of Rome, (whoſe Guilt is next the Devil's) what a heavy Puniſhment in Rev. 18. lies threatned againſt her, when ſhe is to be deſtroyed; ver. 5. Her Sins have reached up to Heaven, and God hath remembred her Iniquities: reward her double according to her Works. And what is the reaſon of all this? What is it puts God upon this? Look chap. 17. 5. you ſee the Title of her Accuſation to be Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots, and Abominations of the Earth; the Mother of all; they came from her by Genealogy, and Deſcent, and are maintained by her to this day: All Nations were made drunk with her Cup; and in her are found the Souls of Men as there: and chap. 18. ult. In her was found the Blood of the Prophets, and of Saints, and of all that were ſlain upon the Earth. And for this her being the Mother of all, the Mother of Abominations, ons, you ſee what a Doom ſhe is adjudged unto. If we ſhould remain in our natural Condition, and be found therein, then ſhall a Bill and Indictment of all the actual Sins be read: Yea, but where is the Mother of them all? and what Sin will God judg and reward moſt? Even your Original In-dwelling Sin: This, this is the Mother of Abominations; the great Beldame, the great Witch and Whore, in whom will be found all the Sins that ever thou haſt done. Chap. 10.

And that you may enlarge, and make the Meditation hereof more pungent and impreſſive, by another parallel-Contemplation, though utterly contrary; look, as Chriſt at the latter Day when he comes to judg, What will be his Glory then? Even this, He ſhall preſent himſelf, and all Saints about him, and ſay to his Father, Lo here am I, and the Children which thou haſt given me: And then again, All their Fruit is found in me, and all their Graces, and all their Righteouſneſs. So if thou be found unregenerate, then to thy everlaſting Confuſion, ſhall all thy Sins be ſet in order before God and thine own Conſcience, as in Pſal. 50. 20. and this great Beldame ſhall be brought forth with all her Brood. Lo, here are all the Children which this great Mother, and my curſed Will have brought forth together; and they will judg this great Whore as ſhe ſtands in relation to her Children; and it ſhall be ſaid, Curſed be the Womb that bare you, and the Paps that gave you ſuck: and becauſe God will paſs this Judgment as concerning us then, let us therefore accordingly judg our ſelves in this manner before-hand, that we be not condemned with the World.

There be other weighty Conſiderations might be added and enlarged upon, to exaggerate the ſinfulneſs of this Sin, in the like way of compariſon as hitherto hath been uſed.

As firſt, that thou art not only to make the Compariſon with all thy Sins actually paſt and done hitherto, and to make that the ſole meaſure of thy Humiliation for the Iniquity of it; but further, both from what actual Sins this thy corrupt Nature might have brought forth, but hath not; as alſo from what it ſelf (if left to it ſelf) may and would bring forth for the future. This hath two Branches,

1. What it might have brought forth, but hath not.
2. What it may, and would of it ſelf for the future.

Theſe, although they admit diſtinct Conſiderations, yet they have this common to both; that God meaſures not the ſinfulneſs of this Sin only by the Acts it hath produced, but by the Potentiality of it, or the Power it hath to produce, if left to it ſelf. Will you take but an Inſtance from God? We don't meaſure God's Power by what he hath done, or will do; but by all he can do, we conſider entia poſſibilia, things poſſible to be done by him; we ſay, though God doth not will, or do all things, yet he is Omnipotent, and accordingly do adore him for it. And here Divines rightly ſay, that there is ſcientia ſimplicis intelligentiæ in God, a Knowledg whereby he views thouſands, and thouſands of millions of Worlds, and Creatures, he never did nor will bring forth; and that there is ſcientia viſionis, a fore-knowledg of what he purpoſes to do; Known to God are all his Works from the beginning, Acts 15. 18. Thus alſo there are a World of Sins thy Heart did never bring forth; which yet it might, and would have done, if left to it ſelf: in this Sin they are as in the Seed; and God knowing this, reckons accordingly, as the Inſtance of the Men of Keilah ſhews, 1 Sam. 23. 11, 12. where God, upon David's enquiry, telleth him what the Men of Keilah would have done, even delivered him into Saul's hands, though they never did.

This premiſed, I come to the two Branches mentioned.

1. Thou art to meaſure the Iniquity of this Sin, by what thou mighteſt have committed, if thou hadſt been left to the ſwinge of thy ſinful Nature and Inclinations: And for a right eſtimate of this, caſt thine Eye upon all the ſorts and kinds of Sins committed in the World by any other of the Sons of Men, and not only upon what thy ſelf hath hitherto acted. In Rom. 1.

you

Book IX.

you have a black Catalogue of Sins, which read over, it is but a Comment on this Text, the Sin in thine own Heart: And why? All Sin in the World is through Luſt; 2 Pet. 1. 4. Having eſcaped the Corruptions which are in the World through Luſt. All the Corruptions in the World are through this original and inherent Luſt; and thou haſt the ſame that are in the Hearts of any in the World, and therefore wouldſt perpetrate the ſame: there went but a Pair of Shears between thy Nature and others, thy Heart is made of the ſame Stuff; it wrought all Concupiſcence in Paul, indeed not outward Acts, for in thoſe reſpects he profeſſeth a Blameleſsneſs; but by the ſame reaſon it brought forth Concupiſcence towards any acting, it would have brought forth the outward Act it ſelf in him. It is a great thing to be conſidered, that the Stoicks ſhould diſcern this, and that Seneca ſhould thus utter it, Omnia in omnibus inſunt vitia, all Vices are in all; Sed omnia in omnibus non extant, but all are not extant in all: Et cupidi omnes, & maligni omnes, & ambitioſi omnes, & vitioſi; We are all covetous, ambitious, malitious, vitious, &c.

Lib. 4. de Benef. pag. 320.

Again conſider, That though thou canſt act but one Sin at once ſenſu diviſo, yet in the Nature of this Corruption there is an aptneſs to act a multitude of Sins ſenſu compoſito; nay, contrary Sins would thy Heart (thy Root) carry thee to, and any other Sin as well as what thou didſt commit: Conſider moreover, what it hath been that kept thee, and that it is from God's reſtraining of thee, that thou haſt not committed infinitely greater and more grievous Sins; —as the Caſe of Abimelech ſhews, Gen. 29. 7, 9. and the laſt Verſes compared: God acknowledgeth a kind of Integrity, in that he did not know Sarah was another Man's Wife; yet adds, For I kept thee, or reſtrained thee: and in that God puniſhed him for what he had done, ver. 20. it argues, that God's meaning was, Had I not reſtrained thee, thou wouldſt have done it, although thou hadſt known her to have been another Man's Wife. Beſides, take any Act of Sin that ever thou didſt commit, yet ſtill there is more evil in that Sin in thy Nature, than ever thou didſt draw forth into Act: Out of the abundance of the Heart the Mouth ſpeaks, Matth. 12. 34. There's more in the Heart than the Mouth utters: Alſo ver. 35. it is ſtiled the Treaſure of the Heart: Now there is far more Treaſure in the Warehouſe than is vended in the Shop; and ſo no Man ever pours forth all his Sin.

2. The ſecond Branch reſpects Sins for time to come. Thou art at preſent to humble thy ſelf for this Sin, as which hath that Sinfulneſs in it, as will be the productive concurrent Cauſe (with thine own Will) of all the Sins thou ſhalt yet commit; yea, and take this Sin, in the propenſe Inclinations of it, to be ſuch as would produce far greater and more grievous Sins, than as yet thou haſt committed.

My Brethren, there is to be this Difference between our Humiliation for actual Sins, barely conſidered as ſuch, and for this indwelling Sin as it relates to our actual, that we are not obliged to humble our ſelves for any ſuppoſed actual Sins, (conſidered abſtractly as actual) until they have been actually committed by us; and ſo in that reſpect a Man is only to view what Sins are already paſt: for as ſimply conſidered actual, they are not in themſelves actually hitherto exiſtent, and ſo are as if they were not. Nor do I know but God may out of reſtraining Grace keep me from committing ſuch or ſuch Sins; but that is God's doing, and merciful Prevention, and not mine. But the Caſe will prove otherwiſe, if I will look upon this Root-Sin within me, as it ſtands in my Heart in a readineſs to commit any Sin in this reſpect: I may ſay of it, that an Infinity of Sins to come are potentially exiſtent in it as in the Root: as we ſay of Flowers in Winter-time, that although there be not a Roſe-bud growing on the Roſe-tree, yet we ſay that in the Root there are many Roſe-buds that will come into Exiſtence in Summer. And thus as God in his Heart, through the infinite Fore-knowledg which is therein, ſees Thoughts afar off, and ſo views what that Root will produce: thus we may ſee, in the Principles of our own ſinful Hearts, though not what individual Sins they ſhall be which our Wills will commit, yet that an Infinity of Sins will one way or another ſprout forth from out of our Hearts, (if not cut off by Death, or otherwiſe reſtrained and prevented.) And as they are there at preſent, as in their Root; ſo we are to humble humble our ſelves at preſent for the Sinfulneſs of that Root, as that which will bear them and bring them forth: I ſay, at preſent we are to do thus, for it is that indwelling Corruption at preſent remaining in thee, which will be the cauſe of them; and therefore humble thy ſelf at preſent in the fore-thought of this: And God that ſees our Thoughts afar off, and things to come as if they were, he ſays of thee at preſent, the Root of all theſe is there in thee at the preſent, and he loaths thee for it: and therefore do thou at preſent humble thy ſelf before that God who thus ſees and judges. And like as we adore God's Power, not only for what Creatures he hath actually produced, or Works of Providence we ſee he hath brought forth, but for his Power that can bring into Being infinite Worlds which he never means to make; and we meaſure and eſteem him Omnipotent, in reſpect unto thoſe that poſſibly he could produce, as well as for what actually he hath made or doth make. In like manner are we to humble our ſelves, not only for the Potentiality of this Sin in ſinning, in reſpect unto what Sins we have already acted, but what we ſhall; yea, even for new Worlds of ſinnings our Nature would put forth and exert. Nor art thou to meaſure the Sinfulneſs hereof, by what in probability (according to thy Courſe hitherto held) thou art likely or are ſubject to commit, but by Sins thou didſt never ſo much as dream of, or imagine thou wouldſt commit: It would be a deceiving Rule to go by, if thou judg of this only by what hitherto this Sin hath brought forth: no, this Womb breeds Monſters, and extraordinary Births of Sinnings, which thou thoughteſt impoſſible to have been in thy Nature to produce. Did Hazael think his Nature would turn ſo barbarous, ſo cruel as it did? Am I a Dog to do this, ſaid he unto the Prophet, ſo inhumane? Little thought Peter that that Heart of his ſo reſolved to ſtand by Chriſt, as he judged it to be, when he ſaid, If all forſake thee, I will not; he could not have imagined that ever it would have been ſo profanely vile and unchriſtian, as to deny his endeared Lord and Saviour thrice, and at one of thoſe times with ſuch horrid Oaths and Execrations, whilſt his Lord was in the Room, and preſent, and over-heard him, as he was Man. Did David ever think he ſhould perpetrate Adultery, and add Murder thereunto? that that Heart that was once in ſuch an holy Frame, and ſo magnified God for his Covenant and Promiſe made, 2 Sam. 7. ſhould hatch and contrive within it ſelf ſuch high Abominations?

I might here yet further add, That thou art not to judg of the Potentiality of this Sin, and what for the future it might produce, by what thou wouldſt or mightſt in this Life only commit, but by what unto Eternity thou wouldſt commit, if we could ſuppoſe thy Life extended thereunto: this Womb would never ceaſe teeming, but grow ſtill more and more wicked unto everlaſting Ages without end.

If all theſe be not Perſpectives clear enough to diſcover to thee this expanſe or extenſive Sinfulneſs of this Sin in the propenſe Inclinations of it, as either by what thine own individual Sins have been, or in the ſeveral ſorts or ſpecies and kinds of Sins that have been found in their Varieties in the Hearts and Lives of Mankind from the beginning of the World to this Day; then go down to Hell, and compare thine own Nature with what is the Genius of the Devils themſelves; thy Nature is but the Image of theirs in a ſmaller Letter: All the difference, and that but in this Life, is, that we are tame Devils through God's mere Reſtraint, but they wild outragious Devils, Wildfire and Gunpowder, left to the full ſwinge, and the utmoſt carreer, which the violence of their Luſts do carry them to. Now 'tis certain we have the Seeds and Capacities of ſinning all the Sins they headlong run into: This in reſpect of our Souls. And we are beſides inclined to many more ſorts of Sins than they are addicted to, as all the Luſts of the Fleſh, ſeated in the Body and outward Man, which in the Body the Soul is ſubjected unto, beſides thoſe other proper to the Soul it ſelf together with thoſe Spirits. Satan hath in his Nature no Luſt of Uncleanneſs, Adultery, Drunkenneſs, &c. ſo as thy Nature hath all manner of Sins the Devils have, and a multitude of other Sins beſides, to outvie them on that Account.

And all this heavy Charge I have laid unto this Sin, the Mother of Sins, is not to be underſtood as ſpoken of a Matter or Thing diſtinct from your ſelves, which is the caſe of all actual Sins; your Selves are one thing, and your Actions ons another: Yea, but this Sin I have aggravated all this while, is no other than your very ſelves; and ſo all that hath been ſaid of it, is all one as to ſay, That your ſelves are thus ſinful, and are in verity this very Sin:——Indeed the Subſtance of you differs from this Sin inherent as ſubject and adjunct: and thus logically you may (if you pleaſe) diſtinguiſh your ſelf from this Sin; but know that theologically, or (which is more) in God's holy ſight and eſteem, this Sin is thy ſelf, as I ſaid at the firſt entrance: it is in Scripture-language (which is God's) the very Definition of a Man's Nature, That which is born of the Fleſh, IS FLESH. 'Tis a regenerate Man only is able to ſay, It is [not I] but Sin that dwells in me, and ſo diſtinguiſh himſelf from it, for he hath a Divine Nature which is himſelf. An unregenerate Man muſt take it wholly upon him, that it is [he] himſelf, and ſay of it, It is [I], as the ſeventh of the Romans hath diſtinguiſh'd them.

AN

AN Unregenerate Man's Guiltiness BEFORE GOD In Respect of SIN and PUNISHMENT.

BOOK X.

That this State of Guilt and natural Corruption, is the Condition of all Men unregenerate, though they make an external Profession of Christianity. A Discovery of the several Sorts of such Men, both the Ignorant, the Prophane, and the Civil and Formal Christian: And an Answer to all those Pleas by which they excuse, justify, or flatter themselves.

2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. For the Weapons of our Warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong Holds; casting down Imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it self against the knowledg of God, and bringing into captivity every Thought to the Obedience of Christ.

CHAP. I.

As the Strength of a Kingdom consists in having Places of Defence, or Forts built to keep out an Enemy from conquering it; so the Strength of the Kingdom of Sin in unregenerate Men consists in those Arguments, with which they defend their Minds and Hearts against all the Forces which are brought out of the Word to convince them of the Misery of their Condition.

HAving thus discovered how great the Sinfulness of Man is, both on the account of Adam's first Sin imputed, and of the Corruption of Nature, and how both these are Matter of Humiliation and Repentance; that which next lies in order before me, is to prove that this Guilt and Sinfulness abides upon Men, and that it is a sad wretched Condition, in which all the Unregenerate (as long as they are such) continue. And to prove Book X. this, it will be ſufficient to ſhew how vain and frivolous are all thoſe Pretences and Pleas by which Men would endeavour to ſhift off this Condemnation from themſelves, and to make out (if they could) their Caſe to be good and ſafe, though it is extreamly miſerable and dangerous.

For this end I have choſen this Text: and indeed if we can but caſt down thoſe ſtrong Holds, wherein Men fortify and defend themſelves againſt all convictions of their Sin and Danger, they will then eaſily be conquer'd; for the Strength of the Kingdom of Sin conſiſts mainly in that Aſſiſtance, which the corrupt Reaſon of Man draws up for its defence. The Strength of all Kingdoms lies in two things:

1. In a wiſe and able Council, to adviſe, direct and project its Affairs.

2. In ſtrong and potent Preparations for War, and Defence againſt all foreign Enemies, without which no Kingdom can ſubſiſt.

Book VII. The Kingdom of Sin anſwerably hath both its Council, as hath been ſhewn; and alſo it hath within it ſelf great Strength, and many Forces for War, both offenſive and defenſive. The Strength of other Kingdoms for War lies in two things:

1. In moveable Armies, which are led out into the Field, whereby they make Excurſions on their Enemies Dominions, carry the People away captive, waſte and ſpoil their Territories by open Force and Violence: And anſwerably ſuch kind of Forces hath alſo the Kingdom of Sin againſt the Kingdom of Grace, viz. Luſts, which do war in the Members; inordinate Affections, which do carry us captive to Sin, and which do make Inroads upon that Grace that is in us, uſing our Members as Weapons of Unrighteouſneſs, and winning ground upon the Spirit: and theſe the Apoſtle ſpeaks of in the ſixth and ſeventh Chapters of his Epiſtle to the Romans.

2. The Strength of other Kingdoms lies alſo in Places of Defence, as Fortifications and Caſtles, &c. And ſuch alſo hath this Kingdom of Sin, ſtrong Holds, and Forts, and Caſtles built and caſt up, and fortified with much Ammunition, and that of a double uſe. They are both as Places of Refuge for their Fleets and Field-Armies to retire to, and find ſhelter in; and alſo for Defence againſt a foreign Invaſion: ſo that if an Army comes in, they are able to hold out a Siege. Till all theſe be taken, a Kingdom is not overcome, and they ſtand and hold out laſt.

Now of theſe this Text you ſee ſpeaks, and tells us, that the Kingdom of Sin in us hath great and ſtrong Holds, which are indeed carnal Reaſonings and proud high Thoughts: The word is λόγισμοι, Ratiocinia, Reaſonings; and ſo it is in the Margin of your Bibles: which Reaſonings he alſo tells you are built on purpoſe for Defence in a time of War, to be uſed againſt the Weapons of our Warfare, who are Miniſters of the Goſpel: And in theſe Reaſonings and high Thoughts, the Strength of Sin, and of all ſinful Courſes and Practices, in themſelves weak and indefenſible, do eſpecially lie. As Rabbits, though a weak Generation of Animals, yet are ſtrong in their Holes which they make in the Rocks. Theſe ſtrong Holds of Sin, I ſay, are Reaſonings in the Underſtanding, for they eſpecially oppoſe the knowledg of God; and therefore the Ammunition within theſe Holds muſt needs be Reaſonings, and Acts of Knowledg. Theſe Adverſaries are match'd and fitted with the ſame kind of Weapons, as thoſe who come againſt them are provided with: For as the Weapons of our Warfare are ſpiritual, ſpiritual Wiſdom out of the Word of God, and the Knowledg of God; ſo the Inhabiters and Poſſeſſors of theſe ſtrong Holds are Reaſonings of carnal Wiſdom and Knowledg oppoſite thereunto.

Theſe Holds have high Towers alſo of Pride; for Self-love being King in unregenerate Hearts, will not yield, or bend in the leaſt; and therefore it is not ſtrength of Reaſon only makes them hold out, but a proud Spirit alſo.

If you pleaſe we will give another Exemplification to clear this to you. As the Kingdom of Popery, and the Doctrine of it, which is the Devil's Goſpel, by which to advance Antichriſt, and to bring all into ſubjection to him, (as ours is God's Goſpel, the Wiſdom of God in a Myſtery to ſet forth Chriſt, and to bring all in obedience to him;) I ſay, as in this Syſtem of Popery there is an exact Model of all the carnal Reaſon which Sin and the Devil hath, and

men of carnal Reaſon in it.

1. In that all the Opinions of that Kingdom of Darkneſs, and all the Parts of the Man of Sin are ſo contriv'd, as they all ſerve as Maintainers of wicked Ends and Luſts, and to the advancement and profit of the Pope and his Clergy, there being no one Point wherein they differ from us, but is ſome way ſerviceable to ſuch Ends: So as carnal Reaſon hath firſt ſhewed its Depth in inventing, framing and raiſing ſuch a Frame of Religion; and therefore it is called a Myſtery of Iniquity, 2 Theſſ. 2. 7. For the Myſtery of Iniquity doth already work. But,

2. Carnal Reaſon hath not ſhewed its Strength only in the inventing and finding out ſuch an Image of Religion, but it hath as fully played its part in inventing ſhews of Reaſon to uphold all theſe Opinions, whereby this Kingdom is fortified with ſtrong Arguments out of Scripture wreſted, and Philoſophy abuſed, and is defended with ſtrong Pleas of Univerſality, Antiquity, and the like; ſo as a Man rooted in the Truth, would wonder ſo much could be ſaid for ſuch groſs Opinions: Yea, and they do deceive many ſtrong Underſtandings amongſt them, ſo as to believe that great Lie, 2 Theſſ. 2. 11.

Thus likewiſe is it in the Myſtery of Iniquity in Man's Heart, which advanceth Sin and Luſts againſt God, as Popery doth the Pope and his Clergy againſt Chriſt. There is a like double demonſtration and diſcovery of the Strength of carnal Reaſon in this Matter.

1. In adviſing for, and plotting ſo many ways to attain our corrupt Ends and Deſires; ſo as there is no Conſultation, no Deſire of the Heart, but what tends to this End.

2. That wherein it ſhews it ſelf moſt witty, and draws out its Depths, is in finding out ſtrong Reaſons to it ſelf and others, to defend theſe ſinful Courſes and Ways in inventing carnal Pleas to juſtify its State, Excuſes to extenuate Sins, and thoſe ſeemingly ſtrong too, and ſpecious Exceptions, and Calumnies againſt the Ways and the People of God, ſo as a Man would wonder. Theſe Reaſonings are the ſtrong Holds, that the Text mentions, with which we are to encounter.

Book X.

CHAP. II.

The great Hindrance of the Work of Converſion is the Pleas whereby Men juſtify themſelves in an unregenerate State. How quick-witted Men are to invent ſuch carnal Reaſonings. Whence it is that they are ſo. How obſtinately they adhere to ſuch ſinful Pleadings for themſelves, and the Cauſes of being ſo. That theſe Reaſonings are various in Men, according to their different Underſtanding, Temper or State. That they are in ſome ſtrong, in others more weak.

THE firſt ſort of Men in whom we are to beat down theſe ſtrong Holds, are the Ignorant and Prophane; and if we come to ſuch to convince them of the Danger of their natural Condition, we ſhall find them to ſet on work all the Wit and Reaſon which they have, to evade or reſiſt the Conviction. If we deal with them about their Ways and States, and examine what Hopes they have for Heaven, we ſhall ſtill find they will have ſomething to ſay for themſelves, with which to put us off, and to ſalve the ſad and deplorable Circumſtances of their own Condition, notwithſtanding all that we can ſay to the contrary: Shoot the Word at them, and they have ſome Ammunition with which they will ſhoot again againſt what is ſaid: and the loweſt and pooreſt Men will have ſomething to oppoſe herein. The meaneſt Cottage hath ſome of theſe ſtrong Holds, as well as walled Towns; ignorant and prophane Men, as well as Men of Knowledg and civil Behaviour: They will tell us, though they know little or nothing of Religion, that yet they have a good Meaning; that there are none but ſin as well as they; that their Hearts are good, and they hope well. Thus Publicans and the moſt profligate Sinners, will have ſomething to ſay for themſelves as well as proud Phariſees.

And if we conſider the Difficulty of the Work of Converſion; what is the great Hindrance of it, but theſe falſe deluding Pleas in Mens Hearts? Whereat doth Converſion ſtick moſt, that notwithſtanding all the Motives, Exhortations or Threatnings which we uſe, yet the Wills of Men are not turned; and for all our trying ſuch Variety of Keys, yet the Bolts of their Wills ſhoot not? Why, there are falſe Reaſonings in their Hearts, which as wrong Wards hinder the Key from turning; and though the Key be fitted to many of the Wards in them, and we bring Anſwers to many Objections, yet if the Key ſtick at ſome one that we light not on, the Man is not converted. Ask any Man that is converted to God, what it was hindred him a long while from ſeeing his miſerable Condition, and from being humbled and parting with his Sins; and he will tell you, that either he had ſome carnal Objection ſtuck in his Mind againſt the Ways of God, and the People of God, which were long a beating down, or elſe he thought his Eſtate to be good enough, or not ſo bad as it was repreſented to him; that his Sins were not ſo great in his Eyes as they were magnified to him by Miniſters, and that he imagined his Evidences for a better Life and Heaven to be fair enough; and that he ſtill had Pleas and Excuſes to avoid the Force of all that could be ſaid againſt him: and if as to ſome Inſtances he was convinced, yet the Conviction was not thorow, but his Heart had ſtill ſome ſtrong Hold which made him ſtand it out; or that 'ere he yielded, his Fleſh debated things fully, and brought many Objections, many Pleas for it ſelf; and that he thought not that Sin had had ſuch Strength on its ſide, as he found it had when the Forts were yielded up. What is the Reaſon alſo why civil Men who are in themſelves in a nearer Proximity to the Kingdom of Heaven, than thoſe who are openly prophane, (as Chriſt ſaid to him in Mark 12. 34. Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God) yet are hardlieſt of all convinced, converted and brought home to God? What is the Reaſon of this? It is becauſe carnal Reaſon hath more Strength in them than in others; the ſtrong Holds are better fortified in them than in prophane Men, and they have ſtronger and more ſpecious Arguments to plead, why their State is good and ſafe. Chap. 2.

If we conſider the Forces which the Word of God prepares, they are fitted to invalidate ſuch Pleas and Pretences of carnal Men: It doth not ſpeak Daggers and Swords only; it doth not only ſhoot off Cannon, and diſcharge Vollies of Threatnings againſt Sin and Sinners, to conquer the Kingdom of Sin by mere down-right Blows, but it hath Weapons ſuited to repel and beat down carnal Reaſonings, Pleas and Excuſes: And a great part of the Ammunition of the Sanctuary conſiſts of ſuch Weapons wherewith to convince wicked Men, to confute their Pleas, to reaſon it out with them; Engines to countermine their ſecreteſt Deceits, and to batter down their ſtrongeſt Objections. Now if the Word hath ſo much Preparation of this kind, as it hath, then ſurely much of the Oppoſition in Mens Hearts againſt Converſion to God, lies in ſuch Reaſonings, Pleas or Excuſes; for otherwiſe theſe Weapons of the Word would be altogether needneſs. If you ſaw a King preparing not Swords, but Engines of Battery, and Inſtruments for Mining; you would ſay, ſurely he means to ſit down before ſome Fort or fenced Town, for his Preparations are not for a Field-Battel, but for a Siege: So here in this Caſe it is likewiſe.

Now the true Grounds and Reaſons how and why the Heart of Man comes to ingender and harbour, to cleave and ſtick unto ſuch carnal Pleas and Reaſons; are,

1. From the Vaſtneſs and Largeneſs of Reaſon, which is ſo large a Faculty as it is able to invent ſome fair Gloſs and Cover for the fouleſt and moſt groſs Enormities, and to make Good to appear to be Evil, and Evil Good. We ſee this by Experience: for let a Man have never ſo bad and unjuſt a Cauſe, yet ſome Colours and Pleas will be invented for it, and ſomething the Man will find in which to wrap it up cleanly; as Micah ſpeaks, Micah 7. 3. That they may do Evil with both Hands earneſtly, the Prince asketh, and the Judg asketh for a Reward: and the great Man he uttereth his miſchievous Deſire: ſo they wrap it up. The moſt foul and groſs Opinions diſſonant to the Light of Nature, as killing of Kings, breaking Faith with Hereticks, Equivocation, &c. are defended, and Reaſon is able to invent much for them, and whole Books have been written to make them good. Though the Actions of Kings and great Men are never ſo enormous, yet their Flatterers and Abettors have Tongues to file and ſmooth them, as the Prophet's Compariſon is, Iſa. 30. 10. As Preſſing-Irons can ſmooth the greateſt Wrinkles in Cloth, ſo can their Tongues do as to the moſt deformed Actions: And therefore it is hard if the profaneſt Liver, who is in the worſt Eſtate before God, cannot find ſomething to ſpeak in his Defence; it is hard if his Reaſon, quicken'd in his own Cauſe by Self-love, and whetted and ſharpen'd ſo much the more, cannot find ſomething to plead for himſelf. If a corrupt Lawyer's Reaſon can find out Shifts and Quirks for another's Cauſe when naught, much more will he do it if the Cauſe is his own; for here in this Caſe Self-love will be active to ſharpen Invention, and to make the Power of Reaſon more intenſe.

2. If the Heart is thus able to invent ſpecious Arguments to juſtify or excuſe it ſelf, it is as apt to adhere and cleave to ſuch Pleas which it frames, and to take them for good Reaſons, and to hold to them, rather than unto what the Word brings to convince on the contrary; for ſuch Self-love and Self-flattery will incline the Mind, and ſway and bend it that way. For the Stream of the Heart being in the Current of it for evil Courſes only, unto them it would run whether it had any thing to plead for them or no; and therefore when it ſhall hear or think of any thing that may be ſaid to juſtify ſuch Courſes, or to extenuate Sin, or to free them from Obligation to ſtrict Holineſs, and to give a Licence to Sin, or to diſparage the Ways of Grace and Godlineſs; the Heart willingly aſſents to ſuch ſpecious Shews of Argument, as if they were real and ſolid Truths, becauſe they all make for it, and for its great Deſign of continuing in Sin. Accordingly the Reaſon which is given, why ſo many under Popery imbraced that Doctrine as Truth, is this, That they had Pleaſure in Unrighteouſneſs, and therefore imbraced ſuch Opinions which ſuited to their Luſts, and eaſily aſſented to ſuch Doctrine; 2 Theſſ. 2. 9, 10, 11, 12. Even him whoſe coming is after the working of Satan, with all Power, and Signs, and lying Wonders, and with all Deceiveableneſs of Unrighteouſneſs in them that periſh: becauſe they received not the Love of the Truth, that they might be ſaved. And for this Cauſe God ſhall ſend them ſtrong Deluſion, that they ſhould believe a Lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the Truth, but had Pleaſure in Unrighteouſneſs.

3. For any Man to think that his Eſtate is naught and damnable, and that his Courſes are ſuch as cannot ſtand with a State of Grace, is the harſheſt Opinion that any Man can entertain of himſelf; and as a Man would preſerve a good Opinion of himſelf with others, ſo with himſelf alſo, and would alſo keep up a Hope of the future Happineſs of his Condition, for otherwiſe the Thought and Opinion of the contrary would not only hinder his Comfort, but ſink him into Diſcomfort, which is the Death of the Soul: and therefore the Apoſtle Paul, when he ſpeaks of his being convinced of his ſinful wretched State, he ſays, that he died, Rom. 7. 9, 10, 11. For I was alive without the Law once; but when the Commandment came, Sin revived, and I died. And the Commandment which was ordained to Life, I found to be unto Death: For Sin taking occaſion by the Commandment, deceived me, and by it ſlew me. Now as dying Men catch hold on any thing to help them, or as a Man ſinking ſnatcheth at any thing that may keep him up above Water; ſo do carnal Men, whoſe Souls would otherwiſe ſink into and under a deſperate Opinion of themſelves, and therefore they are glad of any the ſlighteſt Reaſons or Pleas that can but ſpeak Peace to them. And,

4. Upon this Motive the corrupt Heart keeps Reaſon off from examining into theſe ſhallow and empty Grounds of its Hopes, and wicked Men hate the Light which would diſcover things to them; John 3. 19, 20. And this is the Condemnation, that Light is come into the World, and Men loved Darkneſs rather than Light; becauſe their Deeds were evil. For every one that doeth Evil, hateth the Light, neither cometh to the Light, leſt his Deeds ſhould be reproved. And on the contrary, they are glad of any Shew, Pretence or Plea, which may make for them.

5. There is a Pride of Heart which reſolves not to yield or to be ſubject unto the Word, but is obſtinate to maintain its Cauſe, be it right or wrong, and to hold out the Siege to the laſt: And accordingly the Man ſets all his Wits on work, to find out Reaſons to maintain it ſelf with, and to fetch the Suit about again and again, and to put in new Anſwers and new Replies. The Man reſolves never to be non-pluſt, or to lay down his Cauſe, whilſt any thing may be pleaded.

Now concerning theſe Reaſonings, I would have two things to be conſidered in the general.

Firſt; That they are in ſeveral Men many and divers, ſo as it is an endleſs Work to ſpeak of, and unto them all; the Heart of one Man engenders ſtill upon occaſion, and finds out Millions of them, and we ſee that there is no end of multiplying them, as there is not of writing Books. Corrupt Reaſon will ſtill find ſomething to ſay; and when one Hold is batter'd down, it ſeeks for and builds new ones: as Rabbits, if let alone and not catch'd, dig new Burroughs when their old ones are ſtop'd; ſo do carnal Men alſo in this Caſe, if God's Spirit doth not catch them, and ſubdue and convert them. Now if one Man's Heart will find out many of theſe Shifts and Devices, what Variety muſt needs be hatch'd, hammer'd and ſought out in the Hearts of divers Men? As Reaſon it ſelf is a vaſt Faculty in every Man, ſo it is of a different Mold and Faſhion in ſeveral Men, and that is a Reaſon to one Man which is not to another, and that ſhall be a Plea and a Shift which one Man will ſtick to, for the putting off the Conviction of his Sinfulneſs and miſerable State, that another ſees nothing in, and will not make uſe of it. If Mens Fancies and Luſts are divers, then their Reaſonings are ſo too. And beſides, as the Condition of their States, as their Opinions which they have drunk in are divers, accordingly are their carnal Pleas various. The Phariſees in their times had Excuſes which are not now currant in the Light of the Goſpel, no not among carnal Men. Prophane Men have Pleas which civil Men ſlight, and civil Men have Pleas which temporary Believers build not on; and ignorant Men have Pleas which Men of Light and Underſtanding ſee through. Chap. 2.

Secondly; It is to be conſidered that the carnal Pleas and Reaſonings in ſome are more ſlight and eaſily refuted, but in others they are ſtronger. The Pleas which ſome have, which by Reaſon of their Ignorance and willingneſs to be deceived they yet ſtick unto, as moſt true, are exceeding weak and ſilly, and ſcarce worth the naming, much leſs the Pains to confute them. For Inſtance, the Jews therefore thought God their Father, becauſe they were lawfully begotten, and not of Fornication, John 8. 41. but in others theſe wicked Arguings are ſtronger. For,

1. As Reaſon it ſelf is ſtronger in ſome Men than others; ſo corrupt Reaſon alſo is abler to invent ſtronger Reaſons and Pleas for it ſelf; and ſtrong Deluſions are in ſtronger Underſtandings, and much ſtronger Holds are built by able Men than by others who are rude and unlearned. And,

2. As the Light of the Word wins Ground upon a Man's Reaſon, and batters down ſlight Works, and makes a Man deſert them, ſo much the ſtronger Fortifications will the Man's Heart be ſtill building up againſt the Word; for to a Man of much Light weak Pleas will not ſerve any longer: Therefore the ſtrongeſt carnal Reaſonings, though the feweſt, are in thoſe who are enlightned and have Knowledg. For as in a Kingdom they uſe not to build Forts at all, till they hear of ſome Enemy which may invade them; and the more Ground the Enemy wins, the more they will be ſure to fortify the Forts which are left, and to build them up ſtronger, as the more weak ones are taken from them: So it is here in this Caſe, for the Heart begins not to build up any Fort till the Word or ſome Light comes to make an Invaſion. Therefore the Gentiles who wanted the Light of the Word, had but weak Excuſes and Pleas, and none, or very little Fortification was in them, though ſome ſuch Excuſes were found among them, as ſome Light they had; Rom. 2. 15. Which ſhew the Work of the Law written in their Hearts, their Conſcience alſo bearing witneſs, and their Thoughts the mean while accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another. They made ſome Apologies for themſelves, as the Word ἀπολογουμένων implies. But now till the Word comes to urge Objections againſt a Man's State, he hath no need to make an Apology for himſelf; but as Light increaſeth, the more need there is of ſtrong Holds, whereby the Heart may ſtand out againſt it, and accordingly the Heart builds them, and therefore the more Men are inlightned, with the ſtronger Deluſions will they ſtrive to deceive themſelves.

3. The more common Graces Men have, wanting true Grace, the ſtronger carnal Reaſons will they have to juſtify their States; and accordingly the Holds of a civil and moral Man are better fortified than thoſe of one that is prophane: And therefore the Apoſtle in Rom. 1. dealing with the Gentiles, mentions none of their carnal Pleas, but when he comes to the Jews in Chap. 2. he ſpends it in taking away their Cavillings. And further; One who hath a common Work of the Spirit on his Heart, by the Preaching of the Goſpel, (as the ſecond and third Ground in the Parable of the Sower, Matth. 13. had) hath ſtronger Pleas, Reaſonings and Deceits in him, than a civil Man: A civil Man hath had the Pleas, Excuſes and Grounds of the Deceit of a prophane Man diſcovered to him to be weak; and one enlightned by the Goſpel, and who hath good Motions in him, diſcerns the civil Man's Reaſonings for himſelf to be weak, and ſees how he is deceived, and therefore he will invent ſtronger wherewith to defend himſelf; ſo as it is harder to convince a Man who is in a civil Condition, than one who is prophane, for he hath more Ammunition with which to make Reſiſtance, than the other hath; and for the ſame Reaſon it is harder to convince a temporary Believer than a civil Man, becauſe their Pleas are ſtronger, which the common Work of the Spirit occaſioneth in them.

CHAP. III.

What are the general Heads of Arguments from which Men draw Reaſons for the ſafety and welfare of their State, though they continue in their natural Condition. The Pleas which the Ignorant and Prophane make for themſelves conſider'd, and anſwer'd.

SInce the Pleas and Apologies which unregenerate Men make either to excuſe or juſtify themſelves, are ſo many and various, and ſome are more weak, and others ſtronger, and it would be too large a Work to treat of all the Particulars, I will therefore reduce them to ſome general Heads, and inſtance but in ſome of the ſtrongeſt of them, as a taſte of the reſt, and which are common among us, to whom the Word is preached ſo clearly. And firſt, I will ſhew you in general, the Topicks or Heads of Argument, from whence falſe Reaſon argues, and whence it fetcheth its Strength: I will lay open the ſeveral Shops and Forges where it ſharpens its Weapons.

1. The firſt Head or Topick whence Men fetch Pleas to juſtify their Ways and Eſtates, &c. is common proverbial Speeches, which having been minted out of the evil Treaſure of Mens Hearts, and ſtamp'd with common Authority, paſs for currant among Men, and which they uſe in defence of themſelves on all occaſions. Thus Men will defend their Covetouſneſs, or excuſe their deſerting of a publick good Cauſe, when it is difficult or dangerous; they will juſtify themſelves in doing ſo with this ordinary Saying, Every Man for himſelf, and God for us all. So they will vindicate their Careleſneſs or Licentiouſneſs in the conduct of their Lives, with that other known common Saying, If I be predeſtinated, I ſhall be ſaved; if not, do what I can, I ſhall be damned: And ſo they will cry too, Thoughts are free, that they may freely indulge themſelves in vain Thoughts, or unclean Fancies. Or when the caſe is ſuch that they muſt either ſin or ſuffer, or if they perform their Duty, they ſhall run the hazard of ſome Evil or Loſs, they will very readily have it in their Mouths, Of two Evils chooſe the leaſt. Many ſuch Sayings as theſe of the Devil's minting, paſs among Men, and ſtrengthen them in Evil. As the Papiſts have their Traditions beſides Scripture, on which they ground their corrupt Tenets and and Practices; ſo hath the World ſuch wicked Maxims as theſe with which to defend it ſelf. The danger of ſuch common Sayings and Inſtances of them, we have out of Scripture; 1 Cor. 15. 32. The Apoſtle there brings in an ordinary Atheiſtical Speech which was uſed among the Jews, Iſa. 22. 13. Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we ſhall die; by this to encourage themſelves to take out their fill of Pleaſure here. The Apoſtle brings it in 1 Cor. 15. as a proverbial Speech; If there be no Reſurrection, then, ſays he, according to the common Saying of wicked Men, Let us even eat and drink indeed, for to morrow we die. But to ſhew the danger of ſuch naughty Speeches, when once made common, and ſo authentical, he adds, Be not deceived, i. e. with ſuch Speeches, as many are, for evil Words corrupt good Manners; i. e. ſuch evil common proverbial Speeches as theſe do much hurt, and have much influence to corrupt our Lives, and are often uſed as Means by Men to ſtrengthen and defend themſelves in Ill; he uſing a contrary proverbial Speech, then uſed, to countercheck the other with. The Jews alſo had got an accurſed Proverb, whereby they did put off all from themſelves to their Fathers Sins, as the cauſe of their Puniſhment, and ſo were not humbled, nor got any Good by it; Ezek. 18. 2. What mean ye, that ye uſe this Proverb concerning the Land of Iſrael, ſaying, The Fathers have eaten ſowr Grapes, and the Childrens Teeth are ſet on edg? Thereby laying the blame on God and their Fathers. This Proverb carnal Reaſon got by the end, and they uſed it upon all occaſions, and by it put off all the

the Prophet's Sermon, whereby he convinc'd them, that it was for their own Sins that they were led into Captivity. And becauſe this was a ſtrong Hold, which carnal Reaſon had recourſe to, he therefore ſpends a whole Chapter to refute it, with many Reaſons and Anſwers to it. So they had another common Saying too, whereby their Hearts were ſecur'd and ſtrengthned to do evil; Ezek. 12. 22, 23. Son of Man, what is that Proverb, that ye have in the Land of Iſrael, ſaying, The Days are prolonged, and every Viſion faileth? Tell them therefore, Thus ſaith the Lord, I will make this Proverb to ceaſe, and they ſhall no more uſe it as a Proverb in Iſrael: but ſay unto them, The Days are at hand, and the effect of every Viſion. Becauſe Threatnings were not ſpeedily executed, and they had heard many, and ſeen nothing done, therefore they ſlighted all: this did prevail, and was commonly uſed, and did much hurt. That in Job alſo which Satan brings in, was a common Proverb by which Men were guided, viz. that a Man would do any thing to ſave his Life; Job 2. 4,5. And Satan anſwered the Lord, and ſaid, Skin for Skin, yea, all that a Man hath will he give for his Life, &c. The Devil thought that Job would have acted herein like other Men; and therefore touch but his Life, (ſays Satan to God) and he will curſe thee. And thus Men will excuſe a ſinful Action, by ſaying, that Life is ſweet, and that it was done to ſave that, or their Eſtate: and who would not have done it beſides me? Thus Job's Wife argues with him too from a common Saying which wicked Men had among them, Curſe God, and die: As if ſhe ſhould have ſaid, Seeing God deals thus with thee, after all thy perfect walking, and this is the reward of all, Let it now go, and leave it. She uſed it as, it ſeems, the ſenſe of a carnal Proverb then in uſe, and proportioned to carnal Reaſon, that ſince bleſſing God will do no good, thou hadſt as good curſe him; for die thou muſt however, and it cannot be worſe with thee. And therefore Job adds, Thou ſpeakeſt as one of the fooliſh Women: As if he had ſaid, Doſt thou ſpeak as Job's Wife, and one brought up in the knowledg of God? No, this is the Speech of an unregenerate Woman, an Heatheniſh Speech, fit for none but the Prophane to uſe: And he confutes it by a ſuitable Anſwer and Reaſon, Job 2. 10. But he ſaid unto her, Thou ſpeakeſt as one of the fooliſh Women ſpeaketh: what? ſhall we receive Good at the Hand of God, and ſhall we not receive Evil? Now all ſuch kind of common Speeches, which are or have been uſed, carnal Reaſon is glad of, and employs them to ſtrengthen it ſelf with them upon occaſion, as inartificial Arguments drawn from common Teſtimony. Chap. 3.

2. Unregenerate Men will argue, and juſtify themſelves and their Practices from the common Opinions which the World hath of Things. As Tradition, ſo Univerſality is another Head or Topick, which not Papiſts only, but all wicked Men uſe, to defend ill Doctrines or Actions. As Faith looks to what the Word of God judgeth of Things; ſo carnal Reaſon to what the World thinks, and from that draws Reaſons to juſtify it ſelf, and is glad to entertain all ſuch Opinions as make for its wicked Ways and Courſes. And therefore the Apoſtle bids us not to be conformed to the World in this, Rom. 12. 2. And be not conformed to this World: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your Mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect Will of God. He means eſpecially, that we ſhould not be conform'd to the World in our Opinions of Things; for ſo the Oppoſition implies, Be transformed by the renewing of your Minds, to prove what is the good Will of God. If the World commonly thinks ſuch a Practice lawful, accordingly the moſt praiſe it, and carnal Reaſon will have Arguments to perſwade to it, and to defend the Practice. I do as the moſt do, (will an unregenerate Man ſay) and am but in the ſame condition with the generality of Mankind; Do any of the Rulers believe? Or, are they ſo preciſely godly, as you preach? Thus if common Cuſtom, which paſſeth for a Law, ſeems to countenance any Practice, it is Warrant enough for it; nay, if but a Book hath been writ for a vile Opinion, and to defend a wicked Action, (as what Sin is there almoſt which hath not had ſome Abettors?) Men will thereby be encouraged, and make a Defence for themſelves: and wicked Men, who are not ſo knowing, will embrace the Errors of thoſe who are learned, with which to bear themſelves out; and their Minds being corrupt, are preſently apt to think ſuch erroneous Opinions, and in appearance ſo well defended, to be the Truth. If the Morality of the Sabbath, and the Strictneſs of its Obſervation be queſtioned and diſputed, prophane Men have enough wherewith to juſtify either their neglects of attendance on the Worſhip of God, or their unlawful Recreations on that Day; and they are preſently of the ſame Opinion with thoſe who uſe their Wits to diſannul the fourth Command. So look what pitch or height in Religion the moſt of the World applaud, (as Men generally judg Civility, and moral Honeſty, and a formal way of ſerving God, to be Religion enough, and thoſe who do ſo are the World's Saints) ſuch a pitch in Religion is the Standard by which they will meaſure themſelves, and think it ſufficient: And what Religion and Piety above this, and more than this, is preſs'd on them, (ſince it is by the World generally ſpoken againſt and condemn'd) ſhall by the carnal Reaſon of Man be ſcorn'd and neglected: Acts 28. 22. But we deſire to hear of thee what thou thinkeſt: for as concerning this Sect, we know that every-where it is ſpoken againſt. So that as the Papiſts uſe Univerſality as an Argument, (which is on their ſide, Rev. 13. 3.) wherewith to defend themſelves; ſo Men unregenerate urge it, for their Eſtates, that they they are in the ſame condition with the moſt of other Men; and for their Practices, that they do but live according to the common Judgment and Cuſtom of the World.

3. Prophane Men, who mind little or nothing of Religion, will draw Arguments to juſtify themſelves from the Obſervations of God's outward Dealings, and of the Diſpenſations of his common Providence among Men, which ſhines on the Unjuſt as well as the Juſt. As Faith looks to what God ſays in his Word, ſo carnal Reaſon interprets his Mind by what is done in his Works. Thus the Papiſts plead Proſperity as an Argument for the Truth of their Church, and paſs the Judgment from the outward carriage of Divine Providence toward them. In the ſame manner thoſe in the Prophet argued for Idolatry, and worſhipping the Queen of Heaven, and juſtified themſelves; Jer. 44. 17. But we will certainly do whatſoever thing goeth forth out of our own Mouth, to burn Incenſe unto the Queen of Heaven, and to pour out Drink-offerings unto her, as we have done, we and our Fathers, our Kings and our Princes, in the Cities of Judah, and in the Streets of Jeruſalem: for then had we plenty of Victuals, and were well, and ſaw no Evil. When we burnt Incenſe to the Queen of Heaven, (ſay they) we had plenty of all things, and our Fathers and our Kings did ſo. There are two Reaſons couched in it: 1. The Univerſality and Antiquity of this their idolatrous Worſhip: Will you condemn (ſay they) the Practice of all our Fathers and Kings? And 2. their Proſperity and Succeſs in ſuch a wicked Courſe; We have had Plenty (ſay they) ever ſince, and we find this way of Religion bleſs'd, whereas we had Scarcity when we ſerved the Lord God. But Jeremy in anſwer tells them, that the ground of their Scarcity then, was their former Idolatry, God thus afterward puniſhing it. So ſome among us have argued for the Popiſh Religion; We then had Plenty, and all things well, &c. So the Hearts of carnal Men will reaſon about their Actions too: look what Actions are ſucceſsful, them they will judg to be good; but if they are unproſperous, though they have never ſo ſure a warrant out of the Word for them, yet they will be apt to ſuſpect them. Thus did that King argue for Idolatry, 2 Chron. 28. 23. For he ſacrificed unto the Gods of Damaſcus, which ſmote him: and he ſaid, Becauſe the Gods of the Kings of Syria help them, therefore will I ſacrifice unto them, that they may help me. He ſacrific'd to the Gods of Damaſcus for this very reaſon, that becauſe the Gods of Syria helped them, therefore he hop'd they would help him alſo, if adored by him. And after the ſame rate prophane Men will reaſon againſt pure Godlineſs, and for a careleſs Worſhip and Religion: Look (ſay they) thoſe who are ſtricteſt, have moſt Croſſes and Troubles; and ſince they began to be ſo religious, and to follow Sermons, they have not thriven as they did before; but thoſe who live as we do, God uſeth moſt kindly, and therefore ſurely they are moſt happy. Thus they bleſs thoſe whom the Lord abhors. Theſe are the Ungodly who proſper, look big upon it, and ſpeak confidently, inſomuch as through carnal Reaſon, it is a Tentation to God's own People, who ſometimes are ſtumbled at it, and half perſwaded that the proſpering Side is the better; As David ſaith of himſelf, that his

Foot

Foot had well-nigh ſlipp'd herein, Pſal. 73. 2, 3. But as for me, my Feet were almoſt gone; my Steps had well-nigh ſlipp'd: For I was envious at the Fooliſh, when I ſaw the Proſperity of the Wicked. So on the other ſide, when they at Malta ſaw a great Danger befal the Apoſtle Paul by a Viper's coming on his Hand, Acts 28. 3, 4. It is no doubt (ſay they) but this Man was a Murderer, whom (tho he hath eſcap'd the Sea) Vengeance ſuffers not to live. As many judg their Eſtates to be good, becauſe they proſper in the World; ſo many are encouraged too to go on in their evil Ways, becauſe they have ſinned again and again, and no Evil hath come of it; and therefore they think they may do ſo ſtill ſafely. As Faith argues God hath delivered, therefore he will deliver; ſo carnal Reaſon argues, as God hath ſpared, ſo he will ſpare; and the Heart of Man upon this is fully ſet to do Evil: Eccleſ. 8. 11. Becauſe Sentence againſt an evil Work is not executed ſpeedily, therefore the Heart of the Sons of Men is fully ſet in them to do Evil. And on the contrary, the People of God have many Jealouſies caſt up in their Hearts by carnal Reaſon againſt their Eſtates, and their being in the Favour of God, from the outward Carriage of God to them; as Gideon ſaid, Judg. 6. 13. And Gideon ſaid unto him, O my Lord, if the Lord be with us, why then is all this befallen us? and where be all his Miracles which our Fathers told us of, ſaying, Did not the Lord bring us up from Egypt? But now the Lord hath forſaken us, and delivered us into the Hands of the Midianites. Thus many a poor Soul is ready to ſay, If God had loved me, he would never have let me fall into ſo groſs and ſcandalous a Sin, or he would never have afflicted me, nor ſuffer'd me to be tempted, as I have been.

4. Unregenerate Men will fetch Arguments to juſtify their State from outward ſpiritual Priviledges, which God has beſtowed on them: So thoſe in Luke 13.26. We have eaten and drunk in thy Preſence, and thou haſt taught in our Streets. They thought becauſe they had eaten and drunk with Chriſt, therefore they ſhould certainly be ſaved. Thus the common Profeſſors of Chriſtianity think that becauſe they have been baptized, and live in the Church, and have the Word preached, and the Sacrament adminiſtred to them, that therefore they are very good Chriſtians, and ſhall go to Heaven without any more ado. In this manner they in Jer. 7. 4. upheld themſelves; The Temple of the Lord, (ſay they) the Temple of the Lord are we. And when our Lord Chriſt preach'd to convince the Jews of the danger of their State wherein they were, to ſilence their Fears, they had their Relation to Abraham ready to plead; John 8. 33. They anſwered him, We be Abraham's Seed, and were never in bondage to any Man. Becauſe they were Abraham's Children, they thought they muſt neceſſarily be ſaved. After this rate Micah argued alſo, who thought that God would ſurely bleſs him, becauſe he had a Prieſt in his Houſe to be his Chaplain; Judg. 17. 13. Then ſaid Micah, Now know I that the Lord will do me good, becauſe I have a Levite to my Prieſt. Upon ſuch outward Priviledges as theſe do carnal Men reſt, and judg themſelves to be in God's Favour, becauſe of them. The Apoſtle cuts off all theſe Pleas at once; Rom. 2. 25, 26, 27, 28, 29. For Circumciſion verily profiteth, if thou keep the Law: but if thou be a breaker of the Law, thy Circumciſion is made Uncircumciſion. Therefore, if the Uncircumciſion keep the Righteouſneſs of the Law, ſhall not his Uncircumciſion be counted for Circumciſion? And ſhall not Uncircumciſion which is by Nature, if it fulfil the Law, judg thee who by the Letter and Circumciſion doſt tranſgreſs the Law? For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that Circumciſion, which is outward in the Fleſh: But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly; and Circumciſion is that of the Heart, in the Spirit, and not in the Letter, whoſe Praiſe is not of Men but of God. Gal. 5. 6. For in Jeſus Chriſt neither Circumciſion availeth any thing, nor Uncircumciſion, but Faith which worketh by Love. Gal. 6. 15. For in Chriſt Jeſus neither Circumciſion availeth any thing, nor Uncircumciſion, but a new Creature.

5. Another Topick from which carnal Men draw Arguments to give a Reaſon why they do not embrace the Ways of true Religion and Godlineſs, is the outward appearance of things in this World. The Profeſſion of Chriſt and his Goſpel in the Purity and Strictneſs of it, is in external Shew to a carnal Eye, poor and low, and attended with mean Circumſtances; and therefore they think they have juſt reaſon to deſpiſe and neglect it. What kept the Jews from acknowledging Chriſt to be the Meſſiah? It was the poverty and meanneſs of his outward Condition, the lowneſs of his Education, being bred up in an ordinary mechanical Trade, and not at the Feet of their Gamaliels, and great Doctors of the Law. From this they furniſhed themſelves with many Arguments, which they objected as Reaſons why they would not believe on him; Mark 6. 3, 4. Is not this the Carpenter, the Son of Mary, the Brother of James and Joſes, and of Juda and Simon? And are not his Siſters here with us? And they were offended at him. But Jeſus ſaid unto them, A Prophet is not without Honour, but in his own Country, and among his own Kin, and in his own Houſe. This was the matter of Offence to them; whereas, if rightly conſidered, it was one of the ſtrongeſt Reaſons which might have convinc'd them, for it argued his Wiſdom to be not from Men but God, and that he was the great Prophet foretold which ſhould come into the World: and therefore he marvelled at their Unbelief, more than of all other, as expecting that among them (who knew him before by the Prophecies concerning him, and who now ſaw ſuch great things done by him) he ſhould have been readily acknowledg'd, that they of all others ſhould have fallen down, and ſaid, that God is in him, and that he was more than a Man. And therefore he takes occaſion to aſſert and vindicate his Divinity from that which the Jews objected againſt it; John 7. 15. And the Jews marvelled, ſaying, How knoweth this Man Letters, having never learned? They there object, that he was never brought up to Learning; and thence he takes occaſion to prove that his Doctrine was from God; Ver. 16. Jeſus anſwered them, and ſaid, My Doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me. So the Barrenneſs of the Place, both for Religion and Knowledg, where he was brought up, ſtumbled Nathaniel, and had like to have kept him from Chriſt; John 1.46. And Nathaniel ſaid unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? It was it ſeems a rude, and a wicked ignorant Place. So the meanneſs of his Condition, that he was poor, and had not a Hole to hide his Head in, and that none but poor People followed him, this ſtumbled many; and therefore, ſays Chriſt, Bleſſed is he who is not offended in me, becauſe of this. For before he had ſaid, The Poor receive the Goſpel; and this he knew that many would be ſcandaliz'd at, and that it would prove an invincible Obſtacle to their believing; Luke 7. 22, 23. Then Jeſus anſwering, ſaid unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have ſeen and heard, how that the Blind ſee, the Lame walk, the Lepers are cleanſed, the Deaf hear, the Dead are raiſed, to the Poor the Goſpel is preached. And bleſſed is he who ſhall not be offended in me. Though he doth there reckon up many Miracles which he did, yet that the Poor received the Goſpel, he knew would ſtumble them more, than all his wonderful Works would perſwade them. And this indeed did offend the Phariſees, and they reaſoned from it againſt him; John 7. 49. But this People who knoweth not the Law are curſed. And are not now in theſe days many of thoſe ſharp Arrows, which are ſhot againſt God's People, fetch'd out of this Quiver? And are they not ſpited, malign'd and deſpiſed, becauſe of the meanneſs of their Condition, and low appearance in the World?

6. Unregenerate Men, to defend their State, will argue from Scriptures themſelves either miſunderſtood or miſapplied. As there is no Hereſy ſo foul, but in ſhew produceth ſome Scripture for it ſelf; ſo there is no Eſtate ſo bad, but will have ſomething out of the Word of God wherewith to juſtify it ſelf. The Phariſees who were moſt wicked, and deadly Enemies to Chriſt, yet thought from ſome Scriptures that they ſhould be ſaved, and that without Chriſt, miſunderſtanding the Scope of Moſes his Miniſtry: Therefore ſays Chriſt, John 5. 39. Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal Life, and they are they which teſtify of me: i. e. They thought their Evidence for Heaven lay there; and as they by their Gloſſes had corrupted them, they fancied that they ſpoke plainly, that by their doing they ſhould live, being ignorant of the Righteouſneſs of Faith: Rom. 10. 3. For they being ignorant of God's Righteouſneß, and going about to eſtabliſh their own Righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the Righteouſneſs of God. And they were Abraham's Seed, as they thought, to whom the Promiſe was made, and on that account imagined themſelves ſafe enough. But (ſays Chriſt) theſe Scriptures you have not ſearched, and compared one thing with another; for if you had, you would find that they write of me. And [that Moſes] in whom you truſt, John 5. 45. (as they built all their mighty Confidence upon Sayings of his) He, if you rightly underſtand him, makes againſt you. Ver. 46. And I deſire no other Judg than him, to whom you appeal. Yea, to ſuch a Degree of Confidence were they grown, that they bring Scripture againſt Chriſt himſelf, John 7. 52. They anſwered, and ſaid unto him, Art thou alſo of Galilee? Search and look: for out of Galilee ariſeth no Prophet. They urge this, that out of Galilee, from whence Chriſt came, there ariſeth no Prophet, for that in all the Scripture there was no mention of that Country to be the Place of any Prophet, which yet was the Place of Chriſt's Abode: But ſay they, ver. 42. the Scripture ſaith, That the Chriſt ſhall be of the Seed of David, and out of the Town of Bethlehem; which had they ſearched into, as indeed they ought, they might have found to be the Place of Chriſt's Birth; but they were loth to make Inquiry, but took Advantage from the Place of his Education, as if it were his Country where he was born. And ſo they argue againſt Chriſt from Scripture, in John 7. 27. Howbeit, we know this Man whence he is: but when Chriſt cometh, no Man knoweth whence he is. They herein had reference (as it ſhould ſeem) to Iſa. 53. 8. Who can tell his Generation? which being ſpoken of his Godhead, they apply to his Manhood; and as for this Man (ſay they) we know whence he is; which yet if they had known, they would not have ſaid what follows, John 7. 42. Hath not the Scripture ſaid, that Chriſt cometh of the Seed of David, and out of the Town of Bethlehem, where David was? So to this Day, how many Scriptures are alledged to juſtify Mens Sins and ſinful States. Men to cloak their Covetouſneſs will preſently have that Scripture in their Mouths, He is worſe than an Infidel who provides not for his Family, 1 Tim. 5. 8. To quiet their Hearts in delaying Repentance, they will often repeat that Scripture to themſelves, That at whatſoever time a Man turns to God, he will abundantly pardon, Iſa. 55. 7. And therefore James ſays, chap. 1. 22. that many Hearers of the Word make παραλογίσμους, falſe Syllogiſms out of the Word it ſelf. And thus Men fancy too, that their lazy good Purpoſes and Deſires ſhall be accepted, becauſe ſay they, God accepts the Will for the Deed. Thus they alſo will flatter themſelves, that if their Conſciences do but check them when they ſin, it is well enough, for they will abuſe that Place in Rom. 7. 17. and ſay, It is not I, but Sin that dwelleth in me. And thus the Phariſees, becauſe it was ſaid in Moſes's Law, A Tooth for a Tooth, therefore thought it lawful to revenge themſelves, Matth. 5. 43. Ye have heard that it hath been ſaid, Thou ſhalt love thy Neighbour, and hate thy Enemy: And becauſe they are bidden to love their Neighbours, Lev. 19. 18. they underſtanding Neighbour for only a Friend, or one who is not an Enemy, thought they might lawfully hate their Enemies.

7. Carnal Men will argue for their Practices and State, from common Principles agreeable to Self-love, and from thoſe proud flattering Conceits which they have of themſelves, making Self-love their Judg: For Example, Cain he reaſons with God, Am I my Brother's Keeper, Gen. 4. 9. Self-love thinks that it is bound to look only to it ſelf: and thus Men will commonly ſay, Every Man for himſelf, and God for us all; we are to look only to our ſelves, and every Man to take care of one. And Self-love thinks this but reaſonable. So Men think it equal too, to cheat him who hath cheated them; and ſo though to wrong an Innocent was eſteem'd a Sin among the Heathen, yet Cicero himſelf thought Revenge to be laudable: ſuch as theſe Chriſt confutes, Matth. 5. 38. Ye have heard that it hath been ſaid, An Eye for an Eye, and a Tooth for a Tooth. They thought it lawful to revenge upon Grounds of Self-love, and that it was a Duty to hate their Enemies, ver. 45. ſo Simeon and Levi thought it juſt to take ſuch a cruel Revenge on the Sichemites, becauſe of the high Abuſe offered to their Siſter, Gen. 34. 31. And they ſaid, Should he deal with our Siſter, as with an Harlot? and they thought it a good Reaſon. Thus out of thoſe high Conceits which Men have of themſelves and their own Cauſe, will they argue, making themſelves their own Rule and Reaſon. Thus the Phariſees ſtood upon their Defence, John 9. 40. And ſome of the Phariſees which were with him, heard theſe Words, and ſaid unto him, Are we blind alſo? What, are we blind alſo?

And ſo they thought it was Reaſon enough to perſwade the Apoſtles to ceaſe preaching of Chriſt, that they would thereby bring innocent Blood on their Heads, Acts 5. 28. —Did not we ſtraitly command you that you ſhould not teach in this Name? And behold, ye have filled Jeruſalem with your Doctrine, and intend to bring this Man's Blood upon us. As if they had ſaid, What, will you accuſe a whole State of Murder? Now all this, the Apoſtle calls comparing themſelves with themſelves, not with the Rule; 2 Cor. 10. 12. For we dare not make our ſelves of the Number, or compare our ſelves with ſome that commend themſelves: but they meaſuring themſelves by themſelves, and comparing themſelves among themſelves, are not wiſe. And yet by this way of judging, will unregenerate Men take the Meaſure of themſelves; and therefore they think what is beyond that which they have, muſt needs be Hypocriſy, and cenſure thoſe who are more ſtrictly Holy than themſelves, to be cloſe and ſly Hypocrites.

8. Others there are who do not deceive themſelves ſo groſly, but have ſomething of Shew and Pretence, who will argue for the Goodneſs of their Condition from ſome religious Duties and Performances, or from ſome inferiour common Works of God's Spirit upon their Hearts: This the young Man inſiſted on, Luke 18. 21. Thus Jehu bears himſelf up, 2 Kings 10. 16. And he ſaid, Come with me, and ſee my Zeal for the Lord: ſo they made him ride in his Chariot. And thus are thoſe Hearers of the Word whom the Apoſtle James deſcribes, chap. 1. 23, 24, &c. who by the Hearing of the Word had got ſome Stamp and Form of Religion upon their Hearts, though but an inferiour Work; and deceived themſelves by reaſoning from it, that their State therefore was good: If any Man ſeem to be religious (ſays he) i. e. to be hot and forward in Duties, and refrains not his Tongue, he deceives his own Heart; for he thinks his Religion ſuch as will ſave him when it will not, where a known Sin is thus nouriſh'd with it; and he deceives not others only, but his own Heart. And it is from the external Performances of Duties that they plead unto Chriſt; Matth. 7. 22. They urge Chriſt much with what they had done, how they had prayed and preached in his Name: Their own Duties deceived them; and in that they are brought in pleading them then, it argues that they were not groſs Hypocrites, who had deceived Men only, but who had deceived themſelves, and thought they had ſuch Pleas as would be of Force before God's Tribunal, and therefore are brought in pleading them, which if they had not judged them good and valid, they would not dared to have done.

CHAP. IV.

The Pleas which Men who have only Morality make for themſelves. They urge, that they do not live in vicious Courſes; that they refrain from great and notorious Sins; That they are honeſt; That they have ſome Knowledg of the Truths of the Chriſtian Religion, as well as make a Profeſſion of it. What are the Reaſons that Men are ſo ready to account any moral Righteouſneſs which they have, to be Grace.

WE are laying Siege and Battery to all thoſe falſe Pleas and carnal Reaſonings (which the Apoſtle calls ſtrong Holds) which all ſorts of unregenerate Men build up for themſelves, to maintain a good Opinion of their Eſtates. We having demoliſhed thoſe of the prophane and ignorant Sort (whoſe Strength and Force are but weak and ſmall) have already ſet down before the Holds and Forts of civil and formal Chriſtians, whoſe Number as it is greater, ſo their Fortifications are of more Strength, and will hold out a longer Siege. Their Out-works, ſuch Pleas as are drawn from external Priviledges, which are more common to them and all other unregenerate Men, we have already ſcaled and taken; we will therefore now advance and ſet forwards towards the main Strength and Caſtle of Defence which is in View, and for the out-ſide of it towards Men, a fair and goodly one, conſiſting of much Righteouſneſs of their own, founded and fortified much of it by Nature, and then repaired and much inlarged by their Education in the Church: and 'ere we begin to lay Battery againſt it, let us take a general View of it altogether, and go round about it, and tell all the Towers thereof, and deſcry wherein the great Strength of it doth lie.

1. The greateſt and eminenteſt Tower belonging to it, is a negative Righteouſneſs, and outward Abſtinence from groſs Sins, ſo that they cannot be charged with the groſs Defilements of the World; ſo ſaid the Phariſee, I am no Drunkard, no Adulterer: they wallow not in the common Mire, and ſo think themſelves pure in their own Eyes. There is a Generation that are pure in their own Eyes, though they be not waſhed from their inward Filthineſs, as Agur ſaith, Prov. 30. (which Imputation, though theſe Men would faſten and apply to others better than themſelves, who are truly holy, yet it will be found that they themſelves are the Men the Holy Ghoſt there meant and aimed at) Yea, they further ſay, that they not only abſtain from ſuch Sins, but find no great Inclination thereunto; yea, they utterly abominate ſuch Courſes themſelves, and are zealous againſt them to puniſh and reform them in others.

2. The ſecond is much Good both in their Natures and Diſpoſitions, many Vertues, which are likewiſe expreſſed in their Lives in many Actions that are good; as Sweetneſs, Candor, Goodneſs, and Ingenuity of Nature, Meekneſs, Kindneſs and Love to thoſe they live with, Pity to others in Diſtreſs, Honeſty and Integrity of Heart in their Dealings with Men, Uprightneſs in a good and juſt Cauſe. And,

3. Theſe joined with keeping a good Conſcience, and doing out of Conſcience that which they do in ſecret: They ſay they would not wrong a Man that truſts them, no not in ſecret; they ſay they are diligent in their Callings, provide for their Families, and careful in the Places they live in, aim at the publick Good, and will be miſs'd when they are gone. And though theſe be the moſt conſpicuous Parts of their Righteouſneſs, and which they moſt truſt to, and therefore are denominated civil Men, the Denomination being from that which is moſt eminent in them; yet to countenance this their Honeſty the more, more, and to ſet it forth and varniſh it for Grace, they plead they are not devoid of Religion neither. Therefore they further plead and ſay;

4. We know the Truth profeſſed and taught amongſt us, and we do aſſent to it, and do hate and renounce Popery, and in our Practice we conform to all Holy Duties publickly profeſſed, and conſtantly we come to Church, as all Chriſtians ought to do, and are converſant in thoſe Holy Duties with Reverence, Attention and Devotion, (and if they have been more ſtrictly educated, they do ſometimes ſay Prayers privately) and unto all this we add Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, looking to be ſaved alone by him.

5. Unto all which Goodneſs they put in many Excuſes for what they want, into the Ballance to make it weight. 'Tis true, ſaith ſuch an one, I am not ſo ſcrupulous in every ſmall thing as ſome are, as in petty Oaths and vain Speeches; and what need I ſtand troubling my ſelf with my Thoughts, which are ſo various and infinite? Nor do I much ſtick to take ſome Liberty in ſome particular Sin; yet it is but my Infirmity, and all have their Imperfections; and God will not be ſtrict to mark all that is done amiſs, nor therefore need I be ſo.

6. And again; What though I have not found ſuch a Work in me, as ſome talk of, to ſee my ſelf in a damnable Eſtate, to have ſuch Heart-breakings for my Sins, and have not had ſuch Longings after Chriſt, and contempt of and parting with the World, nor ſuch a Reliſh of or running after Sermons, and delight in Duties; I thank God I know no cauſe I have to be troubled, I never knew my ſelf in a bad Eſtate, I have been thus well diſpoſed from my Youth; I believe in Chriſt as well as they do, though I do not keep ſuch a-do about him, in talking or thinking of him; I do not remember that ever I wanted him, for I believed in him ever ſince I can remember; I am ſorry when I offend and ſin, and do heartily ask God Mercy, as that Publican did, God be merciful to me a Sinner. And what though I am not ſo zealous nor ſo forward in many Duties, as in talking of Scripture-Matters every-where where I come, or in teaching and praying, and repeating the Word with my Family, or confeſſing my Sins, and mourning for them; I have not ſuch Gifts as others have, but my Heart is good, though I make not ſuch a Shew; and though I ſpend the chief of my Time and Thoughts upon the World, and that all my Care and Deſires, and chief Delights, are taken up in getting Wealth and Honours, and Learning, &c. yet I follow but my Calling, and I take no unlawful Courſes to get Wealth, and he is worſe than an Infidel that provides not for his Family; nor do I ſpend time in unlawful Pleaſures, forbidden in the Word. Unto which and the like Excuſes I ſhall hereafter ſpeak.

This is in brief, the Model of that Goodneſs, which like another Babel they themſelves have built, to climb up to Heaven with; and are bold, to ſet in Competition with the Truth of Holineſs in the moſt Regenerate. And indeed it is no wonder, if Nature having any Righteouſneſs of its own, ſtands upon it, and takes it for Grace, without examining of it. For ſurely if outward Favours from God lead them into ſuch an Opinion, and their Priviledges, as living in the Church (as was ſhown) which are things external and without them; Et quæ non fecimus ipſi; If theſe, I ſay, do yet fluſh Men in a good Opinion of themſelves, how much more any Righteouſneſs which is their own, and in and from themſelves? And therefore Paul, beſides his outward Priviledges of being circumciſed, reckons up as the chief thing he made account of, that Righteouſneſs which was his own, Phil. 3. 6,---9. And if they eſteem and magnify adherent, relative and ſacramental Righteouſneſs ſo much, then inherent perſonal Righteouſneſs muſt needs be much more extolled by them. A Man's own Righteouſneſs in his own Eyes, O it muſt needs be Grace, be it never ſo little; any Abſtinence from Sin, any vertuous Diſpoſition, any religious devout Performances; All a Man's Ways are clean in his own Eyes, ſaith Solomon, Prov. 16. 2. Which intimates two Reaſons;

1*ſt*. In his own Eyes, that is, himſelf being Judg. And therefore till a Man hath new Eyes given him from the holy Word of God, and be enlightned by a ſupernatural Light accompanying it, which might repreſent Men themſelves to them and their Condition, as it is ſet forth in the Word; no wonder if they think think well of themſelves. Now theſe kind of Men are never put out of Conceit with themſelves by the Light of the holy Word, revealing their ſpiritual Sinfulneſs in their natural Condition to them, to humble them: Though they hear it, and underſtand many things in a general manner, ſo far as natural Underſtanding reaches; yet they have not had ſuch a Light as to underſtand themſelves by it, to ſee their own Faces in it, as James ſpeaks; and therefore are but of the firſt ſort of Hearers, who did not underſtand the Word, that is, not with an applying or affecting Light as the other, the ſtony and thorny Ground did; and therefore having but their own Eyes, no wonder if their Ways be clean in their own Judgments and Opinions. Chap. 4.

2*dly*. And again, Becauſe they look but with their own Eyes, their natural Light, ſo becauſe they be their own Ways, yea, even [all their Ways] as Solomon ſpeaks, ſo as even for the moſt of their wicked Ways, they have ſome Excuſes and fair Pretences to colour them, but much more their moral Vertues, and righteous Dealings, and good Diſpoſitions, their own Righteouſneſs, theſe muſt needs be high in their own eſteem. Every Man is apt to magnify what is his own above the worth of it; and by how much the worth of it is greater, by ſo much the more a Man uſeth to magnify it. If Men have Children which are the Fruit of their Bodies, they dote on them; as the Ape in the Fable, that preſented its miſhapen Birth to Jupiter. If Men have Parts or Wit, which are the more noble and fair Births of their Brain, they much more admire them in themſelves than in others. But above all, if corrupt Nature comes to have any Righteouſneſs beſtowed upon it, which is the nobleſt Endowment of all other, O then out of queſtion it may be Grace: and by how much more Men had rather think well of themſelves for Righteouſneſs and Goodneſs, than for any other Endowment whatſoever, by ſo much are they yet made more prone to think well of their own Vertues and Performances, rather than of any other Excellency. And therefore Paul, in that Inventory he gives in of what was gain to him, and of moſt worth, we find no mention made by him of his Learning, which in other regards he ſtood upon; but he ſtands chiefly upon his Righteouſneſs and Vertues, and conformity to the Law. And therefore the Philoſopher alſo made the practice of Vertue to be Man's chiefeſt Good, ſo high an Opinion hath Nature of its own Righteouſneſs.

3*dly*. And add to this; That to Men fallen into ſuch a State of general Corruption, (as they hear all Men are fallen into) any ſeeming Righteouſneſs and Goodneſs muſt needs ſeem the more to them, to prize it in that reſpect, that they hear how corrupt Mankind is. Beggars we ſee how proud they are if they get an old Sute to cover their Nakedneſs, a little Money, to ſhew that they have ſome; and this becauſe they are Beggars: So we the Sons of Men, that are Bankrupts, and of whom the Word ſays, That by Nature we are altogether unrighteous, and that we are but Fleſh, wherein dwells no good thing; that we ſhould have any thing like Goodneſs, it makes us the more conceited, and we think preſently ſurely it muſt be Grace. So the Church of Laodicea ſays, Rev. 3. 17. That ſhe was rich and encreaſed with Goods, and had need of nothing; yet ſhe was poor, and blind, and miſerable, and wretched: She had got ſome old Rags of Righteouſneſs, ſome braſs Shillings, and counterfeit Pieces of good Works and Performances; and how proud was ſhe? Therefore no wonder if Men go about to eſtabliſh their own Righteouſneſs, (as the Jews did, Rom. 10. 2.) if they advance it and ſet it up, if it paſſes and gets out for Grace, and be thought worthy of that degree in their own Thoughts.

CHAP. V.

That all this mere Morality in corrupt Nature falls ſhort of Grace, prov'd from the Inſtances of thoſe brave Spirits among the Heathen, in whom thoſe Vertues ſhin'd, and yet they had nothing of the Grace of God in them: Prov'd alſo from the Jews, who made their boaſt of the Law, and its Righteouſneſs, and who yet, as inveterate Enemies, oppos'd the Grace of the Goſpel.

THUS you have a Deſcription and general Scheme of their ſtrongeſt Holds, conſiſting of natural and acquired Righteouſneſs, with Reaſons why Men are apt to reſt in it as true Grace. We will now fall to Battery; and 'ere we aſſault each Particular apart, we will firſt anſwerably make a general Aſſault on the whole, as thus viewed, and ſet together.

The State of the Controverſy is, Whether corrupt Nature, remaining ſtill corrupt, be not capable of all this kind of Goodneſs? and, Whether it falls not ſhort of Grace? which if proved and detected once, convinces them of their Eſtates. This I will demonſtrate both in the ὅτι and διότι of it, ſhewing the Grounds of it, and what Principles there are in corrupt Nature which do make it capable of all this; it ſtill remains corrupt as towards God.

And firſt, for the ὅτι, That it is ſo; I will clear it by Inſtances of thoſe in whom all theſe have been found, whom yet we will acknowledg that they all wanted Grace, which is a way of Conviction Chriſt uſeth in the like caſe to convince the Jews of their falſe Righteouſneſs wherein they reſted, telling them that the Gentiles did the like, and that ſo do even Publicans and Sinners; Mat. 5. 46, 47. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? Do not even the Publicans the ſame? And if ye ſalute your Brethren only, what do you more than others? Do not even the Publicans ſo? Luke 6. 32, 33. For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for Sinners alſo love thoſe that love them. And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for Sinners alſo do even the ſame.

And firſt for moral Vertues.

1. Conſider, that even in Beaſts the impreſſion of many of thoſe moral Vertues, thus taken for Grace, are to be found; I ſay, the impreſſion of them: For as in ſome Beaſts we uſe to ſay, there are umbræ rationis, Shadows of Reaſon, as in Apes, &c. Beaſts which have quick fair Eyes; ſo in others there are quædam umbræ tum vitiorum cum virtutum; Shadows as of Vices, ſo of Vertues, are to be ſeen in them: As in Horſes, of Pride and Revenge; and in Spaniels of Vertues, of Love and Kindneſs to their Maſters: And the Ox (ſays God) knows his Owner: So of Diligence too in the Ant, to whom God ſends the Sluggard: So of Faithfulneſs to their Mates, in Doves; of Chaſtity and Modeſty, in Elephants, who will not couple in the ſight of others; of requital of Kindneſſes as in Elephants too. So likewiſe in that Lion who fawned on the Slave who was caſt to him to be devoured, remembring how that Slave had pulled a Thorn out of his Foot formerly in the Wilderneſs, as Gellius reports. Now as God ſends the Sluggard to the Ant, and the unthankful Iſraelites to the Ox, to learn Diligence and Thankfulneſs; ſo I may ſend thoſe that reſt in ſuch moral Vertues, to theſe Beaſts, to teach them not to boaſt of them, or reſt in them. But it will be ſaid, That theſe want Reaſon, and therefore theſe are no Vertues as in them.

Gellius Noctes Att. Lib. 5. cap. 14.

2. Therefore conſider, that in Heathen Men devoid of Grace, all thoſe Vertues were found in as eminent a manner as in thy ſelf: What, ſhould I ſpeak of Socrates, Cato, &c. and the reſt of thoſe Philoſophers, I could bring as large a Catalogue of ſuch, for Examples of moral Vertues of all ſorts, as Paul doth of the Worthies in the old Teſtament, as Patterns of Faith, Heb. 11. but that (as he ſaith there) the time would fail me: Only do but in general conſider what the Apoſtle ſaith of them, Rom. 2. 14. For when the Gentiles which have not the Law, do by Nature the things contained in the Law, theſe having not the Law, are a Law unto themſelves. Chap. 5.

3. Conſider, That in Mens ſinning againſt the Holy Ghoſt, all theſe moral Vertues were eminently found, as in Julian the Apoſtate, who lived (after he had ſo ſinned) as exactly according to the beſt Rules of Morality, as ever any Man did, and was naturally juſt, ſober, temperate, patient, &c. And though he ſinned ſo highly in breaking forth into Revenge againſt Chriſt, yet that his ſinning did not extinguiſh theſe Vertues in him, but he continued zealous againſt Drunkenneſs and Stage-Players, &c. thinking indeed by that his exact Life and Zeal againſt ſuch Abuſes, to have countenanced Heatheniſm, and ſet it up as a Perfection in oppoſition unto Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, by ſhewing that even without Chriſt Men might live unblameably, and therefore to prove, if he could, that there was no need of Chriſt to promote a good Life. But you will ſay, I find I live thus out of Conſcience, and do follow the Guidance of it in theſe Practices.

4. Conſider therefore, that ſo did alſo theſe Heathen: for the Principle from whence (as was mentioned) they did thoſe things of the Law, Paul ſaith, was the Law written in their Hearts; Rom. 2. 15. Which ſhew the Work of the Law written in their Hearts, their Conſcience alſo bearing witneſs, and their Thoughts the mean while accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another. And this is evident alſo in Abimelech, who pleaded to God Integrity of Heart, and God acknowledged it. Now Integrity is a Conformity with ſome Rule, ſo as that Integrity of his was his following the Rule of his Conſcience in the Light thereof: And ſo Paul ſays of himſelf when unregenerate, that what he did, he verily thought he ought to do it, Acts 26. 9. And ſo he did all out of ſuch a conſcientious Reſpect. Yea, but you will ſay, Though they might do things out of Conſcience dictating, yet not out of a Diſpoſition, abominating the Evil they ſhunned, as I do, for I abominate ſuch Courſes.

5. Therefore conſider, that even the Gentiles alſo did avoid many Sins with ſuch a Spirit of Deteſtation againſt them, 1 Cor. 5. 1. That Inceſt, or Fornication, of that Corinthian with his Father's Wife, was ſuch a Crime (Paul ſays) as was not once named among the Gentiles: They loathed and abominated that and ſuch Vices, ſo that they would not ſo much as name them; the Speech and Hear-ſay of ſuch Courſes was odious to them.

But you will ſay, That theſe are Heathens, but I join holy Duties of God's Worſhip to theſe, and I know God, and profeſs him and his Worſhip, &c.

6. So did the Jews, who had a Form of the Law, and made their Boaſt of God; Rom. 2. 17, 18, 19, 20. Behold, thou art called a Jew, and reſteſt in the Law, and makeſt thy boaſt of God; and knoweſt his Will, and approveſt the things that are more excellent, being inſtructed out of the Law, and art confident that thou thy ſelf art a Guide of the Blind, a Light of them which are in Darkneſs, an Inſtructer of the fooliſh, a Teacher of Babes, which haſt the Form of Knowledg and of the Truth in the Law. They had the whole Syſtem of it in their Heads, and not only ſo, but performed Holy Duties. So the Phariſees made Profeſſion of God, and came to the Temple to the Ordinances, and this whilſt they were in force, and owned by God as his publick ſtanding Worſhip: None abounded more than they in ſuch Duties, both publick and private. A Phariſee ('tis ſaid) went up to pray, &c. Luke 18. 10. and yet they, many of them, ſinned againſt the Holy Ghoſt, Luke 20. 19. That young Man which Chriſt ſent away ſo ſorrowful and mournful, ſays, He had kept all the Commandments from his Youth, Matth. 19. 20. Yea, one of the Scribes, Mark 12. 32, 33. (of whom Chriſt yet ſaid, that he had not attained to the Kingdom of God, ver. 34.) went yet further, for he diſcerned that a further thing was required than the outward Performance of all ſuch Duties of God's Worſhip, namely, An inward Love to God with all the Soul, and all a Man's Strength, which ſays he, is more than all whole Burnt-Offerings and Sacrifices; ſo his Speech is, Mark 12. 33.

Book X.

And Chriſt hath ſaid too, Except your Righteouſneſs exceed the Righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees, ye cannot be ſaved, Matth. 5. 20. Ay, but you will ſay, We profeſs Chriſt alſo, but the Phariſees did not profeſs Chriſt, nor believe in him. For Anſwer to which conſider;

1*ſt*. That thoſe Profeſſors whom the Apoſtle James ſpeaks of, were negligent Hearers, and ſuch as ſaid, they had Faith, and that Faith ſuch as was joined with the Practice of many things in the Law; yet ſtill they neglected the main thing of the Law, or ſome Duties of it which they knew, as appears by that Speech, If a Man keep the whole Law, and be guilty in one Point, his Faith profits him not: as alſo by that other in the ſame Epiſtle, He that reſtrains not his Tongue, his Religion is in vain; ſo as they were obedient to the Law in all other things, and were religious alſo, and devout, as thoſe Words imply.

And 2*dly*. Though it be hard to give an Inſtance of civil Chriſtians in thoſe primitive Times, becauſe Perſecution then kept out ſuch as had no further Work upon their Hearts, or Ground of Profeſſion, more than Education; yet now in an eſtabliſhed Church, wherein Religion is commanded by the Laws of the Land, there are and may be many which have no more but Civility added to their Profeſſion of Chriſt. The Name of Infidel now is as odious as that of Chriſtian was in the Primitive Times, and God working the ſame Effects in the Church as out of it, he civilizeth Men therein, as well as among the Heathens, and yet often works no further. Theſe civilized Perſons only add the Profeſſion of Chriſt unto their Civility, becauſe they live in the Church, as the Phariſees did, and ſo profeſſed God and Moſes, yet in oppoſition to Chriſt, as indeed theſe too ſet up an outward Owning of Chriſtianity and Civility, in oppoſition to Chriſt, and the Power of Regeneration by Chriſt, and an outward Form of Religion in oppoſition to the ſpiritual Worſhip of God, as they in Timothy did, who ſet up a Form of Godlineſs, that they might deny the Power of it; 2 Tim. 3. 5. Having a Form of Godlineſs, but denying the Power thereof: from ſuch turn away.

And 3*dly*. Though in the Primitive Times there were no ſuch Inſtances of a meer moral Man's profeſſing Chriſt for the Reaſon aforeſaid; yet we find thoſe, who though they went further than this, and not only abſtained from the Pollution of the World, (though a Work from natural Principles) but eſcaped them through the Knowledg of Chriſt, yet had not true Grace; for they fell away and apoſtatized, 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21, 22. For if after they have eſcaped the Pollutions of the World through the Knowledg of the Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, they are again intangled therein, and overcome; the latter end is worſe with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the Way of Righteouſneſs, than after they have known it, to turn from the holy Commandment delivered unto them. But it is happened unto them according to the true Proverb, The Dog is turned to his own Vomit again; and the Sow that was waſhed, to her wallowing in the Mire.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VI.

What are the Principles from whence all this Vertue and moral Actions in unregenerate Men do proceed. Natural Conſcience, a common Work of the Spirit in Reſtraining-Grace. Natural Wiſdom, a Principle of Modeſty, and the Fear of Shame. Good Education, a common Knowledg of the Principles of Religion by the Word preached, whereby a natural Devotion is ſtirred in Men.

I Come now to the διοτι, viz. to demonſtrate to you thoſe Principles which in corrupt Nature produce all this Righteouſneſs that civil Men build upon; the Diſcovery whereof will diſcover, that all of it falls ſhort of Grace.

1. There is by Nature in Mens Underſtanding and natural Conſcience, which hath many Sparks of moral Light concerning Duties, both towards God and toward Men, raked up in it; Rom. 2. 14, 15. The Gentiles which have not the Law, do by Nature the things contained in the Law, their Conſcience excuſing or accuſing. The Lord ſeeing Man's Nature to be wholly corrupted, hath put a Viceroy of his [viz. Conſcience] into their Hearts, to rule and curb their Spirits; which Conſcience he hath put into the very Heathen. Which Principle (as that Place ſhews) is not only appointed meerly as an Overſeer, or a Witneſs againſt them, to take notice of the Evil of their Actions, but alſo it hath ſome Stroak and Power in Men, to reſtrain and curb them from many Sins, and to make them do many things agreeable to the Law: for it is ſaid, They are a Law unto themſelves; that is, Suppoſe there were no Laws of Men to conſtrain or reſtrain them, yet the Principle of Conſcience would and did make them do many things, and had the Power of a Law over them: and that it might be of force to carry them on thus, it hath, as a Law, Power to diſpenſe both Puniſhments and Rewards; for it doth accuſe them for Evil, and excuſe them for Good, as it is ſaid there; which two Effects of it cauſe Men to do much, as it had ſuch an Influence on the Gentiles; therefore it is ſaid, They did the things of the Law: It was not only a Light to diſcover what to do, but ſo ſtrong a convincing Light, as to cauſe them to do what the Law required in many Particulars.

2. To back this Light, and that the Authority of it may be further obeyed, the Lord Chriſt beſides this, hath a Work upon the Wills of Men, though remaining ſtill corrupt, a Work that is ſuitable to this Light of Conſcience, and which makes them alſo in their Wills and Affections ſomewhat more conformable to the Light of their Conſciences, ſtamping ſuch Impreſſions upon them, as it ſhall become more eaſy for them to do what Conſcience dictates to them, to abſtain from groſs Sins, to be temperate, juſt and ſober. And though indeed the Will be left more to its Corruption than the Underſtanding, yet there are Impreſſions from God upon it: and look as Conſcience, in the Light of it, hath a double Effect; ſo ſuitably hath God upon the Will alſo. As,

1*ſt.* Whereas Conſcience doth check and rein a Man in from many Sins; the Lord comes alſo with a reſtraining Work upon the Wills of Men, and takes off their Hearts from being inclined to many Sins; he bridleth up and tameth the wild and head-ſtrong Luſts of Men, by allaying and driving in their Inclinations to ſome Sins, even as in like manner he did promiſe to do to the Heathens about the Iſraelites Land, Exod. 34. 24. For I will caſt out the Nations before thee, and enlarge thy Borders: neither ſhall any Man deſire thy Land, when thou ſhalt go up to appear before the Lord thy God, thrice in the Year. God promiſeth there, there, that when the People ſhould all go up to Jeruſalem to appear before the Lord thrice in a Year, that then none ſhould deſire their Land. Here was a Work of God's Spirit upon the Hearts of the Nations round about, yea, upon their Wills, whereby he did take away their Deſire at ſuch a time, when all the Males were to go up to Jeruſalem; when otherwiſe there was a fair Opportunity for them to ſeize upon their Land, for they might know the ſet-time of their going up, and ſo take their Advantage, but God undertook to take away the Deſire after it. So that we ſee there is a reſtraining Work upon the Wills of Men, who yet have not Grace, whereby God doth rebate the Strength of their Inclinations to many Sins: ſuch a Work whereby he doth not only work by ſpeaking Inſtruction, as working upon their Reaſon, or by Terrors, &c. and ſo by this work upon their Wills, as he did upon Balaam, and Laban, and Abimelech, warning them by Night: No, that is not all, but he influenceth Men by more real, ſilent, powerful, ſecret Acts upon them, making their Wills liſtleſs unto ſuch an Object, ſo that he reſtrains the Inclinations of corrupt Nature, as when he kept in the Rage of the Fire from hurting of the three Children, Dan. 3. 27. The like Work he wrought in Eſau, when he came againſt Jacob, he turned his Heart to love him. It was not ſuch a Work as was upon Laban, for that to Laban was by a ſpeaking Act, warning him by Night, which Laban was ſenſible of, and therefore ſays, that God appeared to him; but that on Eſau was an undiſcerned Act in the working of it, yet efficaciouſly reſtraining his Wrath againſt Jacob. And although that Impreſſion upon Eſau's Will was but for that one particular Act, and ſo was tranſient, yet what God did to him and thoſe others in theſe particular Caſes, he may do and doth in ſome others for Continuance, by the ſame kind of Working, in a permanent Gift, reſtraining Sin, which Men call a Vertue: Thus Paul calls it the Gift of Continency, 1 Cor. 7. 7. Matth. 19. 11, 12. where Chriſt ſays, there were ſome chaſte who were born ſo. And thus it may ſeem he dealt with Abimelech, not only reſtraining him by his Conſcience, and Acts of Reaſon, but by a ſecret Act and Hand upon his Heart, keeping his Luſt from the breaking forth of it upon Sarah, though taken into his Power and (as it is thought) into his Bed; Gen. 20. 6. I kept thee, ſays God, that is, held in or kept back, as the Word ſignifies, implying the Impetuouſneſs of his Luſt of it ſelf; and I ſuffered thee not; and agreeeable to the Hebrew it is, non dedi, or non tradidi te tibi, that is, I left thee not unto thy ſelf. And this was ſuch a Work as Abimelech diſcerned not till God told him it, that he might acknowledg it. So it is too in Pſal. 76. 10. Surely the Wrath of Man ſhall praiſe thee, the Remainder of Wrath ſhalt thou reſtrain. The Meaning is; Take the Enemies of the Church, ſo much of their Wrath as ſhall make for the Good of the Church and the Glory of God, ſo much will he let out, and ſuffer them to manifeſt and vent, and execute it upon his People, but the Dregs of their Wrath, the Remainder of it, ſo much as will be for the Hurt of his Church, and not make for his Glory; that he will curb and reſtrain, and will not ſuffer the Dregs of it to be broached. Now if he reſtrains ſome Degrees of a Luſt, in regard of the working of it, he can and doth reſtrain it altogether in ſome, and works ſo upon their Wills, that the Abſtinence from ſuch a Luſt ſhall be very eaſy; and this he doth without putting in a new Principle of Grace, but by a common Work of the Spirit upon the Hearts and Wills.

2*dly*. God doth not only cut ſhort their Spirits from deſiring too many Evils, but works in them Deſires to many things morally good, and againſt things morally evil.

1. He touches their Hearts with many Inclinations to what is morally good; there is an Impreſſion made by God's Spirit upon their Wills, which doth incline them to many things morally good, as to Juſtice, Temperance, and Obedience to Superiours, and Piety to Parents, &c. 1 Sam. 10. 26. When God had anointed Saul, one of the ſmalleſt Tribe and Family, to be King over his People, (whereas the Hearts of Men are naturally inclined as much to Rebellion as to any thing elſe, and Men by Nature are impatient to have others rule over them, eſpecially ſuch an one as was raiſed out of ſo mean a Condition from among them) it is ſaid, that there went with him a Band of Men, whoſe Hearts

God

God had touched. The Lord by a common Work of his Spirit did incline their Hearts to be ſubject to Saul, he did put into them an habitual Diſpoſition of Obedience to him. As the Loadſtone toucheth the Knife, and there is a Vertue left behind it; ſo God's Spirit doth touch Mens Hearts, and put into them many moral Diſpoſitions, as of Obedience, &c. So he did touch the Heart of Saul then, when David ſpared his Life in the Cave, he was overcome with Kindneſs, the Text ſays he wept, he had an Ingenuity in him, 1 Sam. 24. 16. By the like reaſon he toucheth Mens Hearts with a diſpoſition of Heroickneſs, as he did Saul's alſo, which is the meaning of that Scripture, 2 Sam. 10. 9. When he was King, he had another Heart, and it was gilded over with Heroical and Kingly Diſpoſitions, which for two Years laſted in publick Aims for the Good of his Country, and often appeared in his following Reign. The like is that put into Children towards their Parents, which the Heathens call'd Pietatem in Parentes. So alſo he gave the Iſraelites Favour in the Egyptians Eyes, (a People who otherwiſe hated them) to lend them their Ear-rings, which they might ſuſpect they would carry away from them; What a Work was this! And alike Work is it, when God makes Men friendly to their Neighbours, &c. So the Barbarians, when Paul and all the Men with him were ſhipwrack'd, they kindled them a Fire, and ſhewed them Kindneſs, as the Text ſays, Acts 28. 2. Chap. 6. Exod. 12. 35, 36.

2. So he ſets their Hearts againſt what is morally evil: This we may ſee in Saul when he was King; there was Nahaſh the Ammonite came, and would have ſubdued the People of Jabeſh-Gilead, and would have this baſe Covenant from them, that he might thruſt out all their right Eyes, [a barbarous Cruelty!] Now Saul being their King, though a wicked Man, yet the Spirit of God came upon him, and his Anger was kindled greatly: God's Spirit wrought in that Affection ſuch a Diſpoſition, whereby he was exceedingly provoked with indignation of ſo inhumane a Fact. There was an Heroickneſs of Spirit fell upon him, whereby he did deteſt ſuch a Fact, and his Spirit boiled within him to revenge it, which was from God's Spirit. So Hazael a Heathen had ſuch Diſpoſitions in him, that he did then deteſt thoſe Cruelties that the Prophet told him of, though they were wrought out afterwards; but he then ſaid, What, is thy Servant a Dog, that he ſhould do this great Wickedneſs? 2 Kings 8. 13. He accounted him that ſhould do ſo a Dog, a Beaſt, not a Man, the baſeſt and vileſt of Men. Yet concerning this let it be added, that this Diſpoſition is rather a looking at ſuch Courſes as contrary to Principles of Humanity, (as his Speech implies) than as contrary to God. Men ſee a Baſeneſs, an Inhumaneneſs in them, which they are conſcious to be in them, and ſo out of heroick Generoſity rather ſcorn them, than hate them as Sins. 1 Sam. 11. 6.

Now if it be ask'd, How theſe can ſtand and be ſymbolical in Man's Nature, who is nothing but full of Love to himſelf? I anſwer, That though it be granted, that this common Work is a winning of ſome Ground (as I may ſo expreſs it) of Self-love, that whereas a Man loves none but himſelf, if corrupt Nature be left to it ſelf; God by ſuch Diſpoſitions elevates corrupt Affections, ſo as Self-love affords to others ſomething of its Love, and takes not all to it ſelf, but lets others have a ſhare in its Affections, Friends and Parents, &c. yet ſo as though it ſuffers others as Sojourners to have ſome room in the Heart, yet Self is King ſtill, and hath Cuſtom out of all. But as good Nature is winning Ground from Self-love towards Men; ſo Grace is depoſing it, and ſubjecting it to God. For till it be depoſed, the Kingdom of Sin ſtands, though theſe Vertues enjoy many Boons and Favours under it. So that we ſee there is a common Work of the Holy Ghoſt upon Mens Wills, ſuitable to the Light of their Conſciences, whereby he doth reſtrain Men from much Evil, and whereby he doth put in them ſome heroick Diſpoſitions to what is morally good, all which fall ſhort of Grace.

Now for God's Ends in this Work; it is firſt, for the Elects ſake; and ſecondly, that the World might ſtand.

1*ſt.* For the Elects ſake it is; and therefore we ſhall find, Gen. 20. 3. that God reſtrained Abimelech, he did put into him an Integrity of Heart, that he did follow his Conſcience; and alſo he reſtrained and kept him from Sarah for

Abra-

Book X.

Abraham's ſake; for that is the reaſon given, Pſal. 105. 14, 15. He ſuffered no Man to do them wrong, yea, he reproved Kings for their ſakes, ſaying, Touch not mine Anointed, &c. It hath reference to that Story of Abimelech; it was for Abraham's ſake, and ſo for the Seed of Abraham's ſake; becauſe if Men were left to the Villany and Wickedneſs of their Nature, they would leave no Man upon the Earth, much more would they all fall upon the Elect, and encompaſs the holy City. For their ſakes therefore, that they may lead a peaceable Life in regard of Honeſty and Godlineſs, God doth put ſuch moral Diſpoſitions in Men. And,

2*dly*. For the World's ſake; for indeed without this the World could not ſtand; for the Wickedneſs of the World would be ſo great, that Men would devour one another. Therefore as God doth give Gifts to rebellious Men in the Church, to build up the Church, or that it may ſtand to be built up; ſo he gives Men that live in the World, Principles and Vertues that may fit them to live in the World, that it may ſtand; and therefore in this relation Thanks are to be given for all Men, as well as Prayers made for them; 1 Tim. 2. 1. I exhort therefore, that firſt of all, Supplications, Prayers, Interceſſions, and giving of Thanks be made for all Men. And yet again, while Men are thus reſpected by one another, and mutually by each other, by reaſon of theſe Impreſſions made upon their corrupt Nature; yet leſt he that made the World, ſhould have no reſpect given to himſelf, nor the World be ſenſible of any Duty they did owe to him, and ſo he ſhould be clean ſhut out of the World; therefore he did not leave himſelf without Witneſs; but they ſhould know there was a God, that even his Enemies might have ſome reſpect to him, acknowledg him, and reverence himſelf, and do ſome Offices of Reſpect to him, as well as one towards another; therefore he hath put ſome Sparks of the Knowledg of a Deity into all Mens Hearts, Rom. 1. 19, 20. And withal, he hath implanted in their Wills and Affections ſome Impreſſions of Fear and Reverence, as appeared in all the Heathens, of whom ſome were naturally devout, as thoſe Women that yet oppoſed Paul; Acts 13. 50. But the Jews ſtirred up the devout and honourable Women, and the chief Men of the City, and raiſed Perſecution againſt Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their Coaſts. They are called devout Perſons; which natural Devotion is a third Principle whereby Self-love doth naturally acknowledg God as King, and hath a motive of doing ſome Homage to him, and to acknowledg it due; yet ſo, as it is but as thoſe Kings, or Free-States, who though they may acknowledg another State their Protector, yet live by their own Laws, and diſpoſe of all by their own Authority, while they thus acknowledg ſome Reſpect to another. And all theſe three Principles of Conſcience, moral Vertue, and Devotion towards God, are internal more or leſs in every Man.

Pſal. 68. 18.

But further; Unto theſe God hath added ſome Aſſiſtants, to ſtrengthen Conſcience in what it dictates, and to help forward the practice of Vertues.

As, 1. Natural Wiſdom, which doth both aſſiſt Conſcience, and help to ſtrengthen theſe moral Diſpoſitions, and aſſiſts againſt many Sins. So Haman, though his Revenge began to boil, and was ready to break forth, and he was exceedingly wrath with Mordecai; yet notwithſtanding he was kept by his Wiſdom from preſent Revenge, for he thought to take a fitter opportunity for it afterwards; Eſther 5. 10. it is ſaid, he refrained himſelf. So Saul, his natural Wiſdom moved him to Moderation, 1 Sam. 10. 27. for though a Band of Men whoſe Hearts God had touched, followed him, yet there was a Company of the Children of Belial, who ſaid, How ſhall this Man ſave us? And they deſpiſed him, and brought him no Preſents; but he held his Peace: That is, Saul winked at this, and did not go about to revenge it, for his natural Wiſdom told him, that it was beſt for him to be ſilent, until he had made his Party good. So as though there was no Conſcience, yet natural Wiſdom makes Men abſtain from many Sins, becauſe it will make for their Credit, and preſervation of their Name amongſt Men, and the like. Fleſhly Wiſdom is a great Principle, by which the World is guided; therefore we ſhall find that when Paul would clear himſelf, that his Converſation was ſincere before God, he ſaith, We have not walked by fleſhly Wiſdom, but we have had our Converſation in the World by the

Grace

Grace of God, 2 Cor. 1. 12. He puts theſe two as contradiſtinct Principles, which guide Men. Some carry themſelves fairly; yet out of fleſhly Wiſdom, which makes them ſubject themſelves to Duties, to conform themſelves to Religion; which makes them juſt, ſober and temperate: but there was another Principle beyond this in Paul; We have had our Converſation not with fleſhly Wiſdom. Men ſee it is their wiſeſt and beſt way, both for their own Safety, and the Preſervation of the World, to be ſober, &c. For all the Laws of the Second Table are made eſpecially for the Good of Men in their ſeveral Relations here in this World, and this makes Men generally ſubject themſelves unto them.

2. The ſecond Aſſiſtance by which natural Conſcience is helped, is Modeſty, whereby Men are aſhamed to do Evil; this reſtrains as well as Conſcience and Wiſdom: God hath left Shame to accompany the Conſciouſneſs of the Baſeneſs of evil Courſes; as in Hazael, who bluſhed when the Prophet looked on him, 2 Kings 8. 11. It is a ſhame, ſays the Apoſtle, Epheſ. 5. 12. to ſpeak of that which is done of them in ſecret. Hence ſometimes the Gentiles did not ſo much as name ſuch vile Actions. This Principle is yet left, as we ſee in Adam and Eve when fallen, who were aſham'd, Gen. 3. This Thamar urged to Amnon, Thou ſhalt be a Fool in Iſrael; and I, whither ſhall my Shame go? 2 Sam. 13. 12, 13. Modeſty and fear of Shame is Vertue's keeper, and overlooks corrupt Nature, and keeps Men from being notoriouſly bad.

3. Education being added to all theſe, is an help to Civility, and to diſpoſe Men to Religion: For all theſe former Principles Men have by Nature, and out of the Church; and if ſo, we muſt not think God is leſs liberal in beſtowing all theſe upon them who live in the Church, where himſelf is to be worſhipped, and where his Elect live; he giving theſe Gifts to theſe Ends, that he might be acknowledged, and they live peaceable Lives. And Men having been brought up in ſuch Places where Religion is profeſs'd, where ſuch Sins are puniſhed; and ſeeing the daily Example of thoſe amongſt whom they live, to be againſt the practice of ſuch Sins, this doth mould many to the outward practice of Godlineſs. Example hath a great ſtroke and ſway amongſt Men: Therefore ſaith Solomon, Prov. 2. 26. Train up a Child in the Way he ſhould go, and when he is old he will not depart from it. What made Paul a Phariſee ſo ſtrict? He was brought up at the Feet of Gamaliel, a Phariſee of the Phariſees; this help'd him exceedingly. Education hath a great ſtroke, to carry us to Evil or Good.

(1.) To Evil. An Example of this we have in Rehoboam; What made him ſo wickedly to caſt off the Counſel of the old Men? It is ſaid, 1 Kings 12. 8. he conſulted with thoſe that were grown up with him: Thoſe that he lived withal, and converſed with, had a great deal of Authority over him, and therefore he took their Counſel.

(2.) To Good. So in good Families, the power of Education works much upon Men: 2 Kings 12. 2. there it is ſaid, That Jehoaſh did that which was right in the ſight of the Lord, all the Days that Jehoiada inſtructed him. He having brought him up from eight Years old, moulded him to a good Conformity; ſo that he did that which was right in the ſight of the Lord, all the while that Jehoiada lived: But afterwards, as it was the force of Company, and Example, and Education, that carried him on; ſo when the Courtiers came and bowed to him, and flattered him, he was carried away with that Stream to Idolatry. This good Education therefore being added to Light of Conſcience, and thoſe Impreſſions that God makes upon Mens Wills, and unto natural Wiſdom and Modeſty, doth prevail with Men to keep them from groſs Sins, and to carry them on to holy Duties.

4. The Light of the Word being added to all this, muſt needs work more upon the mere natural Light in Men; for they by living in the Church, have the Light of the Word added to the Light of Conſcience and moral Vertues. This muſt have a greater Power upon Men; and though it doth not prevail to convert, yet at leaſt they ſhall ſmell of it. For when Men ſhall find in the Word of God the ſame things commanded and forbidden, that natural Conſcience doth forbid or command, natural Conſcience comes to have more Strength, and is the more back'd; for the Word gives it a new and double Commiſſion, and furniſheth it with diſtincter and greater Threatnings of Hell, and Promiſes of Heaven, to perſwade Men to Obedience. It furniſheth Conſcience with a new Commiſſion, and enlargeth it; for it not only ſays the ſame to Men that Conſcience ſaid, but inlightneth it further with many Duties, which when known, agree to the Principles of Conſcience; or, as Concluſions further drawn out, do the Principles of Reaſon. So as the Phariſees had a Form of Knowledg of the Law; and anſwerably to that Form of Knowledg, the Vertues in their Wills are enlarged much alſo, and they come to have a Form of Godlineſs. And that this Light of the Word, or living where the Ordinances are adminiſtred, do ſtrengthen and help moral Vertues, appears by the Inſtance of the Kings of Iſrael. Why were the Kings of Iſrael ſaid to be merciful above all the Kings of the Nations? becauſe they had the Ordinances: Therefore Ahab, though wicked, yet was a merciful Man, becauſe he was a King of Iſrael.

2 Tim. 3.

5. Some particular Ingredients in Education, as the Laws of Men, (which are part of Education) do mightily help forward to civilize Men. The Reſpect to Superiours doth keep Men in awe. So Eſau was reſtrained, for he would have kill'd his Brother, but he did put it off till the Days of his Father's Death, and till Mourning for him was paſt: What is the reaſon he did it not then preſently? The Reſpect to his Father whilſt alive, reſtrained him. Accordingly the Apoſtle ſays, Rom. 13. 4. That the Magiſtrate bears not the Sword in vain, but is a Terrour to thoſe that do ill. So that the Laws of Men being added to the Word, help exceedingly to civilize Men, and are Remedies to corrupt Nature.

6. And in the laſt Place; By living thus in the Church, both Aſſent is wrought to the Truths delivered in the Word, and alſo natural Devotion is ſtirred up towards the true God in the Duties of his own Worſhip.

1*ſt*. To aſſent to the Principles of Religion, is upon that Ground wrought, ſo as to profeſs them. Thus as they in John 4. 42. believed in Chriſt at the relation of the Woman; ſo do Men profeſs Religion by a humane Faith. That which the Papiſts ſay of believing as the Church believes, might be brought up much upon the Experience of this, that many, and the moſt, have no further ground of their Faith, than what this amounts to. Thus when Mordecai was exalted, many of the Nation became Jews alſo, and profeſſed the ſame Religion, Eſther 8. 17. So there went too a mixt Multitude out of Egypt, who afterwards fell off and murmured. And thus we ſee that Mens Opinions in all the Churches, are faſhioned by the received Profeſſion among them; as Lutheraniſm among Lutherans; and Popery, where and when Men are educated in it, as we ſee in private Families amongſt us.

2*dly*. And thus is natural Devotion ſtirred up towards the true God, and in his Worſhip: for as there is natural Conſcience in Men, ſo there is natural Devotion in them. The Heathens had Stamps and Impreſſions of the Power of God upon their Hearts; for it is ſaid, That which may be known of God, is manifeſt in them, Rom. 1. 19. There was and is a Fear and Reverence of a God in the Heathen. Now if Men live in the Church where the true God is known, that natural Devotion begins to be ſtirred and guided to the true Deity and Worſhip; yet ſo, as it remains, for the Principle it ſelf, but mere Nature only directed to the right Object, as being the God of the Place and Nation they live in. A pertinent Inſtance to this purpoſe, is 2 Kings 17. 24 to 41. There the Heathens being removed by the King of Aſſyria, from the Cities of the Medes to the Land of Iſrael, it is ſaid, At the firſt when they dwelt there, they feared not the Lord, therefore he ſent Lions amongſt them, which ſlew ſome of them: upon this they ſend to the King of Aſſyria, to ſend them ſome of the Prieſts that might teach them the Manner of the God of the Land; and the Prieſts teaching them, they began to fear the Lord, ver. 41. Thus it is with Men living in the Church, they begin to fear the God of the Place, and their Devotion is ſtirred up to ſerve the true God, the God of the Nation and Church, and ſo to profeſs Chriſt, yet upon no other ground, than if they lived in Turkey, they would profeſs Mahometaniſm. It is natural to Men to profeſs the God and Religion of the Country in which they are; if they lived under Popery, they would profeſs the ſame: and Men living where the true Fear of God is profeſſed, the ſame natural Devotion is ſtirred up towards the true God, but upon no other Ground ſave natural Principles. Thus Paul, Acts 22. 3. was zealous towards God: And ſo thoſe Women, who yet oppoſed Paul, Acts 13.50. are called devout Women. I yield indeed it is a Work of the Spirit, to cauſe Men to aſſent that Jeſus is the Lord, as 1 Cor. 12. 3. Wherefore I give you to underſtand, that no Man ſpeaking by the Spirit of God, calleth Jeſus accurſed: and that no Man can ſay that Jeſus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghoſt. But this is yet a common Work, and reckoned there among thoſe common Gifts of Healing, &c. ſuch Gifts as are given to the Rebellious alſo, Pſal. 68. 18. It was from Education that Cain, though wicked, yet went out and ſacrificed as well as Abel; there was a fear of God upon his Heart that carried him to this Duty.

Chap. 7.

CHAP. VII.

That the moral Righteouſneſs of unregenerate Men proceeds from the forementioned Principles, evinc'd; becauſe they are moſt ſtrict about their Duty to their Neighbour, but neglect what they owe unto God. That they abſtain from ſuch Sins, to which by their natural Diſpoſition they are not inclined; which it is eaſy for them to do, whilſt they indulge themſelves in other Sins. That they are more ſtrict againſt thoſe Sins which are forbidden and puniſhed by humane Laws, and more zealous for thoſe Duties which they enjoin.

NOW let us make Application of this, and examine whether the Actions of civil Men be not from theſe Principles; and that will appear, becauſe they go no further than theſe may work, than the Force of this will carry them; and the Streams not going higher than the Fountain, it may be diſcerned that the Fountain is but from Nature.

1. It appears that that Civility that is in moſt Men, ariſeth but from natural Conſcience, becauſe the chief Things they make moſt conſcience of, are often but Duties of the ſecond Table, and not of the firſt: The Reaſon is, becauſe the chief Stamps left in natural Conſcience, are Duties of the ſecond Table, whenas the Duties of the firſt were blurr'd and dimm'd by the Fall. Though the Heathens had ſome Devotion, yet the main Impreſſion of the Law was ſeen in the Duties of the ſecond Table, as Honeſty towards themſelves and other Men, Juſtice in dealing; and theſe are the freſheſt Stamps which are left. I may compare Civility to an old ruinous Monaſtery, where oftentimes the Hall and the Kitchin ſtand fair, but the Chappel is ruinated, only here and there you may perceive a Pillar or ſome Ruins of it: So in the Caſtle of Civility, that Part which concerns Duties towards Men, ſtands fair, Men are fairly ſober, loving and ingenuous; but that Part that concerns Duties towards God, is ruinous; here and there may be found an old Remainder, an old piece of a Wall, a piece of a Duty, ſomething they will do; but the main Duties, the great Things of the Law, (which if Grace had enlightned thy Conſcience, thou wouldſt make moſt conſcience of) as private Prayer, ſanctifying the Sabbath, &c. theſe civil Men regard not. And becauſe they have the chiefeſt Reſpect to good Manners, and a fair Behaviour among Men, and to live like good Citizens of the Commonwealth, therefore they have the Name of Civil Men.

2. For the Vertues thou haſt, that they proceed from reſtraining Grace, and a common Work of the Spirit, appears by this.

(1.) That thou wanteſt the chiefeſt Vertues and Graces of the Goſpel. Tho Men be temperate, juſt, &c. yet they know not how to deny themſelves, to be broken in Spirit for offending God, to be humbled under their natural Condition, to walk in a ſenſe of their Miſery, which are ſome of the chiefeſt Graces of the Goſpel. Civil Men know not what belongs to theſe Goſpel-Vertues: they want that Vertue alſo, to love their Enemies, which Chriſt preſcribes, Mat. 5. 44. But I ſay unto you, Love your Enemies, bleſs them that curſe you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which deſpitefully uſe you, and perſecute you. Civil Men want ſuch Evangelical Vertues as theſe: And as one ſaith of Humility, that it is not to be found in all Ariſtotle's Ethicks; ſo Zeal towards God, and ſuch Graces as theſe, cannot be found in civil Men; whereas, if they had their Graces from Chriſt, theſe would be moſt abundant in them.

(2.) All thoſe Vertues grow in Men alone ſpontaneouſly, which evidenceth that they proceed from Nature. The Earth brings forth Dazies alone of it ſelf; but if you would have Herbs come up, there muſt be a Seed ſown: So theſe good Diſpoſitions of Meekneſs and honeſt Dealing, &c. you will find that you had them from your Youth, as the young Man in Mat. 19. 20. who could ſay, All theſe have I kept from my Youth: But a Man that hath Graces from Chriſt, ſhall find a Seed ſown in his Heart, and the Work of Converſion wrought by the Word.

(3.) Theſe Vertues grow not up to an Increaſe, which evidenceth they are not Grace, for that is of a growing Nature; but the moral Man is juſt now no more than he was twenty Years ago: but the Graces of the Spirit grow; a Man grows more in Zeal and Love towards God: All Graces coming from Chriſt, are of a growing Nature, whilſt the other are as Limbs in dead Men: as dead Members grow not, or as the Parts of a Picture grow not; ſo their Vertues do not grow: which argues that they come not from Chriſt by the Work of Sanctification, but from a common Work of the Spirit.

(4.) It appears by this, that all their Goodneſs is but from Nature, becauſe all that Abſtinence from Sin and vicious Practices, with which they content themſelves, is only ſuch as they can perform with Eaſe, and what Nature inclines them unto, or moral Vertues facilitate to them; otherwiſe ſuch Sins as are diſcovered to be as great Sins as thoſe they make Conſcience of (if dear to them) they do not indeavour to abſtain from; and thoſe Duties which are above the Sphere of Nature, they inure not themſelves to, though diſcovered to be as neceſſary as any other: Thus they pick and chuſe in the Ways of God, and offer Sacrifices of what coſts them nothing. They ſacrifice the lean Sins, not the fat; they only pair their Nails, but cut not off their right Hands; ſhave the Hair upon their Eye-lids, but pull not out their Eyes. What comes alone and eaſily, they will practiſe, as lazy Apprentices in a Trade; but what is difficult and out of the common Road, they ſet not their Hands unto. Their Goodneſs therefore is not univerſal, as Grace is.

3. That all this moral Goodneſs proceeds moſt from natural Wiſdom, appears by this, that the Conſideration of fleſhly Wiſdom guides them in their Ways, and orders them. The Good they do is fed and nouriſhed with Motives drawn from the World and worldly Wiſdom, and not ſuch as are taken out of the Word; and upon thoſe they exhort their Children to good Courſes, if at any time they give good Counſel.

4. That they have that which is in them by Education and Modeſty, &c. appears;

1*ſt.* Becauſe as to Sins; what Sins the Law is moſt againſt, thoſe they are moſt againſt, and they eſtimate Sins as they are puniſhed by the Judges, as Job ſpeaks, chap. 31. 11. but for other Sins, as breaking the Sabbath, petty Oaths, and the like, they ſlight and count them nothing, though the Law of God forbids them, if the Laws of Men be remiſs in them. This argues that they

they have their Religion but from the Laws of Men, becauſe they eſtimate Sins according as the Law eſtimates them. Chap. 7.

2*dly*. The ſame is evident as to their religious Duties, for they are caſt into ſuch a Mould and Pitch for the Practice of them, as the Laws of Men caſt them into: So much Religion as the Law requires, ſo much they profeſs, and no more. They perform publick Duties, as they are Members of a Congregation; but take them in a private perſonal walking with God, thoſe things which the Law of God requires, and not Men, they make no Conſcience of, as meditating on the Law Day and Night, examining their Hearts, &c.

3*dly*. As for their Aſſent to the Principles of Religion, they aſſent to all the Articles of Faith, and that all Men are corrupt by Nature, and that they muſt be juſtified by Faith; but it appears they have it from Education, becauſe they have not experimentally found the Truth of them in their own Hearts. That a Man's Nature is ſo vile, they believe it in groſs, and in the Notion; but to have a Work upon their Hearts, to ſee in themſelves what the Word ſaith of corrupt Nature, ſo as to be humbled by it, this Civil Men want and never ſee, which Godly Men do. So who in all thoſe great Points of Original Sin, Emptineſs of all Righteouſneſs, and Juſtification by Faith, ſee all theſe things in their own Hearts: They do not believe theſe only in general, but ſee all in the Particulars of them, and have fetch'd the Experience of them out of the Fire, as Luther ſaid of himſelf, that he thus drew out the Doctrine of Juſtification by Faith. It is ſaid by Chriſt, John 7. 25. He that doth the Will of my Father, ſhall know the Truth. A Man that lives in the Church, and is truly converted to God, knows all the Truths that the Church profeſſeth, by doing of them; he doth not take them up in groſs as civil Men do, but he finds them experimentally in his own Heart; he knows them by doing, as Chriſt ſaith of regenerate Men, John 3. 11. We ſpeak the things that we have heard, and teſtify the things that we have ſeen. Godly Men learn over all the Principles of Religion anew by their own Experience; and this civil Men want, and therefore their Aſſent to the Principles of Religion is but humane, and ſuch as they would have given to Mahometaniſm and Popery, if they had been brought up in it.

5. And laſtly; That their Devotion which they have in holy Performances, is but natural, appears by this, that all the Duties they perform, do not any way quicken or build up their Hearts in Grace. If by all the Ordinances they come to, their Souls do not thrive; if they go away as they came, and have no Communion with God, it ſhews all is but natural Devotion, becauſe their Hearts are not eſtabliſhed with Grace. That which the Apoſtle ſays of the Doctrines of Men, may be ſaid of the performance of Duties by theſe Men; Heb. 13. 9. It is a good thing to have the Heart eſtabliſhed with Grace, and not with Meats, which do not profit them that are exerciſed in them. Theſe Men do not find their Hearts inflamed with Love towards God; they have indeed been converſant in Duties long, yet they have not found any Communion with God in them, their Hearts have not been eſtabliſhed and built up in Grace; they are like a dead Body, that hath much Earth put to it, and yet grows not; ſo nor do they grow by their Performances, they are but bodily Exerciſes to them. This difference of their Performances from that which is truly gracious, Paul expreſſeth, Rom. 7. 6. We do not ſerve God in the oldneſs of the Letter, but in newneſs of Spirit. He compares his former State, and the Performances thereof, with that which he was now in, and with his preſent Performances; then he ſerved God only in the oldneſs of the Letter, as perhaps when he came to publick Exerciſes, he was attentive to the Letter, but there was not a newneſs of Spirit to accompany the Duties. So civil Men ſerve God in the oldneſs of the Letter; and their Underſtandings go along with our Sermons and Prayers, but without a newneſs of the Spirit. While Men ſerve God thus, it is nothing elſe but a mere outward conformity, by reaſon of the Duties that are performed in the Places where they live; and this being the State of many Men living in the Church, the chiefeſt thing they rely upon, is civil Righteouſneſs; therefore they are called civil Men, for Denominatio eſt à majore.

CHAP. VIII.

That theſe moral Actions want the Eſſentials of Goodneſs. That they are defective in the manner of their Performance, and not directed to their right End. That they alſo are done without Faith in Chriſt.

HAving thus ſpoken to the total Model and Compaſs of their Eſtates in general, we will now ſingle out each ſeveral Condition apart, and hear and anſwer the Pleas which they make for themſelves.

The firſt thing that blinds them, and preſerves them in a good opinion of their Eſtates, is the Goodneſs that ſeems to be in many of their Actions: for they hear out of the Word, that unregenerate Men in the Eſtate of Nature, are ſaid to do no good, to be altogether unprofitable, *Rom.*3.11,12. and that an evil Tree cannot bring forth good Fruit, no more than Thorns a Bunch of Grapes; or the Thiſtles, Figs: and that every Thought and Imagination is evil, and only evil continually. Now with me (thinks ſuch a Man) I find it is not ſo; for I do Good, and much Good, Good to the Poor, I give Alms twice a Week; Good to my Family, I provide for them; Good to the Commonwealth, by diligence in my Calling; and I perform many Duties of Religion, that do glorify God: Will any Man ſay, that ſuch Actions as theſe are Sins; or, that I am altogether unprofitable; and that every Imagination in me is continually and only evil? my Actions teſtify the contrary. And can I imagine but that God will accept and regard what Good I do, and conſider it, who accepts the meaneſt Services? And here indeed they ſtick. So the Phariſees did, they could not ſee but what they did was good, and ſo juſtified themſelves: and therefore it is to them Chriſt ſpake thoſe Speeches, Luke 6.44. That an evil Tree could not bring forth good Fruit. And Mat. 12.34. How can you, being evil, ſpeak good things? He ſpeaks in oppoſition to their thought of themſelves. This roſe in Cain's Stomach, he brought a Sacrifice to God as well as Abel, Gen. 4.3,4. and was as forward to do it as he; and it was a Sacrifice for the matter of it, as good as Abel's; for the firſt Fruits of the Earth were commanded to be offered, as well as the Firſtlings of the Flock; and he ſaw no reaſon but that his Sacrifice ſhould be accepted as well as Abel's, and his Countenance fell when he ſaw it rejected. Now what it was that made him think much, you may perceive by God's reaſoning with Cain, ver. 7. If thou do well, ſhalt thou not be accepted? Cain thought that he had done as well for his part, as Abel for his; and God ſpeaks unto that ſecret Reaſoning of his, and tells him, the Fault lay in his Sacrifice as it came from him, that it was not good; for if it had been ſuch, he would have accepted it; If thou doſt well, ſhalt thou not be accepted? So they at the latter Day, not only before Man's Tribunal, but Chriſt's, ſeem to argue, and plead what Good they had done, as remaining, as might ſeem; and that there was ſome Good in them, which Chriſt might accept. And that they thus ſpeak then, argues, that this is the great thing they ſtick at for their Eſtates, which they have moſt ſatisfaction in, Mat. 7.22,23. And the reaſon why Men are not wholly driven out of themſelves, though they cannot deny themſelves to be guilty of great and groſs Sins, is becauſe that yet they cannot ſee but that many things they do are good, which boulſters them out againſt the other: but when they come to ſee not only their evil Ways, but alſo their Doings, which are not good; and that thoſe Doings which they thought to have been good, are indeed void of that Goodneſs which they imagined in them, then it is, and not before, they loath themſelves, Ezek. 6.9.

For Anſwer and Diſcovery of this falſe Goodneſs theſe Men imagine in themſelves

Chap. 8.

1. If we find in many of them the quantity of this Goodneſs, of which they boaſt, we ſhall yet find there is not ſo much to boaſt of; for uſually the beſt part of Civility lies moſt in Negatives; as that I am no Adulterer, no Drunkard, as that Phariſee ſaid, &c. but there is little affirmative Goodneſs. Whereas Grace is an active thing, makes a Man zealous of good Works, Tit. 2. 14. Who gave himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, and purify unto himſelf a peculiar People, zealous of good Works. Grace works as ſtrongly in carrying on to Good, as in reſtraining from Evil; for Vivification and Mortification are of equal Extent: and God will judg thee by thy Works, not by thy Abſtinence from Evil; Ceaſe to do evil, learn to do well, Iſa. 1. 16, 17. otherwiſe thou keepeſt the Commandments as Beaſts keep the Sabbath, wherein thou art not only to reſt and abſtain from Labour, ſo the Beaſts do, but thou muſt keep it holy. A Man is truly accounted covetous, though he abſtain from unjuſt Practices, if he have his Riches ſhut up, and he doth not lay them out in good Works to himſelf, and the Church, and his Family. And in like manner he is truly wicked, who though he abſtains from Evil, yet is not zealous of holy Duties. Two Negatives make an Affirmative in Grammar, but ten thouſand will not make one in Divinity.

But 2. We will indeavour (through God's Aſſiſtance) to convince ſuch Men, that even thoſe few Actions which in their own Eyes and others ſeem ſo godly and glorious, are for the kind of them corrupt and abominable, and that in Deed and in Truth they do no Good, no none in any thing that ever they did. Their Actions are not only imperfectly good, and in part tainted with Sin (as a regenerate Man's Actions are, being as a good Apple that hath ſome Specks of Rottenneſs in it, yet that being cut out, the Apple is pleaſant, and hath a good Reliſh) but as they come from them, they have no true Goodneſs in them; are not as kindly Apples a little corrupted, but as degenerate Crabs, as wild Grapes, as the Scripture's Expreſſion is, which are no way acceptable to God, or are for his Palate. It is true, that if thou were't to be judged by Man's Day, many things which thou doſt, would paſs for currant, and they could not but approve thee and reward thee for them: For what thou doſt is good in the Appearance and out-ſide of it, and alſo good and profitable to Men, and do applaud thee; ſo Rom. 13. 3, 4. Mens Works are called good in a civil Reſpect, when they are outwardly ſo; Do that which is good, though but externally ſo, and thou ſhalt have Praiſe of Magiſtrates and Rulers, ſays he, who are not a Terror to good Works, but to the Evil. He calls them good Works, when for Subſtance they are ſuch, and though they have by-ends, the Magiſtrate meddleth not with them; but he that judgeth thee is the Lord, and God ſees not as Man ſees, 1 Sam. 16. 7. for Man doth not nor can look any further than the outward Appearance, but the Lord looks on the Heart. The Phariſees, becauſe Men thought and ſpake well of them, (who ſaw no more but their outward Actions) therefore they out of the Flattery of their Hearts, thought well of themſelves alſo; ſo ſays Chriſt, Luke 16. 15. And he ſaid unto them, Ye are they which juſtify your ſelves before Men; but God knoweth your Hearts; for that which is highly eſteemed amongſt Men, is abominable in the Sight of God. You juſtify your ſelves before Men (ſays he) and they had Goodneſs enough to challenge Man's Judgment; but God knows your Hearts, whence all the Good you do proceeds; and conſider (ſays he) that that which is in high Eſteem with Men, is often an Abomination to God; and ſo ſays Chriſt are all your good Works you boaſt of. But you will ſay, It is not only becauſe Men approve what I do as good, but my own Conſcience alſo, which is God's Witneſs, and which knoweth the Heart and things of a Man, tells me ſo, and excuſeth me.

Therefore conſider, 2*dly*, That many of thy Actions may be good in the Eyes of thine own Conſcience, when yet they are abominable before God. The Heathens Conſciences did excuſe them, Rom. 2. 14. For when the Gentiles which have not the Law, do by Nature the things contained in the Law, theſe having not the Law, are a Law unto themſelves. Had they had no other Jury, they had been acquitted in many Particulars. Titus the Emperor when he died, flung open the Curtains when he was to die, (when Conſcience uſeth to be moſt awake) awake) and complained, that he had not deſerved to die; ſo fair and good were his Actions in his own Eyes. But God is greater than thy Conſcience, and thy Actions may be good in thine own Eyes, when abominable in his. There is a Generation, (Prov. 30. 12.) that are pure in their own Eyes, who are not yet waſhed from their Filthineſs; nay, Conſcience it ſelf in thee, is defiled, (*Tit.*1.15.) and blind. But thou wilt ſay, my Conſcience looks into the Law which I muſt be judged by, and finds my Actions agreeable to the Law in many things, and are they not good then?

Suetonius in vitâ Titi Veſpaſ. c. 10.

Book X.

Therefore conſider, 3*dly*, That there are two Parts of the Law, inward and outward, the Letter and the Spirit: Whereof the one requires the Precepts to be done, the other requires a right manner of doing them. This we find, Deut. 6. 25. This is your Righteouſneſs, if you obſerve all theſe Commandments, as he hath commanded us. Mark it, not only to do the things commanded, but to do them as he hath commanded you; not only to hear, but to heed, ſays Chriſt, how you hear; not only to give, but to give in Simplicity; if to ſhew Mercy, to do it with chearfulneſs, Rom. 12. 8. So Servants are to obey their Maſters with good will, as to the Lord, Eph. 6. 6, 7. And Miniſters are to feed the Flock not for filthy Lucre, but of a ready Mind, 1 Pet. 5. 2.

Now whilſt thou regardeſt not the manner of doing what the Law requires, as well as the thing it ſelf the Law requires, thou leaveſt out the Soul of that Goodneſs which ſhould inſpire the Action, and make it truly good. The Gentiles are ſaid, Rom. 2. 14. only to do the things of the Law, τὰ τοῦ νόμου, not the Law it ſelf. But the Law is then ſaid to be fulfilled, 1 Tim.1.15. when love out of a pure Heart, a good Conſcience, and Faith unfeigned, can run to it, otherwiſe the work is but a dead work, from which the Conſcience muſt be purged as defiling it, Heb. 9. 14. as dead Carcaſſes did the Jews. There is the Corps of Goodneſs in ſuch an Action, but the Soul is wanting; there is bodily Exerciſe, but the Power is wanting. But to give a more direct Conviction that all their good Works God reckons Sins; this appeareth from Iſa. 66. 3. He that killeth an Ox, is as if he ſlew a Man: he that ſacrificeth a Lamb, as if he cut off a Dog's Neck: he that offereth an Oblation, as if he offered Swines blood: he that burneth Incenſe, as if he bleſſed an Idol: yea, they have choſen their own ways, and their Soul delighteth in their Abominations. Where he parallels their Sacrifices to the cutting of a Dog's Neck, or the killing of a Man.

But you will ſay, How can this be? ſeeing the things we perform, are good for the Subſtance of them, how came they to be Sin? I anſwer, tho they be good, yet they are turned into Sin, and become Sin as coming from ſuch Perſons. Thus David ſpeaks, Pſal. 109. 7. Let his Prayer become Sin; or, as the Apoſtle ſays in another caſe, James 4.17. To them it is Sin. If you ask how that comes to paſs? I anſwer, Firſt in general, they receive both an external Defilement from the eſtate of the Perſon; And Secondly, an internal from the corruption of the Soul, they come as proceeding from Hearts corrupted; both theſe are intimated, Titus 1.15. To the defiled and unbelievers all things are defiled; there is noted out, 1. That their ſtate doth defile all; and, 2. That the Pollution of their Minds alſo, whence all their Actions proceed, do infect them; for it is added, Their Minds and Conſciences are defiled. They receive an external Defilement from the eſtate their Perſons ſtand in, which being an eſtate of Wrath and Enmity, Eph. 2. 2. in regard thereof their Perſons are abominable, and therefore their Works: for as Abel's Perſon was firſt accepted, then his Sacrifices, Heb. 11. 4. ſo our Perſons muſt be accepted, before our Works come to be accepted. Natural Men fall a doing, and think their Works ſhould bring them into favour, but that will never be till they get into Chriſt by believing, and till by this the State of the Perſon is altered. If a Traitor is condemned, all he doth is void in Law; as whether he ſeal a Covenant, make a Will, take an Oath, or give in a Teſtimony, it is all invalid, for his Perſon is not good in Law. Now they that believe, not are condemned already, ſays Chriſt, John 3. 18. And indeed ſuch being Enemies to God, their Gifts are no Gifts, δῶρα ἔχθρων ἄδωρα. They ſay of ſome precious Stones, that being put into a dead Man's Mouth, they loſe their Virtue; ſo all the Prayers of an unregenerate Man, though in themſelves good, yet in his Mouth become Sins; and to the

ſame purpoſe Solomon ſays, Prov. 21. 4. The plowing of the wicked is Sin. Neither have they only an extrinſical adjacent relative Defilement from the Perſons and their State, and their ſinful other Courſes, who perform them; but there is alſo an intrinſical inherent Defilement in the Works themſelves, as they come from them, in regard of the Principles themſelves whence they flow, and which are the root of them. Thus in Tit. 1. 15. All things are not ſaid only to be defiled to them, becauſe their Perſons are defiled, and their ſtate a ſtate of Unbelief, that they are defiled and Unbelievers, but alſo becauſe the very beſt Principles whence theſe Works ſhould proceed, even their Minds, and the higheſt and nobleſt acts of Reaſon, and their Conſciences, which retain the pureſt and nobleſt Principles moving Men to good Works, all theſe are defiled and corrupted, becauſe the Nature of Man, whence they proceed, is not yet purified and renewed by Grace and Holineſs. For all the Vertues they have do but gild and hide ſome Corruption, they do not change and alter their Natures. Now unleſs the Heart be purified, wherein all our Thoughts, and Projects, and Ends, and Purpoſes, and Motions (whence outward Acts do flow) are moulded, unleſs this be purified, all that proceedeth thence, muſt needs want all true Goodneſs; for the Effect cannot be better than the Cauſe, nor the Fruit better than the Root. As Chriſt ſays, Mat. 7. 16, 17. Do men gather Grapes of Thorns, or Figs of Thiſtles? A corrupt Tree cannot bring forth good Fruit, no not one; not only, not ordinarily, or not many, but not one. For he argues from Nature, as a Thorn cannot bring forth one Grape, but all that grows out of it are Briars and Prickles, unprofitable things, and fit to be burnt; ſo nor can corrupt Nature bring forth any Good unto God. And he inſtanceth in Words, Mat. 12. 34. How can ye being evil, ſpeak good things? Why, there is nothing more eaſy than to ſpeak well; to think well, or to do well, is ſomething difficult. Well, but Chriſt ſays, that they being evil, know not how to ſpeak a good Word. Yet the Phariſees were often ſpeaking godlily (as Chriſt ſays, do as they ſay) but though the Words are good for the matter of them, yet their Speeches, as they are theirs, are never good, for themſelves are evil; they may ſay good Things, but they cannot ſpeak good Things. Every bite of a Serpent is poiſonous, becauſe his Nature is envenomed, not only when he bites to hurt, but he poiſons the very Meat he takes. Now the poiſon of Aſps is under wicked Mens Tongues, Rom. 3. 13. And though the Words they take into their Mouths may be good, as Pſal. 50. 16. Why takeſt thou my Words into thy Mouth? Yet that Poiſon in their Hearts and under their Tongues infects them, as they are theirs, and to them they become poiſoned and ſinful. For as Job ſays, chap. 14. 4. Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one. So the Apoſtle ſpeaks too, Rom. 8. 8. he that is in the Fleſh, cannot pleaſe God; as not his Perſon, ſo none of his Actions, though Vertues morally good, and Sparks of Light may be added to that Fleſh and Corruption that is in him, to abate the Venom in the working of it, yet becauſe the Man himſelf is in that Fleſh, ſo that he is overcome with it, and it is the main predominate Principle in every Action, therefore they all are poiſoned by it.

Chap. 8.

But ſuppoſe them without this poſitive Defilement, yet theſe thy beſt Actions in a privative Relation are Sins; though coming from Vertues and Conſcience, yet they are Sins, becauſe thoſe good Principles which muſt concur to make an Action good, are wanting in them. For Sin being a Privation, the very want of thoſe good Principles that ſhould have influence into the Actions, leaves them ſinful. For there is no Medium between evil Actions and good, as not between the Eſtate of Nature and Grace: Therefore ſays Solomon, The Prayer of the Wicked is abominable, Prov. 21. 27. much more when he offers it with an evil Mind; tho he ſhould put no bad end in, yet it would be abominable, becauſe his Mind wants thoſe good Principles which ſhould make good the Prayer. Now what ſays Paul? 1 Tim. 1. 15. Love is the fulfilling of the Law, out of a pure Heart, and of a good Conſcience, and Faith unfeigned; all theſe muſt joyn to make up an Action good.

1. If thou wanteſt Love to God, and aiming at his Glory as the chiefeſt End in thy Heart, all thou doſt is not accepted: 1 Cor. 13. 3. If I give my Body to be burnt, and have not Love, it profiteth me nothing. Faith muſt ſet Love a-work, and Love muſt ſet thee a-work, as it did ſet Mary and Paul, and all the Saints a-work. Love to Men may ſet thee a-work, or to thy Children, Parents, &c. but if Love to God did not, it is nothing.

2. Thy good Actions muſt flow alſo from a pure Heart. The chiefeſt thing wherein Grace exerciſes it ſelf, and hath the moſt Work to buſy it ſelf with, is within doors in the Heart; perfect Holineſs cleanſeth the Spirit, the ſpiritual Faculties as well as the Fleſh, which is the Body, 2 Cor. 7. 1. But the civil Man looks to outward Actions only, and to keep them ſquare and fair is his chief Buſineſs. If he cleanſeth himſelf from Luſts of the Fleſh, that is, the Body, yet he hath no great ado nor care of the Luſts of his Mind; and the reaſon is, becauſe the Eye of the Conſcience looks chiefly to the outward Act, to ſuch Luſts as tend to groſs Acts, but not to ſpiritual Luſts: Thus Rom. 2. 14. they are ſaid to do the things of the Law, that is, the outward part. And alſo natural Wiſdom and the Laws of Men, which they are guided by, look but to outward Acts, and require no more: But now Grace having moſt to do with God, contents not it ſelf with bodily Exerciſe, but frames the Heart to inward Purity and Godlineſs, and there begins its Work. A Limner that makes a Picture, ſhadows out the outward parts only; but Nature in making a living Man, begins firſt to ſhape and form the moſt inward Parts, the Heart, the Liver, &c. and ſo doth true Godlineſs begin; Epheſ. 4. 22. He that knows the Truth as it is to be known in Jeſus Chriſt, hath put off not the Converſation only, but the Luſts. A godly Man he looks to God, and of all elſe deſires to approve his Heart to him, and above all keeping keeps his Heart, Prov. 4. 23.

3. Thy good Actions muſt proceed alſo from a good Conſcience, void of baſe Ends, for the End is the Form of the Action, Quod forma in naturalibus, id finis in moralibus. Now then when God is not chiefly aimed at, the Form of Goodneſs is wanting. But thou wilt ſay, Are not ſuch Ends as do reſpect Men good, and therefore will they not make the Action good, though God be not principally aimed at? I anſwer, No: for theſe Ends, though in themſelves good when ſubordinate, yet are evil when they are the chief, becauſe then they are unto thee in God's ſtead, and uſurp his Place. All Ends have their Goodneſs; becauſe they tend to God, they hold their Goodneſs of him, for God is only good, as Chriſt ſays: Therefore now when God is left out, they become evil; as Noble-men, though when they are ſubject to the King, they retain their Nobility, yet if they go about to uſurp his Place, they loſe it, and become Traitors. Now as Kings are the Fountain of Nobility, ſo God is of Goodneſs; and as Uſurpers may do many good things in the Common-wealth, make good Laws, &c. as our Richard the Third did, but yet becauſe he did it as King, it was evil: Had he done all as Protector under that young King Edward the Fifth, it had been Praiſe-worthy. Now the Reaſon why in theſe very Actions, wherein we do good to Men, we ſhould principally aim at God, is, becauſe though God made thoſe Commandments of the ſecond Table for the Good of Men, yet principally that in the Obedience of them, his Soveraignty might be acknowledged; and ſo as in breaking of thoſe we are chiefly ſaid to ſin againſt him, (as David confeſſeth in the matter of Murder, upon the Perſon of Uriah, Pſal. 51. 4. Againſt thee, againſt thee only have I ſinned) ſo alſo in obſerving them we muſt look higher than Men, or elſe it is a Sin: Thus Epheſ. 6. 6, 7. Servants are to obey their Maſters, doing all as to God, not Men.

But you will ſay, I aim at God alſo, and have a Reſpect to him; and ſo indeed Heathens had ſome Reſpect to God alſo; Cicero monet rem publicam adminiſtrandam, quo nihil gratius eſt Deo. So thoſe wicked Men too, Iſa. 66. 5. who caſt out their Brethren for God's Name-ſake, and ſaid, Let God be glorified.

I anſwer, That 'tis true they may have God in their Eye alſo; as when we do any other thing, we may take many Conſiderations in by the by that are not the Mark we fully looked at: As the Eye looks directly but at one thing, yet it doth look about and take in many things at once. Self-love may have and hath often ſuch a Reſpect to God, that it may be glad that God is like to be gratified and pleaſed by any thing it doth; as there is no Enemy, (unleſs one that doth all out of Revenge againſt his Enemy) but will be glad if he plea-ſures himſelf, to inlarge it as a Kindneſs to his Enemy alſo, and make the moſt of it, and be glad that he hath pleaſured him, and that he can ſay, I did this for you. But God is not mocked, but hath a curious Eye, and he will be look'd at directly, and not aſquint.

4. Laſt of all, All thy good Actions muſt be out of Faith, which ingrafts a Man into Chriſt. If thou art an Unbeliever, let thy Works be what they will, they are defiled to thee, Tit. 1. 15. To Unbelievers to do things out of Strength of Vertue and Conſcience, ſignifies nothing, becauſe it is not out of Faith; Heb. 11. 6. Without Faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. Now to be a Believer, is a great Work, for it is that great Work, the Work of all Works, the Work of God, John 6. 44. When a Man doth an Action out of Faith, he muſt renounce his own Strength; a Man being humbled in the Diſcovery of his former unregenerate Eſtate, and ſo cut off from the wild ſtock he did grow in, from which Root all his Actions ſprung, muſt be a-new ingrafted into Chriſt, and then his Actions will be good and acceptable, elſe not. The Apoſtle in Rom. 7. from the 1*ſt* to the 5*th*, ſhews how that in many unregenerate Men, the Law to which they are married, and which hath Power over their Conſciences, may beget many Children, which outwardly are like the Parent, conformable to the Law in the Letter, ſerving God in the Letter, but all ſuch God reckons not as Fruit to him; ver. 5. therefore he ſays, a Man muſt be divorced from the Law as a Husband, and that is done by a Work of Humiliation, and he muſt be married a-new to Chriſt, and then Chriſt by Faith begets an holy and new Offspring of holy Duties, which are Fruit to God indeed, that is, which he accounteth Fruit, reliſhing nothing but what comes from ſuch a Believer; and this Paul inſtanceth in by himſelf when a Phariſee, acknowledging, that though the Law begat many good Actions in him then, yet becauſe he was not married to Chriſt, they were illegitimate. A Man muſt alſo by Faith fetch the Strength of what he doth from Chriſt in the doing of it; John 5. 4, 5. Without me ye can do nothing: All is nothing if the Strength we do it by be not fetch'd from Chriſt; if from Conſcience, or the Law alone, it is nothing; and by Faith thou muſt fetch Acceptance through Chriſt's Blood; therefore we are bidden to do all in the Name of Chriſt.

5. But laſt of all, If Men would but narrowly obſerve and examine their beſt Actions, and pry into the Principles of them, as they are growing and budding forth, thence they might eaſily be convinced that they are evil. For,

1*ſt*. When the Good a Man doth, he doth out of ſome corrupt Luſt directly, (as much of the Good many doth ariſeth thence) then there needs little Queſtion of it: As when the Devil confeſſed Chriſt, that his Confeſſion might diſcredit all other Teſtimony of him. When the Phariſees made long Prayers to devour Widows Houſes, when they preach'd out of Envy, Phil. 1. 15. when ſuch a Luſt wholly ſets them a-work, and they chooſe doing good, as a means to accompliſh it; as when Jezabel proclaimed a Faſt to colour Naboth's Death; of ſuch Actions there is no queſtion but that they are evil.

But 2*dly*. When the Incitation of Conſcience and the Inclination of Vertues carry Men, as then doing this it may be doubted whether they be corrupt or no; For nothing ſays Bellarmine (and ſo may others think too) is corrupt, but what proceeds from corrupt Nature as ſuch. To clear that even then ſuch Actions are corrupt, take theſe Conſiderations.

1. We grant that corrupt Nature left to it ſelf, and if not aſſiſted by theſe Principles, would not have performed that Good which it doth. Yet,

2. That though it performs it from the Bias of theſe Principles, and left to its proper Motion, it would not do any Good without them, yet it may be ſaid, that ſtill as it is corrupt, ſo it hath the chief Stroak in them: and ſo all the Actions of Men in an unregenerate Eſtate are truly call'd Fruits of the Fleſh, becauſe that is the predominant ſwaying Principle, even as Reaſon, or the Will is the predominant Principles of a Man, and have the great Hand and Stroak, and Sway in all humane Actions. I illuſtrate and expreſs it by this Similitude: Self-love, which is corrupt Nature, is (as I have told you) now ſince the Fall, as the King, ſet up in all the Faculties, (as Love to God was before) ſo as it commands all, and hath all the Strength of them, and all is at its

Book X.

Command and Beck. Now this Self-love if it had been let looſe alone to it ſelf, would trade in nothing but what was directly evil, and what made wholly for it ſelf, and would do nothing that is good, either in Order to God or Men. But God hath mingled with it the Light of Conſcience, and ſome moral Diſpoſitions to aſſiſt it: ſo that they all are as a Company ſetting up a Factory or Trade, (as Strangers uſe to do in another Dominion) whereof Conſcience is the Governor for the Good of the common Intereſt, that Self might not in Mens Actions wholly ingroſs all, and ſo Men be very Devils here in this Life: And yet theſe Vertues and Principles of Conſcience do ſtill trade but as Strangers in ſubordination to this King, Self-love, who is not depoſed from his Regency a-whit by them: They attempt not to undermine his Soveraignty, and to ſubject this Self to God, but trade with the leave, and for the Profit only of Self-love: For in all their Trading they hire and uſe its Ships and Veſſels to traffick with, that is, thoſe Faculties whereof it is King, which it never lets to ſtir but for its own Ends: They apply themſelves unto, and ſtill urge ſuch Conſiderations as ſuit one way or other with the Reaſon of this State and Self-love's Ends. And though indeed they divert and hinder its Trading with many groſs Evils, and obſtruct its fetching Pleaſure thence; and on the contrary, put it upon a Trade with ſuch things that are of ſome Alliance to God, and which belong to the Kingdom of Grace, yet ſo as they apply themſelves therein to the Profit of Self-love another way, and in higher Ends of Pride, Vain-Glory, ambitious Aims, &c. They ſuffer this Self-love to take Cuſtom and Toll out of all, otherwiſe it would never ſuffer them to trade, nor a Ship to ſtir. I may illuſtrate this farther by the State-Maxim of Haman againſt the Jews, who would not harbour them, nor ſuffer them any farther than they were for the King's Profit; ſo that if they lived and thrived in his Dominions, he muſt have a Fee out of all their Wares, and all Returns. Thus natural Wiſdom, that is the Counſellor of Self-love, which is the great King in Man, ſeeing this King's Profit advanced, and the Coffers of many Self-Ends, and Reſpects, and Luſts, filled by ſuch external Morality, ſtrikes in with Conſcience and theſe Vertues, and forbids trafficking with many groſs Evils that are directly Rebels to God, and makes uſe of theſe good Commodities to fetch Gain out of them, for his Prince Self-love. And ſo the Man being debarred from injoying other Luſts, (for he cannot trade with all) ſtrikes in with Conſcience and theſe Vertues, and makes uſe of them to pleaſe Luſts of a higher Nature, more State-politick Luſts, (as I may ſo call them) by following what they direct unto. Thus though he ſuffers ſuch Vertues as good Wares to be brought in, yet ſtill for his own Advantage: So that all the Actions that are done,

1*ſt*, Are ſtill principally the Acts of Corruption, becauſe Self-love remains ſtill King, and only ſuffers them to be done, but it is his Strength and Stock they traffick with. And ſo,

2*dly*, Are poſitively corrupted, both becauſe Self-love never gives his Warrant to have any good done, but to pleaſe a Luſt or an End ſome way for himſelf, which is corrupt: He muſt have a Bribe and Conſideration out of all; and e're a Ship ſtirs, he conſiders, what Advantage will it be for me? then ſome Luſt, Pride, or Fear of Hell ſteps out, and ſays, it is for me, and then he yields, elſe he would forbid the Trade. So that a Man doth look upon all the Good he doth, as ſuitable to ſome Luſt, and ſo it becomes Sin unto him; for it is under that Notion and Conſideration of being pleaſing to ſome Luſt he doth it, or elſe not. And therefore Paul, whoſe Trade of Life was outwardly within the Dominions of the Law, and he was one of the Subjects of it, and was according to the Law blameleſs, yet he ſays, Epheſ. 2. 3. that his Converſation was ſpent as well as any other, in fullfilling the Luſts of the Fleſh and Mind; and therefore that humbled him when he ſaw ſuch Luſt in him, tho he was moral and vertuous. If corrupt Nature had no Luſts but Luſts of the Fleſh, then by Abſtinence from groſs Sins, &c. it ſhould be a Loſer: but it hath Luſts of the Mind, which pleaſe carnal Wiſdom and Reaſon, ſuch as Hypocriſy, the Credit of Goodneſs, and a thouſand the like. Thus a Man ſees he may very well and profitably, and for the enriching of himſelf, uſe things that are good to pleaſe other Luſts in things evil and forbidden. Now that Self-Love ſhould abuſe theſe Vertues, and theſe Checks of Conſcience, which are the good Gifts of God, and ſhould pervert their Uſe for its own Ends only, and ſo corrupt the Vertues themſelves tb ſerve its turn, this makes the Action exceeding ſinful. As when it makes uſe of the Vertue of juſt Dealing, to grow into Credit by it, and to get the Name of being an honeſt Man, and ſo by that means to climb into a Place of Preferment and Truſt. So when by their Pity and Liberality Men purchaſe to themſelves a good Name, Verily ye have your Reward, ſays Chriſt (Matth. 6. 2.) of the Phariſees. If they pray, they pray amiſs, ſays James; why, becauſe they pray for ſomething to ſpend on their Luſts, James 4. 2. And in this Reſpect that Fact of Jehu, though done at God's Command, and with Aſſiſtance from God, of Zeal and Elevation of Spirit, above what elſe he could or would have done, is yet made and interpreted a Sin of Murder, Hoſea 1. 4. Chap. 9.

Laſt of all, If we conſider not only the Principles from which theſe Actions proceed, but the Event to which they all tend, it will appear, that all the little Good they do, and the Duties they perform, do but make them take the more Liberty in ſome Sin, Jer. 7. 9, 10. Will ye ſteal, murder, and commit Adultery, and ſwear falſly, and burn Incenſe unto Baal, and walk after other Gods whom ye know not; and come and ſtand before me in this Houſe, which is called by my Name, and ſay, We are delivered to do all theſe Abominations? They came to God's Houſe, and the Performance of thoſe Duties emboldned them to ſin, ſo as they did but compenſare vitia virtutibus, make ſome Amends for their Vices, by ſome Vertues which they practiſed. The Harlot paid her Vows, in Prov. 7. 14. and ſo thought ſhe might commit Abomination. Thus as Meat feeds but a ſick Man's Diſeaſe, ſo their good Actions do but nouriſh their Luſts: They leave one Sin to take it out in another, thinking God is not ſo ſtrict. So Iſa. 58. they were ſaid to faſt for Strife and Debate, and to ſmite with the Fiſt of Wickedneſs. Theſe Performances incouraged their Hearts to do all evil, ſo as they ſinned under the protection of ſome Duty; as the Phariſees did, who devoured Widows Houſes under the pretence of long Prayers.

CHAP. IX.

Some Objections anſwered.

I Shall now conſider an Objection or two which muſt be anſwered.

Object. If all theſe Vertues in us, and all we have done by the Strength of them, be Sins; then we had as good have been prophane for the time paſt, and have omitted the Good we have done, for all comes to one; and ſo we had as good do for the time to come.

Anſw. 1. For the time to come. It is true that a Man unregenerate ſins whether he does it, or omits it; Abſtinendo, quia non propter Deum; & faciendo, quia contra legem.: For if he abſtains from ſinning, it is not for God's ſake; and if he commits the Sin, he apparently offends againſt the Law. I.

2. But yet the Sin is leſs, in doing the Good thou doſt, though in a wrong manner, than to omit it.

For 1*ſt*. To omit it, is peccatum per ſe, in its own Nature evil; but to do the good in a wrong manner, is but peccatum per accidens, accidentally ſo: The one is abſolutely and fully againſt the Law, and both the Spirit and the Letter of it alſo; but thy Performance of it in a wrong manner, is but by Conſequence ſinful, and is evil but as againſt the ſpiritual part of the Law, which concerns the Heart, and the manner of Performance: and God's Law requires both matter and manner to be good; Deut. 6. 25. And it ſhall be our Righteouſneſs, if we obſerve to do all theſe Commandments, before the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us.

2*dly*. The Sin in the wrong Performance lies not in the Action primarily, but in the Agent originally; ſo that actio non eſt omittenda, ſed tu corrigendus es; the the Action is not to be omitted, but thy ſinful Heart is to be amended. The Fault is not in the matter which thou writeſt, but in thy Pen and Hand, mend that, and get true Skill of guiding thy Heart according to thy Copy, and all will be well.

And 3dly. The Sinfulneſs of an Action in it ſelf materially good, proceeding thus from this Corruption of Man's Nature, cannot looſen thee from Subjection to that Duty, which God's peremptory and indiſpenſable Command requires: Becauſe thou haſt loſt Grace and Power to do things rightly, muſt God's Command be of none Effect? If thou faileſt in the manner, thou art to be humbled for thy ſwerving from his Law, and acknowledg thine Inability to do otherwiſe, yet ſtill thou art bound to do thy Duty. We ſay, Where nothing is to be had, the King muſt loſe his Right, but it is not ſo as to God; if there were no more in it but to acknowledg what is thy Duty, thou art to ſubject thy ſelf as far as thou art able, as unto the outward Performance thou art in ſome meaſure able.

4thly. Again to perform it wrong is out of Weakneſs, Rom. 8. 3. he ſays, The Law was weak through the Fleſh: Through the Weakneſs of corrupt Nature the Law, though performed, could not juſtify, becauſe that ſpoiled all Man's Actions by Defects: but to omit the Law altogether, is Wickedneſs ſuperadded to the Weakneſs of Nature: the one comes chiefly from privative Sinfulneſs, but the other from poſitive; the one comes from a Defect in the Will, but the other from a wilful Neglect.

And 3. It is not all one to be prophane, as to live in the external Obſervances of Religion: for in omitting theſe altogether, and running into Vices, inſtead of the Good thou doſt, 1ſt, Thou makeſt thy Sin of a treble Guilt: for to omit the Duty wholly, is worſe than to perform Good in a wrong manner; and to be doing Evil inſtead of both, is yet much worſe; for the Soul being never idle but working, if thou ceaſeſt to do good, it is certain thy Soul is buſy about Miſchief: As the Sea cannot reſt, but it will caſt up Mire and Dirt. In doing good therefore, though in a wrong manner, thou wert leſs ill occupied, becauſe that doing good kept out doing worſe. And 2dly, Though thou ſinneſt in abſtaining from Sin, as well as in doing it, yet in the one only, quia non propter Deum, becauſe thou doſt not refrain Sin out of Love to God, but in the other, becauſe therein thou art a Rebel againſt him. Now to be againſt God, is worſe than ſimply not to be for him: As though it be Treaſon in a Subject not to take up Arms for his Prince, yet to fight againſt him is much worſe. And thus though Chriſt bad his Diſciples to let them alone who caſt out Devils in his Name, and he would have them go on ſtill rather, For he that is not againſt me, is with me, ſays he, Mark 9. 40. that he meant this only comparatively; for otherwiſe Chriſt ſays, he that is not with him, is againſt him, Matth. 12. 30. that is, he is in Deed and in Truth ſo.

II. And then again for the time paſt; Whereas thou imagineſt thou hadſt as good have done no Good.

I anſwer, No, it is not all one. For,

1. Thou ſhalt be puniſhed leſs in Hell, if thou ſhouldſt die 'ere thou didſt get out of this Eſtate, which is Auguſtin's Anſwer, though hereafter thou ſhalt have no Reward for that imperfect Good which thou haſt done in thy regenerate State (as Chriſt told the Phariſees, You have your Reward, namely, all here, Matth. 2. 2.) yet this will moderate and abate thy Puniſhment.

2. They are rewarded here. The Phariſees you ſee by that Speech of Chriſt were rewarded by Men, who feeling the Profit and Benefit of much Good which they do, reward them with Love and Praiſe again for ſo doing: They are alſo rewarded by Magiſtrates, God's Vice-gerents, who bear not the Sword in vain, but are a Terror to thoſe that do evil, and a Praiſe to them that do well; Rom. 13. 3, 4. For Rulers are not a Terror to good Works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the Power? do that which is good, and thou ſhalt have Praiſe of the ſame: For he is the Miniſter of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid, for he beareth not the Sword in vain: for he is the Miniſter of God, a Revenger to execute Wrath upon him that doth evil.

And

and 2 Pet. 2. 14, 15. Or unto Governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the Punishment of Evil-doers, and for the Praise of them that do well. For so is the Will of God, that with well-doing ye may put to Silence the Ignorance of foolish Men. They are also rewarded by their own Consciences, which so far excuse them; Rom. 2. 15. Which shew the Work of the Law written in their Hearts, their Consciences also bearing witness, and their Thoughts the mean while accusing, or else excusing one another. Yea, they are rewarded by God; so Ahab was for humbling himself, 1 Kings 21. 29. Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? Because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the Evil in his Days: but in his Sons Days will I bring the Evil upon his House. So those Flatterers were rewarded also, Psal. 78. 36, 38. Nevertheless, they did flatter him with their Mouth, and they lied unto him with their Tongues. But he being full of Compassion, forgave their Iniquity, and destroyed them not; yea, many a time turned he his Anger away, and did not stir up all his Wrath. For their flattering seeking of God, God omitted their Punishment temporal, and in that sense he forgave their Sin. And thus God dealt with Jehu, 2 Kings 10. 30. And the Lord said unto Jehu, Because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine Eyes, and hast done unto the House of Ahab according to all that was in mine Heart, thy Children of the fourth Generation shall sit on the Throne of Israel. Now thus God doth, because he will reward his own Gifts; for it is his Gift to be chaste, as he told Abimelech he kept him, Gen. 20. 6. and so it is from God's Gift, that Men are otherwise vertuous, and God loves to crown his own Gifts in every kind of what sort soever. And these Vertues Augustine often calls Dei munera; and so Paul says of Continency, that it was a Gift, 1 Cor. 7. 9. And indeed God who hath to overcome with Mercies as well as Judgments, and to be before-hand with all sorts of Men, will surely at least be as forward, and go as far in doing Good to wicked Men, as they shall be to do any Good that may be serviceable to him or others; yet therein also observing a Proportion. For,

1*st*. As God thereby hath an outward Honour in an outward Acknowledgment and Subjection, as the Action also an outward Goodness, so God casts upon them outward Rewards, as Riches, Honours, &c. So God had Honour by Nebuchadnezzar's Acknowledgment, Dan. 4. 36, 37. And God cast Honour upon him again, in raising him up to his Kingdom. They have outward Kindness from God, for the outward Kindness which they shewed him, and God deals with them as Men deal with Flatterers.

But yet 2*dly*. As he hath not their Hearts, so they have not his, and therefore he receives them not to himself: He deals not with them as Friends, but Flatterers; but yet as he deals with his own People here in this Life, so he deals with these in a like Proportion; that look as if his own People sin, yet because their Hearts are firm for God, though an Act of Sin pass from them, and so an Act of Punishment passeth from God; yet still his Heart is with them, because their Hearts are with him. So on the contrary, God deals with the wicked, and he rewards them outwardly for their external Acts of Goodness, but yet he doth not love them, because they love not him.

3*dly*. As all their outward Performances are unchanged, v. c. good for the matter, but unsanctified for the manner; so the outward things which God bestows are like thereunto, good in themselves, as the Actions of these Men are: but as their proud Courses shew their Actions to be evil in the Issue, and in the Event; so in the like their outward Mercies appear to be given in Wrath, as Saul was to the People of Israel. And so David saith of wicked Men, that their Table is made a Snare, Psal. 69. 22. It is a Snare to their Intemperance, and their Blessings Curses, as it is in the Prophet Malachy, chap. 2. 2. I will only put in here a Caution or two.

(1.) That godly Men who are in Covenant with God, must not expect this, that for their dead Performances they should be rewarded here as the other are. So God would not release David, though he mourned and prayed, Psal. 32. 5. till he was inwardly humbled, and did confess his Sin unto God. For,

1*st*. Since more is to be had from the Godly, God will not take Brass when he may have Gold; he will have meet Fruits, meet for them to perform, Heb. 6. 7. and in their kind: but he looks for no better of the other than mere outward Book I. outward Duties, and therefore rewards them accordingly, because they can do no better.

And 2dly. The outward Mercies which God dispenses to his own Children, are given in pure everlasting Love; therefore that which draws out that Love in rewarding them, must be outward Good done in Love from them. Till therefore they are kindly humbled, he will not deliver them, or leave a Blessing behind, Joel 2. and so 2 Cor. 7. 14. for if he should, it might prove a Curse. Yea, 3dly. Seeing he may have better, he will rather punish them for doing no better.

The (2.) Caution is, That God only rewards wicked Men thus, when their Performances are serious, and done in a natural kind of Integrity, as Abimelech's was, and as Ahab's humbling himself was; but if they be out of a wicked positively bad end done, as when Jezabel fasted to colour the taking away Naboth's Vineyard, then they are not rewarded, but, as Ahab in his Posterity, they are threatned and accursed: And such perverse Ends do heinously aggravate the Sinfulness of such Actions, which in outward appearance are good. Prov. 21. 27. The Sacrifice of the Wicked is abominable: how much more, when he bringeth it with a wicked Mind?

CHAP. X.

That all these Vertues, and Moral Righteousness, are but some dark remains of the Image of God in Adam, which is not wholly defaced. What a poor and despicable thing it is when compared with Grace, demonstrated in several Instances of a Comparison between them.

TO conclude; This pitch of Honesty and Religion, which the most rest in for Grace, is but from those Principles which Divines call Reliquiæ prioris Imaginis, the Reliques of the first Image defaced; which God hath put into corrupt Nature, lest Men should be Devils upon Earth. It is but a Blaze kindled out of the Embers raked up in the Ashes of corrupt Nature blown up, and continued by Education; which Men think to please God with, as Nadab and Abihu did with strange Fire: Which Reliques and imperfect pieces of the Law, written by Nature in Mens Hearts, they set together, and set it up and adore it as God's Image: so as indeed they err the same Error in the Opinion about their own Estate, which Pelagius in his Doctrine did; for the ground of his Error was a mistaking this moral Goodness, and Abilities of Nature to understand and assent to the Word, for true Grace; as appeareth in Augustine's Disputes against the Pelagians; and so do these Men in their Opinions concerning their own Estate; and so do as dangerously err against their own Souls, as he did against the Truth. And in this is the deep Deceit of Mens Hearts seen, that all Errors of Doctrine, abstractly considered, which they in their Speculative Judgments often detest, they yet assume and take up in their Practical Judgments to judg of themselves or others by. So Men that deny Justification by Works, in the Doctrine of it, do yet secretly trust to their own Works: And indeed Popery is natural to Men, and so is Pelagianism too, namely, to take that in themselves for Grace, which Pelagius went about to establish as his Heretical Doctrine to be Grace. And let me add this Consideration here, that if much of such Moral Goodness, and these Principles mentioned, had not been in Nature, Pelagius could have had no ground at all for his Opinions, nor would they have spread so as they did, nor have been so generally entertained.

And

Chap. 19.

And so I come to a third use of Information; by comparing this Glorious Image of God in whomsoever it is to be found, and so by bringing it to the true Touch, it will appear to be counterfeit.

As, 1. Let us view this true Holiness, as it shines in the Holy and Spiritual Law of God; for sin being now set in, and that Image extinguished, and never a Pattern left by which to draw this Image was, God therefore set forth a Copy of it in his Word, which now is the means of sanctifying of us; and Sanctification it self is but a writing of that Law in the Heart, and a Conformation of the Heart thereunto. And if civil Men will but bring their pitch of Obedience to this Law, and compare themselves with the Spiritualness of it, they will find that not only there is a defect in degrees, but of essential parts; and that there are wanting the chiefest and eminentest parts of God's Image: which are to the rest, as the Face is to the rest of the Members in the Body of a Man, in which Face there is more Beauty, and more of a Man than in all the rest; and they picture often the Face for the whole Man. These great and principal parts of Holiness are wanting in unregenerate Men, for that is Holiness, which is a Conformity to the first Table; the Duties whereof are called the Great Things of the Law, Hos. 8. 12. and which indeed are especially called Holiness, as being made immediately for God, when the other are for Man: and the Duties of the second Table, are called Righteousness, of the First Holiness, Eph. 4. 24. and so distinguish'd, Luke 1. 75. These great things of the Law which concern God and his Service, are the least in their Hearts, and so they have perhaps the Legs and Feet of Holiness, yet the Face they want. You (the Man) have Commission (says Christ, Luke 11. 42.) and pass over the Love of God: which Christ calls the Great Commandment, Mat. 22. 36. You shall find these Men dead and heartless to such Duties, and the more Spiritual the Duty is, and tends to set God up in the Heart, and so the more holy it is, the more averse their Hearts are to it; as to meditate in private, to digest the Word, to search their Hearts, to speak of God and his Kingdom, &c.

If a Man should bring the Broad Seal to a Patent, and you should find that the Arms of England were left out, (which is the chiefest of the three Kingdoms) or misplaced, and those of the other Kingdoms set above it, you would say surely this Seal is Counterfeit, and never had the Impression from the King's true Broad Seal above. So shall you find the heart of God's Image, and yet the Duties of the First Table are the great part left out, or slighted by you in comparison of the Second; you may say truly, this Heart never came under the Broad Seal of Heaven.

2. Where shall we find this Image of God? even in Christ, who was the first Pattern, and into whose Image all true Christians are changed, and we receive of his Grace for Grace, John 1. 15. that is, Grace answerable to his; even as a Father begets a Child in his own Image. Let these men therefore but compare their pitch with the Virtues and Holiness of Christ, behold there their counterfeit Copy to this Original, according to which all Believers are renewed; and therefore are called [illegible] and the Church receives this Image in the same pitch of degrees that Christ has the most eminent of essential parts, for the very Glory and Crown of that Head all do receive it; and when those parts which were least eminent in Christ [illegible] and the Children begotten by the Father, do in the Church, [illegible] whose Members are biggest in the Father, also his proportion is in the Child. He was affected for Mens Souls. He

But take you that are Civil Men come to this Pattern: Do but read this Story, view his Steps, and what Duties you find most in him. Was the Civil Man only instructed above measure? was Pharisaism to lay [illegible] all you look in, [illegible] followed his Calling, and was obedient to his Parents, you [illegible] his Father's Family; but above all took care for that, [illegible] old his Mother, [illegible] that the you neglect [illegible] Thus [illegible] by outsides, and therefore as the Jews [illegible] for Gods Duty, Magnified [illegible] to God-ward, [illegible] Gods, [illegible] to

Book II.

Cesar the things that are Cesar's; Because he that ask'd him that Question, as they that sent him were prov'd Hypocrites, who whilst they rested in paying Men their Dues, and in a formal serving of God, neglected to give him that which was due to so great and holy a God. He came also to the publick Ordinances; in one Evangelist it is said, It was his Custom so to do, Luke 4. 16. it being the publick Worship of the place. But was that all? No, he spent besides whole Nights in Prayer alone by himself.

So for moral Vertues, they were all to be found in him, but yet all elevated and raised, and of a higher strain; so that if you would have them go for Signs to your selves of a good Estate, they must flow from Union with him, and then they will be of another kind than mere moral Vertues are, differing as much from those wild Vertues in the Heathens, and that grow in the Mountains of Pray, as the Psalmist calls the Gentiles, Psal. 76. 4. even as much as Sweet-Marjoram, or any the like Herb that grows in the Garden, differs from that which grows in the Wilderness; the one is a Weed, the other an Herb. And when Men believe on Christ, then their Meekness will not proceed from a Softness of Nature, but from a Heart first humbled, tamed, wounded with the Wrongs done to Christ, and being overcome with his Love pardoning, they will be meek towards others that wrong them. Thus in the reckoning up those moral Vertues of Kindness, Mercy, Meekness, &c. shows the differing Spring and kind in the Elect from what is in others; Col. 3. 12, 13. Put on therefore (as the Elect of God, holy and beloved) Bowels of Mercies, Kindness, Humbleness of Mind, Meekness, Long-suffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any Man have a Quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. That Speech, as the Elect of God, is both a Note of Distinction for another kind of Humility, that becomes the Elect and beloved of God, than is found in others, and also is mentioned as that, the Consideration whereof was to be the Root and Nourishment of these Vertues in their Hearts: That considering God's electing peculiar Love to them, out of which he was kind to them when Enemies to him, and out of that his Long-suffering, forbearing them many Years, bearing their bold and presumptuous Offences towards him; that they as those whom God had thus dealt with, would answerably carry themselves towards others, and so be merciful, not as Men use to be merciful, but as your Heavenly Father is merciful; and so he goes on, Col. 3. 13. forbearing one another, if any Man have a Quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye: That is the Spring of Christian Meekness, and Christ he is the Rule and Measure of it: so do ye therefore, Matth. 11. 29. Take my Yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in Heart: and ye shall find Rest unto your Souls. Learn of me, says Christ, for I am lowly and meek. And indeed the meekest Morallst in the World must learn a new kind of Meekness from Christ; thus too, as to that Love and Sweetness, and Ingenuity of Nature to those we live with; this love Christ the Gentlest have towards those that love them. But Christ's Love will expand it self further to the Saints, as in David, Psal. 16. 3. My goodness extendeth to the Saints, to those that excel in Vertue. Christ indeed loved the young Man that was but civil; the Text says, He looked on him, and loved him, Mark 10. 21. But how did his Love work towards his poor Sheep and Children, and shewed his Bowels of them more than of his kindred? He is my Brother and Sister, and Mother, that doth the Will of my Father which is in Heaven, Mat. 12. 50. Also that Mercy and Pity that professes it self true to the right Christian kind, would work towards it self further than to bodily Miseries that Men are in. That Christ was affected for Mens Souls. He mingled to the Bodies of Men indeed he healed their Diseases, and fed their Bodies, Mark 8. 37. but it was their Souls he most compassionated, because they wanted spiritual Food, that is more expressly added, ver. 36. This drew Tears from him when he beheld Jerusalem, Luke 19. and he could [illegible] would [illegible] &c. And so did Christ reckon upon Mercy towards others, as to him that Mercy had made him [illegible] his Dinner, &c. Mark 14. 3. he goes that way to bless it. So that Humility in Christ was neither [illegible] Humility of the World, which is indeed but Courtesy, giving Honour to others, expecting the like from them again, again, as Christ says of the Pharisees, that they received Honour one of another, John 5. 44. But his was seen especially in not seeking Honour but in God's way. So John 7. 3, 4, 5. when his Kinsfolks provoked him to do his great Works, and shew himself to the World, My time is not yet come, says he. This was seen also in denying his own Will, and submitting to his Father; Not my Will, but thine be done, says he, Matth. 29. 36. So in emptying himself of his Glory, and becoming of no Reputation, Phil. 2. 7. To glorify his Father, he shewed his Humility in the highest Degree. Thus will all your moral Vertues be raised, if Christ hath but touch'd them with that Vertue that is in him. Chap. 10.

3. If we would see yet further what is the true Genius and Strain of Holiness, we must also search Heaven for it, where it is in its Brightness and Perfection in the Angels, and the Spirits of just Men made perfect, who wear the Parliamentory Robes of Holiness every Day; to whom we are said, Heb. 12. 23. to be come, that is, to enjoy in some Measure the same Life, and to be a fitting for the same Condition; we now are a making meet to be Partakers of that Inheritance in Light, Col. 1. 12. but they there in Heaven have the Spirit, the Quintessence of Holiness, and yet those Vertues which are eminentest in civil Men, would have no Use nor Exercise at all there. Of so little account are they in that place where Holiness dwells and reigns, as there is no Use of Chastity, (for they marry not, nor give in Marriage, Matth. 22. 30.) nor of Temperance, nor just Dealing, &c. These Commandments are but for this World, and concern the fleshly part of Man, as he is to reside here, which they therefore in Heaven are not capable of, and therefore the Spirit, the Soul, the Power of Holiness must lie in Dispositions and Duties, and Performances of a higher Nature: these are but the sensitive Part (as I may so speak) of Godliness, and they are to the Power of Holiness that which the sensitive Faculties are to the rational, which when the Body is laid aside, the Soul hath no use of; so neither is there any Exercise for such Vertues in Heaven.

Therefore consider that the Holiness which thou must trade with in Heaven, must be begun here, without which no Man shall see God; and that the Duties of the second Table are but for this World: In which that thou mightest be fit in some measure to live orderly, God hath endued thee with such Vertues, and hath given Principles to fit thee for such a Life; but when thou art to go trade in another World, where Holiness is only currant, and nothing but what hath God's Image stamped upon it will pass; think with thy self, what hast thou of Holiness to carry thither, without which thou canst not see God.

4. I may add unto this in the fourth Place, that we may see wherein the Image of God chiefly consists, by considering wherein the Spirit and Power of Wickedness consists. Now the chiefest of the Power of Wickedness lies not in Drunkenness, Uncleanness, and such kind of profane Courses, for then the Devils should be less wicked than Men, because they have not Bodies with which to commit such Sins; and by the same Reason the Souls in Hell now, and reprobate Men after the Day of Judgment should not be so wicked as now: but these all are more wicked, and therefore their highest Degree of Wickedness must lie in Sins of a higher Nature, and therefore such Sins are called (Ephes. 6. 12.) spiritual Wickedness, which are seen in the Neglect and Contempt of God, and the Hatred of him and his Saints. Now therefore by the Rule of Contraries, it must needs follow, that true spiritual Holiness must chiefly consist in the contrary to all these spiritual Wickednesses, i. e. in loving God, fearing him, and in a fervent Desire and Indeavour to approve our selves to him in all our Ways, and worshipping him with an holy Worship, &c.

Book X.

CHAP. XI.

Wherein the Nature of true Holiness consists. In what Sense it is called the Life of God, and the Glory of God. How far short a mere civil Righteousness falls short. What Excellence and Praise may yet be allowed as due to it.

WE have discovered by comparative Demonstration, that civil Righteousness is not Holiness. I now come to draw the last Demonstration of the same Truth, from considering what true Holiness is, and what are the essential Properties of it common to it where-ever it is, whereby it will appear Civility falls short of Grace. I will not instance in the Spring-tides of Holiness, but the ordinary Streams and Effects of it in their Hearts, where it is in never so small a measure.

1. Consider what Holiness is. Peter tells us it is a Divine Nature; and Moses and Paul tells us, that it is the Image of God: and both the Expressions come to one and the same Sense and Import, that the Nature of it is to be above all for God. As Humanity is that in a Man which makes him respect Man; so Godliness is that in a Man which enableth him to respect God, and glorify him as God. It positively fits the Heart to receive Happiness from God, and actively makes and sets all in it a-work for him; therefore it is set out to us in two Expressions fitted to express the Nature of it.

1*st*. It is called the Life of God; Ephes. 4. 18. Having the Understanding darkned; being alienated from the Life of God, through the Ignorance that is in them, because of the Blindness of their Heart.

2*dly*. And the Glory of God; Rom. 3. 23. For all have sinned, and come short of the Glory of God.

That whereas God is the chiefest Good of the Creature, and ought to be his chiefest End. This,

(1.) Puts a Principle into the Soul to make it live in God, as his chiefest Good, and to make God his Life, and therefore it is called the Life of God.

And (2.) To make God his chiefest End, and so to live to him, and therefore is called the Glory of God, or to make the Glory of God the prime End of Life. Of both these civil Men fall short, as other natural Men, as those Places shew, Eph. 4. 18. Rom. 3. 23.

1. They are Strangers from the Life of God, and all their Righteousness, or whatever is in them, falls short of the Glory of God: It is Paul's Phrase.

2*dly*. Civility falls short of the Life of God, and is a Stranger to it. Thereby Men are, 1*st*, not fitted to walk with God. Nor, 2*dly*, quickned with Life and Comfort from him.

(1.) Men are not by mere Morality fitted to walk with God. Natural Life fits them to walk with the Creatures, and it takes in from them what Comfort is to be had in them; and moral Vertues fit Men to walk with Men in all the Relations they stand in towards Men, as Husbands to Wives, to give them their due of Love; and as they are Servants, to carry themselves to their Masters, so as to be faithful and obsequious; and so as they are Subjects, to give Cæsar his due, Honour to whom Honour; and so as they are Friends, to requite Love with Love; and so as they are Members of a Common-wealth, to be profitable to it in a Calling; and so also to walk with themselves, so as not to wrong their Bodies or Healths by Intemperance, nor their Estates by Riot or prophane Courses: so nor their Credits, neither by a flagitious and profligate way of Living. But what is all this to God, in whose Hands are thy Breath and all thy Ways? Enoch walked with God, and it is for that Holiness fits a Man for, and enableth him unto it. Thou art courteous to Men, and and walkest submissively and respectively to them, but Grace will make thee walk humbly with thy God, Mic. 6. 8. to have an Eye and Respect to him in all thy Ways, to vail to him, and submit to him and his Will in the whole Course of thy Life. Thou art kind to thy Neighbour, but if unthankful to God, and not sensible of the Kindnesses received, so as to render again to him all thou hast, what availeth it? Thou art just to thy Neighbours, and payest every Man their due, and at their Day, and in lawful Money; but when God's times of Payment for Worship comes, as on the Sabbath, and on Morning and on Evening Times, to pray every Day, thou then neglectest to pay thy dues, to humble thy self, and acknowledg God in all thy Ways, and regardest not the Duties which he requires at such times; or if thou tendereſt Payment to him, yet thou carest not in what Coin, but bringest any thing, no matter how slight, dull, formal the Performances are: Now if thou wert just indeed, thou wouldst give, as to Cesar the things which are Cesar's, so to God the things that are God's. Thou boastest of thy good Nature, which sweetneth thy Converse with Men, and them to thee, and thee to them; but believe it, Grace is good Nature to God, a blessed divine Nature, which demeaneth it self, and behaveth it self well towards God: Even as good Nature makes thee carry thy self to thy Friend, which is as thy own Soul, or as to thy Wife in thy Bosom; so this Divine good Nature makes thee in Love with God, and renders God pleasant to thee: it makes thee ingenuous to him, to walk upon terms of Friendship, to observe the Laws of it as exactly as to Men, to grieve when thou hast offended him, to be glad when he is pleased, to go and unbosom thy self to him. Chap. 11

(2.) A Man notwithstanding Morality and Civility, remains a Stranger to the Life and Comfort is to be had from God. This Advantage indeed a Man hath by it, that he placeth not his Happiness in gross Sins, as prophane Men do, in Lusts of Drunkenness and Uncleanness, which are neither profitable to a Man's self, nor others; but it raiseth his Mind to place it higher in carnal Excellencies of Learning, Preferment, Riches, &c. or the Credit of personal Endowments, and the Exercise of them for the Good of others, and in such things as are profitable to himself and others: but still it raiseth not the Heart up to God: The Spring of his Happiness it may be comes from a higher Hill than other Mens, but is still on Earth; he fetcheth it not from Heaven, from that same River that runs from Heaven in the Conduit-Pipes of the Ordinances, as the Word, Sacrament, Meditation and Conference about God and Christ, which makes glad the City of God; he never tasted of the Water of this Spring, as Christ told the Woman of Samaria, John 4. 10, 14. His Vertues and natural Wisdom set him a-work to trade in such Wares for the attaining of Happiness, and the Comfort of his Life, the Return of which do prove profitable to the Common-wealth and Place he lives in, as if he traffick for Credit, (and the Commodities that bring in Credit must be things that are good and commendable, for they will never commend him else); or if his Business lies in the Exercise of Vertue, so far as as there is Sweetness in the Excusings of natural Conscience, this is the farthest step which he makes, but he tradeth not with God for Happiness and Comfort out of the Word. Civil Men little think that a godly Man's chiefest Delight lies here in this Book of God, yet David saith it doth, and so distinguisheth such a Person from wicked carnal Men, That his Delight is in the Law of the Lord, and his Meditation is therein Day and Night, Psal. 1. 2. A carnal Man knows not what it is to be quickned by the Word, and to be quickned by Prayer, which is David's Language upon all Occasions, and therefore he can want the Absence of God, and not be troubled at it: but what says David, Thou hidst thy Face, I was troubled: for in thy Favour is Life, Psal. 30. 7. A godly Man cannot live without it; Yea, thy Loving-kindness is better than Life, (says he) and as in God's Favour, so in God's Businesses his Life lies; to see the Church prosper, Men to grow in Grace, this is Life to him, Meat and Drink to him. If you stand fast now, we live, 1 Thess. 3. 8. That which is God's Life is by a Sympathy his Life. Now God's Life is the injoying of his own Blessedness, and so the injoying of God's Blessedness in his Life. The Men of the World wonder Men should keep such ado to find Chriſt, and be ſo ſick when they want him; they ſee no more in Chriſt than in another Beloved, Cant. 5. 9. and yet they were the Daughters of Jeruſalem, ſaid thus, ver. 8. ſuch as had heard of him, but ſaw him not as a Believer ſees him; no, they know no greater Croſſes than in the loſs of Things of this World, nor taſte no greater Comforts.

2. Holineſs is called the Glory of God, Rom. 3. 23. becauſe it makes God a Man's end, adopts all that is in a Man for God, raiſeth it up to be for him. Civility may ſo far prevail, as to raiſe a Man up to be for common Good, and to have an Eye at it, to put in an Heroickneſs of Mind for the good of Men; and ſo thoſe who live in the Church, may have a Zeal for that Cauſe which is God's Cauſe, as it is a common Cauſe of the Church, and as they profeſs it againſt the Enemies of the Church. Thus Paul was zealous for the Religion he then profeſſed; and ſo the Phariſees thought they did God good ſervice when they caſt the Apoſtles out of the Synagogues, John 16. 2. but they do not, nor cannot make God their End. For as the Principles of what they do, is but Nature; ſo the Good they do at the beſt, is but quatenus congruit fini naturali, as it agrees to a natural End. They may out of pity to their Brother, give Alms to relieve him; or venture their Lives for their Country, and for the Religion of that Party with which they join, as it is a common Cauſe: but to intereſt God in all that a Man doth, this Trial was that which the Phariſees ſhunn'd when Chriſt would have brought them to it, Joh. 3. 20, 21. For every one that doth Evil, hateth the Light, neither cometh to the Light, leſt his Deeds ſhould be reproved: But he that doth truth, cometh to the Light, that his Deeds may be made manifeſt, that they are wrought in God. But one that is truly godly, is willing to be ſearched, that it may be manifeſt his Works are wrought in God. Which implies, both according to God's Mind, and alſo that God is intereſted in them. Now this Trial the Phariſees avoided, for therein their Righteouſneſs fell ſhort.

And that God is not the End, which Men only Moral and Civil aim at, appears by this, that they are not for ſuch Duties, and Truths, and Cauſes, and Perſons, as tend to advance God, and ſet him up in the World. As Duties of the ſecond Table are for the good of Men, for theſe they are very zealous; but thoſe of the firſt, that tend immediately to the ſanctifying of God, theſe their Hearts are leaſt in.

Obj. There remains an Objection in the general, to be anſwered, which civil Men uſe to make when they hear ſuch Diſcourſes as theſe againſt their Conditions; which is, That we utterly condemn, and cry down all Civility, and diſcourage Men that are honeſt ſo far, that it is enough to make them prophane; for according to this Doctrine, the one is in as good a Condition as the other, ſay they.

Anſw. I anſwer you; Firſt, That look what Worth is in it, I will, and do acknowledg, and would have you to judg righteous Judgment herein, and give it its full due in what it is good for.

As, 1. That it is a good Gift of God that Men abſtain from Sins, and do any good. So God told Abimelech, Gen. 20. 6. I kept thee; and ſo civil Men themſelves are to acknowledg; for to that end God told Abimelech he kept him; that whereas Abimelech began to boaſt of his own Integrity, God put him in mind where he had it. And ſo Auguſtin often in his fourth Book againſt Julian, doth acknowledg theſe Vertues to be Dei munera, God's Gifts: and ſo Paul tells us, 1 Cor. 12. that Continency is a Gift; but all this is but Gratia gratis data, not Gratia gratum faciens; it is freely given by God, but it doth not render the Perſon gracious: Grace I confeſs it is in this ſenſe; both that God gives it out of his mere good free gracious Diſpoſition to one Man more than another; for all Mens Natures are alike corrupt: Grace alſo it is in this, that it is a real Favour in many Reſpects unto them, thus to reſtrain them; for by this they eſcape greater Puniſhments hereafter, and have Rewards here; and therefore God told Abimelech of this withholding from ſinning, as a Favour he had done him, that he had kept him; for elſe he had been a Man of Death; but yet, that it is Grace unto Salvation, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 6. 9. that is it I deny.

And, 2. I grant further, that when a Man hath Grace once, then these Gifts help him much in abstinence from Sin, and to perform Duties with ease; they help the Boat to go the further when the Helm is guided right. So as a Man shall perform Duties of Liberality to Men, of Piety to Parents, of Meekness and Patience, the easilier. As some Metals will take the Stamp better than others, so will some Natures take more deep Impressions of Grace when the Stamp is set on; and so a Man that hath a Spirit of Generosity and Ambition when satisfied, will have larger Alms for God, and easilier deny himself than a base and low Spirit; and therefore, next to Grace, they are to be preferred even to Learning, and all other Gifts, even as the Philosophers also did give them the Preheminence.

And, 3. I say further, that we are to honour it in them, in whom we see it, as Christ looked on the young Man and loved him, Mark 10. 21. they are to be encouraged, and prophane Men are not; but they are not to be encouraged for resting therein: and we are to be ready to do them good the rather for this their Moral Goodness; and so Abimelech having been honest in the Matter of Sarah, Abraham was to pray for him, and at his Prayer, God healed Abimelech, (by reason of his Integrity) and also his Family, Gen. 20. 17, 18. I grant there is a Goodness in this Morality for this World, though none for the World to come. It is good to humane Purposes, in ordine ad homines, for the benefit of Men; but not In ordine ad Deum, to the Glory of God: Whereas Grace, as Paul tells us, is good for all things, having the Promises, as of this Life, so of that which is to come; 1 Tim. 4. 8. For bodily Exercise profiteth little, but Godliness is profitable unto all things; having promise of the Life that now is, and of that which is to come. If you should bring me a brass Shilling, that is silvered over, or gilt; if indeed, you would put it off for Gold or Silver, I would deny it, and not take it; nay, in such a case, I would take it and stamp it through, as false counterfeit Pieces use to be: but if you ask me, if it be not good for something, I will grant you, yes; the Brass, the Metal of it, is serviceable for many profitable Uses; but if you will stamp the King's Image on it, and have it go for Coin, then I arrest you as Traitors against the King's Majesty: and it is a like Case here, when you would have Morality pass for God's Image.

Only yet withal, this I further add, I must say it, and say it again, that a Man trusting to his Morality, and looking no farther, is in the most dangerous Condition, to hinder him from Repentance and Faith, that any Man can be in; and so by consequence and accidentally, such a State is the worst, worse than Prophaneness it self.

1. Because Men that have civil Righteousness of their own, are ready to set it up in the room of Christ, and so dishonour Christ more by their Righteousness, than prophane Men do by their Sins. This was the stumbling-Block which all the Pharisees broke their Necks upon, Rom. 9. 31, 32. But Israel which followed after the Law of Righteousness, hath not attained to the Law of Righteousness. Wherefore? because they sought it not by Faith, but as it were by the Works of the Law; for they stumbled at that stumbling-Stone. Rom. 10. 2, 3. For I bear them record, that they have a Zeal of God, but not according to Knowledg: For they being ignorant of God's Righteousness, and going about to establish their own Righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the Righteousness of God. The Apostle calls it a stumbling-Block, when they setting up their own Righteousness, would not submit to Christ; and therefore the Publicans and Sinners did go faster, and by greater Troops croud into the Kingdom of Heaven, than the Pharisees.

Candidus Diabolus quiimpellit homines ad spiritualia peccata, quæ sese venditant pro justitia, longe nocentior est Nigro, qui tantum ad carnalia impellit. Lutherus Com. in Epist. ad Gal.

And, 2. Because these Men out of love to their own Righteousness, are the deadliest Enemies to the Power of Godliness, as those devout Women in Acts 13. 50. were to Paul; and Paul himself whilst in that estate unto the Christians; and so those, 2 Tim. 3. 3. Without natural Affection, Truce-breakers, false Accusers, Incontinent, Fierce, Despisers of those that are good. The place is mistaken by Interpreters, for it is not meant of Temporary Believers, for they honour those who are Good, but of Civil Men. Those that have a form of Godliness, are the greatest deniers of the Power, and despisers of them that are good. They are in love with these Apish Imitations of Grace, and bring it to God, God, and are Enemies to them who diſcover it to be counterfeit; as they would be angry with thoſe, who ſhould prove all their Money (if they think themſelves rich) to be falſe.

And, 3. Becauſe they are the fartheſt off from coming into the State of Grace. For whereas a Man muſt be humbled, and part with his own Righteouſneſs, e're he can truly come to Chriſt, they are the fartheſt off from that work of any other. As ignorant People are far off (as the Gentiles were, Eph. 2. 12, 17. becauſe without knowledg of God) ſo theſe, becauſe of the want of knowledg of themſelves. As take a Man that hath ſome Wit, and is conceited of it, he is farther off from being a wiſe Man, than one who is more a Fool: Solomon ſays, there is more hope of a Fool than of him, Prov. 26. 12. Why? becauſe e're he become wiſe, he muſt become a Fool, as Paul tells us, 1 Cor. 3. 18. Let no Man deceive himſelf: If any Man among you ſeemeth to be wiſe in this World, let him become a Fool, that he may be wiſe. It is a double Task to make that Man wiſe, to ſhew him he is a Fool, and then to give him Wit. So here is the difference between prophane and civil Men, that though theſe laſt have ſomething, that when Grace is wrought, will be more ſerviceable to Grace than a prophane Man hath, and is in it ſelf, comparing things with things, nigher; yet compare it with the working of Grace, this Man is farther off the working of it, becauſe a prophane Man will ſoon ſee himſelf wicked. But the Publicans and Sinners went faſter to Heaven than the Phariſees; yet, I ſay, there may be a greater nighneſs between the things, when yet there is a greater diſtance between the working of them, and bringing them together. Thus Brother and Siſter are nigher in Blood, but farther off marrying each other, than two Strangers: And thus two Men upon the Tops of two Houſes, oppoſite each to other in one of your narrow Streets, though they are nigher to each other in diſtance, than thoſe below are; yet in regard of coming each to other, they may be ſaid to be farther off, for the one muſt come down, and then climb up again. Thus now a moral Man, though he ſeems nearer to a State of Grace, yet is really farther off; for he muſt be convinced of his falſe Righteouſneſs, and then climb up to the State of Grace, to ſee himſelf as low and vile as the prophaneſt Man in the World, as every Man when he is humbled doth. Beſides, if it were ſo, that a Man were only to be reſtored to legal Righteouſneſs, which Man had in Innocency, and to the Acts thereof, then indeed there would be a great Nearneſs between Civility and it; but as to Evangelical Righteouſneſs, and that of Faith, which is founded upon a denial of a Man's own Righteouſneſs, a mere Civil and Moral Man, is at the greateſt diſtance.

AN Unregenerate Man's Guiltiness BEFORE GOD In Respect of SIN and PUNISHMENT.

BOOK XI.

That an Unregenerate Man is highly guilty, by reason of the numberless Account of actual Sins which he daily commits.

Eccles. 7. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29. All this have I proved by Wisdom: I said, I will be wise, but it was far from me. That which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out? I applied my Heart to know, and to search, and to seek out Wisdom, and the Reason of things, and to know the Wickedness of Folly, even of Foolishness and Madness: And I find more bitter than Death, the Woman whose Heart is Snares and Nets, and her Hands as Bands: whoso pleaseth God shall escape from her, but the Sinner shall be taken by her. Behold, this have I found (saith the Preacher) counting one by one, to find out the Account: which yet my Soul seeketh, but I find not: one Man among a thousand have I found, but a Woman among all those have I not found. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made Man upright; but they have sought out many Inventions.

CHAP. I.

The Exposition of the Words.

I Cast not here into this Account that unsearchable Mine of our inherent and original Sinfulness, which was in-laid as deep as the Centre of our Souls, from our Conception and Nativity. The Survey is now only of those Heaps of actual Sinnings, which from and out of that Mine are every Day minted, and bear the Image and Superscription of Sin stamp'd on them, and are ordinarily currant in our Hearts and Lives.

This Distinction between actual Sins as the Effects, and inherent Sin of our Nature, (which we call Original Sin) as also a State of Sin, as the Causes Book XI. that do defile the whole of a Perſon Unregenerate, is ſo well known and received, as it need not be inſiſted on. It may ſuffice, that Chriſt doth exactly thus diſtinguiſh, in ſaying, An evil Tree brings forth evil Fruit, which explaining, he applies to an evil Man, (there is his State) out of the evil Treaſure (that is, of his natural and acquired inherent Corruption as the Cauſes) brings forth evil things (as the Fruits.) And our Saviour by theſe evil Fruits, profeſſeth to mean as well evil Thoughts, the immediate Iſſues of the Heart, as outward Actings, whether in Speech, as falſe Witneſs, Blaſphemies; or in outward Fact, as Murders, Thefts; in all which he particularly there inſtanceth; and all theſe as diſtinct Evils from the evil Heart or Treaſure it ſelf they all proceed out of; thus Matth. 15. 19. The Apoſtles were likewiſe careful to indigitate the very ſame (as a neceſſary) Diſtinction, for us heedfully to obſerve in our ſelves, whilſt they ſpeak one while of our being dead in Sin, and the Uncircumciſion of the Fleſh, Col. 3. 9. [as the State] and then beſides of dead Works, Heb. 6. 1. Works of the Fleſh, Gal. 5. 19. [as the Fruits thereof] (and under that term of Fruits expreſly, ver. 22. as the Oppoſition there ſheweth) as alſo when we read in them of an old Man and his Deeds, as Col. 3. 9.

Although many other Scriptures preſented themſelves as Texts or Foundations unto that Subject I have before me, yet I choſe this enſuing.

Solomon the wiſeſt of Men, and whoſe large Underſtanding had acquired and comprehended within it ſelf, as many ſeveral Notions and Matters of Knowledg, as there be Sands upon the Sea-ſhore, 1 Kings 4. 30. After a long and ſore Travel, which by the Conduct of that his Wiſdom he had performed, and paſſed through the vaſt Regions of things knowable, and made the moſt exquiſite Search into all foreign Parts of Wiſdom that lay out of himſelf, as the Works of God in Nature, Providence, or that belonged to humane Societies and Affairs, in all the kinds of them; he at laſt (as of the Prodigal it is ſpoken) came home to himſelf; and by a renewed Work of a more through Repentance, Prov. 20. 27. deſcended into himſelf, and the Chambers of the Belly, his own Soul.

And as the whole Book of Eccleſiaſtes is a Teſtimony of his Repentance, and his being gathered to the Church; ſo this one ſolemn Paragraph from ver. 23, to the End of this Chapter, is a Narrative to ſhew what this his laſt Study had been, and how it firſt began, and had been continued by him in the Search of his own, and upon occaſion thereof of all Mankind's Sinfulneſs: Which to be the Mind of Solomon in theſe Words, will appear by the opening of them, which I reduce to theſe Heads.

1. The Narration which Solomon gives of his coming off from the Study of all other Wiſdom, and applying himſelf to this of Sinfulneſs, in ver. 23, 24, 25.

2. What is meant by the Reaſon and Account ſpoken, ver. 25, 27, 29.

3. That it is the Reaſon or Account of his own perſonal Folly and Wickedneſs, which in the firſt Place and principally he intended.

4. He declares what had been the Iſſue and Succeſs of that his new Search and Study, and the Product he had brought that Account unto, whether of his own or others Sinfulneſs, in ver. 26, 27, 28, 29.

In ver. 23, 24. he relates what had been the great Inquiſition of the former Part of his Life, all this I proved, that is, whatever before of Knowledg he had been ever exerciſed and verſed in. All this that he had treated of in this Book, even all, and the whole that lay within the Sphere and Capacity of being known, [I proved by Wiſdom] that is, I attempted in the moſt induſtrious Way to comprehend, and exerciſed my ſelf thereto, both by the Improvement of all ſuch inward Principles of infuſed Wiſdom, given me by God extraordinarily, and thoſe as accompanied and heightned by all outward Advantages, (which being a King furniſhed him withal) whereby to try all Concluſions either of Art or in Nature. Yea, and I had (ſays he) ſet it down with my ſelf as the Mark of my Life, as the eminent Excellency I affected and reſolved to attain a Perfection in, [I ſaid I will be wiſe] finding my ſelf impowred thereto, by all thoſe Abilities and Advantages, to attain it: Well, but what was the Iſſue of all? but that after all this Labour ſpent that way, he found how infinitely ſhort he was from an Arrival at it, or the compaſſing of it; [but it was far from me] and thereupon ſhuts up that Purſuit of his

with this Adviſo to all Adventurers and Travellers after him in this kind [That which is far off and exceeding deep ([Deep, Deep] as the Hebrew) who can find it out?] thus ver. 24.

Chap. 1.

Thereupon in ver. 25. he ſets before all ſuch and all others, his own Example, how he had (though late firſt) betaken himſelf unto another kind of Wiſdom, more uſeful and neceſſary, which was the Search into his own Wickedneſs or Sinfulneſs; and together therewith, that which is in all Mankind. Thus ver. 25. I applied my Heart, that is, I came or turned about, or converted my ſelf and my Heart from the former Study unto this, namely, to know, and to ſearch, and to ſeek out Wiſdom, and the Reaſon, but of what? it follows, and to know the Wickedneſs of Folly, even of Fooliſhneſs and Madneſs. The general Mind of which is, that the Subject of this his new Inquiry had been the ſame which the great Convert (the Apoſtle at his Converſion) his Thoughts were taken up withall the above meaſure Sinfulneſs of Sin, as Rom. 7. 10, 13. So in like manner Solomon came to ſee the abounding of Folly and Madneſs; and ſaw Wickedneſs upon Wickedneſs, Heaps upon Heaps, (as the Phraſe is) Judg. 15. Madneſs added to Folly, (Madneſs being an Exceſs of Folly) and he went to ſum up and ſearch out the Account of all.

Circuivi ego,& cor meum ad ſciendum, &c. So Arias Mont. Et Tigurina editio.

Converti me ego & cor meum. So Piſcator Junius.

The Hebrew Word being (as Hierome long ſince obſerved) ambiguous, and ſignifying as well the Number or Account, as the Reaſon of a thing; hence I take both to be intended: And ſo that both the Sum and Computation, as alſo the Reaſon or Bottom-ground of all that Wickedneſs, to have been the Aim and Mark of his ſo eager Purſuit.

Cheſbon; Quippe ſecundum Hebræi Sermonis ambiguitatem, & Numerum poſſumus & ſummam, & Rationem vel cogitationem dicere. Hieronimus in locum.

Septuaginta Ψῆφος, which is Calculus quo computatur. Ita Druſius in locum. Sonat Supputationem ſubductionem rationis. Mercer. Ratio pro computa. A Lapid. Montanus, Pagnin. Ferdinandus, & alii.

And according unto theſe two Acceptations of this one Word, I make an anſwerable Diviſion of the Words following, to be,

1. His Study, to compute with himſelf the numeral Account, that is, the infinite Number and Variety his Sinfulneſs did ariſe unto, from ver. 26, to the middle of ver. 28.

2. The rational Ground, which gave Bottom-light and Diſcovery of the Reaſon of that Sinfulneſs, and innumerableneſs thereof, whether in himſelf, or in all Mankind; which is fully ſet down in ver. 29.

I may term the one the Arithmetical Account, the other the Logical; and he purſueth the firſt in the former Part, and cloſeth with the ſecond in the laſt Verſe.

There is a ſecond Diviſion ſubalternate, and included in this firſt, as the more general. For whereas he ſays, ver. 25. he ſought after the Account or Reaſon of Wickedneſs. The next Inquiry neceſſary will be the Wickedneſs, of whom? or whoſe it was that was the matter of this Account? And the Anſwer hereunto cauſeth this other Diviſion of the Words, as to the Matter of the Account taken, whether in the one or other Senſe.

1*ſt.* His own: The Sinfulneſs of himſelf in his former Ways, diſcovered now upon his Repentance, and this chiefly.

2*dly.* But together therewith, of that univerſal Corruption of all Mankind, in both Sexes.

And theſe two you have inter-woven and carried on in the following Verſes, namely, 1. The Account of his own, ver. 26, 27, to the middle of 28. 2. The Account and Obſervation he made of others, chiefly in that which follows in the remaining Part of ver. 28, and 29.

I. He begins, and principally with the Account of his own Sinfulneſs, and that was it which he profeſſeth to have ſought more directly after; and as for that of others, but as led into it by occaſion of conſidering his own Follies. And becauſe this is a Matter not inſiſted on (though curſorily obſerved) by Interpreters, I ſhall therefore enlarge upon the Proof of it out of ver. 26.

You may obſerve to this purpoſe in this 26th Verſe, the ſaddeſt Reflection made upon himſelf, and in that which had been the eminent Failure and Stain of his Life, known to all, and noticed again and again in the Story of him in the Old Teſtament. I find more bitter than Death (ſays he) the Woman whoſe Heart is Snares and Nets, &c. he ſpeaks not contemplatively, this: but the moſt feelingly, and with the deepeſt ſenſe he could bewail it in [I find more bitter than Death] q. d. I would, if my time were mine own again, and afore me, to live over again, chooſe far rather to die, than ſo to have lived. Bitterneſs is the moſt abhorred Object that any of the Senſes have, and Death is the Extremity of things abhorred, and that it is his own Sinfulneſs that way, that circumſtantial Paſſage in ver. 28. confirms, That he had not found one Woman of a thouſand, (which is the exact number of his Women upon roll, 1 Kings 11. 3.) whom he had converſed withal, ſo pointing at himſelf. And further, he acknowledgeth this to have been a great Effect of God's Diſpleaſure on him, and Puniſhment of other Sins whilſt he had ſo walked, in ſaying, Whoſo is good (or greatly accepted) in the ſight of God, ſhall eſcape from her; that is, altogether eſcape, which he had not the favour from God altogether to do: yet withal, celebrating this ſpecial Token of his having been beloved of God, in this, that in the end he had eſcaped from her, through this his ſerious and true Repentance; and therefore, profeſſeth to utter this and what follows, as a penitent gathered Soul unto the Church again, ver. 27. For that that Indigitation of his [thus ſays the Preacher] doth import ſo much, is enough known, that I need not inſiſt on it. And ordinarily when it is brought in in this Book, (which is not often) it fore-runs or follows ſome weighty Matter of Penitence, or of feeling experience in himſelf. Nor indeed can we imagine, that when his Heart was tender (as it was when he wrote this Book) even as Joſias in reading the Book of the Law, and that when he profeſſeth to have given over the impetuous ſearch after other Wiſdom, on purpoſe to convert his Heart to attend his ſearching into Wickedneſs and Folly, that he ſhould not principally intend his own. And again, that ſpeaking of a Matter that came ſo near him; and ſo particularly home to him, (as what he here-about ſays of Women doth) that his main Scope ſhould yet be to reflect upon the Sins of others, and ſtudy them; to obſerve the Beams in others Eyes, and not firſt and principally thoſe Pearls (as one wittily ſaid of David's love of Bathſheba) in his own. In this caſe, could his principal Aim be ſuppoſed to be only to declaim againſt, and ſet forth the Sinfulneſs of Women, more than to lament his own in that particular? Sure it is, that he winds in the mention of them, and their Wickedneſs that wound him in, but to exaggerate his own. It is certainly therefore his own account he intends.

The moſt Interpreters do dilute the true Vigor and Spirit that filled Solomon's Heart in this, ſo eminently a penitential Paſſage, whilſt they repreſent Solomon to ſpeak but as an Obſervator or Animadverter of what Wickedneſs he, as a Stander-by and Looker-on, had noticed to be in Women; as if himſelf had been no otherwiſe concerned therein. And they generally make no more of it. Whereas we find Solomon here in his Month; and a being in Bitterneſs and Mourning, (as the Prophet ſpeaks) in a deep Bewailment of his own Follies. This, learned Grotius eaſily perceived, chuſing to leave this ſole Animadverſion upon it; "We have Solomon here brought in as one touched (or ſtruck) with "the Conſcience of his own Miſcarriages and evil Actings, of which chiefly "Women were the cauſe and Actors of him. Some few other Interpreters there are that ſpeak more fully to this Aim, whom I need not name; and many there are that have Touches and Glimmerings towards ſuch a ſenſe, which yet we find darkened and overcaſt again by their Runnings out upon this other Interpretation.

But that Solomon's Eye and Aim in this ſad Paſſage, was chiefly upon his own Sinnings, there are many things laid together do evince.

1. That his Sins with and by occaſion of Outlandiſh Women, had been the eminent Stain of his Life, is ſo known as it needs not to be inſiſted upon. The Story of him doth again and again notice it, as 1 Kings 11. 2. that Solomon [clave unto theſe in Love:] And long after he was dead, the Memory of his Example is revived, and that as a rare and ſingular Inſtance for Admonition, Neh. 13. 36. Even him did Outlandiſh Women cauſe to ſin. How then can we imagine that himſelf here, not mentioning only, but ſo vehemently exclaiming againſt them as Snares and Occaſions unto Sin, ſhould not intend his own Sinnings with them, which the Scriptures ſo brand him with?

And,

And, 2. His own Expreſſion points us to that which after follows; thoſe very Women of his, whom the Story mentions to have been Temptations to him. This that Circumſtance in ver. 28. ſhews, One Woman of a thouſand (as the Oppoſition there to one of a thouſand Men ſhews) I have not found; which is the juſt exact Number of his Women in his Serrayle, upon record, 1 Kin. 11. 3. as thoſe whom he had converſed withal. Thus plainly pointing at himſelf and them. And then,

3. It is the moſt generally-received Opinion, that he wrote this Book as a Teſtimony of his Repentance. Which, beſides that the Matter of it is a perfect decrying of all he had formerly acted, as Vanity; the Title alſo which he gives both the Book and himſelf, ſo often repeated by him, [Thus ſays the penitent Soul gathered to the Church] ſhews; and which you may obſerve to be in the very next Verſe indigitated by him, upon this very Occaſion of ſearching into his Sinfulneſs. And I call it his penitential Mark, (of which afterwards.) Can we then imagine, that when his Heart was tender, as in writing this his Book it was, (as Joſiah's in reading the Book of the Law) that he here coming, ſo ſettly, to ſpeak of a Matter that came, above all other, ſo near him, and ſo particularly home to him, (as what here about Women doth) that the chief Intention of his Mind ſhould be upon the Sins he had obſerved in theſe Women, and not upon his own Sins, with them and by reaſon of them? Or that his Scope above all, ſhould be to obſerve the Beams in their Eyes, and not firſt and principally thoſe Pearls in his own? (as one wittily ſpeaks of David's calling Bathſheba a Pearl in one Eye, and his Murder a Bloodſhot in the other.) 'Tis true, he exclaims againſt the Sins of his Women, but it is to exaggerate and lament his own.

But theſe are but general Evidences, though making this probable, if not more than ſo.

II. Let us conſider the particular Words in the Text: He that ſounds into them with the fathoming Line, may find and fathom a Soul heavy loaden with the burden of Sin, and drawing a deep Water (as Sea-men uſe to ſpeak) of the Senſibleneſs thereof. Let us conſider every word in it.

1. And out of the ſenſe of his own Bitterneſs within himſelf, he utters this here, [I find more bitter the Woman, &c.] He ſays indeed the Woman, but metonymically means, that together with them, the remembrance of his Sins was bitter to him, the Sins which they had been the means and cauſes of in him. Sin being once revived in the Conſcience, makes the remembrance of every Perſon, Place, Thing, that minds him of it, bitter to an humbled Soul.

2. [And, Sin I find more bitter.] He ſpeaks not contemplatively this, as Men uſe to do their Obſervations or Animadverſions of the Sins of others; but he ſpeaks his own Senſe and perſonal Experience, I find it to my coſt. The Heart knows its [own] Bitterneſs, ſays the ſame Solomon, Prov. 14. 10. It was the Bitterneſs of his own Soul, that taſted the Bitterneſs of his own Sin, which his Soul had wrought, not others. I may apply that of the Prophet to him, His own Wickedneſs corrected him, and let him [know] how evil and [bitter a thing] it was to ſin againſt the Lord. Jer. 2. 19. And with ſuch a ſenſe he ſpeaks it (as the Prophet Zechary ſpeaks of the Jews Repentance for crucifying Chriſt;) he was in Bitterneſs and in Mourning, as one that is in Bitterneſs for his only Son; or as of that famous Penitent, who is ſaid to have wept bitterly. Zech. 12. 10. Matth. 26. 75.

3. [More bitter than Death.] It is one Diſpoſition of a repenting Soul that truly feels the Bitterneſs of Sin, to ſay with it ſelf, I had rather die, and die ten thouſand Deaths, than ſin again as I have done. And to this effect, Solomon expreſſeth himſelf here, [I find more bitter than Death;] which is too deep a Speech for any but a Penitent to utter, and then only in the caſe of his own Sins. Bitterneſs is the moſt abhorred Object any of the Senſes have; and Death is the Extremity of things abhorred: (unto which therefore, Bitterneſs is aſcribed by way of Particularity, 1 Sam. 15. 32.) but here is a Bitterneſs above that of Death.

4. Nor

Book XI.

4. Nor means he only bodily Death, but the ſecond Death, Hell it ſelf; Her end is more bitter than Wormwood; for her Steps take hold on Hell, ſays the ſame Solomon, Prov. 5. 5. And the Wormwood, that grows in and about the Banks of that infernal Lake, (the Wrath of God) was not ſo bitter to Solomon's taſte, as was his Sin, that grew out of his own Heart. — And a more ſublimated Property and Affection of a genuine and ſpiritual Repentance (and which is indeed proper to it) there is not to be found, than to taſte a greater Bitterneſs in Sin than is in Hell it ſelf. Yet to this degree of Soundneſs, was Solomon's ſpiritual Taſte reſtored, when he ſpake this; and it could come from no other than a true penitential Frame and Diſpoſition, which he muſt be likewiſe in, at that time whilſt he was ſpeaking of it. For it is one of the moſt raiſed Evangelical Affections an holy Heart can exerciſe, as towards Sin, that the Apoſtle's Pen could reach to expreſs this by, ἀποστυγοῦντες τὸ πονηρὸν, Rom. 12. 9. which Words import, abhorring evil as Hell, from στὺξ, and more than Hell, ſays Solomon.

III. The next Words,

Whoſe Heart is Snares and Nets,
Whoſe Hands are Bands.

Both which do make up but one continued Sentence with the former Words, and therefore are ſtill neceſſarily to be underſtood that he ſpeaks of what himſelf had found that Sex, the Women, to have been unto him. — I find the Woman more bitter than Death, whoſe Heart is Nets, &c. And therein ſhews wherein the Bitterneſs he had found lay, namely, from the Snares and Nets wherewith they had ſeduced him unto Sins: And though he ſeems to ſpeak of the Wickedneſs that was in their Hearts, in ſaying, [whoſe Heart is, &c.] yet not ſingly or ſimply, as it was immanent in them, or had been acted within themſelves; but mainly, to ſignify how operative and potent they had been upon his Heart; which thoſe Metaphors do principally import. Theſe Nets, tho woven by their Hearts, yet were to catch his Heart, which when framed once, they uſed as Draggs to draw him unto ſuch Sins as otherwiſe were againſt his Heart ever to have committed.

Moreover, By theſe Nets and Snares that enſnared himſelf, he doth not ſimply mean the Inordinacy of his amorous Affections towards them, or the ſinful Pleaſures which had immediately flowed from thoſe Affections and Enjoyments, (which yet the Story firſt notes as the riſe of that which now follows to be mentioned, in prefacing to that Story, that Solomon clave to theſe in Love, 1 Kings 11. 2.) but chiefly his Heart here was upon thoſe conſequential Sins, which they, working upon that Love, drew him into. And that is it which the following Part of the Story wholly inſiſts on, as the dreadful Effects of thoſe his Loves. For it immediately follows in ver. 3, 4. His Wives turned away his Heart (namely, through that Love;) for Solomon went after Aſhteroth, the Goddeſs of the Sidonians, and after Milcom the Abomination of the Ammonites, ver. 5. Not that he was an Idolater himſelf, for in ver. 6. it is as by Diminution thereof ſaid, That he went [not fully] after the Lord; implying himſelf forſook not the Worſhip of the true God. But ver. 7, 8. the matter of Fact charged on him is, Then did Solomon build a Place for Chemoſh the Abomination of Moab, [in the Hill that is before Jeruſalem]; and for Moloch the Abomination of Ammon; and likewiſe did he for all his ſtrange Wives, which burnt Incenſe, and ſacrificed to their Gods, even of all the Nations round about, ver. 2. (Note, [For them] not for himſelf.) And unto this with their Nets they drew him, and with their Draggs pulled him out of the element his Heart was in, which was his Life, the Commandments of God, ver. 10. The Iniquity of which, and the Aggravations of it, no Tears of Repentance could enough lament. That one Circumſtance (beſides what God himſelf doth aggravate his Sin by, ver. 9, 10, 11. which I leave to the Reader to peruſe) I only mention, that he had built thoſe Idol-Temples upon an Hill before Jeruſalem; ſo ver. 7. as thereby even out-facing God himſelf, ſuch was the ſpiteful Ambition of the Devil. [Of God] who ſat between the Cherubims in the Temple, Temple, built on the oppoſite Hill Sion. Inſomuch that God could not look out of his Holy Place, (as the Phraſe in the Pſalms is) but his Proſpect juſt before it muſt be theſe profane Temples and their Idols, Ezek. 43. 8. Poſt by Poſt exalted Chriſt and Belial. This Fact came very far up to the open Breach of the very Letter of the firſt Commandment, Thou ſhalt have none other God before my Face, (ſo in the Hebrew) yea, and againſt my Face, as the Original Words will alſo bear. Chap. 1.

Moreover, how many Perſons by his Kingly Authority were ſet a-work to build thoſe Temples for thoſe ſeveral Gods of his ſeveral Wives? and ſo thereby he became guilty of ſo many Sins to himſelf, as there were Perſons imployed by him, or Actions of thoſe Perſons about it, or Aſſiſtants in the Work; as alſo in carving thoſe Images, adorning thoſe Temples or High-places: Alſo at what an exceſſive Coſt and Expence he muſt be ſuppoſed to have been at, not only to maintain ſo great a Seraglio of ſeven hundred Princeſſes, and three hundred Concubines, and their Retinue, 1 Kings 11. 3. but further, to build ſtately Temples, High-places, make Proviſion for Sacrifices, Idol-Feaſts; and then afford a liberal Allowance to ſo many ſeveral Idolatrous Prieſts and Devotaries for their ſeveral Worſhips; and all aggravated by this, that he thereby increaſed the Taxes of the People, who, the Story notes, had been ſufficiently already burthened for the finiſhing the Temple, and his own Houſes and Proviſions, 1 Kings 4. 7. but the Yoke grew more grievous by theſe new Occaſions, 1 Kings 12. 4.

O what is Man! that ever he, that built the Temple of God by God's ſpecial Deſignment of him thereto, above all Men elſe, yea, and rather than of his Father David, and who uttered and penned that firſt moſt excelling Prayer at the Conſecration of it, 1 Kings 8. that that ſame Man ſhould be ſo bewitched as to build Temples to Devils, and that in ſuch a Place! But it was theſe Nets and Snares drew him to all this.

It hath been wondred at by ſome Interpreters, why Solomon in the Rehearſal of all other Vanities, as Muſick, pleaſant Orchards, Gardens, Wine, and other the Delights of the Sons of Men, in the firſt and ſecond Chapters, ſhould leave out the mention of theſe his Women there. But the Reaſon may appear, that he reſerved his Repentance for theſe Sins that followed the inordinate Love of them, unto this as a more peculiar proper Place for it; thereby to make it the more ſingular and notorious to that Place, when he ſhould more fetly come to mention the Account of Wickedneſs and Sin, and to expreſs the Work of Humiliation upon himſelf for it. Which he accordingly ſets out not only as Vanity of Vanities, &c. above all his Vanities; (theſe were terms too low to his Senſe to utter this by) but loads his Sins herein with the worſt of Words he could, Folly, Madneſs, Wickedneſs;——As alſo that their Temptations had been that unto his very Soul, what Nets are to Fiſhes and Fowls, in which they are caught to their Ruine: (She hunts for the precious Life, Prov. 6. 26.) or elſe what Snares or Toils are unto wild Beaſts made to be taken and deſtroyed. Alſo he compares them to Bonds and Chains, in which either enſlaved Captives, or Perſons condemned to Death, are kept and reſerved unto Execution: Inſtruments of Death all, and of Death unto the Soul. O it is bitter! (ſays he here) and reacheth to the Heart, (as the Prophet adds) more bitter than Death; and he means not the firſt Death only, as I ſhewed, but Hell it ſelf. So that what the Apoſtle ſpeaks of Covetouſneſs, that it is not only a great Evil in it ſelf, but alſo the Root of all Evil to ſome Men, drawing on with it a World of other Sins, as Conſequents thereof: ſuch was this one Sin, the Love of his Wives, unto Solomon; which beſides and beyond what Inordinacy was ſingly and alone in that way of Sinning in and by it ſelf, it proved a Root of Evil, of many other Evils to him, a Mother of great Abominations; he fell into Temptation and a Snare, &c. but I ſhall have occaſion again to parallel that Place and this.

IV. Thoſe other two Paſſages in the Cloſe of the Verſe; Whoſo pleaſeth God (or who is good in the Sight and Face of God) ſhall eſcape from her: But the Sinner ſhall be taken by her.

Theſe

Book XI.

Theſe may ſeem in the manner of his uttering them, to be far remote from containing any penitential Strain in them; and to be but merely two doctrinal Aphoriſms and Monitories given to others of the Sons of Men, as touching theſe Sins.

And yet, ſo taken, they expreſs to this Effect, That a Man's being given to ſuch low, vile, and fooliſh Luſtings and Affections of this kind, is a more ſpecial Token of God's ſevere Anger and Diſpleaſure againſt that Man, and a Puniſhment from God of other preceding Sins and Looſneſs of Spirit in another kind; and a ſeverer Puniſhment by far than any outward Judgments in Eſtate, Body, &c. This I underſtand to be the Spirit and Mind of thoſe Words, [The Sinner] ſhall be taken by her: Where, by Sinner, I underſtand one that is and hath been by way of Eminency ſuch; one that is guilty in other kinds of Sinnings to ſome ſpecial Degree, by giving way to other Luſts, and not ſtrictly or only to be limited to any mere unregenerate Man; and his Purpoſe is to ſhew, that there is uſually a great Diſpleaſure towards any Man from God, by reaſon of former Sins, that is intangled in ſuch Luſtings as theſe; and this likewiſe ſo far as he is intangled in them. And thoſe oppoſite Words, [Whoſo pleaſeth God, ſhall eſcape] (that is, altogether eſcape, or at leaſt ſo far as to be kept from thoſe Inordinacies in this kind) do confirm this Interpretation, ſignifying, that it is both a ſingular ſpecial Token of God's Grace, Favour and Acceptation of ſuch a Man; as alſo that it is a ſpecial Fruit and Reward of former ſtrict and exact Walking: * the Words well bearing each of theſe Interpretations, of the firſt of which we ſhall have uſe afterwards. And though Solomon's Caſe here was not utterly that which himſelf elſewhere ſpeaks of, Prov. 22. 14. A ſtrange Woman (ſaith he) is a deep Ditch; and he that is abhorred of the Lord, ſhall fall therein. This, I ſay, was not utterly Solomon's Caſe, for though they were outlandiſh Women, yet they had been taken into his Boſom as Wives; (inaſmuch as ſome apply theſe two Sentences of Solomon here; the 1*ſt*, unto the Bleſſing to have good Wives, and to eſcape bad; and the 2*d*, unto the Curſe of having evil Wives) who though according to the Strictneſs of the Law were to have been put away, as all ſtrange Wives were, Ezra 10. 3, 19. But yet it would ſeem that there was a common Apprehenſion and Pretenſion among the Jews for the keeping of them, if they were Wives already, as appears by that very Inſtance in Ezra: Nor yet had Solomon's Perſon become ſuch an Abomination to the Lord, as himſelf in the Proverbs ſpeaks of, God's Love and Grace reviving again towards him; as we ſhall ſee here alſo to be inſinuated by and by. Yet however a grievous Puniſhment and Diſpleaſure from God there was in it, to have left him thus foully to tranſgreſs in marrying them, and to cleave ſo in love unto them. And thus much as to the Effect of theſe two Paſſages, conſidered barely as they are Doctrinal Monitories.

But withal it muſt be acknowledged, that theſe two Sayings do to a great Degree ſet out what had been and was his own individual Caſe, and indeed are an Abſtract of it. For to be ſure, he had not altogether eſcaped, but was taken by her, (as hath been ſhewed) ſo as if we underſtand them as Doctrinal Admonitions, (as they are) yet thus much further muſt be granted, that they coming ſo home to himſelf, he could not have taken the matter hereof ſo much as into his Thoughts, much leſs ſo deliberately into his Pen; but (if not hardned) he muſt be affected with a deep Senſe of his own Condition, as a grievous Sinner, in the uttering of them, as well as in the former Words we have ſeen he was. It was a ſerious and ſolemn Repentance therefore, which did thruſt theſe forth here, as well as it had done the former.

And that a true Penitent ſhould expreſs and lament his own Unhappineſs, and alſo accuſe, condemn and lament himſelf, under a comparative View and Conſideration, made and taken of God's Dealings towards others, (whether of ſuch as have been kept innocent, or otherwiſe guilty of the ſame Enormities) and ſo there-under to bewail himſelf the more, cannot be thought ſtrange or uncouth unto any one that knoweth what the Exerciſes of ſerious Repentance

tance are; nay, it is moſt proper to the Nature thereof. My meaning is, that for ſuch a Soul to bewail himſelf in ſuch a way as this: "There are others, "that having walked cloſely and circumſpectly with God, whom God hath "and will keep from ſuch or ſuch Miſcarriages, which I have run into: And "O, how happy are ſuch! For he that pleaſeth God, and is good in his Sight, "ſhall eſcape them. But alas! I have not been ſuch nor ſo good in his Sight, "as to have had this Favour from him; but out of his juſt Diſpleaſure taken "at other Sins; I, wretched I, have been left by him to theſe, as a Puniſh-"ment of thoſe former Sins: The Sinner is and ſhall be taken. And even ſuch an one lamenteth the more for this, that God ſhould have been ſo juſtly diſpleaſed at him, as in ſuch a manner to puniſh him, and that he ſhould give occaſion to it more than others had done. Chap. 1.

It is certain, that the Church (or Jeremiah, or both) Lam. 3. in her Repentings there recorded, doth in ſome like ſort or ſtrain mournfully warble forth her own Condition: She had begun (as here) ver. 1. to ſpeak in her own Perſon, [I] and ſo carries it on all along, as therein Grammatically ſpeaking of her ſelf unto ver. 25. but then ſhe turns the manner of her Speech, and falls to utter the reſt in the Third Perſon, [He] ſetting down by way of Doctrinal Maxims, what is the wont and guiſe of true penitent Souls, as what others in her Caſe uſe to do, He ſits alone, and puts his Mouth in the Duſt, &c. and yet ſtill ſhe means her ſelf in all theſe, and vents her own Condition under theſe, as well as in the former ſhe had done. And thus doth Solomon here.

And he that conſiders what was even now ſaid, how near all this came to Solomon's Heart, whilſt he was writing this, may well grant that he here ſtill continues to ſpeak but his own Experience, and but what he had full dearly learned, and upon repenting had laid to Heart, and that indeed he but wraps up and forms his own particular Reflections of God's Dealings with him, and of his towards God, into theſe two wholeſom Pills, for others to take, from his probatum eſt: So as I may ſay of it, Repentance wrought this Experience, (or experimental Review or Recognition) and Experience brought forth theſe Axioms, and all as now grown out of his own Heart, and he venting his Heart thereby.

But then let this further be added for Confirmation of this, that his [I find] in the preceding Sentence (which leads on and gives Aim to theſe Words) doth evidently ſend down unto theſe following Sayings a continued (though implied) Application to himſelf; ſo as we may as well ſet a new [I find] before theſe Words alſo, (though but as underſtood) as well as himſelf had done to the former; and then to be in effect as if he had ſaid; And I find alſo, that he that pleaſeth God, and is good in his Sight, eſcapes her; but I have not been ſo good nor ſo happy.

In fine, upon all theſe Accounts methinks the Pulſe of Solomon's Heart (for there runs a ſecret Artery under the Veins of theſe Words) doth beat with a double Motion therein.

The firſt of a deep Bewailment, as to this Effect; Alas! that ever I, who at my very Birth was declared and owned by God to be his Beloved, and unto whom God had, when I was as yet young and tender, appeared twice, thereby to allure my Heart unto him; at which times alſo God commanded and forewarned me concerning this very thing, that I ſhould not go after other Gods, thereby in a ſpecial manner admoniſhing me above all things, to look to and beware of that, and of all whatever that ſhould any way lead to or be occaſion of it; of which God alſo as expreſſedly foretold would be the certain Event of marrying outlandiſh Wives: They ſurely will turn away thy Heart after other Gods. And yet that I, wretched I, in the future Progreſs of my Life ſhould firſt prove ſo vain a Sinner, as (finding I had all the Freedoms and Pleaſures of a King in my Power and within my Reach, without Controul to injoy) thereupon to give up my Heart to a looſe and inordinate Uſe of all ſorts of the Delights of the Sons of Men, lawful, to the utmoſt Exceſs therein; and ſo ſhould thereby, through Luſts, running out unto and intermixing with all theſe, ſo far provoke God, as in the End further to leave me to worſer and theſe more wild extravagant exotick Affections, unto outlandiſh Wives out of all the Na- tions, &c. And that I thus proceeding on through God's Diſpleaſure from Evil to worſe, ſhould be ſo infettered and inſnared in their Toils, as to be drawn by them, to ſet up other Gods, and the idolatrous Worſhip of them, and build Temples to them, &c. And O the Diſpleaſure of God againſt me in this way ſhewn! that he ſhould be ſo provoked as to give up my Soul from one Sin to another, until it came to theſe! This wounds my Soul; eſpecially the more when withal I compare mine own Wretchedneſs herein with others of the Sons of Iſrael, that have continued good in the Eyes of the Lord, and pleaſed him by a ſtrict and holy Walking, who have been and ſhall be kept from (yea, altogether eſcape) ſuch groſs Sinnings as theſe, out of a ſpecial Favour and Reſpect, which God hath had unto them. O, but I, wretched I, have not been thus good, nor had the Grace in my own Heart, nor Mercy from God, but have been caught and taken, like one of the light Fools and Sinners in Iſrael. And thus ſighs and waileth he.

Yet withal there is a ſecond ſecret Motion and Out-breathing a contrary way, (as of Man's Heart and Pulſe there is) namely, a magnifying or celebrating with Joy the rich and free Goodneſs of God towards himſelf, which I take to be the Spirit that runs in the Vein of theſe Words, He that is good in the Sight or Face of God, ſhall eſcape her. I find many Interpreters to give the Scope of that Phraſe, Good in his Sight, to denote not ſcantily one that is good or vertuous in that Particular of Chaſtity or Good at large: but ſuch an one whom God loves, favours, and who is the Object of God's free and ſoveraign Grace, out of which Grace alone, God is moved within himſelf to deliver ſuch an one, though formerly he had been addicted unto that kind of Sinning from ſuch Intanglements and Snares. The End why I alledg this Interpretation is, That Solomon hereby doth ſet forth his own Caſe in this, as well as his ſinful Caſe in the foregoing; and ſo that Solomon ſhould have an Eye to God's gracious Dealings with himſelf: whilſt he uttered this, [He that is good in the Face or Favour of God] tacitly ſignifying, that now at laſt, that Love and Grace, which at firſt had taken hold of him, as the Jedidiah, the Beloved of the Lord, had now revived and flouriſhed again towards him; had broke forth and manifeſted it ſelf in an eminent Degree of Favour upon him, in giving him a ſerious, ſound and effectual Repentance; in the Power and Efficacy of which he was enabled utterly or clean to eſcape (as the Apoſtle's Word is, 2 Pet. 2.) from out of theſe Fetters; and thereupon with Joy, like an enthralled Priſoner newly delivered, points to his Gives and Chains, in the Words foregoing, as if he had ſaid, Now there my Fetters lie, and here am I eſcaped through the infinite Goodneſs of God. Thus much that Conviction and Senſe of his own Sins, and the Dealings of God with him, are intended by him in ver. 26.

CHAP.

Chap. 2.

CHAP. II.

That the infinite Number of his Sins is here the Issue or Product of his seeking to find out the Account (which was the Fourth Head propounded.) Some Difficulties previously solved, for the clearing that this is the Scope. The Elegancy of his expressing that this Account was Numberless, by saying, Behold [this I find, &c. but I find not.]

THe Exposition of the foregoing Verses hitherto, hath been but preparatory to this the Subject in Hand, which is specially contained in these Words.

Wherein he sets down a second and further Conviction (of which in the Division I spake) which extends and comprehends the Sins of his whole Life. And this is that which is the Grand Account, and so stiled by him [the Account] and ushered in with the greatest Solemnity. [Behold, this have I found, says the Preacher.]

In the former ver. 26. he insisted more especially upon the Heinousness of Guilt, (which he found most bitter) in one particular way of sinning: But in this he proceeds on to the general account of the total; and, as a convicted Person, acknowledgeth a Judgment of the whole Debt, which he confesseth to be infinite, and past finding out.

That which we have gained by so enlarged an Exposition of the former Verse, hath been this, that they were his own Sins which he aimed to give the account of in all these Verses: And that he speaks thereof as a Penitent. Which we shall carry along with us as his main Scope into these 27*th* and 28*th* Verses, which now follows as a New Text to be expounded. And yet further that they concern his own Sins and the Sins of his whole Life, as a Penitent, will more abundantly appear in the opening of them in the next succeeding Chapter, as also in the Fourth.

That which is my Task in this Chapter, is to conflict with, and break through some Difficulties, in the outward Shell of these Words, which the inward Pith or Sense given, as the Kernel, is inclosed in. And unto any ordinary Readers first View and Essay, the outward Expressions, and manner thereof, have a sensible Hardness and Crust in them.

The Difficulties are such as these, what the This have I found points at, and referrs to? and whether that it centers and determines in I find not. And that there the full Period is set to the whole Sentence, and ends. Also the Circumlocution, or his fetching a compass about to express himself, counting one by one to find, &c. and that he should close with so strange a Riddle, But I find not, when yet he had said, This I found. These, and the Phraseology and the Contrivance of his Speech about them, I must first overcome and settle.

I choose to manage the Assoiling of these, as also the whole Exposition that follows, by way of Queries and then Answers thereto (which I call Assertions) orderly succeeding each the other; and so placed and disposed as the Answer to the First Query begets a Second Query: And then the Answer unto that, occasioneth a Third Query, and so on; till they have brought forth the full meaning of the whole, and every thing therein. And this Course I shall hold both in this and the following Chapters.

Our First and Fundamental Query must be concerning the [This;] a small Word, This have I found, that meets us at the First. What that should refer unto?

Book XI.

The Reaſon of this Query is: Becauſe it is plain that of the Account it ſelf, he ſays, He found it not.

The [This] then is not the Account it ſelf, and yet muſt be ſome great matter concerning that Account: for 'tis prefaced with a Behold, This have I found.

Anſwer, The Dutch Annotators have bluntly given this brief Reſolve of it. I find nothing elſe but this, that as yet I find nothing. So making the [This have I found,] abſolutely to determine and center in, [I find not.] And ſo his meaning to be this, That whereas he declared, that he had applied himſelf to ſeek the Account, ver. 25. He now makes this Return of that his Grand Inqueſt, as the Verdict of the Jury of his Pains and Study impanell'd and laid out thereon, to be a Non Inventus, a Bill not found, as Jurors uſe to ſpeak. Thus making [But I find] to be the very Object, or Terminus, and the very This, which he ſays he found; and with that the whole Sentence to end.

But I had this Demur at their paraphraſing the Senſe thus, that the Language would not bear it without an Harſhneſs. For if indeed he had ſaid, This I have found, That I find not: The Language had been ſmooth and even, as for ſuch a meaning. But this, But, coming in between, ſeems to make an Exception againſt the bringing of theſe two Sayings together, as to that Senſe. For to ſay, I have found, But I find not; and to intend and mean, I find, That I find not, is incongruous, and hobling in the way of ſpeaking.

But then that which now follows plain'd or ſmooth'd the But, or Rubb, in the way again unto the Senſe given. That is true, if theſe two Sayings mentioned had immediately followed one the other, there would have been that ſeeming Harſhneſs mentioned: But we ſee there are many intermediate Words do come between them, both after the firſt, This have I found, which begins the whole Sentence; and afore, But I find not, which ends it. Thoſe intermediate Words are theſe, counting one by one, to find out the Account, which yet my Soul ſeeketh; and then follows, But I find not: (the Senſe of thoſe Words being this, I have uſed my utmoſt diligence to find it, and do ſtill ſeek after it.) Now then, after all this, to cloſe all with But I find not, is moſt congruous: For by this the Interpoſition of But, is occaſioned by, and relateth to thoſe endeavours uſed, as not arriving at what he aimed to find. And likewiſe ſerves to encreaſe the Wonder of his Behold, &c. and yet withal ſtill yokes well enough theſe two Sayings, the firſt and the laſt, together: I ſay, take them, and all this between, together (and take in all we muſt, for they all concur to make the Sentence compleat) and then the Language is round enough, and all runs in a fair and direct Channel into this our Interpretation given; Behold This (upon tryal) I have found; namely This, that I have ſet my ſelf by counting to find out the Account, But, notwithſtanding, I find it not.

But beſides, there are many Verſions render it, [And I find not] which Tranſlation is yet more yeilding and plyant to this our Senſe.

And thus we may ſee, This I have found, though placed at the Beginning remotely from the Cloſe, yet gently to rowl down through all thoſe intermediate winding Paſſages, and taking them along with it ſelf, to fix it ſelf at laſt in I find not, as its Terminus, and there reſts. And ſo the whole of all, ultimately terminating in [I find not] is, that very This which Solomon intendeth here, and ſays he found.

And thus this Clauſe, in the Senſe now given, doth abſolutely ſtand entire, and clear a-part, from both the foregoing and the following Words, as thoſe which do make up a whole compleat Sentence within themſelves, that we need not take in the next ſucceeding Words, One Man have I found, &c. (as ſome would) to perfect them into an entire Sentence. And we ſhall find (when it comes to be opened) even that ſucceeding Sentence, one Man among a thouſand have I found, &c. to ſtand out likewiſe, in the Senſe thereof, from this here, and to ſubſiſt on its own Feet, as being another diſtinct Maxim of, and within it ſelf.

And in the mean while, till we come to the opening thereof, there is this in the General, that may afore-hand ſerve as ſufficient Evidence, That theſe (my Text) make one Period, or full Sentence, and thoſe ſucceeding Words another; even even the Order and Conduct which Solomon obſerveth throughout the whole Paragraph, which is this, That whereas in the firſt place he had ſhewn, he had ſet his Heart to ſearch and ſeek the Account, ver. 25. then in the reſt that follows to the end of the Chapter, he gives forth four Maxims as the ſeveral Iſſues and Products he had experimented of that his Search. And to the end that his Reader might be able to diſcern them in their diſtinction one from another, he takes up this form of Speech, I find, or, I have found, which he hath four times up, prefixing or affixing it anew to every one of thoſe ſpecial Maxims. Thus he begins his firſt particular return of account, I find, more bitter than Death the Woman, &c. that's the firſt: and then begins this new and ſecond one with, This have I found, ver. 27. which endeth with a But I find not, with which he perfecteth the ſecond. He then in like equipage of Speech gives out a third in the end of ver. 28. One Man have I found, but one Woman I have not found. Then a fourth, which is the concluſion of the whole 29*th* Verſe, This only have I found, &c. that is, this only to my full Satisfaction, That God made Man upright, but they, &c. So as a [this have I found] ſtill parts every Period, as a mark of Diviſion. And by repeating it thus four ſeveral times, I find, or, I have found, he ſevers the materials of each of theſe Sentences one from another, as we uſe to do by ſo many principal Poſts or Studs, ſo many Diviſions or Sets in a Row or Rail. And therefore we may conclude that theſe two Sentences before us in ver. 27, 28. the one my Text, the other, One Man have I found, &c. having two new [I founds] ſet them, that therefore they ſpeak of differing Matters, as well as thoſe other two Clauſes in ver. 26, 29. are generally acknowledged to do, theſe having the like poſts or marks of Separation ſet between them that thoſe other two have. Chap. 2.

The attentive obſervation of theſe things, though but Generals, concerning this Paſſage (my Text) now at the entrance, is a matter of great moment unto the true and right underſtanding of this Text, and ſo of the reſt of the whole Paragraph. And look what Scope or Aſpect Interpreters do put upon the [This] have I found, and what that ſhould refer to, that accordingly is made by them the Hinge upon which their particular Interpretations of all the reſt that follows do turn, this way or that in their Variety. And accordingly, that the [this] ſhould refer and centre in [I find that I cannot find it], (which is the Scope of it by me propoſed) is in like manner the very Hinge of that Interpretation which I am now purſuing.

A ſecond Query is, what ſhould be Solomon's intent and plainer meaning to expreſs himſelf thus in ſo ſtrange a Riddle, Behold, I find I find not.

The Anſwer in plainer words is, to ſhew that he found the matter of this Account to be infinite and paſt finding out. And indeed the beſt Commentators, though they carry the [this] either to the Wickedneſs of Women, ver. 26. or both Men and Women, in the ſucceeding Words, which I do not; yet they fall, in common, in with this general Paraphraſe or Senſe I now give, that Solomon's meaning was to expreſs, That he found it was infinite. And indeed the Phraſe it ſelf, I find not, (eſpecially as it is here coherenc'd) doth by comparing other Scriptures import no leſs; holding ſome leſſer Analogy in its drift and ſenſe with that expreſſion of the Apoſtle (as 'tis tranſlated) concerning the Ways of God, How unſearchable, &c. and his Ways paſt finding out, Rom. 11. 33. In like manner here, Solomon of his ſinful Ways, (though bearing a far leſs degree of proportion for Infiniteneſs) that they are paſt finding out. Or it correſponds with another like Phraſe uſed by the ſame Apoſtle, paſſing Knowledg. Yea, and if we view theſe Words in their Coherence, you may diſcern that Solomon comes near in Terms to both, and all of theſe of the Apoſtle: for in ſaying, I applied my Heart, 1. to ſearch, and alſo ſought; 2. to know; and 3. to find this Account, (all which you have in terminis, compare but ver. 25 and 27 together) and then for him to conclude, But I find it not, is all one as to ſay 'That 'upon ſearch into it, I found it to be, 1. Unſearchable; and 2. Paſſing my 'Knowledg; and 3. Paſt finding out; and ſo to be an Account infinitely beyond 'all Account I can give of it.

And ſuppoſing (by what hath been ſaid out of ver. 26. and ſhall be further proved proved in the next Chapter) that it is the Account of his own Sins he ſpeaks this of, then it is the ſame thing in effect which David his Father had uttered afore him, (tho in other words) Who can underſtand his Errors? Or Jeremy after him, the Heart, &c. who can know it? And in ſubſtance and ſenſe, the very ſame which David uſeth of God's infinite Thoughts of Love and Mercy in pardoning ſuch an infinite Multitude of Sins; Many are thy Thoughts, O God, to us-ward, they cannot be reckoned up in order to thee; if I would declare and ſpeak of them, they are more than can be numbred. 'Tis the effect of what Solomon intends here of his Sins, as ſhall be further ſhewn.

II. This Infinity, or ſurpaſſing his finding out, he further amplifies and exaggerates by ſetting out, 1. His Pains and Diligence uſed to find it, I applied my Heart to ſearch, to know, to ſeek out: three Words ſo multiplied and put together, import utmoſt Diligence, this in ver. 25. 2. Exactneſs in caſting the Accounts of it, Counting one by one to find the Account; ſo in ver. 27. (even as Arithmeticians do to bring their Accounts to a ballance.) 3. The Continuation of his Labours therein, Which my Soul YET ſeeks, that is, continues to do it. 4. By the Vehemency his Soul had in the proſecution, Which my very Soul ſeeks: And notwithſtanding all this, I find not. All theſe Streams empty themſelves into, and ſettle in this Gulph, I find not, neither Bank nor Bottom.

Unto which may be added the Abilities of Wiſdom and Underſtanding that Solomon was endowed withal; ſo as one ſhould think he had Counters enough, wherewith He (if ever any) might have been able to have numbred them, having an Underſtanding as large as the Sands upon the Sea-ſhore. But his Sins infinitely exceeded the Sands in number, (of which after) and paſſed both his, and all humane Underſtanding, and ſo his Skill fell ſhort: he found, as Aſaph ſays, it was too hard for him.

And therefore his Arithmetick failing him, he betakes himſelf to his Rhetorick: For what could be greater and higher, than for the moſt renowned wiſe Man that ever was, or will be in the World, and now anew made wiſer by the Light of a ſerious and thorow Repentance, properly directing and diſpoſing him to the knowledg of Sin, to make firſt ſo loud a Proclamation, Behold, this I have found. And then exaggerating the Matter, (as hath been opened) by his Pains in ſearching to find, &c. and all to ſhew that he valued the attainment of this above all other pieces of Wiſdom; and all this to raiſe up and heighten the Expectation of all who ſhould read this, what it would be he ſhould bring forth as the iſſue and product of this his ſearch and finding. And then to come off with this, But I find not; what ſhall I compare or liken it unto, but the Apoſtle's ſo ſolemn Story of his rapture into the third Heavens? And then all the News he brings from thence, ſhould be, that it was unutterable; and that he could tell nothing of it, was all he had to tell. This Contrivance and Circumlocution, and fetching the Matter about, which Solomon uſeth, was ſuch, as no Rhetorick or Invention can mend, whereby to ſet out the ſurpaſſing Infiniteneſs of this Account. This as to the mind and unriddling of this Riddle, I find I find not, in the general intent of it.

I now cloſe this Chapter, with adding this great Obſervation out of all hitherto, That Solomon judged this to be a Point of greateſt moment and concernment for all Men to know. In that of all Leſſons elſe which from experimental Repentance he had learned, he chuſeth to leave behind him but this alone, or at leaſt above all other, That upon his moſt exquiſite ſearch, he found his actual Sins were infinite; and to proclaim this with a Behold, and the greateſt Solemnity, calling upon all Men deeply to conſider it: which Point I ſhall enlarge upon afterwards.

CHAP. III.

A larger Confirmation of this Interpretation given, and a fuller Expoſition of the Words, by ſhewing that the Matter of this Account was of his own perſonal Wickedneſs, as a Penitent; and not only that one particular Sin, but of his whole Life paſt and preſent.

WHAT hath been hitherto ſpoken concerning the Way and Manner of his Speech uſed, and but in Generals, muſt needs beget further Deſires more certainly and particularly to be aſſured this to have been his Scope, and accordingly provoke to make a more narrow and thorow Inquiry,

What the ſubject Mattter or Thing this Account concerns, ſhould be?

And the Anſwer thereto is, That the Matter of this Account, whereof he pronounceth this, I find I find not, was,

I. An Account of Wickedneſs.
II. Of his own perſonal Follies and Wickedneſs; which,
III. As a Penitent he ſearch'd into, by Self-Examination, &c. and with Repentance for them.
IV. The Wickedneſs, not of that one particular way of ſinning only, but of his whole Life paſt and preſent.
V. That it was the innumerable Multitude riſing up afore him in his ſearch to ſuch an Infinity that cauſed him to ſay, Behold, this I have found I find it not.

Theſe Particulars I ſhall endeavour to demonſtrate, either out of theſe Words themſelves, or their coherence and aſpect to the Words foregoing or following after. And this by Parts. The four firſt in this Chapter, and the fifth in the next.

And this Reſolve comprehending many Particulars, whereof ſome will occaſion new Queries to be drawn forth, I ſhall therefore proſecute them in the way of Query and Anſwer, (whereof the one will beget the ſucceeding) as I have begun, till they have all of them brought forth.

I. To be ſure it was the Account of Wickedneſs, ſome or other, either of himſelf or others. For after he had in ver. 25. (as his Introduction) related how he was turned about, and had applied his Heart to know, ſearch and ſeek out the Account of Wickedneſs, &c. he here the ſecond time repeats and mentions this Account, and how de facto, and according to that Reſolution, he had purſued the ſeeking of it. And this alſo, although it be but a general Obſervation, yet conduceth greatly to fix the Interpretation, and to bring it to an Head; and ſtrikes off many other wide and wild Interpretations that are given of this Clauſe, which otherwiſe I ſhould not have indigitated.

II. They were his own perſonal Follies, ſought out by him he intends this of.

A late judicious Commentator obſerving how the word tranſlated ver. 25. [the reaſon] of things, did ſignify the Account, (as was by me obſerved) and to be alſo the very ſame word that is tranſlated the Account here in ver. 27. and that addition [of Things] not to be there in the Original: and withal, that Solomon in theſe words proſecutes the ſame Account that he had ſpoken of in ver. 25. he thereupon paraphraſeth the Words of ver. 25. thus, "Solomon applied his "Heart, or turned it about to ſeek Wiſdom, in taking account of himſelf, and "ſeeking Book XI. " ſeeking to know the Wickedneſs of his own Folly, and the Fooliſhneſs of his own " Madneſs. And ſo theſe Words (ſays he) in ver. 25. The Reaſon of things, " is better rendered, The Account of my ſelf and Ways. And according to " this Premiſe, he interprets theſe Words in my Text, ver. 27, 28. Of his own " Wickedneſs and Folly: Thus he. And it is certain, that if Solomon's own Sinfulneſs be aimed at in that Speech, ver. 25. then in this alſo. For 'tis evident it is one and the ſame Account in both, (which I ſhall urge by and by) which is confirmed by this, that ver. 26. (which comes between this Speech and it, in ver. 25. and ſo his main Scope tranſmits from ver. 25, unto this ver. 27.) treats (as I have ſhewed) of the Follies of himſelf, which he there bewaileth as a Penitent: And the Inference from thence will have a redoubled Strength for this, that therefore much more he goes on in theſe Words to ſpeak of his own perſonal Follies, he had ſought the Account of, but found it was infinite and paſt his Skill.—I here add no more, becauſe the whole of what follows in the very next ſucceeding third Section, does fully and directly ſerve to prove this Head alſo.

III. In a way of Repentance and daily Self-Examination and Search into them. Which appears by two Characters.

1. That he ſets to his penitential Mark or Token when he comes to theſe Words, and ſo upon the matter thereof, as being of a penitential Nature, Behold, this have I found, ſays the Soul that is by ſound Repentance gathered or returned to the Congregation of the Saints; and ſays it, to teſtify his true Repentance. This to be the comprehenſive Meaning of thoſe Words, rendered, Thus ſaith the Preacher, I take ſo much for granted amongſt Proteſtants, as I will not detain the Reader in a large Proof of it. The Word Coheleth is a Participle of the Feminine Gender, and therefore Interpreters uſe to ſupply it with Nepheſh, which is of the Feminine Gender alſo, and then it is all one as to ſay, a Soul gathered, as implied thereby. And whereas in thoſe other Places of this Book, where this Title comes in, it is joined with a Maſculine Verb, here alone the Verb Amorah [Saith] is in like manner Feminine, and ſo further ſerves to import his Soul to be intended, which is yet further confirmed by what doth immediately follow, ver. 28. which my Soul ſeeks: All which declare, that in this new Stile and Title Solomon intended his Soul as the Subject, as withal to ſhew how and with what a Vehemency his very Soul was in this matter ingaged. And then again, the Word Coheleth ſignifying a being gathered to the Congregation or the Church: It is inferred that therefore his Repentance was withal as ſignificantly connotated thereby: for by no other thing is a Soul truly gathered to the Church (or added to the Church, as the Apoſtle's Phraſe is) than by true and ſound Repentance: and it is the Soul that is the Subject of Repentance; and ſo ſtill in Scripture it is attributed to it, as therefore here, when Repentance is ſpoken of. And it is as ſure, that true Soul-Repentance is of and for a Mans own perſonal Sins; and therefore they muſt be intended. The Words of the fore-cited R. R. Annotators Paraphraſe upon this Word, are theſe, " Solomon here added this Clauſe (ſays he) to teſtify " to the Church his Repentance, namely, This have I found, ſaith the Soul, " which by ſound Repentance is returned unto the Congregation of the Saints, " which was before enſnared in the Nets and Bands of ſeducing Women. To that ſpecial Sin indeed he reſtrains it here, but I extend it to the Sins of his whole Life.

I call this Solomon's Penitential Mark or Token, (proper to him in this his Book of Repentance) only in Alluſion as in Point of Speech, unto that great Apoſtle's Apoſtolical terming that one of his Mark, or Token, ſet by him to all his Epiſtles, 2 Theſſ. 3. 17.

Now put but all theſe together; 1. An Account ſpoken of; 2. An Account of Folly and Wickedneſs. 3. Which my Soul yet ſeeks to find, 4. ſays the penitent Soul. And what Account elſe ſhould this be ſuppoſed to be, other than the Account of his own Sins, and Follies of his own Soul?—And then by what other Ways and Means ſhould it be, he did yet ſeek out that Account, other than by Self-Examination and a daily ſearching into, and ſo computing of it?

A ſecond Character that he ſpeaks all this in a way of daily Self-examination and Repentance, is that great Vehemency wherewith his Soul (as we find it here expreſſed by him) was carried out to find this Account, together with his ſuitable Diligence and Exactneſs, or Pains he profeſſeth he had taken therein. And this will alſo as ſtrongly ſerve to evince that they were his own Sins he intended in theſe Words. Firſt, his Vehemency and Eagerneſs is thus expreſſed, which yet my Soul ſeeketh, that is, the very whole of my Soul, and the utmoſt Intention of it, continues after the hotteſt and moſt eager Purſuance of finding it; even to that very Day, which the Word [yet] ſeeks, argues. Theſe ſhew that the matter of this Account he look'd upon as of greateſt Moment, and the finding of it to be a Wiſdom far tranſcending all other Wiſdom, which he had given over. Yea, and (which yet heightneth this) that although he had found the very ſame Diſcouragement in the Purſuit of this, which he had found in the Study of all other Wiſdom, which for that very reaſon he profeſſeth to have in a manner quite given over, ver. 23, 24. becauſe it was too deep for him, ver. 25. and given over to that End, to attend this new Account or Point of Wiſdom. Yet ſtill we ſee him, notwithſtanding this Diſcouragement, proſecuting this unto that very Hour; yea, we find his Soul in a full Career after it, panting and almoſt out of Breath through Ardency and Heat of Purſuit, whilſt he utters this. What muſt be or can be ſuppoſed to have made the Difference, but that he found this Point of Wiſdom of infinitely greater Moment, even ſuch as his very Soul and everlaſting Salvation was concerned in; and ſo deeply concerned, as he could never lay the Study of this again down? For why? He muſt have laid Repenting down elſe: for by the Law of true Repentance (whereof the ſtudying to find out one's Sinfulneſs is always a Concomitant, yea, Pre-requiſite) he was daily engaged to this Duty, unto the End, to humble his Soul greatly before God, as great Sinners truly repenting uſe to do, and therefore daily to ſeek into this Account, and to do his beſt to caſt up that ſtill; and this although he ſtill found he fell never ſo ſhort of it, for that would but ſtill ſerve to humble him the more. So as his [But I find not the perfect Account] did not, ought not, could not diſcharge his Soul from a [yet of ſeeking to find it.] Add unto this, (which ſtill increaſeth the Evidence on this Hand) 2. That great Diligence, Pains and Exactneſs, which he profeſſeth to have continued in this, expreſſed in theſe Words, counting one by one to find out the Account. Which, whether it refers unto times ſpent therein, (as Junius) ſemel atque iterum, that is, once and again; or, one time after another, as we uſe to ſpeak when we would expreſs Sedulouſneſs and Induſtry, we ſay, ſtill to be at it, and upon a thing; or whether it refers to the things numbred or ſummed up; how that he had told them over one by one: However, either the one or other, they each import his great Diligence put forth in it. But the latter of theſe two ſpeaketh further the moſt exquiſite Exactneſs; and how that he had been as curious and exquiſite in his Search, according to his Power and Skill, as any neat Accomptant (a Merchant ſuppoſe) uſeth to be, who to be ſure to caſt up a Sum punctually, he doth it one by one, and contents not himſelf with a confuſed Gueſs only. Even thus (ſays Solomon) have I indeavoured to do, by a daily View of my fore-paſt Actions, taken ſingly and apart: yea, and I take Actions in Pieces to find out their Sinfulneſs; I have conſidered the Principles of them, my Ends in them, the Motives, the Affections that influenced them, the Circumſtances that did accompany them, and have narrowly examined and ſearched into all theſe, one by one. This is the ſecond Character. Chap. 3.

And unto theſe two, both 1*ſt*, ſo exact, and 2*dly*, ſo vehement, a Soul-purſuance. It could not ſimply or mainly be the Account of others Wickedneſs, (to which moſt would carry it) nor can it be ſuppoſed to be that, which ſhould thus deeply have ingaged, fired and fixed him; but that a deep Senſe of his own Wickedneſs awakening him, ſhould do it, and ought to do it: This, the Examples in the Word, the Nature of true Repentance, and the Experience of all renewed Souls after a Relapſe (as his Caſe was) unto a freſh and deep Repentance, do abundantly confirm.

Book XI.

Here another Query doth ariſe, That it being granted that he ſpeaks this of his own Sins as a Penitent, yet whether not only of the Account of that one Species or kind of Sinning by Women, and the Conſequents thereof; becauſe he had alone inſiſted upon the mention thereof in ver. 26. this remains ſtill a Queſtion.

My Return unto this is, That both that Sort and the other, even all other Sins throughout the whole Courſe of his paſt, and alſo of his preſent daily Converſation, were the Object or Matter of this penitential Enquiry and Account here inſiſted on, which he upon his renewed Repentance had proſecuted with a continued Examination and Obſervation to that Day. To go over theſe by Parts.

I. As touching thoſe particular Sins about Women, &c. two things.

1. It is certain that thoſe are intended and included in a ſpecial and ſingular manner: For he inſtances therein, and therein only in the Verſe afore, as having been the chiefeſt of his Sins, which uſeth always to be unto Souls thorowly humbled, the grand Material of their Repentance, and upon which they are wont to ſpend the Strength of their ſorrowful Thoughts and Tears, as being the Imprimis of their Account. We muſt neceſſarily therefore judg, that Solomon did bring down along with him from the foregoing Verſe, the Account of this Sin, into this his main Account, ver. 27.

2. It is as certain, that that one Rivulet or Stream of Sinning had afforded ſo great a Spawn and Multitude of Sins, as did alone amount to ſuch an Infinity as might deſerve thoſe great Words, by which he exaggerates his not finding, &c.—But then I would have it noticed withal, that if this had alone been intended, it ſtill were a ſufficient Foundation for my Deſign and Purpoſe, out of theſe Words: For if the tranſgreſſing of one Commandment doth produce and afford ſo large a Reckoning, what will the Breach of all the other, throughout the Courſe of a Man's Life amount unto, when every Commandment ſhall bring in their Bills (as at ſuch Audits they uſe to do?) But though we paſs and allow that to have been his great Imprimis, yet we may and muſt take into this Account, all the other (though perhaps leſſer) Items, which being put together, do far exceed as to the Number of them.

II. As to that other part, That all the other Follies of his Life, paſt and preſent, were alſo the matter of his Search and Obſervation to find out the Account thereof, upon this his revived Repentance, &c. For this there are theſe competent Evidences.

1. The Aſpect or Correſpondency this Speech holds in the matter of it, with that of ver. 25. Had indeed theſe Words had Reference only to ver. 26. they might have been limited by and unto thoſe his Sinnings with Women, and his meaning then to have been, That in his ſearching into that Parcel or Heap of Sins, he found that alone to be infinite. But it is apparent that theſe Words look higher, and hold a former and more elderly Pre-acquaintance and ſtrict Connection of no leſs Immediateneſs with thoſe foregoing, viz. I applied my Heart to know, and ſearch, and find out the Account of Wickedneſs, and Folly, and Madneſs, in ver. 25. which apparently ſpeaks of Wickedneſs indefinitely, yea, univerſally; one kind of Wickedneſs as well as another. Well, and ſuitably unto that Speech, doth he here ſpeak this, Behold, this I have found, counting one by one to find out the Account, which yet my Soul ſeeketh, &c. It is evident 'tis the ſame Account he ſpeaks of in both, for the Word in the Original is one and the ſame in both, (though there tranſlated the Reaſon, here the Account.) When therefore in theſe Words he ſays, he ſought to find out the Account; I ask, what Account? but that and the ſame, he ſays, he had took up a Reſolution to ſearch into, in ver. 25. And further, which ſtrongly confirms this, he uſeth (in Effect) the ſame Words to expreſs his Search after it in theſe Words, which he had done in ver. 25. There he expreſſeth his purpoſed Reſolution by multiplying three Words, to know, ſearch, and ſeek; implying all Diligence: And in this he ſets down his Performance of that Reſolution, in terms equivalent, ent, as to the expreſſing his Diligence, viz. that he had counted one by one to find out the Account; and (adds) which yet my Soul ſeeks: and there is but this Difference between what is ſaid about it in both Places: That in ver. 25. he ſpeaks as of what his fixed Intention and Reſolution at his firſt applying his Heart to that Study was: but here in theſe he ſpeaks of his Performance after ſome Progreſs made; and withal what the iſſueleſs Iſſue or Event of that Performance was, viz. [But I find not:] yet ſtill ſo as what was the object matter of that Account in the one, is one and the ſame in the other, even Folly and Wickedneſs, in both, of all ſorts. The very Looks and mutual Aſpects which both Verſes caſt one upon another, are ſo direct, full and broad, as none may or will deny it, that attentively eyes them both, ſpecially in the Original Language.

If therefore it were the Search into his own Wickedneſs and Follies indefinitely and generally expreſſed, and not one particular way of ſinning only, that had been the Object of that his Reſolution there expreſſed at the firſt Entrance into this Diſcourſe; and that it were alſo the ſame, of which here he relates the Proſecution: Then it is the whole of his Sinfulneſs indefinitely conſidered, and the Account thereof, and the Iſſue of that Account, which he here makes the Return of. And the Difference is but this, that in ver. 25. he ſhews, how he had firſt ſet himſelf to the Work, to ſearch out Wickedneſs, &c. all ſorts, one as well as another: but here he relates how he had counted them one by one, &c.

2. The Word [Account] it ſelf, here uſed, when it is ſet ſingle and alone, without any Addition of what it might be limited by, is ſtill in Scripture put for the whole and general Account of a Man's Sinfulneſs, which ὀνομαστικῶς is ſtiled the Account, as being the grand or great Account of all Accounts; even as the Day of Judgment is ſtiled that Day. And ſo the Word Account is uſed here, ver. 27. it is ſaid alone, [the Account] and no more; he adds not of ſuch or ſuch a thing; and is therefore intended of all his Sins. And likewiſe ver. 25. to know the Account, is explained by ſaying, And to know the Wickedneſs of Folly, as being all one: And that other Phraſe, one and one, alſo favours this, which implies as a deſcending to Particulars, ſo his reaching after the Comprehenſion of an Univerſality, all, or the whole, as * Pineda obſerves; or as we alſo ſay, one and all. And therefore it is not to be reſtrained to the Account of that one particular Sinning, though that only was particularly forementioned for all the reſt.

* Numerus iſte binarius [unum & alterum] ſignificat univerſalitatem comprehendentem omnia. Pineda in verba, & in tit. 2. præfixo.

3. This Aſſertion is further ſtrengthened from their Coherence with the next ſucceeding Words, One Man of a thouſand have I found, but not a Woman amongſt them all: of which although the main and ſubſtantial Part of their Scope be to declare what the Wickedneſs of each Sex was in themſelves, or as they ſtand in Compariſon one with the other in that Reſpect, yet withal, as caſting back to the 27*th* Verſe; this Shadow iſſuing from the Coherence with theſe foregoing Paſſages about his own Sins; as thereby ſhewing what Influence either Sex, in his Converſation with them, had upon him, as they had been Occaſions, more or leſs, of ſinning to him, which Sins were now become Matter of Account and Repentance to him: And perhaps a more cloſe or ſufficienter Reaſon of his ſubjoining, ſo immediately, this ſucceeding Paſſage to the former, will hardly be found out: It was to ſhew, that as they were corrupt in themſelves, ſo Corrupters, (as the Prophet ſpeaks) deceiving as well as deceived, (as the Apoſtle) enticing as well as enticed, that is, Corrupter of him unto Sin: And ſo the Mind of that Coherence is to inſinuate, how that upon the Review of his own Sins paſt, and Account thereof, he had by ſad Experience found (as his Word is) the Generality of Men he had converſed with, to have been Temptations to him; ſcarce one of a thouſand but had been ſo unto him; though comparatively the Women, to an Univerſality, had been much more. Which Scope from the Coherence is confirmed by this; That if his Intent and Purpoſe in uttering that latter Part, Not one Woman among them all, was to ſhew how they had been ſuch Seducers and means of Sinning unto himſelf: (and this Interpreters do very generally acknowledg and obſerve to have been his Intent therein:)

Jer. 6. 18. 2 Tim. 3. 13. Prov. 1. 10. with Jam. 1. 14.

in :) Then why ſhould not the fore part [one Man of a thouſand have I found] have the ſame drift alſo?

If any will ſay, Ay, but he mentions that about Men, with a Difference of Commendation rather.

My Reply is, That his Commendation is but of one among a thouſand, which includes a more than implied Accuſation of all the reſt of Men, to have been even as Women in this Reſpect unto him: (To him, I ſay, and not only as corrupt in themſelves, but Enticers to, or Infecters of himſelf with Evil.) For to the ſame real Intent and Reſpect that he mentions that of all Women, he doth alſo that of the thouſands of Men. Now it is evident from ver. 26. that in and unto that Reſpect it is he repeateth this again here about the Women: Only indeed he ſets the eminent Brand upon the Women, and his Sins occaſioned by them in both Places.——Now if this be his general Scope, then it will readily follow, that his own Sins, occaſioned by his Converſe with Men, as well as thoſe by Women, were thoſe which he here had in Contemplation before him, whilſt as a Penitent, he pronounced this in ver. 27. And therefore it is not to be limited to that one ſcore of Sinnings from Women, but to be extended unto thoſe from Men alſo. And if ſo, then why not as generally to any other kind of Sinnings, whether alone by himſelf committed, or with others? All which now, as a Penitent, he had Cauſe to ſearch the Account of, to remember and bewail.

III. As it was the Account of the Sins of his Life paſt, ſo it doth take in withal a continued Search into Sins preſent, or thoſe which daily paſſed him: For from the time of a begun or renewed Repentance, the Examination of daily Sins, uſeth to be a Penitent's daily Task. This that ſmall Inſertion of one Word, the Particle [yet] The Account which my Soul [yet] ſeeks, doth import.——[Yet] that is, continually and unto this Day; from the firſt that I did ſet afreſh upon this Repentance-Work. And as he thus ſpeaks of a continual Exerciſe of his Soul this way, ſo it may ſeem more rational, that he ſuitably ſhould principally intend to ſhew his daily Exerciſe to have been about his continual daily Sinnings of what kind ſoever: And ſo about Sins quotidianæ incurſionis, or which through the Remainders of Corruption do fall out and accompany ones ordinary Converſation. And it is far harder to imagine his meaning to be limited to that one way of Sinning mentioned; as if he would ſignify how his Mind had been taken up with the Accounts of that Extravagancy alone, rather than to ſuppoſe it was about all other Sins generally and indefinitely, (though begun upon Occaſion of that) eſpecially if withal it be conſidered, that he ſpeaks this of a very narrow Search and Inquiſition, whereas thoſe his effeminate Sinnings and the Conſequences thereof, had been more groſs and conſpicuous, and came ſtaring in upon him, (his Conſcience being once awakened) whereas they are the Leaven of quotidian Corruptions, that are apt to ſcape out Obſervation, and finding out, without a curious and more diligent Inquiſition into every Corner of the Heart, to find out the Account of them, which he profeſſeth here to have made.

ſ. ſque in hanc horam. Campenſis.

Yea, the Meen, Look, or manner of his Speech (if viewed together with all the other Lines and Glances we have obſerved it caſts) doth inſinuate, that after he had made Inſtance of that one way of Sinning, apart, in the former Verſe, he ſhould now proceed and riſe up higher, (for he ſpeaks by a way of a Progreſſus) how that from thence he had been led into the Account of the Sins of his whole Life one by one; and thereupon did here give his Eſtimate upon the total or univerſal View thereof. And unto this Purpoſe it is ſomewhat ſignificantly obſervable, that but now it is, he affixeth his [Behold] upon this; whereas whilſt he was upon bewailing thoſe particular Sins, ver. 26. he forbore it, and expreſſed his ſenſe thereof, only in the Language of bitterer than Death (or Hell) &c. reſerving his Behold, and his this have I found, until now: And why? becauſe now he was upon the whole and total of his Sinfulneſs, which roſe up before his View (upon his ſearching into the Account of it) to ſo vaſt and amazing a Proſpect (or rather Retroſpect) as that of the whole Account of his whole Life muſt needs be ſuppoſed to afford him, that being the great and infinite Sum. This the Account of all Accounts, and (as was obſerved) by way of Singularity, ſo ſtiled in the Scriptures. Chap. 3.

The Genuineneſs of the Series and Coherence that this whole Interpretation doth give unto the whole of theſe Verſes, the 25*th*, 26*th*, 27*th*, 28*th*, doth exceedingly illuſtrate the Truth of this Aſſertion. I may briefly paraphraſe them thus, and draw this Diagram through them; as if Solomon had ſaid, " I did ſet my ſelf to find out the Account of Folly and Wickedneſs; and I be- " gan, and was firſt ſtruck with a Senſe of what had been my boſom-luſt, my " inordinate Love to Women; and in that one Luſt, and the Iſſues thereof; " and upon Search, I found many, many Nets and Intanglements, I had been " held in, ver. 26. and thereby being awakened, I was from the View there- " of carried on, and gently led into a caſting up the Accounts of my other " Sins whatever in my Life. And thereupon I found ſuch Swarms and " Troops came up before my now humbled Soul, that if you ask me the Ac- " count thereof, I can give no better, than only to ſay, [Behold, this have I " found, that I find it not:] and this notwithſtanding my utmoſt Diligence, " counting one by one, and moſt ardent Deſires in the Proſecution of it conti- " nued to this Day, [which my Soul yet ſeeks.] Thus far Solomon.

And in the laſt Place, this Draught or Coherence of theſe Verſes given, doth as naturally comport with the Method and Order of God's working upon Men in the Experience of the moſt of true penitent Souls, whether in their firſt or renewed Repentances after a great Relapſe: In which the Progreſs of God's dealing (as I ſhewed at the Entrance to the Expoſition of ver. 26.) holds uſually this Courſe, to begin to trouble a Soul, for ſome eminent groſſer Miſ-carriages, and from thence to lead them on to the aſtoniſhing Diſcovery of all the reſt, the whole of their other Sinfulneſs, of what kind ſoever. And unto this, as God's Method, the ordinary Experience of moſt repenting Spirits will likewiſe readily aſſent: ſo as this Interpretation every way approves it ſelf in all theſe Reſpects to be moſt genuine.

V. Other Interpretations briefly animadverted.

It cannot therefore be that any Matter of foreign Knowledg, merely out of himſelf, or out of the Sphere of his own proper Concernment, ſhould be the chief, much leſs the only Subject of his Search and Studies here intended: Such as either, 1*ſt*, To find out the Wiles, cunning Devices, Artifices and De-ceits, &c. that are in Womens Hearts to enveigle and enſnare Men. Nor yet, 2*dly*, His having obſerved how the Wickedneſs of Women doth comparatively exceed that of Men. And then 3*dly*, How both had ſo far ſurpaſſed his Skill and Wiſdom to find out: (Which things many Interpreters do carry the whole or main of the Senſe and Coherence of theſe Words unto.) Theſe, I ſay, can-not be the main Scope, upon all the Accounts forementioned.

For 1. It pitcheth Solomon's main Scope upon too mean a Subject for all this grand and ſolemn Proclamation; (1.) Behold, (but four times uſed in this Book:) (2.) With this Indigitation or Emphaſis, Behold [This] this have I found; who (3.) am the great Preacher in Iſrael, and now a penitent Soul: It pitcheth, I ſay, all theſe upon a poor low Buſineſs, (in Compariſon) a Theme, which Philoſophers and Poets ſo abound in, and declaim upon, as all this about Womens Wiles, &c. is.

Nor 2. could he eſteem that, ſo great a Point of Wiſdom, as to give over all other Wiſdom for the Study of it.

Nor 3. was that a Matter of ſo great Moment as ſhould deſerve, yea, ſwallow up his moſt precious Time and Intention of Mind to find out the Ac-count of, which he here profeſſeth he had ſpent, and was engaged yet to ſpend upon it.

There are two things which ſpecially have occaſioned this Miſtake.

1. In that his ſearching one by one, ver. 27. ſeems in the firſt Sound of it to have Reſpect to, and to be the ſame thing with his having found but one of a thouſand, and among Women, not one: and the one to anſwer to the other.——Whereas in Reality his counting one by one, ver. 27. is not a reckoning, ſtudying or counting of Perſons one by one, of either Sex, but a counting of Sins and Follies, one by one, as its Coherence with, and Reference to ver. 25. manifeſtly ſhews: As alſo to find out the Account, ver. 27. is to find out the Sum or Account of the Number of Wickedneſſes, as Hierome ſays the Word ſignifies.

of

The 2*d* Miſtake, That the latter Clauſe, One Man have I found, &c. but among Women I have not found, ſhould anſwer unto, and be but a further explaining of thoſe two foregone Paſſages, ver. 27. The firſt, This, it is, I have found, (ſo there) namely, one Man, &c. (here) the ſecond, But I find not, (there) that is, I find not one Woman, (here.)——Whereas, beſides that it is dilute enough at beſt, this Gloſs doth make the matter of theſe latter Clauſes to be in whole and in all but one and the ſame thing with the foregoing in ver. 27.——Whereas it is everlaſtingly unimaginable, that merely his finding out this (Maxim) but one Man of a thouſand, and his not finding one Woman, &c. ſhould be the ſole object matter of ſo great an Out-cry about it, or be ſo great a Matter, as that which in ver. 27. and the Beginning of ver. 28. he doth make of what he there ſpeaks of, as appears by what hath been exaggerated about it, and but now alledged: Yea, I may ſay, it is impoſſible it ſhould be the ſame. Therefore theſe two ſeveral Sayings, the firſt and laſt, muſt neceſſarily materially differ. The firſt Sayings, ſpeaking of one thing, viz. The Account of his own Sins: the latter of another, viz. His Obſervation of the Wickedneſs in both Sexes comparatively made. This in the primary Intention of it. And are ſo far from being in all, or in whole, the Explication of the former, that it is no part of that Account there which was of Sins properly belonging to himſelf, further than as in that ſecondary Reſpect (which I mentioned) which riſeth merely from its ſo immediate following after the former, that Wickedneſs in both Sexes had been accidental Occaſions of Sinnings and Temptation to himſelf. But I ſhall expound thoſe latter Speeches apart by themſelves by and by.

CHAP. IV.

That it was the Multitude of Sins was in his Eye, that made him to ſay, I find not.

IF any will yet make Query, (if perhaps after all this there be any need) what it was in his own Sinfulneſs that Solomon found to be thus infinite? for which Query, becauſe there may ſeem this ground that there are two Infinites in Sin, one of Greatneſs for Guilt, the other of Number and Multitude, and ſo which of theſe ſhould be intended, might be yet a Queſtion: But chiefly, becauſe the Reſolution gives further Opportunity to confirm the very Point or Main of this my intended Subject, I therefore ſhall give further Anſwer thereunto.

I eaſily grant the firſt of theſe two to be included; for his ſad Bewailment in ver. 26. argues it, I find more bitter than Death, ſpeaking of that one way of Sinning by Women. Yet ſtill it was in a more eminent manner the Number and the Multitude of Sins in his whole Life, which he hath in his Eye, in this 27*th* Verſe, that cauſed him to utter the Infiniteneſs thereof by this unexpreſſing Expreſſion [I find not.]

I. That his Eye was upon the Number, that Phraſe in the middle of the Words [counting one by one] argues: for it moſt properly imports an having ſought an Account by numbring. And though the Word counting, is not in the Original, yet our Tranſlators underſtood that to be evidently implied as the ſenſe of that Phraſe [one by one,] and ſo they choſe to render it [counting one by one:] and if that word counting ſhould be left out, yet the Phraſe it ſelf, [one one] —or [one and one,] —or (as ſome) [one unto one] as in numbring by Addition, —or [one and the other]—(all which are ſeveral Readings which the Original doth bear) ſtill all comes to one as to our Purpoſe: for each of them properly concern numbring. And further, one and one, —or one and t'other, are in ordinary Phraſe of Speech put to expreſs, 1*ſt*, Univerſality, or the [all] of things; as we uſe to ſay, one and all. And 2*dly*, withal import a particular diſtinct View of things, and not in the groſs only. In like Senſe we alſo uſe to ſay, one and t'other, or neither one nor t'other; ſo noting forth Particularity. And thus the Mind of that Paſſage, counting one by one, proves to be this, that Solomon going about to find out the Account of all and the whole of his Sinfulneſs, had unto that end conſidered his Sins diſtinctly and particularly, one and one; and not contented himſelf with a confuſed Knowledg and Senſe of them, ſuch as the Generality of Men have of their Sinfulneſs, who uſe in a ſlight and common wretchleſs manner to ſpeak of it, We are all Sinners, and ſo paſs it over, and think ſuch a Conviction ſufficient, but 'twas not ſo in Solomon. This then is the firſt Evidence, that it refers unto an Account by numbring; or, which is equivalent in Senſe thereto, unto a weighing and conſidering all and each diſtinctly and particularly.—Now if it were ſuch an Account by numbring, then it follows, that it was the ſuperabounding Multitude or Number which did put the ſtand or ſet to his Apprehenſions; or which made him to ſay [I find it not] as that which was infinite in that reſpect.

Illa eſt ſimplex & genuina exponendi ratio, quam Hieronimus, Albinus, Nicolaus, Lyra, & Hebræizantes omnes ſequuntur, ut [unum & alterum] referatur ad numerum. Rurſus, numerus (nempe iſte Binarius) (unum & alterum) ſignificet univerſitatem comprehendentem omnia. Pineda in verba, & in titulo 2. præfixo.

Some read it copulative, Unum & unum, Campenſis: Unum & alterum, Vulg. Others with Prepoſitions, Unam ad unam, Symmachus: Unum ad aliud, pariendo ſcilicet grandem ſummam. Hieron. in comment. in locum. μία τῇ μιᾷ, Septuag.

But further, and more particularly, it appears, if we either conſult the Words immediately afore; or if we conſider what follows in the Sum and Concluſion of all in ver. 29.

II. The Words afore.] For although (as was obſerved) the Heinouſneſs and the Dangerouſneſs of thoſe ways of Sinning, to his Soul, are the eminent things things ſet out in ver. 26. yet there alſo a Multitude and a Variety of Sinnings, are intimated and connotated. And he begins even from thence, to ſhew, he had found many and manifold Evils to be the Concomitants and Conſequents thereof. This, thoſe Similitudes of Nets and Snares, and Bonds (which he ſo cries out of) evidently import; and they ſignify not only that they were many, but manifold, variouſly wrought and interwoven Contrivements and artificial Webs, of many Threads, and Engines of many Links: for ſuch Works of Art and Variety are Nets and Snares, and Chains. And he intends thereby to ſet forth his own Seducements and Entanglements, for Multitude and Variety; and what they had been to him. And thus though he cries out of the Bitterneſs or Greatneſs of his Sin in them, yet particularly in and by thoſe Expreſſions he further points to the Multitude of Temptations he fell into.

And to illuſtrate this, I may pertinently re-aſſume that Scripture I did before but mention, and thereby a-new ſet forth the Mind of Solomon as to this; both theſe Scriptures being in Scope and Expreſſions exceeding parallel each to other. It is 1 Tim. 6. 9. They that will be rich, fall into Temptation and a Snare, and into many and hurtful Luſts, which drown Men in Perdition. Thus ſpeaks the Apoſtle of the Love of Riches. And further in the following Verſe, in reſpect unto thoſe many Luſts, he ſtiles it, a Root of all Evil. There are many things in this the Apoſtle's Speech, that are parallel to Solomon's Caſe, and unto his Expreſſions here about it: The very Phraſes and Alluſions there, are like and near of kin to theſe here, if we will but look round about the Words; as whilſt he entitleth his Sin, Folly and Madneſs, ver. 25. the Apoſtle doth the ſame, fooliſh Luſts. Solomon compareth his Temptations unto Snares, in which Beaſts, made to be taken and deſtroyed, are caught: the Apoſtle in expreſs Words uſeth the ſame Metaphor. Again, as Solomon compares them to Nets for Fowls or Fiſhes; ſo the Apoſtle's Phraſe is, drowned in Perdition; even as Fiſhes and Fowls when caught are deſtroyed in boiling hot Water, or ſuch ſcalding Liquor, ſo theſe in Perdition. But that which I principally called in the Help of this Place for, was, to ſhew that in Scripture-Phraſe a Snare or Temptation, when applied thus unto a Boſom-Sin in ſuch a Caſe as this of Solomon's, implieth a many and manifold, yea, an innumerable Company of Sins, which it leads into, and which accompany it. For unto that Purpoſe it is the Apoſtle there uſeth the Phraſe, whilſt he declares the Danger of ſuch a Sin to be a falling into Temptation and a Snare; which he then further amplifies and explains by this, and into many fooliſh Luſts; yea, and for the ſame reſpect terms it alſo, a Root of all Evil. Now let us but firſt underſtand Solomon, (when ſpeaking of his Boſom-Sin in reſpect of the Conſequences thereof) to intend [by Snares] a many hurtful Follies, which he had run into by reaſon and occaſion thereof; and this according to the Intent of the ſame Spirit, (who wrote both the one and the other, in the Old and New Teſtament, and knows his own Language) and then it may be evident, that in like manner he here intended that this Boſom-Sin of his, had been a Root of many Evils to him.

And then if there were ſuch a Multitude of Sins, that ſprung out of the Womb of this one Sin, which he had the Apprehenſion of, in writing verſe 26. it is then obvious enough, that in theſe next Verſes, in which he ſets down the Account of his whole Life, together with theſe, that he intends to expreſs an infinitely far greater Number, which cauſed him with Aſtoniſhment to cry out, Behold, this I have found I find not: And ſo, that this, of the Multitude, is that very thing which he drives along in all.

III. In the Words after.] If all this might not perſwade that this was indeed his drift, you have Solomon himſelf e're he takes off his Pen, interpreting himſelf, in uſing the very ſame plain Word, which the Apoſtle interpreted his meaning alſo by: for in the Centre and Concluſion of the whole Diſcourſe (and which ſums up the whole) he terms all theſe and other Sins [the many Inventions] namely, which he himſelf for his ſhare, and all Mankind each of them for theirs, had ſought out to ſin againſt God withal; and brings it in, in the Concluſion, as that which had been one main thing, this his Account of Folly throughout his Diſcourſe had run upon, and which he had in contemplation all along. Chap. 4.

I ſhould here inforce this third and laſt Evidence, (for ſo in order it is) which may be extracted from that word Many, as it ſtands in ver. 29. as that which is ſtrongly pertinent to prove the numberleſs Multitude of Sins to have been in Solomon's Eye, in theſe Verſes now expounded, and all along.—— But there lies a brief remainder of ver. 28. in my way firſt to be explained.

One Man among a thouſand have I found, but a Woman among all thoſe have I not found.] Becauſe theſe Words lie as a ſeeming Interruption between that which I mainly am in proſecution of, (namely, that third Evidence from the [Many] ver. 29.) I ſhall at preſent give but a brief account of them; yet ſome, to the end I may hold an equipage about this parcel of this Scripture, with what I have done in the former, which I have expounded, and ſo I ſhall this.

The Account hereof ſhall be, (1.) Of the Occaſion of their Inſertion. (2.) Their Coherence with the former. (3.) To what Purpoſe they come in. And (4.) alſo the Senſe of them. All which will remove any Stumbles that might ariſe from them, to divert from the Senſe of the foregoing Words hitherto given.

Firſt; Let it be heedfully remembred, that they are utterly a new Maxim, and no part of the Sentence foregoing, or of the Account there ſpoken of. This, their having a new [have I found] given them, ſhews; That, in common, having been uſed by Solomon as a mark or poſt of diſtinction given to four ſeveral compleat Periods, (whereof this is one) to ſever them each from other, in this Paragraph. See the firſt Reſolve in anſwer to the firſt Query above.

Secondly; His Inſertion of it beſides had a pertinent Occaſion and Riſe from the foregoing. For in his having (as a Penitent) taken a view of the Sins of his whole Life paſt, he found, and could not but find his own Sins to have been complicate and interwoven with the Sins of multitudes of others, both Men and Women; he having (being a King) had more occaſion of acceſs to him, and ſo of converſe with varieties of both Sexes, more than any other Man. And they generally having been occaſions of Temptations to him, and of his ſo much ſinning, which he now with Grief remembers; he therefore in remembring his own, remembreth theirs, and ſo aptly ſubjoins his Obſervations about their Wickedneſs alſo, after he had diſpatch'd and ſpoken that of the Account of his own, in the foregoing Words.

Thirdly; His annexing it, was to this End and further Scope, to render his Diſcourſe and Account about Folly and Wickedneſs the more compleat. For, (1.) By the annexing of this, he ſhould, as then, have comprehenſively ſpoken to the Corruption of either Sex, and ſo of all Mankind; and given in a Judgment thereof as well as of his own. And (2.) thereby further make a fair and advantagious Introduction into that general and final Maxim wherein he centers, ver. 29. which was to comprehend the demonſtration of his own and all Mankind's Sinfulneſs; God made Man upright, but they, &c. and therefore full meet it was to inſert this before.

Fourthly; For the ſenſe and meaning of the Axiom it ſelf, that will be cleared by putting, and then anſwering, a Query; the ground for which is this;

That if his Scope be aſſerted to be, to ſet out the Wickedneſs and Madneſs in all the Sons of Adam, this Maxim ſeems to except ſome few of Men from that general Corruption; One Man of a thouſand have I found.

The Anſwer whereunto will riſe from the genuine ſenſe of the Words which we ſhall arrive at, by conſidering them either,

Book XI.

1*ſt*. Simply: or,
2*dly*. As they are a Comparative between Men and Women.

1*ſt*. If we conſider them ſimply, or how Men and Women are ſimply repreſented by him, without compariſon one with another; and then their Scope is, that,

1. As towards God, they are both and all univerſally corrupt; he ſuppoſes that here; for the next Words do expreſly affirm it, God made Man (all Men) upright (in Adam,) but they (all of them) have ſought out, &c. And his Father David had aforehand inſtructed him in two Pſalms, that unto God's Eye, who is ſaid to look down from Heaven upon the Children of Men, every one of them is gone back: They are altogether become filthy; there is none that doth Good, [no not one.] So as in relation unto God, they are all fallen ſhort of the Glory of God, as the Apoſtle's Interpretation of theſe Sayings is, Rom. 3. 23. It is not therefore his Drift here to exempt any one Man, no, not his one of a thouſand, from his ſhare in that common Corruption and Apoſtacy. But,

Pſal. 14. 3.
Pſal. 53. 3.

2. His Speech is to be underſtood as relating to the working of Corruption in them, in the way of humane Converſe, and Entercourſe of their Relations, one to and with another; and ſo far as they are any way outward occaſions or temptations to others of Sinnings through mutual Converſe. And the reaſon is, for by what himſelf had had in Converſe with either Sex, and by experience had found (as his word is) of either Sex, to have been of damage to him; on that occaſion it is (and ſo with a great eye and reſpect thereunto) he utters this.

3. He pronounceth the generality of Men to be every whit as bad as Women; Never Barrel (or Basket rather, as Jeremy's alluſion is, chap. 24.) better, &c. for whilſt he ſays but one Man of a thouſand, that is, of a great number, he concludes the Generality of Men under the ſame Condemnation he doth the Univerſality of Women,——all alike. Thus ſimply.

2*dly*. As for his comparative conſidering them, (in that ſo ſmall difference of but one he had found) it is thus to be underſtood.

Firſt, Negatively, in two Reſpects.

1. Not in reſpect to Grace; as if more Men were godly, and comparatively fewer or none of Women. For,

(1.) It holds not true either in the Old Teſtament or the New: And that equal Privilege, Neither Male nor Female in Chriſt, &c. preferring neither before the other, as to that reſpect, cuts off all ſuppoſition of ſuch a meaning here.

(2.) Solomon profeſſing to utter this from experience, I find, &c. his Judgment or Verdict had been founded upon a partial and not competent Evidence, if that ſhould have been his meaning: For as to Women, his Knowledg and Converſe had been moſt with Heatheniſh Idolatrous Women, 1 Kings 11. And as to Men, it was moſtly with his own Country-men the Jews, (and Salvation was of the Jews then, as Chriſt ſays, John 4.) And therefore ſuch a general Sentence, of ſuch a difference between the Sexes, as to point of Grace, upon his experience of Perſons ſo unequally compar'd, as to that reſpect atteſted, had been notoriouſly incompetent, and liable to exception.

(3.) This did no way pertain to his Scope or Deſign at firſt propoſed, ver. 25. which was to ſearch into Folly, Madneſs, &c. which is therefore the meaſure of that which follows, and according to the Line thereof, this Saying muſt be underſtood: It had therefore been a going out of his Line, to have pronounced what difference Grace doth put: This was no part of his cognizance. His general Drift then muſt relate to the workings of Corruption and Madneſs, which may be obſerved to be in Men and Women comparatively in either State, whether of Grace or not: Comparatis comparandis, that is, comparing whether godly Men with godly Women, or ungodly with ungodly.

2. As to Perſons. Nor is this Senſe (as not that Speech neither in the former, ver. 26.) about Women, to be limited unto the whoriſh Women only; for the Old Teſtament gives not Heatheniſh Wives that Language, but of ſtrange Wives, Wives, &c. And again, in that ſenſe to have ſaid, he had not found one among a thouſand of ſuch, had been all one as to have ſaid, I find not one good or vertuous Woman among ſo many Whores. But it is Women in the general, as denoting that Sex in diſtinction from Men. This as to the Negative. Chap. 4.

Secondly, Poſitively: And ſo the difference intended reſpects,

1. The outward breakings forth and workings of Corruption in a viſible manner, unto what ſuch a Man as Solomon or others may find, (that is his word) that is, obſerve in them.

2. How that in reſpect of viſible breakings forth in humane Converſe, &c. you may perhaps find a Man, who by reaſon of a ſtrength of Wiſdom, and deeper ſtamps of moral Vertues accompanying it, (which the Maſculine Temper renders Men more capable of) are in reſpect to a running out into a viſible Madneſs of Folly, or an exceſs of Folly, (which is Solomon's meaſure, ver. 25.) as diſingenuities to Reaſon, weakneſſes of Paſſions, Humours, (all which the Female Temper is univerſally, yea and Men generally, more prone and expoſed unto.) In reſpect, I ſay, unto theſe Exceſſes, there may be found ſome of Men, who is a * ſober moderate Sinner, and their corrupt Nature ſo poiſed and attempered, as they may be converſed withal more ſafely by their Relations and Aſſociates, without affrication, or catching and conveying the itch of any great Diſtemper; as alſo in relation to humane Societies and publick † Good. Such Paragons of Vertue were ſome among the Heathen, as Fabritius, Socrates, &c. and ſome ſuch Solomon had found among the Jews in his time, as Ethan, and Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, of whoſe excelling Wiſdom mention is made, 1 Kings 4. 31.

* Tolerabilem. So Clarius on the Words.

3. Nor that rigidly neither, that none, none among Women ſuch; for himſelf ſets out a vertuous Woman in all reſpects, Prov. 31. but yet more rarely than among Men, ver. 10. A vertuous Woman who can find? Parum pro nullo reputatur.

The ground of this difference I will not inſiſt on, which even Philoſophers have been much upon, inſomuch as Vertue among the Romans had its Name derived (à viro & à viribus) from what excels in || Men: Et mulier quaſi mollior, Women their Name from Softneſs and Weakneſs, their Temper being, as ſoft Wax, not capable of a permanent vertue and ſtayedneſs, or as thin and ſlighter Paper, wherein Ink doth diffluere, run into Stains, Blots, Paſſions, Humours; whereas other is compact. Nor are the Scriptures altogether ſilent in taking notice of this reaſon of the difference; beſides that Place quoted in the laſt marginal Note, that alſo in 1 Pet. 3. 7. Let the Men dwell according to knowledg, namely, as becometh Men; by which the Holy Ghoſt attributeth Wiſdom and Knowledg to the Man; and Wiſdom is the Governour of Vertue: but then terms the Woman the weaker Veſſel, which even in Innocency ſhe was; and therefore noticed to have been firſt ſet upon by Satan, and firſt in the Tranſgreſſion. And now in this fallen Eſtate, Weakneſs (of Sin) being added to Weakneſs (of Conſtitution) it makes the Weakneſs comparatively greater. And Solomon here is not far off from this, whilſt he thus expreſſes himſelf, One Man (in the Original it is an Adam) have I found, &c. For an high Paragon of Vertue, Wiſdom, Conſtancy, &c. is the neareſt Shadow (which ſome term the Relicks) of that Image of Uprightneſs, (of which in the next Verſe) which Adam was created in: even as temporary Enlightnings, &c. which are in Men not attaining Regeneration, are the ſhadow and counterfeit of ſaving Evangelical Grace.

Having thus cleared the way, I come now to the Expoſition of Verſe 29.

Book XI.

CHAP. V.

The Expoſition of Verſe 29. and that the Multitude of Sinnings is the Center of Solomon's Diſcourſe; Lo, (or behold) this only have I found, that God made Man upright, but They have ſought out many Inventions, &c. Shewing in general that this Verſe contains, 1. In the latter Clauſe, a ſummary Repetition of what in the former Verſes. 2. In the whole of it, a Demonſtration of Man's Corruption: And wherein that Demonſtration lies.

THE whole of my Deſign upon theſe Words is accompliſhed in two Things.

I. An Expoſition of the Words.
II. The third Evidence aforementioned, which the word Many, as it ſtands in this Verſe, gives, that the multitude of Sins had been in his eye in the former Verſes alſo, unto which that Epithet hath an aſpect.
The firſt in this fifth Chapter.
The other in the ſixth Chapter.

Firſt, The Expoſition.

I. Theſe Words are the grand and final Iſſue and Concluſion, as generally all Interpreters do acknowledg, diſcovering the Source, Spring, and Well-head of all the Corruption which is in us all, whether himſelf or others, he had been diſcourſing of; which became him thus at laſt to add and ſet down as the Coronis of the whole. And he magnifies the finding of it above all thoſe other Diſcoveries forementioned, and that upon a treble account: 1. As that which had humbled him through comparing his corrupt Eſtate with that Uprightneſs God had created us all in. And 2. which alone had ſatisfied him, it arriving at the bottom-ground upon which the Follies of himſelf and all Men do come to be Sin and Wickedneſs, even becauſe God made Man upright at the firſt; their Sin in that regard lying in their having deviated and ſwerved from that Uprightneſs. As alſo 3. laying open the true riſe of all that variety and multitude of Wickedneſs Men run into, even by being fallen from that Integrity, which whilſt they retained, they ſought and enjoyed in that one thing, which was the true and their ſole Happineſs, viz. in God; but having loſt, and ceaſing to do ſo, they go aſtray, and wander in a thouſand ways of Error, and ſeek out new Inventions to be happy by. And that Solomon was thus highly affected at the diſcovery of it, as riſing up to a perfect demonſtration thereof, his Words ſhew, This only have I found; that is, this alone as ſatisfactory to my Mind. And to ſee things in their true Cauſes and Originals, ſatisfies the Mind of any wiſe and intelligent Enquirer, as he was. He had diſcried afore, that this Wickedneſs was infinite for number, and univerſal for extent in all Men: but that Sight left him confounded rather than ſatisfied, This I find, that I find it not; and in that ſtrain he ſpeaks of that: but this was it he acquieſced and reſted in, Behold, this only have I found, &c.

And that this Verſe ſhould be a Demonſtration, giving the reaſon of the former, the current and ſeries of his whole Diſcourſe, (whereof this is the cloſe) doth further ſhew: for having at the beginning, ver. 23. profeſſed to ſearch the Reaſon and Account (uſing on purpoſe a word that ſignifies both) in the proceſs proceſs of it, he firſt declares what he had by experience found as touching that Account, that is, 1. The numerical Account, ver. 25. and then, 2. in this 29*th* Verſe, at the end of all, he proclaims with a Behold, the rational Account of what had gone before. Chap. 5.

And in courſe of Speech we know it is uſual, when one hath made a bare narrative of a Matter, then to come in at the cloſe with the bottom-cauſes or grounds of what he had related before.— And ſo hath Solomon done here, and it is as if he had ſaid, 'As touching what I have hitherto ſpoken of, either mine 'or of others Sinfulneſs, I find this to be the ſource and riſe of all, and ſpeci-'ally of the multitude of Sins in me and them, That Man was made upright, but 'they have ſought out, &c. This in general, that the whole Verſe contains a Demonſtration.

II. More particularly this laſt Clauſe of the Verſe, that is, theſe words, They ſought out many Inventions, may be conſidered two ways.

Firſt; Singly and abſtractly, from thoſe immediate foregoing in the ſame Verſe; and ſo they are the ſummary of the Drift, yea of the Matter of what Solomon had been diſcourſing of in all the Verſes afore, gathered up and contracted, in other Words. To demonſtrate which, the chief Matter of the former may be reduced to two Heads; 1. Concerning Perſons. 2. Concerning Things.

1. The Perſons ſpoken of, had been himſelf, Women, Men, and ſo the Univerſality of Mankind.

2. The Things, were the Folly, Wickedneſs, &c. which he had deſcried in himſelf, and obſerved in them. And now, the total about both Perſons and Things, he folds up in this final Clauſe, They have ſought out many Inventions. 1. The [They] comprehendeth the Perſons, (himſelf included, as I ſhall ſhew.) 2. Their ſeeking out many Inventions, that comprehends the Things which had been ſpoken of, and concerning thoſe Perſons, under new words, but to the ſame effect.

As 1. what afore he had termed Folly, Wickedneſs, &c. in the general, or particularly had aimed at, in calling them, Nets, Snares, &c. or whatever actual Evil in any kind he had inſinuated to be in Men, Women or himſelf, theſe he by a new-found Name (and a word invented on purpoſe ſuitable to the thing) terms Inventions, and a ſeeking out for them. And what are all actual Sins, other than new-found Inventions, and turnings aſide to wicked Ways, Digreſſions from that ſole, ſingle, upright Way unto Bleſſedneſs, which God at firſt inſtituted, directed, commanded, made and eſtated Mankind in, and under?

2. What he had inſinuated of the abounding Plurality of them, either under the ſimilitude and expreſſion of Snares, Bands, (as hath been ſhewn) or in his [I find I find not], that here he more plainly declares by inſerting the word Many. This for the firſt conſideration of theſe Words, abſtractly conſidered from the other immediately foregoing in the ſame Verſe.

Secondly; This Clauſe is yet penned in ſuch words, as if we take into them (as we muſt) thoſe anteceding Words, Man was made upright, but they, &c. then they do as clearly contribute, together with the former, to the Demonſtration forementioned, that is, do expreſs the true and proper Principles and original Cauſes, how or from whence it comes to paſs, or unto what and whom it is to be attributed, that ſuch an overflow of Wickedneſs hath invaded all, and each of Mankind, unto the production of an Infinity for number of Wickedneſſes. And this multitude of them is made the more eminent Thing or Matter demonſtrated thereby. And as to this purpoſe;

1. The word [they] is not to be underſtood ſubjectivè only, but cauſally alſo, (it ſerves to both ſenſes) and notes out, not only that the Perſons of all Mankind are the Subjects of this Corruption, but further pointeth to them, as the Cauſes thereof, as the oppoſition to [God made, &c.] ſhews. He lays it upon the [they] that is, themſelves, to be the Authors of thoſe Inventions, and the multimultitudes of them, even as the Prophet elſewhere, Thy Deſtruction is of thy ſelf. In like manner,

2. Alſo the word Inventions, as likewiſe that Phraſe, that they [ſeek out], are as aptly choſen forth by him, both to import the nature or quality of actual Sinnings, what they are, ſeekings out, &c. as alſo moſt ſignificantly to denote, in part, the bottom-ground or cauſe of all actual Sinnings, and of their multitude.

Thirdly; And thus conſidered, the demonſtration or reduction of Man's Corruption into its right Principles, is exactly ſet out both ways by Solomon here, negatively and poſitively, that ſo it might be full.

1. Negatively: Removendo non cauſam pro cauſâ, by removing what guilty Man to excuſe himſelf, is prone to caſt all upon, and aſcribe it unto, as the Cauſe, even God himſelf, and God his making me ſuch and ſuch. No, ſays Solomon, it is the perfect contrary, God made Man (even all Men, the They) upright. He thus firſt thruſts the Imagination thereof away with both hands. Then,

2. Poſitively, reſolveth it into the true cauſe, But they, &c. And the explication of that conſiſts of three Particulars.

1. That they having been thus originally made upright in Adam, but fallen from that State of Uprightneſs, were now degenerated. For in ſaying they were made upright, that is, at firſt indeed ſuch, he withal inſinuates, that alas, now they are not ſo! as in that Speech, Fuimus Troes, ſo we were once upright, ——made ſo, but now become otherwiſe. And in ſaying [made], he points to God's firſt Creation of Man, ſhewing what we were then made; and that word referreth not to what we are when born, as by Generation ſince. He could not intend that making of us, when by Generation each of Mankind comes perſonally to exiſt, as if that then we were made upright; for Solomon had learned otherwiſe of his Father David, Behold, I was ſhapen in Iniquity, and in Sin conceived, Pſal. 51. He here therefore ſends us to their Creation in Adam, of whom we read, In the Image of God created he him: yea, and therefore he did deſignedly make choice of the word Adam: for what is tranſlated, God made [Man] upright, in the Original is, God made [Adam] upright; and yet not Adam ſingly, but the Woman alſo: For in the ſame Gen. 1. 27. it immediately follows, Male and Female created he them, namely, in that Image he had afore ſpoken of. And thus, as in him, all thoſe that were to come by Generation, were firſt by Creation made upright; ſo likewiſe in him they are degenerated, he being the firſt Man that repreſented all both in his Creation and Fall, 1 Cor. 15. And this Solomon full well we ſee underſtood to be intended in the Story of Adam's Creation and Fall, and had found it (as his word is here) in the firſt and third Chapters of Geneſis. And unto this he points whilſt he ſays, Behold, this I found; which the Apoſtle doth more clearly both underſtand and expreſs, Rom. 5. 12. By one Man Sin entred into the World, in whom all have ſinned. Yea, accordingly many Interpreters have underſtood by that Clauſe that follows, But they ſought out, &c. to be intended (in order) firſt of our firſt Parents Adam and Eve, and their firſt ſinning; they began the round: Thy firſt Father hath ſinned, as Iſa. 43. 27. and withal thereby both our firſt Parents became the firſt Fathers of theſe Inventions, (as the firſt Inventors of Arts are ſtiled, Gen. 4. 20, 21, 22.) as well as of us their Children. Yea, and a learned Critick is bold to tranſlate from the Original, theſe Words, thus, They ſought the Inventions of the great or mighty, that is, of the Angels, great in Power and Might, 2 Pet. 2. 11. So runing up the original Cauſe in Solomon's Drift yet higher, even to intimate that influence the old Serpent had in this matter, whoſe Inventions they were, caſt in by him, which they our * firſt Parents ſo greedily ran after and purſued. This for the firſt part, or the Demonſtration fetch'd from the Originale Originans, which I do intend no more at all to touch upon in this Treatiſe.

See for this alſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt.

Ludovicus de Dieu, Quæſierunt inventiones magnatum.

* Quod quæſiviſſe dicuntur, eo docere voluit, illas fraudes Satanæ avidè ab illis arreptas fuiſſe. Carthwritus in locum.

2. Hereupon the whole [they] the Gang of all Mankind, their Poſterity, being deprived of this Uprightneſs through the forfeiture of theſe their firſt Parents, they out of their depraved Wills and Affections, ſeek out for Happineſs in all other things where they can get it, or imagine they may find it, even in any

any thing but God, from whom they are eſtranged from the Womb, Pſal. 58. 3. And all this the Word [ſeek out] doth aptly and fully hold forth; and this is a ſecond Cauſe goes to make up the Demonſtration of this general Corruption. Chap. 5.

3. They alſo ſet their corrupted Underſtandings or Wits a-work to find out Inventions for the Supply of theſe Deſires of their Wills, &c. And this, that Word [Invention] notes out as fitly, even that Part or Hand which the Underſtanding hath in Sinnings: And is anſwerably tranſlated by divers, Ratiocinia [Reaſonings;] by others, Cogitationes [Thoughts;] all denoting what in the intellectual Part of the Mind is the Cauſe of Sinning. And this is the third part of the Demonſtration here intended.

All which put together do make up as compleat a Demonſtration, as perhaps will elſewhere be found in any Scripture about any Subject whatever, in ſo few Words.

I may illuſtrate this by the Condition of a vitious young Spendthrift, that had ſprung from Parents of high and noble Spirits, raiſed and elevated anſwerably to a mighty great Eſtate and Dignity, which having been, by a Forfeiture of his Parents, or otherwiſe, made away and gone, he yet retaining an in-bred Greatneſs of Mind and Height of Spirit natural to his Breeding and Anceſtry: Concerning this Man it may be ſaid, that the former Fulneſs and Height (though accidentally) and his preſent Beggarlineſs (directly) meeting and join'd with an Elevation of Spirit continuing in the Foundation of it for Largeneſs of Capacity and Aſpirings, the ſame, though now corrupted: that all theſe complex together, concur one way or other directly or accidentally; and are the Cauſes how and whence it comes to paſs, that he affects to live at an Height of Pleaſure and Gallantry: when as yet having loſt wherewithal to do it, ſuitably to what he had before, he is thereupon put to his ſhifts, and lives by his Wits, his Arts and Inventions; and ſo proves a mere Shark, ſeeks out and uſeth a thouſand Tricks to maintain his Riot and Voluptuouſneſs, at as high a rate, as whatever he can rap or rend here and there, will any way poſſibly enable him to, ſo to keep up a Livelihood (God-wot a poor one.) Thus it is, in what Solomon here ſays of debauched Man, fallen from his firſt Uprightneſs.

And thus much may ſerve for an Expoſition of this Verſe, in ſome Correſpondency to what hath been done that way, upon the foregoing Verſes.

CHAP.

Book XI.

CHAP. VI.

The chief Remark out of this Verſe, as to the Confirmation of our Subject, is,——That the Multitude of Sinnings is the ultimate Centre of Solomon's Diſcourſe, and the main Concluſion which the Demonſtration in ſpecial falls upon; and that, as rehearſed, out of the foregone Verſes: And wherein that Demonſtration lies.

IT may be remembred how in the 4*th* Chapter I reſerved a third Evidence, that the Multitude of Sinnings had been in Solomon's View and Drift in ver. 26, 27. as that which might be fetch'd out of this Verſe, and the word [many, &c.] as it ſtands in the Verſe. And having now finiſhed the Expoſition, I proceed to the Proſecution of this Evidence, which I ſhall do by Parts.

I. It is the ultimate Centre and Concluſion.] For he coucheth and brings it in with an Emphaſis at the very laſt in the final Cloſe of all, as aimed at to be demonſtrated. And this to do was no other than what is uſual in the Courſe of ordinary Speech, in the like Caſe: After a large Narration of a matter firſt made, when we come to the Demonſtration, then to tuck up the main thing of all had been ſpoken of and intended in a ſpecial manner to be demonſtrated, in ſome one comprehenſive and expreſſive Word, and to indigitate it at the very laſt with the Demonſtration it ſelf; thereby to hold that thing up, in a ſpecial manner, unto the Hearers Eye and Obſervation: Juſt thus (I take it) and as unto ſuch a Purpoſe, doth Solomon inſert this word the [many] Inventions, as that quod erat demonſtrandum.

II. In a ſpecial manner to be demonſtrated.] That the whole Verſe intendeth a Demonſtration of Man's univerſal Corruption, in the general, (which had been before diſcourſed of) I have ſhewn; and that this Demonſtration doth eminently and in a ſpecial manner fall upon this ſpecial thing, the Multitude of Sinnings, is alſo as evident. For,

1. What is the Pith and Subſtance of this Verſe, other than this Aſſertion; That Man is departed from that Rectitude or Uprightneſs he was at firſt made in, and thereby left at a loſs, and ſo hath betaken himſelf to other Inventions, whereby to ſeek out for Happineſs elſewhere, and in other ways? This is well-nigh the very Words of Solomon here. And then that from hence it is, that the Multitude of actual Sins do ſpring; and whence it comes to paſs that Men ſeek ſo many Inventions to an Infinity, cannot be denied. And that therefore this was intended as the Demonſtration of it; for the Reality of the thing it ſelf ſpeaks it. If all intellectual Natures would ſet their Underſtandings a-work, they could not find out a more ſuitable and proper Demonſtration of this thing, than this, and what elſe this Verſe yields and affords. It may very well therefore and rationally be ſuppoſed, that this was intended by Solomon as the Demonſtration of this matter in a ſpecial manner. I ſhall chuſe to preſent this Demonſtration as applied to this very thing in the Words of another commenting on the Words, rather than in my own,——(who yet in other pieces of his Interpretation is far enough off from what I have driven) his Words are theſe. Becauſe Man hath departed (ſaith he) from that [one] God, hence it is that he is diſtracted unto [divers] and [many, many] things, and that his Mind [wanders] after ſo many and various Creatures; and finding Reſt and Satiety in none of them, he is [continually] thinking (or imagining,) and luſteth after another thing, and then another, every where ſeeking Reſt, but finding none: and therefore is toſs'd with a thouſand thouſand Thoughts and Deſires. That Quia ab uno Deo deſcivit, hinc in diverſa & plurima diſtractus eſt, & mens ejus poſt creaturas varias vagabit; cumque in nulla reperiat requiem, aliam ſemper & aliam cogitat & concupiſcit, ubiq; quærens quietem & non inveniens; quare mille cogitationum, &c. Cornelius à Lapide in locum.

That which I chiefly obſerve as agreeing with my Senſe and Solomon's Scope, as eminent in this Paſſage of his, is, That he fetcheth the Riſe of all from the Singleneſs or Oneneſs of that wherein Man's Uprightneſs at firſt conſiſted, viz. in uno Deo, in God; who alone is but one, that one univerſal Good, one all-ſufficient Object and Fountain of Happineſs to Man; and his Will and Glory the ſole Meaſure of Man's Uprightneſs, and ſo it came to paſs, all ran but in one Current as then: but that Man departing ab uno Deo, from this one only Object of Happineſs, and that only way of Righteouſneſs; hinc, hence it is (ſaith he) that now we are diffuſed, do wilder and ſcatter into the many; which is the main of the Reaſon here indigitated by Solomon, though not the whole. Chap. 6.

III. As rehearſed and repeated,] viz. As that which had been contained in the foregoing Verſes. For,

1. That his Deſign in this 29*th* Verſe was to give a Demonſtration of what he had before ſpoken of Man's Corruption, is manifeſt by what hath been opened in the foregoing Chapter. And that alſo the ſame Demonſtration falls pat and plum, and perpendicularly upon this why the many, hath been now ſhewn. And therefore this may well be ſuppoſed to have had its part, yea and an anſwerable ſpecial Portion and Share in the Matter and Drift of thoſe Verſes foregone, and ſo repeated as well as the other. Yea, it was ſhewn, that this laſt Clauſe, But they found out many Inventions, was the Breviary, or repeated Sum of what was before largely dilated upon. It is to the former as that Point in a Burning-glaſs, which contracts and draws to Centre what had been more largely diffuſed.——Now then that this Word [many,] or both Words [many Inventions] having both and each the ſpecial Emphaſis and Indigitation in this Breviary or Repetition of the whole, each muſt needs be found and allowed to have had anſwerably a Place and Room (though it be in fewer and other Words) in his foregone Diſcourſe. And in what Paſſage or Paſſages thereof ſhall that of the [many] be ſo plainly found, as there, where our Interpretation ver. 26, 27, 28. have pointed and fixed it?

2. Neither, I believe, will there be a better Account given why he ſhould ſo electively, and to chuſe, ſingle forth this Adjective [many] to attribute that unto theſe Inventions, (thus at the Cloſe) rather than any other ſad Epithets and Adjuncts, which might have preſented themſelves, if ſo be this had not been above all other; the only moſt proper as to this very Scope. For otherwiſe he might as well have concluded with ſaying, Theſe curſed, hateful, crooked Inventions, &c. ('Tis well known that our Sinnings have Names enough, and bad enough they might deſervedly have been called by.) And even that latter of crooked Inventions had been exceeding proper, as in an oppoſite Reſpect to that Uprightneſs he ſaid we were made in; yea, and why ſhould he not have ſaid fooliſh Inventions, having before termed them Folly, ver. 25. or mad Inventions, having there ſtiled them Madneſs? or why not wicked, having called them Wickedneſs? or bitter and grievous, having to his coſt found ſome of them more bitter than Death? ver. 26. No, not one of theſe, or any other ſuch Appellations do come into this his Concluſion, or winding up of all; but of all other the [many] muſt come in: And why? but becauſe it was that which above all other he had had in his Aim in his Diſcourſe before, and for which Reaſon he would now above all other draw his Reader's Eye and Obſervation upon it, as mainly intended by him therein; yea, and as ſet up and indigitated at the laſt, as the thing aimed at to be demonſtrated: which otherwiſe might certainly have been ſpared, and at the beſt was otherwiſe comparatively wholly foreign and extravaſal to his Scope, and remoter than any of the former mentioned.

And, 3. for any to ſay that this, the [many] was utterly a new thing, which he had been ſilent in before, and no ways touch'd upon, nor brought over from what before, were all one as to ſay, That whilſt Solomon had gone about to give Demonſtration of what he had before ſpoken, (and it is undeniable that he does) he yet ultimately did thruſt in under it a new ſubject matter, and that as his main Concluſion demonſtrated, differing from what went before, and ſo had not concluded ad idem, or to the ſame thing intended, which muſt not be admitted.

Book XI. It reſts then, that it is one and the ſame thing both before ſpoken, and here demonſtrated. And that both the univerſal Corruption of Men, as alſo the Multitude of actual Sins, had been both before treated of. And that the Demonſtration ſeals up as with a common Seal both at once with one and the ſame Impreſſion. And ſo in fine, if that the Corruptions of Men, &c. are many, be that which is demonſtrated; then, that they were many, is alſo a matter before treated of, and now a-new rehearſed as the Concluſion of the Demonſtration.

CHAP. VII.

An Objection by way of Query, How Solomon himſelf, and his Account of his own Sins, in ver. 27. can be ſuppoſed, intended and included in his ſaying, They have ſought out? &c. Reſolved. The final Concluſion of all, confirming the whole Subject.

THERE is a Query or Objection that may perhaps deſerve largely to be inſiſted on, for the Removal of it: 'tis, That Solomon according to our Interpretation given of ver. 27, and 28. having intended only his own Sins, and the Account of himſelf; but in this ver. 29. the many Inventions he ſpeaks of, belonging unto all Mankind: How then can this be the Repetition (in that Reſpect) of what had been diſcourſed before, or refer unto that particular Paſſage of himſelf? Alſo that Solomon ſpeaks under the third Perſon here, the [They,] and ſo but of others, as diſtinct from himſelf; and how then is himſelf aimed at and included in the [they?]

The Anſwer is made up of theſe four things put together.

1. Though Solomon in that 27th Verſe, ſpeaks but of his own perſonal Account, yet he therein intended and propoſeth his ſingle Inſtance as a common Example unto all Mankind, whereby to warn and inſtruct all of them from that his Experiment, to ſearch into themſelves; and that all and each of them would find, that the Sins and Account of each and every Perſon of them alſo, was thus infinite, as he had found his own to be. And to ſet it home to them all, he likewiſe affixeth a Behold unto it, thereby calling upon all to conſider this, as a-like concerned therein with himſelf: nor doth he (as you may obſerve) affix it unto the Account of that particular way of Sinning; more bitter than Death is the Woman, &c. becauſe all Mens Tranſgreſſions do not lie in that particular way.——But when he comes to his general Account, of all ſorts of actual Sins through his whole Life, in all other kinds of Acts of Sinnings, multiplied to ſuch an Infinity, then 'tis he cries, Behold, &c. for that was it; that was the like general Concernment of all and every of Mankind grown up to Years of Manhood. Of which again more in the next Chapter.

2. And yet in thoſe other Paſſages which are concerning others, the Multitude of their Sinnings is at leaſt implied, as the Subject of his Aim. As when in ver. 26. he lays to the Womens Charge, that their Hearts and Hands were Snares and Bands, &c. which how eminently it doth import Multitude and Variety, I have ſhewed; and then, how fitly thoſe Expreſſions (which all Interpreters underſtand of the Arts and Wiles of Women) do correſpond with this of Inventions in this laſt Verſe, is obvious enough. And again, in charging the Generality of Men in the laſt Clauſe of ver. 28. to be as corrupt as Women; they in their kind and ways of Sinning, even as Women in theirs. His meaning therein ſtill is, that in Point of Multitude and Variety of Sinnings, as well as in other Reſpects of Sinning, it is, that they are much alike. So as he carrieth along in his Aim, this of the many, as well as their Heinouſ-neſs in Sinnings; to the end to bring all at laſt into this general Concluſion of his Diſcourſe.——So as we may take this as an undoubted Premiſe, ariſing from theſe two laſt things mentioned, That whether he ſpeaks of his own Sins, or of others of either Sex, this of the Multitude of them is ſtill to be taken in, and underſtood. Chap. 7.

And then, 3. let us add to it, that it was meet and requiſite for him to utter this general Concluſion of the whole matter in ver. 29. in the Language of the [They,] and in the Name of all others of Mankind, rather than otherwiſe: And there, and thereby, to bring home the Multitude of Sins, and lay it at their Doors, as well as he had done at his own; becauſe he had interwoven along (as we have ſhewn) the mention of their general Corruption, as well as of his own. Yea and in this, which was the Cloſe, he aſcending unto the original Cauſe of all Sin, and therein reaching to take in Adam and our firſt Parents Sinnings, in whom Solomon himſelf, and Mankind all had ſinned, and thereupon how all their Poſterity do follow them in the Multitude of their Inventions, (as was ſhewn to be the Scope) this made it congruous for him to frame his Speech in that manner, as might beſt at once univerſally reach and take in all, even Adam and Eve, and all Men downwards ſince, who were at firſt made upright in him. And thereupon, thus at laſt to expreſs himſelf, They have ſought out, was more adequate and congruous to ſuch a general Scope; and it had been too narrow for him to have ſaid, [I] or [We] were made upright, but have ſought out, &c. his [They] doth better comprehend himſelf and them all.

4. And yet in ſaying [They] he is, in the Coherence, himſelf ſufficiently included; nor doth he ſpeak it of others, as apart from himſelf.——For in that firſt part of his Speech, God made Man upright, it is certain he intends to include himſelf as well as any others of Mankind; and this other part that follows, [but they, &c.] muſt be taken as extenſive as that former was; for it is the perfect Oppoſite to it. Nay, he therein propounds the Conſideration of that original Uprightneſs, as that which himſelf took in to aggravate all his Sinfulneſs fore-ſpoken of, by; as in like manner it alſo doth all Mankind's; and the Diſcovery of which, and comparing himſelf with which primitive Integrity, with what he now was, this was the laſt and great Ingredient into his humbling of himſelf, being added to that foregoing Account, which he had given of ſo vaſt a ſhare of Wickedneſs in himſelf. And unto that End (one among others) it was he ſets it down; as well as that all Mankind might be humbled under the Senſe thereof, as himſelf had been: and therefore in uttering it of all Mankind univerſally, it is all one as if he had named himſelf, and had ſaid, Thus [I] and every Man from Adam, even all whom God made at firſt upright, have ſought out theſe many Inventions.

Let us therefore but, 1. allow Solomon's Sins a due ſhare in his Intendment in the [many,] which we well may, becauſe they had taken up the moſt in his foregone Narrative; there having been three Verſes ſpent thereon.

And then, 2. let us take him in, as included and intended by himſelf among the [they,] the Perſons.

And then, 3. withal allow him as eminent a Proportion of ſpecial Reflection on his own Sinfulneſs, whilſt he yet ſpeaks of the Generality [they] and [the many.]——In the Intendment of him, who ſtands forth on the Stage of this Scripture, as the ſole Penitent in this Confeſſion, as an Example unto all, and who was now humbled and ſelf-condemned, and knowing more, many more Sins, by himſelf than by all others, (as all true Penitents do:) And who in the particular Senſe thereof did utter this, (though expreſſed at laſt in a general Confeſſion in the Name of all, yet including himſelf, whilſt he utters it.) And then we will all eaſily be ſatisfied, as to this Objection made.

The Concluſion of this matter ſhall be: Let us now bring together theſe two Sayings of his (that ſtood at ſome ſmall Diſtance each from other, as if they had not been acquainted with each other, (which yet they may greatly be found to be) the one that of ver. 27, 28. [This have I found, that ſeeking the Account, I find not] and then this other in the laſt Concluſion of all [They ſought out many Inventions] ſpoken as well of himſelf as of all Mankind.) And then by bringing both together, that dark Riddle we at firſt obſerved in Solomon's Words, is unfolded; for this laſt expreſſeth and brings to Light in plainer terms, the Reaſon why he had ſaid, He found he could not find, namely, becauſe they are many, an infinite Multitude and Variety of them.

Which ſecret Affinity and Correſpondency that is betwixt theſe two Sayings, the vulgar Tranſlation upon the latter Words helps forward the Diſcovery of, in rendring the [many] the [infinite,] that is, for number; whilſt on the other Hand the beſt Commentators (as I obſerved) caſt the ſame Light of Interpretation upon that other Saying in ver. 28. paraphraſing that Clauſe [But I find not] to be all one as to ſay [It was infinite,] and infinite for Number: and ſo both agree in the Sameneſs of Language and Senſe. And by thus comparing both, we come to know what it was that made that Account of Sin, in ver. 28. to be infinite and paſt finding out; namely, the Number and Multitude which this Word [many] in ver. 29. ſuggeſts and ſupplies, and puts us out of doubt that to have been his Intendment. All which arrives at the very Point I have thus largely been ſteering unto, the Subject that is to follow.

CHAP.

Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

Two Corollaries and Monitories drawn out, touching the Subject in Hand. 1ſt, That the Account of every Man's actual Sins is infinite and numberleſs, as well as Solomon's. 2dly, That for every Man to know, and be convinced of the Innumerableneſs of his Sins, is a Matter of greateſt Weight and Moment.

THE fruitful Field of this one Scripture, as it hath been opened, yields many wholeſome, though ſour Herbs, concerning Conviction of Sin, and Humiliation for Sin. And perhaps the moſt of what are the object Matters of our Sinfulneſs in true Convictions; and alſo the moſt of the genuine Diſpoſitions of Heart in Humiliation and Repentance, might all without ſtraining be extracted from hence alone. Many of both theſe may have been obſerved already, to grow above ground ſcatteredly here and there in the Expoſition, as it hath been given. I forbear at preſent to recollect them, or gather them up together into a Bundle; my Scope is about this one particular as my Subject.

That the Account of each Man's actual Sins, who is grown up to Years, is infinite and numberleſs, as well as Solomon's was.

I. Of each and every Man.] For it was one great Scope of Solomon here, to propoſe his own Example in the Caſe, with a Behold, and Proclamation made to every Man that ſhould read this. And what? to that end only, that they might know hiſtorically, that the Account of this individual Perſon, Solomon, his Sins, who lived ſo many thouſand Years ago, did amount to this Infinity? &c. No ſurely, this was not all, or the main of his Scope: But that every Man (and every Man is called upon to behold it) ſhould underſtand and conſider what his own Condition is, if he would but come to underſtand himſelf, and what his Heart and Ways aright are.——Neither is Solomon's Inſtance ſingle or extraordinary in the Caſe, or alone recorded for this thing; but the like Verdict is given in in the Scriptures, by a Multitude of other Saints, greater than Solomon, of their own Accord, as touching this Innumerableneſs of their own Sinfulneſs, (which I ſhall in the Treatiſe that follows add by way of Demonſtration of it.) And ſurely both one and the other were written for the Inſtruction of all others of Mankind; and they therein ſet themſelves out to us as general Meaſures, of what is of the like innumerable Sinfulneſs in us all, in ſome Proportion or other.

But that Solomon ſhould here, in propoſing his own Example, in a ſpecial manner have aimed at this, is evident. For, after his own Example given, in his winding up at the laſt Verſe 29, he wraps up all of actual Sinners, under this ſame Guilt in this very Reſpect, [They have ſought out, &c.] And [They] imports not a meer Indefinite, as that many of them have many Sins; or that the whole Bulk and Body of them, (take them all, collectively, together) have an Infinity of Sins amongſt them; but is partitive as well as univerſal, that all, and each one perſonally, for his own Part and Share, hath. And for the Conviction of every ſuch Son of Adam, and for the humbling of every Soul, it is, that he pronounceth this of them, having firſt propounded his own Conviction (in the Verſes before) for an Inſtance and Example unto all the reſt, of the Truth of it.

And again, look as his fore part of that general Concluſion, [God made Man upright] is true of every particular individual Soul, (as in Adam's Creation they they were conſidered) ſo likewiſe this other part [They ſought out, &c.] is true of all and each of ſuch of Mankind now fallen, that live to Years, and are capable to behold and to conſider it.

II. Of actual Sins.] Which (1.) the Phraſe one and one, ver. 27. (2.) Inventions, ver. 29. (3.) And which they ſought out; or, which themſelves have acted, do all manifeſtly argue. And this in a Diſtinction from that Body of Original Sin that is derived to all Infants, and to themſelves when ſuch. I added, Therefore,

III. Of Men grown up, &c.] For he ſpeaks of them that ſeek out for themſelves, and ſeek out Inventions; and ſo act Reaſon in Sinning; and the Word Inventions is tranſlated by ſome Ratiocinia. And it is neceſſarily to be underſtood of ſuch as are capable to behold and conſider of this thing, and of all ſuch. And he twice calleth upon all ſuch to do this. 1. When he propounds his own Example, ver. 27. And 2. here again in this Paſſage, ver. 29. and thereby in both calleth upon every Man to lay his Hand upon his own Heart, deeply to conſider and ſearch into this.

IV. That the [many Inventions] imports an Infinity of Sins, as likewiſe his [I find not] ver. 27. doth, I ſhewed before.

There is one other Obſervation;

That for every Man to know and be convinced of the innumerable Number of his actual Sins, is a matter of greateſt Weight and Moment.

All the former Streams do contribute to this Aſſertion: His Solemnity of proclaiming it, Behold, &c. His prefacing what his Pains, &c. had been, ſet alſo before it, do fully argue this. But beyond all, that whenas he, a Penitent, doth take on him to declare his beſt Knowledg from, and what that utmoſt Leſſon of Wiſdom he had found in his ſearching this Account, ſhould be, he ſhould chuſe to ſingle out this one thing alone, as the great Reſult of all, [I find it is paſt finding out;] and to ſay no more of it, nor no other thing about the whole matter, What was this, other than to declare that the great Product of this his Repentance was the mighty Impreſſion and Senſe, which this thing above all other had left upon him, and had been experimentally learned by him? And the Mind thereof is, that if he were to leave upon Record but one Reflection or Memorandum, which had been the Fruit and Reſult of his caſting up this Account, unto the reſt of his Brethren the Sons of Men, it was and ſhould be this; merely for the grand Importance and Uſefulneſs of the Knowledg of it. Which Uſefulneſs lies in theſe things following.

1. (Which himſelf gives) To awaken all Sorts, both good and bad, to look about them, and ſeriouſly to conſider what an infinite Account, in point of Sinning, they are all and each to give at that Day, when every Work ſhall be brought to Judgment, whether good or evil: and therefore to ſet upon this great and abſolutely-neceſſary Work of Self-judging and Humiliation for Sin; and to that End as diligently to count and caſt up one and one to find out the Account, as himſelf had done. For that this was indeed a matter of ſuch Moment in his Eſteem, there is this further Remark at laſt ſet upon it by himſelf, in that he ſhould ſhut up this his whole Book of Repentance with that very Adviſo and Admonition now mentioned, chap. 12. ver. the laſt, he there reducing the Concluſion of the whole Matter of his Aim in this Book to two things. 1*ſt*, To fear God, and keep his Commandments.——2*dly*, For God ſhall bring every Work to Judgment; that's the other. Hereby provoking all the Sons of Adam, once created upright, and fallen in him, to ſearch into their Ways, and turn unto the Lord; and to continue ſo to do (as he profeſſeth of himſelf here that he had done;) and ſo by judging themſelves, to prevent their being judged and condemned of the Lord; who hath the Accounts of all Men in his divine Underſtanding, though Men cannot find out in this Life the Sum of them.

2. The

Chap. 8.

2. The Moment of it lies in this; That the ſearching into, and a true Conviction of this Innumerableneſs of Sins, conduceth to, and helps forward all the gracious Workings of the Spirit in us. (1.) It brings in the Materials for the deepeſt Humiliation; which when true and ſpiritual, is ſenſible of, and bewails as much the Multitude of leſſer Sins; ſpecially Contrarieties to Spiritualneſs, as the Heinouſneſs of greater; which in the enſuing Treatiſe I ſhall ſhew. (2.) It prepares for Faith, and an Admiration of God's free Grace. For that Speech, Where Sin abounded, Rom. 5. 20. is manifeſtly ſpoken of Sins abounding in a true Convert's Sight and Senſe, as well as of its abounding in Reality: For he had ſaid juſt before, The Law entred that Sin might abound, that is, in the Diſcovery of the Abundance of it; for by the Law is the Knowledg of Sin, chap. 3. ver. 20.———Now the abounding there ſpoken of, alſo referreth to the Multitude of Sins, [many Offences] ver. 16. And ſo his meaning muſt be, that where Sin, thus in the Sight and Apprehenſion of an humbled Soul, doth abound; there alſo (as it follows) in ſuch an Heart doth Grace come to abound much more. And it by the Law of Oppoſition muſt be underſtood to the ſame Senſe that Sins abounding was intended in: And ſo that in ſuch a Convert's Heart as ſaw Sin much to abound in himſelf, that Heart comes anſwerably to apprehend the ſuper-infinite abounding of God's free Grace to him in pardoning. And in pardoning what? but the Multitude of Sins, as in ver. 15, 16. he had ſaid, that the Gift of Grace had abounded to the Pardon of many Offences to Juſtification. And ſo thereby comes to magnify and adore that pardoning Grace the more. And then, (3.) this Sight of the Innumerableneſs of Sins conduceth to enlarge the Heart unto new and holy Obedience; and ſo to love much, becauſe much is forgiven. For ſo much Love there is, as there is and hath been Apprehenſion of much forgiven. (4.) It wonderfully provokes unto Prayer, and daily great Outcries for Mercy and Grace (as the Word is, Heb. 4. ver. the laſt) Out of the Depths have I cried unto thee, O Lord: what Depths? of Sins that came over his Head; as it follows, ver. 3. If thou ſhouldſt mark Iniquities, &c. He himſelf had marked and obſerved ſo many; as thought he, if God, that is greater than our Hearts, ſhall mark and animadvert, and bring all that he knows upon me too, or upon others; Who ſhall ſtand? His being ſtruck with the Apprehenſion of this, made him to cry out ſo, as there he doth.

CHAP. IX.

That the Judgment of their Sinfulneſs at the Great Day, as alſo often in this Life before that Day, hath the Style of an Account given it in Scriptures. That the Scriptures do reduce this Account unto two Heads: The Hainouſneſs, and the Multitude of Sins.

IN the Proſecution of the Subject propoſed in the former Expoſition, I ſhall begin to ſhew out of other Scriptures, That God's Reckoning with Men for Sins, whether in this Life upon Repentance, (as with Solomon) or at the Day of Judgment, hath very commonly the Stile of [the Account] or an Account put upon it; which I ſhall briefly ſhew, not only to verify Solomon's Uſe of the Word in that Senſe, and my Interpretation given; but further as being neceſſarily introductory unto the following Diſcourſe.

I. That the Judgment and Work of the Great Day hath frequently the Title of an Account, (even as Solomon's Audit here held with God about his Sins, to prevent his being ſo judged, hath) is evident both in the Old Teſtament and in the New. Pſal. 50. (throughout which Pſalm, God's coming to, and Proceſs in Judgment at that Day is ſet out) in the Cloſe thereof, this Account is ſignified by a ſetting of Sins in order before Men, ver. 21. which Solomon in the laſt Chapter of this Book termeth a bringing to Judgment every Work, &c. And in the new Teſtament it is ſtiled (in Terms ſynonimous to Solomon's Expreſſion) an Account, or a giving an Account of a Man's ſelf: ſo Rom. 14. 2. and that whether of the Good done, all of which is reckoned Fruit to our Account, (as Phil. 4. 17. the Phraſe is) or of the Evil we have done or ſpoken: Matth. 12. 36, I ſay unto you, that every idle Word that Men ſhall ſpeak, they ſhall give Account thereof in the Day of Judgment: and in the ſame Stile it runs up and down in the Epiſtles, of an Account, then to be made of whatever things had been committed to our Truſt. Hence of Miniſters 'tis ſaid, They are thoſe that muſt give an Account of the Souls committed to them, Heb. 13. 17. Alſo of others, an Account of their Stewardſhip, Luke 16. 2. Hence Chriſt himſelf, who is appointed the Judg, hath the Title of πρὸς ὃν ὁ λόγος, to whom the Account is to be given, (ſo in the Original) Heb. 4. an Account even unto every Thought and Intention of the Heart, ver. 13. which Title of his there, is and may fully be explained by that, 1 Pet. 4. 5. We ſhall give an Account to him that is ready to judg the quick and the dead.

1. Chriſt is God's great Auditor, or Accountant for him, and is perfect in every Man's Accounts, [ready] hath them all before him, and at his Fingers Ends, (as we ſay) which in the ſame Place to the Hebrews is thus expreſſed, All things are naked and opened to him, to whom the Account is to be.

Moreover, 2. the Scriptures, they are as Books of this Art of Chriſt's Arithmetick, ſetting forth the Rules and Proportions by which this Account is to be caſt up, according to which we ſhall be judged at that Day, John 12. 48.

And, 3. our Conſciences, they are God's Records or Count-Books (as we call them) for Matters of Fact, wherein the Particulars are written, Rom. 2. and both theſe Books are ſaid to be opened at that Day, Rev. 20. 12.

4. Yea, and God's bringing Men to ſee their Sins in this Life, upon any ſpecial Occaſions, is in like manner ſtiled an Account, as being preparatory to the Account at the Day of Judgment, and indeed are but leſſer Days of Judgment. And of this latter Sort of Reckonings is that Parable to be underſtood, Matth, 18. from ver. 23, to 27. Therefore is the Kingdom of Heaven likened unto a certain King, which would take Account of his Servants. Ver. 24. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him which owed him ten thouſand thouſand Talents. Ver. 25. But foraſmuch as he had not to pay, his Lord commanded him to be ſold, and his Wife and Children, and all that he had, and Payment to be made. Ver. 26. The Servant therefore fell down and worſhipped him, ſaying, Lord, have Patience with me, and I will pay thee all. This Account is not that final one at the latter Day, or after Death in Hell, (though ſome foregoing Exemplar thereof) but ſuch as God begins, as the Phraſe is, ver. 24. to hold in his Church, which he calls the Kingdom of Heaven, whilſt ſome Souls being arreſted by the powerful Miniſtry of the Word, are brought in to God, as ver. 24. and are ſo far wrought upon thereby, as to acknowledg unto God their fore-paſſed Sinfulneſs, and Debts they have incurred, with deep Conviction of Conſcience, and oftentimes with Terrors joined thereto, and Reſolution for the future to make amends; for ſo it is ſpoken of this Accomptant or Servant brought in here, ver. 26. And therefore is not that final great Account. Which is further evidenced by this, that this Account is that which Men make to God through Conviction and Confeſſion when they repent, and promiſe Amendment, as this Man did, and when God gives Time and Patience to them, upon Trial of what they will do for the future.——Thus expreſly, ver. 26. And beſides, 'tis ſaid, that after this, this Servant went out, and found one of his Fellow-Servants that owed him an hundred Pence, &c. and his cruel dealing with him you know and read, ver. 27, &c. which argues this to have been tranſacted in this Life, for at the latter Day there is no room for ſuch a Suppoſition. And thereupon, and after all, it is that that other final Account of this mercileſs Servant is ſaid to follow, ver. 34. The Lord was wroth, and delivered him to the Tormentors, till he ſhould pay all that was due unto him. So that this Reckoning was but a forerunning Account, God's firſt beginning to account with a Man, as that ver. 24. expreſly termeth it. Chap. 9.

And theſe Accounts, either of them, firſt that at the latter Day, is not to be made only of the Quality of the Actions, but of the Number alſo, even to a Farthing, Matth. 5. 26. As likewiſe that other in this Life, Matth. 18. was; for a Sum is ſet down, an hundred thouſand Talents.

And the Reaſon why the Scriptures purſue this Metaphor, is, becauſe, indeed and in Reality, our Sins are conſidered not only as Crimes committed againſt God, as he is the Judg of all the World, (as all legal Crimes uſe to be indicted as againſt the King) but further, they are conſidered as ſo many Debts againſt God as a Creditor, who ſtands out of Purſe in point of Honour, Riches of Patience, &c. Thus expreſly, Matth. 6. 12. and Matth. 18. 23. God is ſaid συναῖρει λόγον, to compute with, as Men do with Debtors by mutual Reckonings on both Parts, and the Balance of that Man's Account there reckoned, is ſaid to be ten thouſand Talents, ver. 24. as being a Sum of Debts. And reckoned they are both by Multiplication and Addition: The Phraſe for the firſt is frequent in Job and the Prophets, Thou haſt multiplied thy Abominations, Ezek. 16. 51. The other, by Addition, is uſed of Herod's putting the Baptiſt to Death, whereof it is ſaid, he added this to all the Evils he had done, Luke 3. 7. And of all together it is ſpoken as of Debts which do make up a total Sum, and therefore are ſaid to abound to Account, Phil. 4. 17.——Thus much for the firſt Aſſertion, as alſo to juſtify our Interpretation of Solomon's uſing the Word [Account] unto this our Senſe, which in the Expoſition we ſo largely purſued.

II. Theſe holy Scriptures do hold up before the Conſciences of Men two main Conſiderations about their Sinfulneſs:

1. The Quality or Heinouſneſs of eminent Sins.

2. The Multitude of Sins, both ſmall and great, caſt up together into one Sum.——To the end that under theſe (as two general Heads) we our ſelves might know how to marſhal and order our otherwiſe confuſed or rather confounded Thoughts therein.

Like as the Praiſe of the Glory of God in his Works is ſet forth by theſe two, O Lord, how [great] are thy Works! Pſal. 92. 5. And then, O Lord, how [manifold] are thy Works! as Pſal. 104. 24. And both ſet together are celebrated, Job 9. 10. Who doth [great] things paſt finding out, yea and wonderful [without Number.]

Book XI.

Number.] Even ſo the Sinfulneſs of Man's diſhonouring God, or of Man's Works againſt God.

Eliphaz ſeeing Job's Miſeries ſo extraordinarily to exceed the Proportion of God's dealing with other Saints, and knowing that the way to humble him was to make Job apprehenſive of his Sinfulneſs, he doth ſuitably, according to what his own Apprehenſions were about Job's Condition, (judging that he was an unregenerate Man) call upon Job to conſider theſe very two things about his Sinfulneſs, or theſe two Heads of Account ſpecified, Job. 22. 5.

1. Whether he had not been guilty of heinous Sins: this in that firſt Query, Is not thy Wickedneſs great? His meaning is in a reſpect of groſſer Crimes, for he inſtanceth in the worſt of Sins towards Man, both — of Omiſſion, ver. 7, 9. and of Omiſſion, ver. 6. And then,

2. Are not thine Iniquities infinite? that is, for Number.

Then again David, Pſal. 19. takes into Conſideration theſe two firſt, great Tranſgreſſions, ſuch as preſumptuous Sins, ver. 13. Great, that is, for Heinouſneſs: and then withal the known and unknown Multitudes of other Sins, ver. 12. Who can underſtand his Errors? Cleanſe thou me from ſecret Faults.

In like manner Ezra, chap. 9. in his Confeſſion firſt humbleth himſelf for the Multitude of their Sins, Our Iniquities are increaſed over our Heads, ver. 6. And then ver. 7. for their Sins that were moſt heinous, We have been in a great Treſpaſs unto this Day; that eminent Sin of marrying ſtrange Wives.

Our Saviour Chriſt (πρὸς ὃν ὁ λόγος) doth in like manner ſpeak of Sins, ſome that are as Camels for Greatneſs, and ſome as Gnats, (that by Troops in thoſe hot Countries uſed to peſter Travellers every Step they took) alſo of Beams and Motes, likewiſe Talents and Farthings, Matth. 15. 26. Luke 7. 24. whereof the one ſignifies great Sins for Quality, the other ſmall, yet exceeding in Number.

Chap. 10.

CHAP. X.

The main Subject of this Treatiſe, viz. That the Scriptures ſet the Value and Balance of the Account of Mens Sinfulneſs upon the Multitude of their Sinnings.—The Demonſtrations of it; firſt from the Judgments both of God and of Chriſt, either as they are Judges in condemning Men, or Pardoners in forgiving.

IN thoſe foregoing Treatiſes about Sins againſt Knowledg, and the reſt of that kind, I have ſet forth ſome Aggravations that render Sins heinous, I am now to ſpeak of their Number.

And this which is the main Propoſition orderly follows the former, viz. That in Scripture-Account it is the Number or Multitude which God ſets the Value of Mens Sinfulneſs upon; and for the moſt part of Mankind doth exceed the Greatneſs of their heinous Sins. And this doth clearly accord with Solomon's Scope in this 27*th* Verſe. I ſhall give ſeveral Demonſtrations of it out of the Scriptures, as alſo Reaſons why God ſets the chief Value thereupon.

The Demonſtrations hereof will ariſe and appear, if we take either, 1. Gods own Judgment declared in the Caſe. Or, 2. of Men in their Converſations. Or, 3. of Saints themſelves after their Converſion, in the Humblings of themſelves before God, whoſe Judgment in theſe Caſes may well be taken, as ſuppoſed to have been directed by God therein, and to have judged righteous Judgment of themſelves in ſo confeſſing and judging of themſelves by the Multitude of their Sins.

The firſt Demonſtration of it is from the Conſideration,

I. Of God's Judgment herein, and of him conſidered; either, 1. As a Judg judging Men for their Sinfulneſs; or, 2. As a Pardoner, juſtifying of Sinners.

I. Of God as a Judg.

God himſelf, the Judg of all the Earth, Gen. 18. 25. did once caſt up the whole World's Accounts, (after they had run out for 1656 Years) and it was precurſory to, and the Semblance of the great Day of Judgment to come. Now what is it that God's own Charge and Indictment falls chiefly upon? But, as *Gen.*6. 5. God ſaw that the Wickedneſs of Men was great in the Earth, and that every Imagination of the Thoughts of his Heart was only evil continually. There were in that old World great Sins for Heinouſneſs, circumſtantiated with deep Aggravations, which are inſtanced in, in that ſame Chapter; as the Apoſtacy of thoſe that profeſſed the true Religion and Purity of Worſhip, &c. ver. 2, 4. as alſo that the whole Earth was filled with Violence or Oppreſſion, ver. 13. and all aggravated by this, that the Spirit of God had ſtriven with them in the Miniſtry and Example of Enoch, Noah, and others their godly Anceſtors, ver. 3. but yet the grand Reckoning which God the Judg accounts great above all, and laid heavieſt to their Charge, was, that every Imagination of their Thoughts were evil continually, which was all one as to have ſaid, that their ſmalleſt Sins were infinite for Number; and it is in that Reſpect that he ſo complains, the Wickedneſs of Man was great, even in Reſpect of Number, through that conſtant, continual, and uninterrupted Multiplication of them. And they are the ſmalleſt ſort of Sins he there mentions, Imaginations and Thoughts, which yet aroſe to a greater Guilt than all their heinous Iniquities; ſo as the Numerouſneſs, though of ſmaller Sins alone, is the Greatneſs here ſpoken of; and the Word for [great] in the Original ſerves to that Senſe alſo, as is well known.

Book XI.

He proceeded by the like Meaſure in his Account concerning the two Captivities, both of the ten Tribes of Iſrael, and of Judah into Babel: as appears both by the Threatnings before, and during that Captivity: And after in the Acknowledgments of that Church. 1. In the Threatnings before, and during the Captivity, God by Ezekiel juſtifies his Sentence pronounced, and the Execution of that Captivity then in part begun, chap. 16. By this thou haſt multiplied thy Fornications, ver. 25, 29, and ver. 51. neither hath Samaria (viz. the ten Tribes carried away before) committed half thy Sins, (he computed the Number we ſee, as it alſo follows) but thou haſt multiplied thy Abominations more than they. And theſe laſt Quotations do involve that former Captivity of the ten Tribes of Iſrael as well as this of Babylon, and ſhews that the ten Tribes of Iſrael had been caſt out for the Multitude of their Abominations alſo.

And, 2. after their Captivity it is likewiſe put upon the ſame in the Churches own Acknowledgment, Lam. 1. 5. For the Multitude of her Tranſgreſſions her Children are gone into Captivity, &c.

And this innumerable Multitude it is, that when Mens Conſciences are awakened once, and convicted by God for Sin, comes in upon them, and which they do profeſs themſelves above all other moſt ſenſible of, as the Cauſe of their Puniſhment, Iſa. 59. 11, 12. We roar like Bears, for our Tranſgreſſions are multiplied before thee, and teſtify againſt us, and for our Iniquities we know them, God having ſet them in order before them.

II. Of God conſidered as a Pardoner.

Conſider God and Chriſt as pardoning. By which Act of his we may as certainly eſtimate what Rate or Value he puts upon our Sinnings as when he judgeth; for as David, and the Apoſtle after him; He pardoneth, to the end he may be juſtified when he comes to judg: and to be ſure God's divine Nature inclineth him to reckon in, and with himſelf, with as much Exactneſs then when he pardoneth, as when he puniſheth; for he values his Mercy, and the Manifeſtation of it, at the higher rate: And his Mercy in pardoning is to be rated and exalted by what he pardons.——Now we find that when he hath pardoned the greateſt Sinners, he hath not reckon'd ſo much by the Greatneſs as by the Number, as that part of the Account whereby he chuſeth to hold forth to us the Infiniteneſs of his Grace in pardoning, and as that whereby he would draw forth our Love to him again for pardoning. Upon the occaſion hereof ſays Chriſt, (and it was as great a Speech as he that was the Word it ſelf hath uttered) her Sins which are many are forgiven, becauſe ſhe loved much. And he ſays it, you ſee, upon this occaſion of his pronouncing Pardon to a grievous Sinner, and adds, And to whom little is forgiven, the ſame loveth little. In which latter Words he interprets what he means by the little and the much, even the many, or the Number of Sins: Thus Luke 7. 47.

Pſal. 51. Rom. 2.

In like manner when God would exalt Chriſt's Righteouſneſs to us, which is the Price and Ranſom that was paid for all, (and therefore we may warrantably eſtimate the one by the other) that alſo is greatened, not by the Magnitude ſo much as by the Multitude of Sins forgiven, which are mentioned on that occaſion. Thus ſpeaking of the excelling Merit of his Obedience, the free Gift and Abundance of Righteouſneſs is for many Offences to Juſtification. ——And again, the Greatneſs of God's Grace in Converſion, (when by any of us as an Inſtrument, a Sinner comes to be converted) is greatened, as by this, that it is the ſaving of a Soul from Death: So moreover that it is the hiding of a Multitude of Sins, Jam. 5. laſt; as thereby ſetting forth the Greatneſs of that Salvation; and yet that Sinner ſpoken of there was one whoſe Sins were as heinous as Sins pardonable can be ſuppoſed to be, even the Sins of a Profeſſor back-ſliden and apoſtatized from the Truth, ver. 19. and yet of the two it is the Multitude there that alone is ſpecified as the Meaſure of his Sinfulneſs, and thereby of magnifying God's Grace in pardoning.

I will here return unto and inlarge a little more upon the Inſtance of that both great Sinner and great Convert, ſo famous in the Goſpel; upon occaſion and for Comfort of whom it was that Chriſt uttered that former Speech but even even now related, Her Sins that were many are forgiven her: And I place it here becauſe it is a middling Inſtance, which will aptly ſerve either this or the following Demonſtration which ſhall be taken from new Converts. Chap. 10.

In the Goſpel you read of a Woman without a Name, dwelling in the City Naim, Luke 7. who waſh'd Chriſt's Feet with her Tears, &c. which Woman was none of the Mary's in the Goſpel mentioned, for ſhe was neither ſhe of the City Magdala, Matth. 15. 29. from whence that Mary called Magdalene had her Appellation, and who was a Woman of Quality and Riches, for ſhe was one that miniſtred to Chriſt in his Journyings with all the Train of his Diſciples, Luke 8. 23. nor was this Woman that other Mary of Bethany, who yet is recorded to have done the like things to him, John 11. 2. who was the Siſter of Lazarus: I ſay, this Woman was none of thoſe two Maries, no not the latter of Bethany, (for which there is yet ſo much Appearance) as would evidently appear if we might without Diverſion inſiſt on it, this alone ſufficiently ſhews it, that this Woman, Luke 7. was of another City, viz. Naim, ver. 7, 5, 11, and 37. and this matter of Fact of anointing him, &c. was done by her in that City of Naim; and though in one Simon's Houſe, yet it was Simon the Phariſee, Luke 7. 36, 39, 40, 44. but that other anointing by Lazarus's Siſter, though in ſome Circumſtances it was like to that of this other Woman, was acted in the Houſe of Simon the Leper, and by that Appellation diverſified from that other, the Phariſee, and in another Town, namely, in Bethany, Matth. 6. 26. This Woman of Naim hath no other Name recorded, but that foul and infamous one, of her being a Sinner, known and notorious to all that City, as Simon's Words do import, ver. 39. This as to her Perſon.
